According to a state law the county treasurer of every county in the state must publish the rates of taxation as levied by the different taxing boards of the state. The taxpayers of the state pay for this information about $30,000 to $50,000 per year, but after reading the "Rates of Taxation" put out by the authorities the average taxpayer is not better informed than before. The state laws have heretofore been so arranged that the people are kept in absolute ignorance of the vital question of taxation, and in our opinion, this has been intentionally done by the politicians to keep the people from knowing the true condition of the questions concerning taxation. The fault to be found with the notice published by the authorities is that the tax "duplicate" is omitted and only the tax "rate" is made public. The taxpayer has an arithmetical problem something like this 9 × — = what? or — × 6 = what? To find out anything about taxation the taxpayer must know the amount of the duplicate as well as the rate of levy. With either omitted he can gain no definite information whatever.

In order to give the taxpayers of Lake county some certain information the Herald has prepared a tabulation of tax figures which includes the duplicate as well as the levy, and we doubt very much if there is to be found in Lake county, outside of the court house officials, a half dozen men who have this information. The table of figures shown above are very interesting and are self explanatory, but we wish to call especial attention to comparisons that can be made by any one who is interested and wishes hereafter to talk or vote intelligently about taxes in Lake county. We do not have space to call attention to all the interesting things to be found in the above tabulation but here are a few paragraphs:

Lake county raises $21,442.99 for state purposes, $84,701.73 for county purposes, $112,149.62 for school purposes, $48,322.82 for township purposes and $65,947.49 for city and village purposes.

Mentor Special District has the largest duplicate of any district in the county. This is the district in which the great steamboat companies pretend to have their headquarters, and list their property for taxation. Because Lake county affords these steamship companies a harbor from which to escape taxation on the true value of their property, $19,488.04 is paid to our county officials, $1,307 goes to the schools of this little district and Mentor township gets $16,230. By reason of the large duplicate in this special district, it has the lowest tax rate in the county and probably the lowest of any district in the state of Ohio.

Willoughby township has the next highest tax duplicate, and pays for county purposes $14,987. The school officials of the township levy $16,168 and the township trustees levy $8,880.

The total taxes paid in Lake county this year amount to $332,074.64.

The Schools

This is what each district levys for school purposes. Interesting comparisons, eh?

—o—

Painesville will have a building boom in 1912.

—o—

Greer Page of Willoughby, had business in Painesville Tuesday of this week.

—o—

"Bryan — or Anybody — Bryan Wants!" This slogan is beginning to catch on in Ohio.

—o—

V. J. Hungerford was in from Leroy Tuesday and made the Herald a pleasant call.

—o—

J. F. Brown and T. B. West, both of Perry, had business in Painesville Tuesday of this week.

—o—

Fletcher D. Malin will go down to Columbus next week and help to put some democratic ideas into the state constitution.

—o—

Mrs. George Hartman left last Friday for Amherst, O., where she has taken a position as matron of the Friends' Orphanage.

—o—

"They used to have a farming rule
Of forty acres and a mule.
More profits now are made by men
With forty square feet and a hen."

—o—

J. P. Curtiss was over to the county seat the other day and announced that the Socialists would have a county ticket in the field this year.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. Elston of Youngstown, former residents of Jefferson street this city, have been visiting friends in Painesville during the past week.

—o—

Why don't you announce for one of those good jobs at the court house. The primaries will be held in May and everyone has a right to be a candidate.

—o—

Oklahoma City has been chosen by the Socialist party, by referendum vote, for the next national convention, the time for which is set for May 12, 1912.

—o—

The Painesville Elks is the most booming lodge in Lake county. Bobby Manchester is the Exalted Ruler and when Bobby has a hand there is always something doing.

—o—

It is said that he was the champion joker of Elizabeth, N. J. At all events the friends who attended his funeral said they read on the coffin plate the inscription "You're next."

—o—

Mr. E. M. Orcutt, well known and highly respected business man of Perry, will be a candidate for county treasurer subject to the action of the republican primaries to be held in May.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Breed and Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Grant expect to leave sometime in February for a trip through the Mediterranean Sea and the Orient.

—o—

Mrs. Mattie Wilcox of this city, well known here, has accepted a position in the Up-to-Date, where she will assume charge of the dressmaking and alteration department and will be glad to meet her many friends.

—o—

Concord township's new officers to take up the duties at the beginning of the new year are as follows: Trustees, H. G. Baker, George Trowbridge, W. P. Warren; clerk, E. J. Gray; treasurer, Warren Trowbridge assessor, Frank Greene.

—o—

Lake county was not represented at the big La Follette meeting in Cleveland. Nearly all surrounding counties sent delegates. The republicans of Lake county are probably all of them for Taft, excepting always, the Hon. J. R. Garfield.

—o—

We wonder if the Township Park Commission is going to make improvements for the use of the Painesville township park this year. There is a lot of money tied up in this Park and some ways should be devised to get the benefit of the expenditure.

—o—

S. J. Goldsmith has leased the Painesville Steam Laundry of E. L. House & Co., and took charge of the business on Monday, January 1. New machinery has been installed and the laundry will be run in an up-to-the minute manner.

—o—

There is not one vacant store room on either Main or St. Clair streets, and there is at present only one or two small rooms vacant on State street. When on the face of things did Painesville ever present a more prosperous condition.

—o—

Word was received in Painesville on Friday morning telling of the death of J. B. Kintner at his home in Wooster, Ohio. The deceased is the father of E. E. Kintner, A. E. Kintner, D. O. Kintner and A. C. Kintner.

—o—

The authorities of Painesville, Fairport, the township trustees and the county commissioners ought hold a joint meeting and resolve to pave the street from Painesville to Fairport. The paving of no other road in the county would meet with the approval of so many taxpayers.

—o—

The Burton Leader suggests Judge A. G. Reynolds, of this city, as a republican candidate for governor. Lake county has a number of eligible republican candidates for it is impossible to find out whether any of them are progressives or reactionaries.

—o—

F. H. Eddy, proprietor of the East Side Market has added groceries to his stock, and taken possession of the store room at the corner of Madison and Casement avenues, the former location of R. A. Stevens & Co. Mr. R. A. Stevens has retired from the grocery business for the present at least.

—o—

N. A. Penhollow, a resident of the East Side, died suddenly in the office of Albert Warn at 9:30 Thursday morning. Mr. Penhollow had come over to town to transact some business and had only been in the office of Mr. Warn a few minutes when he pitched forward in his chair and died before help could reach him.

—o—

Joseph Schiappacasse has purchased the Sanford block on Main street, second door from State on the north side, now occupied by a restaurant. The block is owned by the Sanford estate and Mrs. Sanford has a life estate in the property.

—o—

The first candidate for clerk of the courts to succeed John C. Barto, the present clerk, has made his appearance. John R. Williams, superintendent of the Painesville township schools, is the man. Mr. Williams is well-known in Painesville and Lake county, has a host of friends and will make a most excellent candidate.

—o—

The Carnegie medal awarded Edward F. Rasmussen, son of Captain Rasmussen, for bravery several years ago in saving a man from drowning, was received here Friday by American express and claimed by the young man. It is a handsome affair. Young Rasmussen also received $1500 for educational purposes.

—o—

The Lake Erie Concrete Company has issued a calendar on which there is a fine picture of Mr. George Wright's residence. The picture shows one of the best jobs of concrete work ever done by the Concrete company, and at the same time shows one of the elegant country home places for which Lake county is noted.

—o—

Woman's leap-year privilege is no joke. It was established by law centuries ago. A law of Scotland passed in 1228 gave woman the right to propose in leap year and imposed a fine of £1 on the man who refused. The first English law on the leap-year privilege was passed in 1606. In the feminist age to come every year will be leap year.

—o—

Mrs. Ellen Murphy of Storrs street passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Brown on Thursday evening, December 28. Mrs. Murphy was born in Ireland but for the past 50 years has made her home in Painesville, where she was known and loved by a host of friends. Three sons, John, Thomas and Patrick and a daughter, Mrs. E. H. Brown, survive.

—o—

The revelations being made in the trial of the beef packers at Chicago are necessarily a reflection upon the investigation of the so-called beef trust undertaken some years ago by James R. Garfield, formerly secretary of the interior and at that time chief of the bureau of corporations in the department of commerce and labor. To the derision of cattle raisers in the far West, Mr. Garfield in substance failed to discover a trust, yet the existence of something that came almighty close to it is being shown day after day in the trial now in progress.

FORWARD MOVEMENT

AT FAIR GROUNDS IN FACE OF BAD WEATHER CONDITIONS

Grading About Completed and New Buildings Will Soon Be In Process of Construction.

Everyone in Lake county is interested in the work undertaken by the Lake County Agricultural Society in connection with proposed County Fair. The board of directors held a meeting Thursday, Dec. 29, at the residence of L. S. Gordon at the grounds on Mentor avenue to consider further improvements, buildings, fencing, water system, etc. The members present were F. H. Murray and W. W. Trowbridge, Concord; G. L. Ostrander and George Potts, Leroy; M. G. Wood and Taylor Buster Madison; H. V. Shulters, Mentor; C. A. Hine, Painesville; A. M. Thompson and F. B. West, Perry; E. J. Dickey and F. E. Steward, Willoughby, and George A. Bates, secretary. F. P. Freshley, W. E. Thompson of Kirtland and Col. Parker of Mentor were absent on account of illness and Geo. K. McLeod was out of town.

Committees will soon be appointed to look after the many different parts of the work that will soon be under way.

Contractors and representatives of firms having material for sale were present and made known to the members of the society the merits of their respective materials.

Messrs. Cumings and Dowaer who had been authorized to prepare a ground plan showing location of buildings and other improvements in accordance with the ideas of the officers, were present with a complete plan, which was adopted, subject to revision by the ground plan committee.

The work at the grounds that has already been done, under the supervision of L. S. Gordon brought out favorable comment, and the general opinion of members of the society is that Mr. Gordon has proved to be the right man in the right place.

According to the constitution of the society the annual meeting for the election of directors will be hold at the court house the last Saturday in January, which is the 27th. A director will be elected for three years, from each township of Concord, Kirtland, Mentor, Willoughby and Perry. One from Kirtland for one year and one from Painesville for two years. The latter two are for unexpired terms, the present incumbents holding office by appointment. Official notice of meeting appears in another column of the Herald.

Buy It In Painesville

No one will take the time to buy out of town once he is convinced of the real worth of the merchandise in the local stores and of the "right" prices.

Painesville stores are now filled with a choice line of all kinds of merchandise. An inspection of these displays ought to be an affirmative to the argument that it pays to

W. N. Collister, present head of the water and light departments, is retained as superintendent of water and light and F. N. Downer, junior member of the firm of Cumings & Downer, is appointed city engineer.

ANTI-HARMON

Democrats Meet In Columbus and Organize a Progressive Movement.

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—Anti-Harmon Democrats today organized the Progressive Democratic League of Ohio.

The principal purpose of it is to see that delegates sent to the national convention are men who will support only such candidates as are known to be active progressives.

The conference today was arranged with only a week's notice, but it brought more than 100 men from most of the congressional districts in the state, many of them well known in state politics, some who now are in office and many others who have served officially in the past. Haste had been necessary, as it was deemed best to hold the conference ahead of the meeting of the national committee next week and of the Jackson day banquets all over the country.

The name of Bryan brought out the greatest applause of the day and the Nebraskan was mentioned as an ideal by nearly every man who spoke Woodrow Wilson drew a fair share of applause; so did Foss of Massachusetts. Champ Clark and ex-Gov. Folk, both of Missouri, were immensely popular and the mention of their names each time brought loud applause.

Marriage License.

Peter Anderson, 39, Wickliffe; Mrs. Amelia G. Shepherd, 56, Wickliffe.

Charles E. Carroll, 52, Mentor; Mary A. Stockwell, 29, Mentor.

Harold L. Burton, 21, Orange; Elsie M. Becker, 22, Mentor.

Clarence M. Wood, 24, Painesville, Mae H. Bittner, 21, Painesville.

NEW MEMBERS

CITY BOARD OF EDUCATION ORGANIZES WITH TWO NEW MEMBERS

Frank L. Kerr Is Elected As Clerk and Mrs. Landphair Is Chosen Principal of Washington School

At the meeting of the Painesville City Board of Education the three newly elected members, C. M. Grauel, Mrs. Lucy Buell and Ralph E. Gregory, qualified and the board then reelected Geo. A. Lord, president and Frank L. Kerr, Clerk.

Beyond the organization the only other official act of the board was the appointment of Mrs. Laura King Landphair, a former teacher, to the position of principal of the Washington street building recently vacated by Miss Celia Kurtz.

Nomination Notes.

A written vote of the students of Oberlin college, as to presidential preferences, has just been taken, with the following results: Wilson, 261; La Follette, 82; Taft, 60; Roosevelt, 17; Harmon, 13 (an uncanny number); Hughes, Folk and Bryan, 2 each, and a large number of 1's,—including Clark.

Reasons for the preferences were asked and a large number of replies in this respect were given. One of these—fairly representative of all,—was as follows: "I vote for Wilson because he has a good political philosophy, is clean, honest, has made a good record as Governor of New Jersey, and commands the respect of the intelligent press and independent voters of the country. Moreover, he is—what many of the reformers are not—sanely progressive."

Miss Alma Graves returned to Cleveland Monday evening after being at home over Sunday.

MENTOR HEADLANDS

No signs of winter yet! Lake Erie as still as a mouse today, and the beach lined with gravel same as summer-time.

On account of the high winds and open lake, it is washing badly at the Minor G. Norton cottage grove East of the school house. The cottage owned and occupied summers by Miss Smith is liable to take a tumble any minute into old Erie, as well as some of the Norton cottages if something is not done at once to prevent it. If neglected, the road is liable to go down, for when the bank begins to crack, there is no telling what havoc is wrought in a single night along these lake banks.

Sam Lapham's folks all spent the day at Helen Parker's as usual on Christmas.

Martin Rasmussen spent New Year's day in Lorain at the Life Saving Station there, with his friends.

New Year's day was Harry Fowler's birthday, and Mrs. Fowler says she fixed up all the things that Harry ordered and likes best, among them a roasted ham, and a cocoanut cake.

Cards received from the Isle of Pines state that the Crossman's have arrived all right, and "are keeping house, and putting up screens to keep the mosquitos and hay-hennies and other animals out of the house."

The Cobb family are spending a month in Shadeland, Pa.

School began again today, (Tuesday).

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schwind and Mrs. H. J. Gault spent New Year day at the Life Saving Station with the Capt. Rasmussen family. The day was much enjoyed. While we were away Miss Nina Lapham made up her mind to go over to Gault's to spend the day. No one there she crawled in the window, staid alone all day, did away with that "Christmas tree" which was standing on front porch when we got home, and Nina "had supper all ready when I heard the wheels rattle along on the frozen ground after dark," but we had supper over to "ma's," all went there first on returning and had some more phonograph, etc. Then across the pasture to Gault's with lanterns, and little Raymond Lapham and Arthur Costello, his friend, sang like birds. Why 'tis just wonderful about that little Costello kiddie, he sat in the middle of the room and just warbled like a bird three of the sweetest little love songs, "There's no other girl for me" and "Bethlehem babe," and he says his mother taught it all to him, and that he is going to take piano lessons at Lake Erie college when he gets big! He'll surely beat them all! And Raymond couldn't sing at first, cause he was "bashful," Nina said she'd lick him if he didn't, but he didn't. Then we said "If we'll put this big yellow screen all around you then will you sing?" He says "yep." So up went the screen, and you should have heard the singing then! All about a big Engineer and the wonders he wrought, and a bronco steerer and what not, about eleven verses while Nina played for him. He surely is another wonder.

Miss Helen Parker had the sad misfortune to break one of her ribs last week. They took a strange man in to stay all night out of sympathy, and it seems he got up in the night and shoved a wagon right in front of her door where she had been accustomed to go out for well water, and not knowing it was there, rushed out as usual and fell over the wagon-tongue resulting in the injury. We all extend our sympathy, and hope for speedy recovery.

Arthur Western, the 12 year old boy Wm. Wetzel took from the Columbus orphan asylum, has typhoid fever it is feared, and will be taken to the Painesville hospital in an ambulance today.

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens with a scream from Dorothy March in the opera box of Mrs. Missioner, a wealthy widow. It is occasioned when Mrs. Missioner's necklace breaks, scattering the diamonds all over the floor. Curtis Griswold and Bruxton Sands, society men in love with Mrs. Missioner, gather up the gems. Griswold steps on what is supposed to be the celebrated Maharanee and crushes it. A Hindoo declares it was not the genuine. An expert later pronounces all the stones substitutes for the original. One of the missing diamonds is found in the room of Elinor Holcomb, confidential companion of Mrs. Missioner. She is arrested, notwithstanding Mrs. Missioner's belief in her innocence. Detective Britz takes up the case. He asks the co-operation of Dr. Fitch, Elinor's fiance, in running down the real criminal. Britz learns that duplicates of Mrs. Missioner's diamonds were made in Paris on the order of Elinor Holcomb. While walking Britz is seized, bound and gagged by Hindoos. He is imprisoned in a deserted house, but makes his escape. Britz discovers an insane diamond expert whom he believes was employed by either Sands or Griswold to make counterfeits of the Missioner gems. Two Hindoos burglarize the home of Sands and are captured by Britz. On one of them he finds a note signed by "Millicent" and addressed to "Curtis." Britz locates a woman named Millicent Delaroche, to whom Griswold has been paying marked attentions. The Swami attends a ball at Mrs. Missioner's home but learns nothing further about the diamonds. Britz disguised as a thief visits the apartment of Millicent. He finds a box that once contained the missing diamonds, but it is empty. The detective concludes that the Hindoos have anticipated him in the recovery of the jewels. He visits their quarters and has an exciting experience with a snake. The Swami returns all the real diamonds to Mrs. Missioner except the Maharanee, which he insists must be returned to the temple in India whence it was stolen. Britz gives his theories to the chief of police, showing how Griswold has devised the whole plot, placing the blame on Elinor. The detective captures the Hindoos just as they are about to sail for India, one of them has the Maharanee imbedded in his leg. Griswold and Mrs. Delaroche are arrested.

"Perjurer!" she screamed. "Liar! Ingrate! Thief!"

Each word was like the snap of a lash that brought a wincing start from Griswold as if a black snake whip had stung him. He stretched his hands toward her imploringly.

"Millicent!" he cried.

"Never call me by that name again," she almost screamed. "I wish I could forget every occasion on which you have dared to utter it. You wretch!" and she wrung her hands futilely, as if she would like to clasp them about his throat.

Fitch opened the door softly and looked in. Behind him stood Elinor Holcomb and Detective Williams. At a sign from Britz, they entered the room noiselessly and stood beside the door. Before Williams could close it upon them Mrs. Missioner and Bruxton Sands appeared on the threshold.

Mrs. Delaroche turned to Britz in cold fury, an icy reaction from her volcanic rage of the moment before.

"I will tell you all you wish to know, lieutenant," she said. "I will tell you all I know about Mr. Griswold. He is the man," Mrs. Delaroche continued, "who stole Mrs. Missioner's diamonds!"

The wealthy widow, standing near the door, put her hand to her heart as if about to faint from the shock. Sands, his only thought being to support her in such a trying moment, forgot the presence of all the others, and passed his arm about her shoulders to steady her slightly swaying form. Elinor with a little sigh, turned to Fitch and clasped both his hands with unmistakable tenderness. Then her head sank upon his shoulder, and the doctor, bolder than Sands, encircled her waist with his arm.

Britz, without making a move to interrupt Mrs. Delaroche, stretched one hand behind him and pressed a button that communicated with the room where Gordon and Hicks waited with the four Hindoos. The connecting door opened and the Orientals could be seen within. Mrs. Delaroche, absorbed in her own grievances, intent only upon vengeance that should shatter Curtis Griswold to the very foundation of the man, again fixed her eyes upon him as she continued her denunciation to the detective. Britz and Manning listened alertly. Gordon, in the adjoining room, whipped out a notebook and began taking in shorthand everything the woman said.

"Yes, you stole the jewels," said Mrs. Delaroche to the crouching club man in his chair. "I didn't know it when you gave them to me, and fool that I was, the suspicions I might have had were kept aloof by my affection for you. You wooed me for a long time. You told me I was the only woman in the world. You swore you never had a single thought of any other. And all that time it seems, you were courting this Mrs. Missioner. You were seeking to win her—for her wealth, I suppose—it matters not for what. And even while you were in her house as a recognized, even an accepted suitor, you robbed the very woman you really intended to marry!"

Turning with a panther's speed and with its steely strength she addressed herself again to Britz.

"Mr. Griswold!" she said, "gave me a necklace a few weeks ago—a diamond necklace. It was contained in the jewel case you found in my room. He told me he had purchased it for me and that it was to be his bridal gift. I wondered at the munificence of the present, but he assured me he was a man of much greater wealth than was generally supposed, and that when we were wed, we would live in luxury equaling that of anyone in New York society. I believed him. He explained that he wished me to take charge of the necklace at once as he feared to keep it in his own apartment, and for business reasons did not wish to intrust it to a safe deposit company. When the news of the Missioner diamond robbery was published in the newspapers, I commented upon it to the man I supposed to be my fiance, and expressed wonder as to whether Mrs. Missioner's diamonds were as beautiful as those he had given me. He asked me to say nothing about my possession of the necklace until our wedding day. He said he did not wish the directors of the Iroquois Trust Company to know he had laid out such a large sum of money yet awhile.

"When you, Mr. Britz, tried to steal the necklace from my room, when, in fact, you did take the case that had contained them, I supposed you to be an ordinary burglar. Naturally I became excited at the thought of losing such magnificent gems. How the jewels were ever taken from my custody I do not yet know. I have no idea where they are. All I do know is that Curtis Griswold stole them, and that, in turn, they were stolen from him.

"As for you," and she turned upon Griswold anew, "I pray Heaven I shall never hear your name again unless it be under circumstances that will give me further opportunity to revenge myself upon you!"

Silence followed the theatrical outburst of the woman. Griswold stood with clasped hands, his eyes on the floor. Mrs. Missioner, her eyes resolutely averted from his crouching form, gazed at Britz expectantly. Elinor, her fine womanhood athrill with sympathy in spite of her weeks of suffering—more keenly because of it, perhaps—sought to soothe the agitation of Mrs. Delaroche, who was close to collapse. Fitch, too, strove to calm the woman. As a man he pitied her, as a physician, he felt some alarm for her because of the great excitement to which she had wrought herself—excitement plainly beyond the endurance of her emotional nature. A feeling akin to indignation stirred him when, glancing toward Britz, he saw a sarcastic smile on the detective's face. His hands in his pockets, he was rocking gently on his heels, and watching Mrs. Delaroche as one would concentrate his vision on a great tragedienne near the grand finale of her performance.

"Bravo!" said the lieutenant detective at last. "Bravissimo, Mrs. Delaroche! If it were not for detaining our good friends, I'd insist upon an encore. Really, you know, you're entitled to any number of curtain calls for that."

The heroine of the Renaissance burglary flashed furious eyes upon him. Fitch, despite all he knew Britz had done for Elinor, could not conceal his anger. Even Miss Holcomb was indignant. Mrs. Missioner and Sands looked at the detective expectantly. Manning's face was impassive. He was prepared for any surprise from his shrewd lieutenant.

"You behold in Mrs. Delaroche," said Britz, including everybody in a sweep of his hand, "one of the most talented actresses in America. True, she isn't on the stage, but that's only because the managers haven't discovered her. If any of the big managers saw such an example of her art as this, he'd engage her on the spot."

"I don't understand you, Mr. Britz," said Mrs. Missioner inquiringly.

"Mrs. Delaroche understands me, Mrs. Missioner," returned the sleuth. "She knows exactly what I mean. Don't you, Mrs. Delaroche?"

"No!" said the woman from the Renaissance so sharply the word was like a poniard thrust.

"No?" retorted the detective. "How truly unfortunate! Surely you are mistaken, madam, surely you recall what happened in Paris? It can't be you've forgotten how you obtained possession of the Missioner necklace—the one with the Maharanee diamond, you know?"

She clung to silence as to a rock of refuge. Britz, still rocking lightly on his heels, raised a finger warningly and looked at her with that same sarcastic smile.

"You know as well as I do, Mrs. Delaroche," he went on, "that Curtis Griswold didn't steal the Maharanee necklace. Whatever other crimes are upon him, he is guiltless of that—in act, at any rate."

The woman kept her eyes on the floor, her face partly turned away. All the others stared at Britz in amazement, not excepting the Chief of the Detective Bureau.

"Let's run through the pages of history, Mrs. Delaroche," continued the lieutenant. "Personal history, of course—the history of clever little Miss Vincent, one of the brightest young women in Paris. You remember her when she was an art student there, getting along as well as she could on a New England income in the Latin Quarter. A bright, clever little girl she was, to be sure, and it was too bad she had such a hard struggle to realize her artistic dreams!"

All his hearers listened attentively—Mrs. Delaroche, in spite of resolute efforts to appear indifferent, full as faithfully as the others.

Prince Kananda moved forward until he stood within several feet of Mrs. Delaroche. She turned her head slightly and saw him. A glance of mutual recognition passed between them, but so quickly that it was unobserved by the others. The Prince eyed her steadily, with malignant gaze, as of a man who has been tricked. A wild fear leaped into her eyes and she moved away, edging closer to Britz.

"It isn't to be wondered at," said Britz sympathetically, "when you recall the many hardships Miss Vincent endured—when you remember on how many mornings she had to trudge to her copying work in the Louvre without even the poor consolation of a French breakfast, that she permitted a young Hindoo gentleman to spend a little money upon her. It wasn't exactly in line with New England conventionality, of course, but the aristocratic Easterner had been introduced to her formally enough, his behavior was always respectful, and she—well, she was very lonely and very blue and often very hungry."

Mrs. Delaroche bit her lip and turned on Britz a look of such resentment that Mrs. Missioner and Miss Holcomb shrank away a little.

"And it needn't astonish us," Britz continued, "that, when the polished Oriental brought about her acquaintance with an American multi-millionaire she accepted friendly little courtesies from the rich man, even going so far as to dine with him in several of the luxurious cafes for which Paris is famous. The American was a man from her own country—a big, good-natured, whole-souled chap, thoroughly satisfied with his fortune and himself.

"Therefore, why shouldn't the lonely, starving Miss Vincent enjoy gay little dinners and, perhaps, gayer little suppers with him? She was always chaperoned. By whom? By the Hindoo, of course. Besides, the millionaire's wife knew there was a dash of romance in her husband that made him delight in these excursions into the realm of the unusual."

Mrs. Delaroche sat with those brilliant eyes of hers bent rigorously on the rug. The other women glanced at her curiously, Manning with suspicion, Kananda with a glitter in his eyes that seemed to command silence. But she did not look at the Prince.

"However," ran the detective's monologue, "you'll have to admit, Mrs. Delaroche, that it wasn't exactly grateful on Miss Vincent's part to listen to the Hindoo when he offered her a large bribe to—shall we say, steal a certain rare and very beautiful diamond from the multi-millionaire."

Mrs. Delaroche's breath came in a series of soft gasps—almost in sobs. A rose film seemed to spread over her exquisite complexion.

The famous detective paused for a moment and looked accusingly at her. When he spoke, it was with finality.

"Mrs. Delaroche, you were Miss Vincent," he said, "you were the impoverished girl artist of the Latin Quarter. You have been married since, and now you are a divorcee—but you were Miss Vincent."

She recovered her poise for a moment and gazed at him defiantly. Then her courage broke again, and she answered:

"It is true. How you have learned it I cannot guess, but—it is true."

Doris Missioner, despite the suggestion conveyed in the lieutenant's revelations, gazed at Millicent Delaroche commiseratingly. Elinor's pity was more open.

"And now," Britz went on, "Mrs. Delaroche either stole those jewels in Paris or in New York. If they were stolen in Paris, the authorities of this city have no jurisdiction in the case. On the other hand, we can prove the necklace was in her possession only a day or two ago, and if the crime was committed in this country, we will call in the District Attorney." He turned abruptly toward the woman. "Mrs. Delaroche," Britz said, "I do not believe Mrs. Missioner will call on the French authorities to act, if the crime was committed in their jurisdiction. If the jewels were taken here, Mrs. Missioner will have no choice in the matter."

She seized at the bait. Turning her flashing eyes on the detective, she burst forth:

"The jewels were stolen in Paris."

A tense silence was broken by Britz.

"You'll have to show me," he snapped. "It's your last chance to tell the truth."

"I stole the collarette from Mr. Missioner," she admitted. "It was shortly before his death, a long time ago. The plot had all been laid. Griswold and Prince Kananda got me to do it. I met Griswold through Mr. Missioner. He made love to me, made me believe he wanted to marry me. Then, one day, he proposed the plan to steal the jewels. It almost made me laugh, for I was already trying to get them for the Prince. His plan was to have me induce Mr. Missioner to let me wear them one night and disappear with the collarette about my throat. I had agreed to do this, when Griswold"—she cast a withering look at the clubman—"brought me the substitute. He didn't know, of course, that I was in the pay of the Prince, and I didn't inform him of it. Well, one night Mr. Missioner, after much urging on my part, took the collarette from his wife's jewel box and let me wear it at a little supper party. It was then I made the substitution."

"What did you do with the real necklace?" Manning interjected.

"I kept it," Mrs. Delaroche returned with a bland smile. "I informed the Prince that I had changed my mind about committing the robbery, and I told Mr. Griswold that I had been unable to make the substitution."

"But the paste jewels he had given you—what did you tell him in regard to them?" Britz asked.

"I simply told him I had lost them," she replied. "The fact of the matter is, I fooled both the Prince and Mr. Griswold. Of course, when Mrs. Missioner discovered the robbery," Mr. Griswold guessed what I had done, and since then he has been urging me to turn the real jewels over to him. But I was determined not to let him have them until our marriage," she added in a voice laden with the vindictiveness she felt.

The semicircle of listeners contracted until Mrs. Missioner, Miss Holcomb, Sands, and Fitch were close to Britz. The detective, turning to the others, said:

"I have had the good fortune to recover the Maharanee diamond for you, Mrs. Missioner, and it remains only to trace the other jewels of the necklace. I dare say Prince Kananda can tell us where they are."

"As I told you over the telephone, Lieutenant Britz," Mrs. Missioner answered, "I have recovered my jewels."

"All?" asked the detective, slightly astonished.

"All," replied the widow. "Moreover, I do not care to prosecute anyone connected with their disappearance."

"Not the Hindoos who were responsible for their second disappearance—is it possible you do not wish them to be punished?" Britz expostulated.

"I do not," said Mrs. Missioner quietly. "I understand their connection with the mystery thoroughly. In spite of the drastic methods they pursued, I do not blame them. They did not seek the lesser stones of the necklace. In fact, those gems were returned to me this morning by one of the Orientals—a man of scholarly attainment and high character, whom I met in the East. These devotees—fanatics, if you will—have braved death and imprisonment to recover a jewel which I take it is precious in their eyes as was the Holy Grail to the Crusaders. It is a question not merely of religion, but of extreme piety with them. Under such circumstances I cannot consent to appear against them, nor to countenance any attempt to punish them. Besides, there was a mistake in the acquisition of the Maharanee diamond. It belongs to these men of the East. They are free to take it. I surrender all claim upon it."

With an air of unmistakable respect Britz turned toward the widow.

"In the eyes of the law," he said, extending the big Maharanee, "this stone is yours. You may do with it as you choose."

Mrs. Missioner accepted the stone, permitting her eyes to linger a moment on its blazing splendor. Then she wheeled abruptly and passed the diamond to the Prince.

"It is yours," she said. "Take it."

Kananda's eager fingers closed on the gem.

"Mrs. Missioner has restored your property," Britz said, turning to the Oriental, "and I dare say the Chief will agree with me that it is not necessary for us to take your case as far as the District Attorney's office. You and your fellow countrymen are at liberty to go. I advise you to go quickly before I get to thinking too strongly about that little upside-down ride you gave me in Riverside drive. I have the honor to wish Your Royal Highness a very good morning!"

He made a mock obeisance as the Hindoos, released from their shining steel bonds, filed silently out of the room.

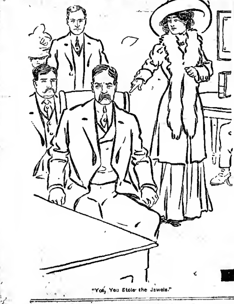
"Miss Holcomb," said Britz, "Chief Manning will procure your release in just about the time it takes us to go from here to the court. You will be discharged at once. Yes, doctor, that will be a complete vindication of your fiancee. My best wishes for your happiness."

Britz then turned to Mrs. Missioner.

"As for the prisoner, Griswold, Mrs. Missioner," he said, "it makes little difference to him that he was not arrested for the theft of your diamonds. The directors of the Iroquois Trust Company have a case against him strong enough to send him up the river for a long while. I trust, Mr. Sands," Britz added significantly, "that in your new-found happiness you will forget the momentary unpleasantness between us. After all, you see, I was acting to your interests."

The rare smile the millionaire flashed at the lieutenant as with a proprietary air he took Doris Missioner's hand in his was as eloquent an expression of friendly gratitude as anyone in society or "the Street" would expect of "Silent" Sands.

THE END.



"Yes, You Stole the Jewels."

SWIFT POSTMEN OF VENICE

They Are Clever in Dodging the Canals and Know Every Street in City.

Probably the letter carriers of Venice are the most ingenious in the world. They know how to dodge every waterway, turning up on their routes with a precise regularity that convinces you they have mapped every scrap of the damp city's dry land on their brains. If you go to your destination by gondola they can beat you thereto by a good bit of time. What they know about canals has been applied by them to navigation on land and they know every tiny street in the city.

Of course, there are postoffice gondolas, too, gay yellow things that quite outcolor the yellow sunlight, and any day you happen over the bridge of the Rialto you will see them fastened to their red-and-gold poles just underneath the old palatial Fondaco dei Tedeschi, which, centuries ago, by decree of the Venetian senate, two famous architects of early days, Girolamo Tedesco and Giorgio Spavento, built for the use of the many German merchants then living in Venice (somewhere about the year 1505).—Travel Magazine.

In Case of a Fall.

Not enough attention is paid to the falls of childhood. Mothers get so used to children tumbling around that they take it quite lightly unless bones are broken.

It should be remembered that injuries to the soft bones of a child may do permanent harm, especially if there be a head hurt.

Keep the child quiet for a time who has had a hard fall, bathe the part freely with some soothing lotion, and if there seems to be trouble that does not yield to simple home remedies, send for a doctor at once.

Ruins? Well!

"If you only had some ruins in this country," said the foreigner, "it would be much more interesting than it is."

"Ruins!" replied the leading citizens; "if ruins add interest, we have 'em. Come around and have a look at the courthouse that we built here about fifteen years ago."

A HEALTHY, HAPPY OLD AGE

May be promoted by those who gently cleanse the system, now and then, when in need of a laxative remedy, by taking a dessertspoonful of the ever refreshing, wholesome and truly beneficial Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, which is the only family laxative generally approved by the most eminent physicians, because it acts in a natural, strengthening way and warms and tones up the internal organs without weakening them. It is equally beneficial for the very young and the middle aged, as it is always efficient and free from all harmful ingredients. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine, bearing the name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package.

How He Found Out.

"Mr. Chairman," shouted one of the delegates to the convention. "I move that the nominating speeches be limited to one minute!"

"Second the motion!" yelled a dozen others.

A storm of protest arose, but the chairman put the motion.

It was lost by a vote of 47 to 45.

"I merely wished to find out, Mr. Chairman," explained the delegate who had made the motion, "how many ambitious orators there are in this convention. There are forty-seven."

TIED DOWN.

20 Years' Slavery—How She Got Freedom.

A dyspepsia veteran who writes from one of England's charming rural homes to tell how she won victory in her 20 years' fight, naturally exults in her triumph over the tea and coffee habit:

"I feel it a duty to tell you," she says, "how much good Postum has done me. I am grateful, but also desire to let others who may be suffering as I did, know of the delightful method by which I was relieved.

"I had suffered for 20 years from dyspepsia, and the giddiness that usually accompanies that painful ailment, and which frequently prostrated me. I never drank much coffee, and cocoa and even milk did not agree with my impaired digestion, so I used tea, exclusively, till about a year ago, when I found in a package of Grape-Nuts the little book, 'The Road to Wellville.'

"After a careful reading of the booklet I was curious to try Postum and sent for a package. I enjoyed it from the first, and at once gave up tea in its favor.

"I began to feel better very soon. My giddiness left me after the first few days' use of Postum, and my stomach became stronger so rapidly that it was not long till I was able (as I still am) to take milk and many other articles of food of which I was formerly compelled to deny myself. I have proved the truth of your statement that Postum 'makes good, red blood.'

"I have become very enthusiastic over the merits of my new table beverage, and during the past few months, have conducted a Postum propaganda among my neighbors which has brought benefit to many, and I shall continue to tell my friends of the 'better way' in which I rejoice." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Gallant Work of Family

Man, Wife and Son Participate in Rescue of Girl From Drowning in Icy Waters.

An extraordinary instance of a family's gallantry comes from Oxford. It appears that a domestic servant of [illegible] while cycling by the side of the river with a young man at ten o'clock the other evening, fell off her machine [illegible] water was 12 feet deep and there was a swift current. The young man roused the Iffley lockkeeper (Mr. Mellon), who immediately jumped into the river in the darkness. His wife followed with her seventeen-year-old son carrying a lantern.

She directed operations by the lantern light and told her son to jump in to save his father, who seemed unable to effect the rescue single handed in the swiftly running stream. Young Mellon obeyed immediately, and father and son, swimming in the icy cold water, effected the girl's rescue by the light of the lantern carried by Mrs. Mellon.—Reynolds's Newspaper.

Down Comes a Dog Statue.

The borough council of Battersea, England, has decreed that the famous "brown dog" statue be destroyed.

The "brown dog" statue was erected several years ago in Battersea park to commemorate the sufferings of a little dog used for months in vivisection experiments in a London hospital.

It was the cause of scores of demonstrations on the part of medical students, and finally was removed by order of the borough council. The donor of the statue, however, recently brought suit to compel the council to restore it.

Brought Home to Him.

A Cincinnati judge entered the Wolcott yesterday morning and registered. He said he had just come from Boston. Then he put his hand in his hip pocket, looked puzzled, fished about while the clerk expected to hear him say he had lost his pocketbook, and then pulled out a key, from which a tag was dangling.

"Well, by hokel!" exclaimed the jurist, "if that isn't the key to my room at the Hotel Touraine! Say, how much is this thing worth, anyhow?"

"About fifty cents," he was told.

"Well, well! And to think that I have sent men to jail for stealing less than that!"—New York Sun.

Woman
Her Home, Her Interests.

Guessing Who Is Engaged.

A young woman who had been away from her home town on a prolonged trip returned and announced her engagement in this way. She managed to keep her secret, and so when eight of her girl friends were bidden to a luncheon they did not suspect the denouement that was to be made. When they went to the dining-room the decorations and cards set them to thinking, for the centerpiece was a glass plateau on which was placed a boat under sail. There were suit case favors at each place with a card, which read: "The man in the case;" also wee satin bags out of which a cat's face came with a wee card around its neck saying "The cat's out of the bag." The hostess explained that the centerpiece represented the "Sea of Matrimony," and told the guests they were to guess who was about to embark upon it. The suit cases were opened and revealed the photograph of the "man in the case," but no one knew him. By adroit questioning the hostess was found out and congratulations followed.

For a Home Wedding.

At a home wedding, is it good form for the bride's parents to be downstairs among the guests before the ceremony, or is it preferable to have the mother come down on her son's arm just before the orchestra starts to play the wedding march? You may suggest a newer way.

Is it still good form to have a bride's cake and have the bride cut into it?

Should the bridal party be served in the dining-room first or last?—Ella.

The parents of the bride should be in the drawing-room to receive the guests. They issue the invitations and are the host and hostess and should be in readiness for the arrival of the first guest. There is always the wedding cake, and the ribbon-tied knife is handed the bride for her to make the first incision, the so-called "cutting the cake." The bridal party generally goes in last after receiving all the congratulations. The guests begin to be served soon after the ceremony.

Sending Announcements.

When there are to be no invited guests at a marriage, is it proper to have announcement cards? When are they to be sent out? How long before the marriage? Is it proper for the bride-to-be to send them to the father and mother of the groom-to-be?—Little Bird.

Announcements are sent immediately after the marriage, not before, and should go to all the bridegroom's relatives and friends. It is well to have his list and the cards ready, all stamped and sealed, to be mailed after the ceremony on the wedding day.

To Serve With Oysters.

As I intend having a little gathering at my home some evening soon, I am writing to inquire what would be the proper thing to serve with oyster soup.

Kindly outline a little menu in connection with the serving of oysters for the first course.—Puzzled.

Celery, olives and sometimes a cabbage salad are served with oyster soup, the latter we call cold slaw.

Paying the Wedding Expenses.

Will you kindly tell me whether it is customary for the bridegroom or the bride's parents to pay for the carriages at a large wedding.

Please reply in your columns.—Debutante.

The bride's father pays for all carriages except for the one used by the bridegroom, his best man and the minister.

MADAME MERRI.

IMPROVED CANNAS ATTRACTIVE AND SATISFACTORY PLANTS

Started in March and Bedded Out When Danger of Frost Is Past It Begins to Bloom Early in Summer and Keeps Up Display Until Killing Frosts of Autumn—How to Propagate.

Canna in Bloom.

The improved cannas are among the most attractive and satisfactory of bedding plants. The beds have tropical foliage, grow well in any rich, moist, sunny bed, branch, and bear huge spikes of rich-colored flowers that often measure more than six inches across. Started in March and bedded out when danger from frost is past the plants begin to bloom early in summer, and keep up the display until the frosts of autumn, says Park's Floral Magazine.

Cannas are propagated either from seeds or by division of the clumps. Seedlings begin to bloom the first year, and a fine mixed bed can be produced from them. The seeds are rather tardy in germination unless dropped in scalding water till the hard outer cover bursts, then taken out and planted. Some file through the covering. Many persons, however, plant the seeds without treating them, and meet with good success. By starting plants from seeds choice varieties are often found, and it was by this means that the beautiful named Cannas used for beds were produced. To have the most effective display, however, it is better to plant named varieties, which are increased by dividing the clumps. These come in green and bronze foliage and vary in color from white to rich crimson. Among the best for beds in the different colors are Pennsylvania, four and a half feet high, with green foliage and big clusters of huge scarlet flowers; King Humbert, five feet high, with fine yellow clusters, and Florence Vaughan, three and a half feet high, with fine clusters of flowers, golden yellow, spotted red.

The bed should be prepared by spading deep, at the same time incorporating well-decayed stable manure with it. See that it is in a warm, sunny exposure, and when Nature does not water copiously, add to the supply. The plants should be set 18 inches apart. They like an abundance of water. On the approach of hot weather they will be benefited by a liberal mulching of stable litter. As the flowers fade cut them off, this will insure continued bloom.

When frost spoils the bed cut the tops off, after a rain, lift the clumps with a portion of the wet soil adhering, dry well, then place on a hanging shelf in a dry, frost-proof cellar. Examine them occasionally. If too dry, sprinkle, if too wet, air.

Protection From Dogs.

A Minnesota farmer says that he keeps dogs away from his flock by putting up in his pasture the dummy of a man holding a stick for a gun. This dummy is taken down every morning and put up again in the evening at different places from night to night. He says a sheep killing dog will not go near enough to the dummy to discover that it is a bogus man.

Sheep should be protected from dogs at night by putting them into the sheep barn or enclosing them in fine weather by a high barb wire fence.

Every sheep owner who discovers a stray dog on his place should not hesitate to fill him full of buckshot. He is a trespasser and the law will not touch a man who kills him.

Care of Roads.

Any neighborhood that does not have enough enterprise to keep two or three log road drags going for a couple of weeks during the late fall is sadly behind the times. Farmers who are too lazy to do this ought to be compelled to drag their weary legs through the mud to town—next spring—as they surely will.

Making Good Filter.

A good filter can be made by sinking a 50-gallon barrel in the ground where the roof spout from the house enters the earth to pass into the cistern. Fill the barrel with charcoal and let the water run through it.

Live Geese Feathers.

Geese may be plucked for the "live geese feathers," so-called, at the end of the breeding season and again when the feathers are grown out and become so mature that there is no blood left in the quills.

Two Late Designs

CLOTH COSTUME.—Cedar-brown face cloth is used here. The skirt, which measures about two yards at foot, is trimmed down each side front with a band of black satin. The smart little coat has a wide right front that wraps quite over to the left side, where it fastens under the strap of satin which is carried over the shoulder to waist both front and back, and a similar strap trims right side; the elbow length sleeves are worn over lace undersleeves; buttons and loops form trimmings. Hat of stretched black satin, trimmed with an ostrich plume, completes a charming costume.

Materials required for costume: Five yards 46 inches wide, 1¼ yard satin 22 inches wide.

Dinner Dress.—The dress is of cherry-red satin, with long tunic of gray ninon, finished at foot with oxidized lace. The bodice has a piece of wide cherry-red embroidery across the front; the fichu is of ninon edged with gray silk and oxidized fringe, and drawn up in the front under an oxidized buckle.

Materials required: 4½ yards satin 44 inches wide, 3½ yards ninon 44 inches wide, two yards lace for tunic, half yard wide embroidery, 2¼ yards fringe.

COMBINED GATE-FEED TROUGH

The drawing illustrates a combined gate and feed trough that may be used to advantage where inside feeding is allowed, says the New England Homestead. The space inclosed by the troughs corresponds to an alleyway in an ordinary barn. The man doing the feeding can easily distribute feed owing to the closeness of the troughs. By placing the swinging gates the proper distance from the doorway of the barn entering steers can easily be divided into equal lots. The divisions above each trough serve in a way as stanchions. This arrangement has been found very convenient by Longdon Brothers, extensive farmers of Winona county, Minn.

IN VOGUE

Many large velvet hats with turned-up brims are seen.

Lace is much used as ruffles on skirts of evening frocks.

Dark blouses are trimmed with white mousseline de soie.

The new horn buttons rimmed to contrasting color come in variety of combinations.

Machine stitching is very popular on skirts and coat suits of cheviot and English suitings.

Fur is used more extensively than ever to trim dresses intended to wear without a wrap.

Charmeuse continues to be the fashionable fabric for afternoon wear. The favorite trimming is silk fringe.

Little Flowers.

The rococo flower, when it came in, had in it an element of surprise from which we have hardly recovered, in spite of our familiarity with this form of ornament. Whenever one sees these fascinating little bits of trimming they seem to crop up with a light air of unexpectedness and to win and deserve always the approval of the eye.

On heavy winter millinery they have a singular coquetry and grace; tucked in a velvet corsage they are equally quaint, and dangling from a satin or chiffon sash or a fragile necktie or an airy scarf they look as if some amiable breeze had delicately blown them thither. Their motive is, of course, the adorning of evening dress and they fulfill it in a wholly admirable spirit, their crowning glory being their poise among the soft coils of a girl's pretty hair.

More Sentiment About Those Hats.

"I went out in the woods hunting yesterday and I shot a man who was wearing one of those fuzzy hats."

"Well?"

"I am afraid people may think I did it intentionally."

"Afraid? Why, man, if they think that, you will get all the more credit."

STUMBLING IS VERY BAD HABIT

Some Horses Naturally Addicted to Fault While Others Have It Thrust Upon Them by Ignorance.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

Some horses are naturally addicted to stumbling, others acquire the fault and still others have it thrust upon them by the carelessness and ignorance of the owners.

The horse that stumbles when a colt is almost incurable. His manner of traveling may be improved to some extent with careful driving with a tight rein and the moderately high checking, but a born stumbler is a hard case to deal with.

Many horses are made to stumble by wrong shoeing. If shod heavily in front and light behind they are almost certain to acquire the habit.

Weak joints or imperfectly formed legs are also causes of stumbling. Some colts are born with marked evidence of weak[illegible] of some cases wh[illegible] years that have [illegible] were perceptibly [illegible] an animal can ne[illegible] stumbling habit. We know [illegible] at three [illegible] driven [illegible] Such [illegible] of this

Driving with a sla[illegible] is another cause of stumbling and very often the sole cause. If a horse becomes fatigued it should be kept well up on the rein if driven over rough roads. No good horseman will ever take chances of allowing his horse to fall down by driving with a slovenly rein.

Stumbling often causes bad accidents, not only to the horse, but to the occupants of the vehicle he is drawing. We once saw a fine looking carriage horse who was being driven by a woman who allowed the reins to dangle loosely in her hands, fall on the Lake Shore drive in Chicago. He stumbled for more than 15 feet before he finally fell. He overturned the carriage in his struggles and when he was assisted to his feet it was found that both knees were broken, and he was rendered useless for life.

A Little Off.

Senator Penrose was talking in Washington about the dreadful hunting accidents of last month. "When buck fever seizes a man," he said, "he goes as far off his aim as the old lady went in her definition of the word 'bellicose.' She was talking with a friend about a bishop.

"'He's a fine man,' said the friend, a fine, handsome man. His only trouble is that he's a little bellicose.'

"'Bellicose?' said the old lady with a surprised frown. 'He must have changed, then. The last time I saw him he was tall and rather slender.'"

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 24 K, Boston.

The Backteriologist.

A Richmond darky chanced to meet on the street a friend who complained of much "mis'ry." Indeed, the afflicted one was in despair, so "tuckered out" was he.

"Wut seems to be de matter?" asked the first negro.

"Jim," said the other with a moan and a gesture indicating the portion of his anatomy that was giving him so much trouble, "I'se got sech awful pains in mah back hyah!"

Jim assumed an air of great solemnity and wisdom. "In dat case," said he, "dere's only one thing fo' you to do. Jes' yo' put yo'self in de hands o' dat Doctah Blank. I hears dat he's de fi'nest backteriologist in de whole souf."

Think of It!

Squilbob—Don't know how to court the girl? Well, my boy, you just tell her that you know she despises "jollying" and is the one woman in the world who can't be flattered.

Squilligan—Well?

"That sort of guff will flatter her!"

Her Resignation.

"Papa," she said, "I am very angry with Geraldine."

"What's Geraldine done?" asked her father.

"Why, I told her a secret last summer," said the little girl indignantly, "and she has just told me she's going to tell it."

"That's very wrong of Geraldine. Has she any excuse?"

"Why, I told her it was wicked to tell a secret, and what do you think she said? She said: 'Oh, I know, but I've resigned from that secret!'

"Papa," she concluded, earnestly, "you can't resign from a secret, can you?"

Feminine Retorts.

The suffragette was conversing with the eminent African traveler.

"And you don't believe in woman suffrage?" said the lady.

"No, madam," the hunter of big game replied. "I believe that the feminine traits, gentle, humane, tender, fit your sex for the home rather than for the sterner duties of life or the possible necessities of the state."

"Yes," the suffragette replied. "I have heard those arguments before. And now may I ask how you received that deep scar on your cheek?"

"It was given me by a lioness, madam."

The suffragette smiled.

"Good for the lady lion," she said.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1/3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

BRITISH MAYORS ILL PAID

Some of Them Govern Large and Ancient Cities, but Get Very Small Salaries.

The following information refers to cities of the approximate population of 235,000, that being the population of the city in the United States whence the inquiry came as to the salaries of mayors in the cities of the United Kingdom.

The English city nearest in population to the foregoing number, as far as my investigation went, is Newcastle, the mayor of which receives $2,500 per annum. Additional remuneration is sometimes given to cover expenses on exceptional occasions. There is also an annual allowance of $750 for horses and carriages.

The population of Dublin (in each instance I am following the British census of 1901) is 290,000. The lord mayor of Dublin for some time received about $18,000 a year, but in November, 1910, this salary was reduced to about $8,000 a year.

Bradford, with a population of 280,000, makes no allowance to its lord mayor. On exceptional occasions appropriations are made, but no portion of the same is ever used personally by the lord mayor.

Bristol, with a population of 328,006, allows its mayor $5,000 annually and $600 toward defraying the expenses of a private secretary. The cost of the upkeep of the municipal coach, men's wages and livery are defrayed directly out of the public funds.

Edinburgh, having a population of 313,000, allows its lord provost, corresponding to a lord mayor of an English city, the sum of $5,000 a year.

Sheffield, with 380,000 people, allows nothing whatever to its chief municipal executive. A special committee has recently been appointed to examine into this question and to report as to the desirability of providing some remuneration.

Leeds, with a population of 429,000; Belfast, with 348,000, and Hull, with 193,000, make no allowance for the remuneration of their mayors or lord mayors, as the case may be. In Hull, however, at the time of the coronation of Edward VII., an allowance was made to the lord mayor of $10,000.—United States Consul General, London.

New Metal for Armor-Plate.

A series of tests have recently taken place with a metal which, it has been discovered, possesses qualities of great resistance against the penetration of super-caliber projectiles, and, says the London Standard, its first practical use has been offered to the British admiralty. If the result of the experiments that have been made prove satisfactory, and the admiralty decide to employ the metal in the armor plating of their warships, it will mean that the thickness of the armor will be reduced with a consequent lessened displacement in the vessels. The metal is known as molybdenum, and it is used to alloy with nickel in steel. Experiments have been carried out on government firing grounds under official supervision, and it is stated that the process has proved to be superior by 15 or 20 per cent to the recognized armor plate standard. The metal is found in small quantities in Canada, South Africa, Norway, and Sweden, and the pure specimens are worth about $1.75 a pound. It has wonderful hardening qualities when treated with nickel, and the results of the trial to which it is being subjected is awaited with considerable interest by the engineering world.

PROTEST OF NEW ZEALAND

Land of Radical Legislation Objects Because Its Premier Has Accepted a Baronetcy.

We have, as a nation, been inclined to look on the New Zealanders as a queer lot. But at last, though we have hardly been able to understand their government of strongly socialistic tendencies, we are able to understand one protest they are raising. Joseph Ward is the premier of the country. When Dick Seddon was running a "pub" and working in the mines in the north island, and Hall-Jones was a carpenter, Joe Ward—if our memory does not fail us—was working as a telegraph operator somewhere around Christ church or Dunedin.

Then came that revolution, which followed the great maritime strike almost twenty years ago, with the result that the old Tory party of land monopolists was thrown out bodily, and the butcher, baker and candlestick maker moved into the old rattletrap frame parliament building at Wellington to run the country. With plain, burly old Dick Seddon and old Scotch farmer John McKenzie at the head of the machinery, New Zealand started in on the most radical legislation that the world has seen for a long time. It was well suited to New Zealand and New Zealand was well suited to it and though there have been great failures at certain times and points, the sum total has been good.

In the meantime the character of the New Zealand people has changed. People who, when they were landless and homeless, were radical enough, are out-and-out Conservatives now and are ready to denounce any radical legislation that will affect their acres or holdings. Likewise have the butcher, baker and candlestick maker changed. Dick Seddon died true to his start—a rough miner—but Ward soon blossomed out as Joseph Ward, and then, four years ago, he was knighted. Sir Joseph and Lady Ward did not, however, sit well with the New Zealanders. At the recent colonial conference Sir Joseph accepted a baronetcy. This was just beyond the limit for democratic New Zealand for now the title "Sir" became hereditary. New Zealand has kicked out a hereditary land monopoly and now it is up in arms against a hereditary aristocracy. According to the dispatches Sir Joseph's political sun is sinking. New Zealand prefers to accept Gladstone and Seddon, who refused such honors, as her examples.

Mrs. Grundy.

"What will Mrs. Grundy say?" This query occurs in an old play called "Speed the Plough." The author of it was one Thomas Morton, a forgotten playwright. First acted in 1798—the year of the Battle of the Nile, and the Irish Rebellion—this play had then a "run" of forty one nights and subsequently it was much revived. A farmer's wife in the play, Mrs. Ashfield by name, insistently refers to her rival, the wife of a neighboring farmer, whom she calls Mrs. Grundy. This second woman does not appear on the stage. It is the ruling passion with Mrs. Ashfield to have everything superior to what Mrs. Grundy may possess. In the keenness of feminine rivalry Mrs. Ashfield is controlled in all her investments in personal apparel, when selecting her new gown, her bonnet, her jewelry, in all she does, indeed, by the determination to "spite" her rival as expressed in the exclamation, "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" From Morton's "Speed the Plough" came to us the invisible yet ubiquitous Mrs. Grundy. By a curious transfer of symbolism, however, Mrs. Grundy passed with time into a concrete and personal equivalent for the public opinion which supports the proprieties, the respectabilities.

Tourists in Ireland.

The world is always willing to give every renaissance a chance, and we have ours now. Are we going to take it? The matter of tourist organization may seem, at first sight, to be a small one. But our attitude towards it will be regarded, and rightly regarded as a sign of our whole attitude towards the things that the modern world of business considers most important. If we take no pains at all to preserve and garner the golden harvest which is open to us in the tourist traffic, we shall be set down as hopelessly incompetent in practical affairs. If our visitors are bored or cheated, if they are allowed to go away in ignorance of the best views the finest scenery, if they do not find the facilities that they have a right to expect, the damning rumor will spread abroad that Ireland is pretty, of course, but so dirty and uncomfortable! Not only will our tourist stream dry up, but every Irish product, from lace to butter, will have to fight against that vague, intangible prejudice against Irish goods and Irish methods as being dirty and unbusinesslike.—Weekly Irish Times.

Truely Appropriate.

The organist was not lacking in patriotism, says the New York Sun, yet he rebelled when requested to play "The Star Spangled Banner," at a wedding. "It is not appropriate," he said. "Ain't it," said the bride's father. "For this wedding it is the most appropriate thing you can play. Cut all the rest of the program if you like, but stick to that. I had the hardest kind of a fight to keep Belle's mother from marrying her off to a foreigner. Between Belle and me we won out for an American and if this isn't the time for 'The Star Spangled Banner,' I'd like to know what is."

Exquisite Elegy Tribute to Friend.

The early death of Keats robbed Shelley of a dear friend, but led to the writing of the exquisite elegy "Adonais," and it is rather touching to recall that when Shelley was drowned, a year and a half later, a copy of Keats' poems was found open in his coat pocket when his body was washed ashore.

BEST OF ALL BARBERS

TO BE SHAVED BY AMERICAN NEGRO WAS A DELIGHT.

Entertaining, Skilful and Humorous, He Has Been Supplanted by the More Business-Like Modern Tonsorial Artist.

The tear of regret may glisten for a moment in the corner of the eye of some elderly man when he revisits in imagination the barber shop of long ago. That was in the day when in the middle west popular prejudice held fast to the opinion that the negro was a natural barber, the American negro the best barber in the world.

He knows more about family trees than any college of heraldry—if there is such an institution—could possibly know and how long and interesting he would talk of your folks' folks in Lexington, Ky.!

"Let me rest yo' hat, and yo' coat, sah. Yes, sir, Judge G. was heah this mornin' and Col. B. got out of the cheer only a few minutes ago."

With a sigh of anticipated comfort you sank into the chair and stretched out your legs. "Yes, sah, yo' really do need a shave, sah. It's a pleasure fo' me to shave you. Yo' heard is just as it should be. Now and then I get a rough neck with squirrel whiskers that upsets me fo' a whole day."

Perhaps you may recall a story in an old text book about a very different kind of a barber, that began after this fashion:

"A prating barber who waited upon a certain king, came one day to trim his hair and asked him, 'Sire, how will you have it done?' 'Silently,' said the king."

It is not necessary to continue that story, the Indianapolis News remarks. One may know at once that the barber of this churlish king was not a negro. He was probably a mere tonsorial artist, wholly devoid of the delightful charm of entertaining that is possessed in so high a degree by the black knight of the razor—one might now, alas, call him the disinherited knight, as so many have come in to crowd him from his place.

Only one superfluous question would he ask, and that was from long established habit: "Does she pull, sah?" Yet he well knew that in his skillful hand the keen blade was as light as gossamer, for as he afterward admitted he had "honed and stropped her down fine 'n a gnat's heel." How deftly he would spread the cool lather over the rough and razorable cheek and chin! With what tender care he avoided the wart that nestled on your upper lip, close to your nose, and never say a word about this blemish on a very handsome face!

But you did not get out of the chair in any such brief time as this tale has required in its telling. By no means. How he would dally about you, comb and shears in hand, clipping here and there an infinitesimal bit of hair which, in his critical judgment, spoilt the symmetry of his work. And, at last, as though loath to let you go until his sense of the perfection of his work had been satisfied in every artistic detail, he would still detain you for a last lingering regretful inspection, following you to the door and watching your shadow as it lengthened in the afternoon sun.

What a genial humor he had, what a knowledge of human nature, white and black? The newspaper, even then, was well enough in its way, but not to be compared as a news teller to him who gave the gossip of the dear old town with a racy flavor and picturesque beauty that proclaimed the master. The new barber has a finer shop and sometimes a foreign accent, is more matter of fact and businesslike, but—candidly, you know he is not—well, he's not the old barber.

Germany and Heine.

Lord Haldane in his recent university address, "Great Britain and Germany: A Study in Ethnology," had words of reproach for Germany concerning her treatment of Heine. He pointed out that Germany in the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century had her Elizabethan age, so far as literature and philosophy were concerned.

How much poorer would the whole world be but for this period of German life, in which she for the time outstripped every other country! Yet even then she indulged in tendencies which needed correction, and if she had listened to Heinrich Heine they might have been corrected and the outlook enlarged. And now the revanche was in progress, much as Heine predicted, and, looking at the German railway bookstalls he could see that the spirit of Paris was advancing on Berlin. It need not have been so, and it should not have been so, and Heine told of a better way. Had his counsel been listened to there would have been no Nietzsche period—so at least it seemed to a foreigner.

Suspicious Move.

"That woman views me with considerable suspicion."

"Why should she view you with suspicion, Mrs. Wopp?"

"Well, you see, we have been living in the same apartment house for the last seven years and once in an unguarded moment I bowed to her."

Both Had to Guess.

"Ethelinda writes a very peculiar hand," said Maude.

"Yes," replied Maymie. "It's just a lot of straight lines and angles. When you read it, you have to guess at the spelling, the same as she does."

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefited by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

AS TO CHILDREN OVERHEAD

Mrs. Gobbleton Convinces Her Husband the Only Desirable Flat Is Next to Roof.

"I think, and I have always thought," said Mr. Gobbleton, "that it's a good thing to have living in the flat over you a family with children. This is contrary to the general opinion, I know, and when I propound my theory to Mrs. Gobbleton she says, 'Stuff and nonsense!' But I think there's something in it.

"What we want, or what we need most, is a chance to sleep nights. I hold that if there are children overhead we get that rest at night because then the people there keep quiet so as not to disturb their children, to which Mrs. Gobbleton again says, 'Stuff and nonsense!'

"She says that I'm just a theorizer, that I get an idea about how things ought to be, and then I think that's the way they are. But she says that if we have children overhead we get their noise all day, and the noise of the grown-up people at night just the same. There may be cases in which the people do keep quiet on their children's account, but to rely on anything of this sort would be taking a frightful chance, for, on the other hand, there are people who put their children to bed nights and shut up their rooms and then go ahead just the same and have card parties and sing and dance till 2 o'clock in the morning, and their children never know it, but we know it, and we know it again a little later when their children are up and pounding up and down the hall at 6 o'clock, so that we can't sleep then.

"'No,' she says to me, 'there's nothing in my notion. I'm just a theorizer.'

"'Well, then,' I say to her, 'you'd say that the only flat to live in would be one under the roof?'

"'Now,' she says to me, 'now Algernon, you are showing some signs of sanity. That's the sort of flat we want the next time we move.'"

In Hoo-noo-luu-luu.

Honolulu today is a decided mixture of nationalities and a babel of tongues. It has 14,000 Hawaiians, 12,000 Japanese, 6,300 Chinese, 5,400 Portuguese, 4,300 Americans, British and Germans, 800 Porto Ricans, 1,000 Coreans and 1,200 other nationalities. In a short ride on the street cars—electric if you please, and furnishing very good service—one can easily see representatives of five or six nationalities and hear as many different languages spoken. First come the natives, swarthy in complexion, with noses, lips and ears that might suggest American negroes, but with straight (not kinky) black hair and a copper color that recall the American Indian and proclaim the Polynesian. Their language is very simple. To one who hears it for the first time comes the conviction that the aborigines expressed their sentiments in primitive vowel sounds, to which some consonants have been added. Each vowel is sounded as in Latin, and the words are easily pronounced by one who is patient and wishes to speak distinctly. The pronunciation will be all the better if the speaker will draw out, almost drawl, the vowel sounds, for which reason the language is well suited to the doleful Hawaiian wail. Say e. g. Hoo-noo-luu-luu, and let the word sing itself.

In Germany.

"No one need apologize for going to a beer garden in Germany," said Louis Weisenberger, who recently returned from a trip abroad.

"The beer business there has no moral taint upon it. The entire German family, from the grandchildren to the grandfather, may be there, seated at the same table. Some things there are, of course, quite strange to American eyes. One day while I was in a big beer garden in Berlin a handsome young officer in a magnificent new uniform came in and seated himself at a nearby table.

"There was brought to him a big radish, several slices of rye bread and a tall mug of beer. Then I saw the handsome young officer draw from the tail pocket of that magnificent uniform something wrapped in paper. This he unrolled, a sweet smile playing about his blonde mustache as he did so and at last a piece of sausage seven or eight inches long was revealed.

"My astonishment at this sight was carefully concealed. I doubt if any officer of the Tenth United States infantry would dare attempt such a movement on the subsistence department."—Indianapolis News.

Such Lovey-Dovey Birds.

"I have been interested for a long time in watching the love birds at the Bronx Zoo," said a visitor. "The male and the female sit side by side on their perch all day and snuggle up. They rub their beaks together and stroke each other's heads exactly as though they were making love. The other day I missed them when I went to their old cage. I asked the keeper about them.

"'We had to change them to another cage,' said he. 'You see, they were right next to the canaries and frequently we would find the latter's toes bitten off. Those love birds look very gentle and affectionate, but they can't resist canaries' toes.'"—New York Sun.

Apparatus.

"I was just wondering one thing in all this talk of weighing souls."

"What are you wondering?"

"If they can do it with a spirit level."

Jealousy.

"So you disapprove of the modern drama?" "Yes," said the constable. "I can't help thinking there's something wrong with these plays we've been getting. The public mind is liable to get confused. I never yet saw a play that made a policeman appear as affable or smart or heroic as a burglar or a confidence man."

TO A FAITHFUL FRIEND

HE IS ONLY A DOG, BUT THE TRIBUTE IS DESERVED.

Sympathetic to His Master's Moods, Loyal Through All Tribulations, He Seems Well Fitted for a Place in Heaven.

When I wake he comes to greet me. With a wagging tail he meets me when I'm coming home at twilight from the business of the day. Though I'm weary, cross and dowdy, he is ready with his "Howdy!" and his eyes are full of welcome and his tail just thumps away. If I'm ugly, grouchy, snappy, it disturbs his mooner happy, yet he sort of tries to cheer me as a comrade ought to do; while if I am bright and smiling at his canine ways beguiling, he's the gladdest, gayest doggie that a man would wish to view.

If I called to him to follow he would trail o'er hill and hollow; he would never pause or leave me while he had the strength to crawl; he would stick through fight and frolic—merry days or melancholic—asking only to be with me for my fortune or my fault. Yes, though shame and degradation made me shunned by all creation, through the valley of the shadow and the paths where terrors dwell, with a love that does not alter, with a trust that cannot falter, he would follow me unflagging, though my roadway led through hell!

Dog o' mine, you're shy on breeding, but unless I'm poor at reading there is love and faith unending in those brown and gentle eyes, and although you're far from pretty, that's no cause to call for pity—you've a world of canine wisdom for a fellow of your size. So I love you 'cause you're loyal and your heart is truly royal, with a warmth and tender vigor that would well befit a king, and because your dumb devotion is as measureless as ocean and as fervid as the passions that the poets love to sing.

Yet the scientists aver that you're an ordinary cur, that in your canine composition there is not a hint of soul. Let 'em prove it, word and letter, but I know a whole lot better, and I guess your name is entered on the "fit for heaven" scroll. Truth to tell, when I have ended all the space it was intended I should spend upon this planet; when, in short, I've "got my cue," I shall think, good dog and plucky, that I sure am mighty lucky if they'll let me up to heaven where they've made a place for you!

Women and Fiction.

This land of ours does certainly seem to belong to women. Witness—when it comes to literary matters and especially to the story magazines—the fact that a majority of all the tales and all the verse therein is written by women authors and, one rather thinks, written for women readers mainly.

When we say written for women readers, we mean that the kind, the general character of stories we see in the magazines is such as to appeal to women's taste more than to man's. To illustrate, there is much prominence allowed to frocks and frills, descriptions of the gowns and slippers and accessories worn by the heroines and figurantes throughout the stories. They are feminine, decidedly, those tricks of fiction.

Now, the question is: Why may this be the case? Is it because the women of America are more inclined to go in for the writing of short stories than the men? Or is it that the magazines believe the reading public to consist largely of women, and in consequence, prefer to publish fiction written by feminine authors who are thought to know just how the women readers can be pleased most surely and continually? Or else is it that the women have far more talent, generally, in the line of writing, than the men?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Ruskin Was a Prodigy.

What the times proclaim the "precocity" of such children as young Sidis and other youthful prodigies belongs by no means to this generation. John Ruskin appears to have been an example of the same kind of thing. When only four years of age he wrote a letter in which he corrected his aunt for having put in a pillar of his Waterloo bridge upside down. Here was foreshadowed his "Seven Lamps of Architecture," no doubt. At five he was, it is gravely asserted by biographers, a bookworm and at seven he had begun a work in four volumes "with copper plates printed and composed by a little boy and also drawn." His "Modern Painters" indeed was published before he was 25 and it no doubt contains some of his most notable writing, better in point of style and beauty than much of the later work which came when he was under pressure for time to do all that he strove to accomplish for the enlightenment of his fellow men.

The Model.

"I'd gladly lend you $10, Jones," said Marrowby, "but really I'm busted. We've just moved out into the country, and I've had to buy a machine."

"Really? Runabout or touring car?" asked Jones.

"Neither," said Marrowby. "Mowing."—Harper's Weekly.

Mistaken.

"I found a ten-dollar bill in my last summer suit."

"Gee! Why, I thought you were married."—Toledo Blade.

Worth Smiling At.

Judging from the present styles, if women really had any sense of humor, it would be fatal. They would simply sit laughing at each other.

The two latter are for unexpired terms, the present incumbents holding office by appointment.

GEO. A. BATES, Secretary.

Didn't Concern Him.

John Wesley had a reputation for cheerfulness. In his journal he writes: "I preached in Halifax to a civil, senseless congregation. Three or four gentlemen put me in mind of the honest man at London who was so gay and unconcerned while Doctor Sherlock was preaching concerning the Day of Judgment. One asked: 'Do you not hear what the doctor says?' He answered, 'Yes, but I am not of his parish!'"

MENTOR

We wish a "Happy New Year" to you Mr. Editor, and all your big family of Herald readers. "May your shadow never grow less" as the East India folks express it.

Mr. John Frost returned late last week from his visit with relatives and old friends at North Evans, N. Y., his old home.

Mrs. LeDue and children are spending the Christmas vacation at Brockton, N. Y. with relatives.

Miss Frances Damon of Omaha, who is taking the course of study at Oberlin College, is spending the holidays here with her aunt, Mrs. T. D. Morley and family, at their country place in West Mentor, "Chesney-Wold."

Mrs. Henry Sandberg and Mrs. George Hoose were hostesses for the "Social Day" set down on the Miscellany programs for holiday week, and had the pleasure of giving a delightful afternoon to all those of their "Club" who were so fortunate as to be able to attend. Miss Ara Radcliffe gave some recitations very charmingly, which were fully appreciated. Miss Ida Merkle sang, and was "encored" as a matter of course, as her singing is so easy and natural that it is always greatly enjoyed. Little Grace Sandberg sang a nice little piece which was enjoyed, and "Mistress Mollie" gave a recitation on a "Christmas theme." Miss Georgie Merrill of Burton, sang a number of selections, coming in as a stranger but making many friends by her lovely ways and beautiful voice. The two hostesses served most delicious coffee and fried cakes, which were pronounced just the right thing that cold day, and all those not present will have all the rest of the year to be sorry for it.

Mrs. Robert Case is enjoying a visit from her friend, Miss Georgia Merrill of Burton, for a few days now.

Miss Frances Cleveland entertained on New Year's evening, a large number of the young ladies of the village and their best friends.

Mr. and Mrs. James Garfield have been spending Christmas time at their home here "Holly Croft." Their three sons who are away at school, all being at home for vacation, and none of the family wishing to pass the few choice days up in the dirty old city.

For the same reason as the above the John Newell homestead has also been open during holidays, the family returning for the winter reunion, and finding the vacation days all too short.

Del McGrae returns today to his studies at Columbus.

The next Miscellany Club meeting is to be held with Mrs. N. C. Frost on January the tenth at which time Mrs. Will Sawyer is down for a paper on "American Women in Literature."

Mrs. John Tyler has to write on "What Has The Higher Education of Women Done for Home-Making and Home-Keeping?" There will also be a discussion between Mrs. Clara Gilbert and Miss Nellie King on whether "Social Lies Are Ever Necessary or Not," on the whole promising an unusually good program.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews entertained at New Year's dinner quite a number of their neighbors and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Munson of Detroit have been at home with their parents for the holidays.

Miss Luella Kerr is somewhat more comfortable at date, though no great change has occurred during the weeks just passed.

Mr. Fred Howard has recently sold his home (the large brick house on Maple St. built after the Mexican style, and much admired by many) and having bought a lot of Mrs. Robertson on the same street, has already begun building operations.

Mrs. Harry King is enjoying a visit from her mother, Mrs. William Ellsworth of Hudson, this state, and also of her sister, Mrs. Dr. Rush of same place at the present time.

Rev. Highway of Cleveland presided over the "concert" on Sunday evening, the presiding Elder having been present and preached in the morning. It is expected that this same Mr. Highway will speak next Sunday, and that the pulpit will be kept supplied until the full recovery of the pastor, Dr. Dye, which now seems quite sure.

The "Sacred Concert" was greatly enjoyed on Sabbath evening, and any event of that kind always brings out more folks than any kind of a preacher, no matter how good he is. There were nineteen voices in the choir, the wheezy old organ behaved its very prettiest and the girls looked their prettiest, of course.

Mr. Fred Parmelee has been on the sick list all the past week, but is reported to be decidedly on the gain at present.

Mr. John Shoemaker from Chicago has been at home for a few days, with the families of his sisters, Mrs. Grier and Mrs. Robert Radcliffe.

Mr. Martin Hart and family of Collinwood are guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Hart at present.

Miss Luella Reynolds of Painesville and her fiance, Mr. Kelso of Columbus, also Miss Carol Boyd and her friend, spent a few very pleasant hours Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Frost.

Mr. and Mrs. Payson Carroll took Christmas dinner with their son, Mr. Raymond Carroll and family in Painesville.

The old friends of Mr. Warren Goodell of Loda, Ill., will be pleased to learn that he has had a most delightful trip down to New Orleans, and from there on down to Panama, being one of the Bankers Association and having gone as a delegate from Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hart had the joy of having all their family at home for New Year's dinner on Monday, there being nine little grand children, their sons all living near, except Mr. Charles Hart who came from Jennings Place in Painesville, and Mr. Martin Hart from Collinwood.

Our Mr. Arthur Andrews has put in a "bid" for the cement work on the County Fair buildings about to be erected this coming year, and if good conscientious work coupled with up-to-date and brand new machinery can win the prize, we all hope we will get it.

The weather has at last settled down to the business of making a fair winter record, and though there is no snow whatever, the air is full of "ozone" and "git" that gives a person a raging appetite, and is far more satisfying than the balmy breezes of old Florida.

Mrs. Edward Sawyer has been having a visit from her friend and cousin Mrs. Emily Worchester, husband and small daughter of Oberlin.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Herrington spent New Year's day with Mrs. Prentice and family in Cleveland.

Miss Hortense Oliver, one of our Mentor girls, is a student at old Lake Erie College, where so many of us have been, in the years that are past.

Mr. Robert Radcliffe is on the sick list, as is also Miss Frances Case and quite a number of others of our people.

Some of the Mentor folks were quite excited over the news that Mr. Samuel Whiting and his son-in-law, N. W. Morley, had just bought the fine Adams place down in Mt. Dora, Florida. The report did not state whether the purchase was made with a view to speculation, or for a permanent winter home. That Florida is having a "boom" no one will deny who has ever been there, and there is money in buying to hold! But if these friends plan going south every winter, there will surely be a wail all over our village, for they can't be spared.

The new Postal Savings Bank of Mentor is ready for depositors, the object being to provide a place of safety for the small savings of the people, and at the same time have them draw some interest, and be perfectly safe. With the United States Government back of these banks they are safe, surely. Any person, ten years old (or over) may open an account. Moreover, any woman having a contemptible husband, can put into this kind of bank any monies she can get hold of, and he can neither help himself, nor draw out the money away from her. No person can make a deposit who is not a patron of said office. (This does not seem quite fair, but doubtless our Uncle Sam intends to have every Post Office a "Bank" just as soon as it can be brought about). No company, society, or corporation may use this kind of a bank, and neither can an account be opened by one person on behalf of another person, but each has to "appear" for himself. (At least, at first, but after that can send by mail). The service is entirely free! No person connected with such a bank is permitted to tell who are the depositors, or give the least information. No account may be opened for less than a dollar and neither may he bank more than one hundred dollars in any one month, nor may he have more than $500, to his credit at any one time. Amounts less than a dollar may be saved by buying ten cent postal savings cards and stamps. (This clause is for the children mainly, to encourage them to save gum money, soda water money, candy money, etc.). As fast as the youngster buys a postal savings stamp, he sticks it to his "Savings Card" and when he has nine stamps glued in place, his old Uncle Samuel will give him a stamp (to encourage thrift) and the bank will then add it to his account, or let him open an account, if he has not one already. Interest will be paid on all deposits at the rate of two per cent. Any other information wished may be had by asking the post master in charge of any postal-savings bank. There is an old saying "Take care of the nickles and the dollars will take care of themselves," and surely, if this new department will only teach our boys and girls (and their elders also) to save their little coins, it will be a great thing for our nation, and greatly lessen the number of "poor folks."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. ### Love's Spirit Stirring.

"Jedge," said [illegible] colored citizen, "how much fer a license ter git married?" "Want it fer yourself?" "Yes, suh; you see I gittin' mighty old now." "That's evident. Then why do you wish to get married?" "Well, jedge, tay tell de truth, somebody gimme a long coat, a linee collar an' a walkin' cane, en I knows a 'oman whet says she kin make a livin' fer me, en I feels des like a honeymoon!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Pots and Kettles.

I saw a friend impatiently cleaning a bean pot. I said to her: "Fill that with cold water; put in a teaspoonful of baking soda; cover and set in the oven. When it has boiled half an hour it will be as easy to wash as a coffee cup." Clean fish and meat roasting pans in the same way.—Good Housekeeping.

Homemade Perfume.

Into a bottle holding two ounces alcohol put one-half ounce orris root, broken into fine pieces. Add to this a bunch of newly gathered rose petals. Cork the bottle tightly and shake well. After it has stood ten days, a few drops on the handkerchief will give the scent of fresh roses.

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold. Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit. For sale by all dealers.

Many an old man in years is a young man in mental activity.

An insane man was found wandering in Wall street, says an exchange. Only one?

London proposes to build a liner that contains everything but an aviation field.

Chicago women are about to start a department store, which will have six bargain days a week.

A New York state man killed a deer with his automobile. Some men are deadly shots with their autos.

Princess Eulalie may merely be preparing to come over and show us what she can do in vaudeville.

A lecturer down east says that "woman should be more conspicuous than her clothes." Sometimes in the ball room she is.

A Chicago man committed suicide after a card party. The ordinary man, however, is satisfied with being merely bored to death.

Fire destroyed 25 automobiles in a New York garage. Yet when they are led out they do not rush back into the flames.

An X-ray examination of a Michigan man discloses the fact that his vital organs are on the wrong side. Railroad train or football?

We refuse to become excited over the fact that Sir Walter Raleigh's pipe is for sale. Our old reliable corncob is good enough for us.

"A man of 20 is worth $9,230," says a statistician. This will be good news to a great many men of twenty who are looking for meal tickets.

It may be easy to fly across the Atlantic as Willis Moore says, but if anybody contemplates trying it we advise him to take along a bathing suit.

Maeterlinck says that it will be easy to die in the future. Evidently he has come to the conclusion that no improvement in vaudeville is to be looked for.

Citizen of Ohio wants a divorce because his spouse smokes cigars. If she goes through his pockets at night, and confiscates his best ropes, we sympathize with him.

You can't hold the women down; soon they'll be invading the realm of high finance. A New York woman has been spending $21,000 yearly on an income of $18,000.

Several Cincinnati schoolgirls have succeeded in living on seven cents a day. It is hard to tell whether they did it in the interests of science or merely to catch husbands.

Dispatches from the east tell us that a ton of oil recently was taken from the tongue of a whale. We have not been able to learn the details, but we have a hunch that it was a lady whale.

A farm journal says the result of the experiment of mixing wine with feed for chickens was to increase the yield of eggs by 100 per cent. Probably the hens were unable to count straight.

If the European picture thieves will come over here and give their attention to the studios of some of the artists who get out covers for the magazines they will meet with a hospitable welcome.

There is a birth every four minutes in New York. Even at that, New Yorkers are often hard pressed to take care of the money constantly handed them by outsiders.

A man in New Jersey estimates that in the last thirty years he has walked 25,000 miles between his home and church. This may be defined as really taking steps to be saved.

In France the bicycle has become the most popular of all vehicles, while the craze for the motorcycle is beginning to abate. You never can tell what the French are going to do.

Word comes from Chicago that two burglars bound and gagged a woman as she played the piano. Never having heard the lady play, we find it impossible to judge whether they were burglars or simply neighbors.

A man and a woman who had a lovers' quarrel thirty five years ago have just been married in Ohio. If it is going to take them that long in each case to make up there are not likely to be many family quarrels.

A woman get-rich-quick promoter has been arrested. She may have the credit of proving that in swindling fields hitherto regarded as exclusively man's province the female of the species gathers victims as slickly as the male.

A judge in Seattle has ruled that a dog has a legal right to bite a man who treads on his tail. It may be added for the benefit of those whom it may concern that few dogs are likely in the emergency cited, to wait for their legal right to be tested.

There ought to be a hush to the matter of jeering at women for being unable to hit any aim. A Kansas farmer recently shot at rabbits and struck six young women sitting on his porch.

When Kansas City footpads hold up a victim they rob him of his false teeth, if he has any. Different cities have different customs. No typical Chicago highwayman would take a man's false teeth away from him. If not satisfied with what he finds in his pockets, he merely beats the tar out of him and proceeds on his way.

ALFRED TENNYSON DICKENS IS DEAD

SON OF FAMOUS ENGLISH AUTHOR EXPIRES SUDDENLY IN NEW YORK HOTEL.

LECTURED IN UNITED STATES

Godson of Late Poet Laureate Was Born in London in 1845 and Came to This Country From Australia Last October.

New York City.—Alfred Tennyson Dickens, son of the famous English author, Charles Dickens, and Godson of the late poet laureate, Alfred Tennyson, who arrived in this country from Australia last October for a lecture tour, died suddenly January 2 at his apartments in the Hotel Astor. Overcome by weakness while seated in the hotel smoking room, Mr. Dickens was escorted to his rooms by William G. Glass, manager of his lecture tour. Doctor Burt, the house physician, quickly reached his side, but he succumbed before the physician completed his diagnosis of the attack. Afterward the doctor said death came from heart failure, superinduced by acute indigestion.

Suffered Financial Reverses.

Dickens had reached this country in a despondent frame of mind, from Australia, where he had resided for years. His first comments in Boston, which were turned into criticism of women's ankles, caused him annoyance, and for a time after reaching New York he declined to discuss Americans. But he did talk about himself and one of the most pathetic interviews related to the tragic death of his wife, who was killed in a run away. He said he had never told the story before in this country, but that her premonition of the approaching end had recently returned to him. He spoke of two young daughters at this time. Also that he had suffered serious financial reverses, "and troubles in battalions."

Born in London in 1845.

Dickens has spent very little of his time in England, although he visited his sister there occasionally. In 1865 he repaired to Australia and "entered the Bush,' as he always expressed it. He lived the life of the frontiersman in that island colony until 1873 when he was married, and, at the request of his bride, gave up the harsher life for the more pleasant life of Melbourne. Although the tragic ending of the life of Mrs. Dickens took place 31 years ago, the lecturer recalled it to an interviewer recently and seemed to brood over it.

Dickens was born in London, England, October 23, 1845.

MRS. STALLO ASKS DIVORCE

Former Wife of Dan R. Hanna Alleges Failure to Support and Extreme Cruelty.

Cleveland, O.—Mrs. May Harrington Stallo, former wife of Dan R. Hanna, has just filed here suit for divorce and other relief from Edmund K. Stallo, former Cincinnati attorney, now a resident of New York City.

Mrs. Stallo alleges failure to support, gross neglect and extreme cruelty. She sets forth in her petition that she and Stallo were married in April, 1902, and that he never supported her, although she claims he promised to, and had ample means. Her own fortune, which, at the time of the marriage, she says was sufficient to maintain her in comfort, was obtained from her by Stallo by divers methods of art, cajolery and threats, she alleges. When she ceased to comply with his demands for money, Mrs. Stallo said her husband commenced a constant course of insult and abuse.

Profanity, indignities to the person, aspirations on her integrity and that of her friends are charged by Mrs. Stallo. She alleges that in January, 1911, her husband attacked her and would have struck her had it not been for the interference of a son by a former marriage.

Mrs. Stallo declares that she was forced to leave an apartment she had furnished as her home to avoid meeting objectionable companions her husband invited to visit him.

WOULD CURB BIG BUSINESS

Secretary Nagel, in His Annual Report to Taft, Urges Federal Control of Capital.

Washington, D. C.—"The mere breaking up of large combinations into a number of separate parts by no means meets the whole trust question," says Secretary Nagel of department of commerce and labor in his annual report transmitted to President Taft. Secretary Nagel declares the Sherman law has been proved to be an effective statute beyond all doubt and that a degree of combination of capital is quite necessary, but he adds that the next step in the control of great industrial corporations will be the creation of a permanent federal agency.

Noted Clergyman Is Dead.

Cincinnati.—Rev. Howard Henderson, noted Methodist clergyman, soldier author, died at a hospital here. Doctor Henderson lived in Cincinnati for many years. During the Civil war Doctor Henderson was placed in charge of the confederate bureau for the exchange of prisoners and in this service exchanged over 35,000 captured union soldiers. When the Spanish war broke out he accompanied the First regiment to the front as chaplain and incurred the illness that later resulted in his death.

Women Are Deputy Sheriffs.

New York City.—New York suffragets are very jubilant because two of the most prominent workers for the cause in the state have just been appointed deputy sheriffs by Sheriff Harburger, and filed their $1,000 bonds.

The new deputies are Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, president of the Woman's Democratic club of New York, and Miss Cornelia Swinnerton. The sheriff pinned the badges on the two women at his office in the presence of a hundred persons.

DR. SEN TAKES UP DUTIES

CHINA'S FIRST PRESIDENT FORMULATES PROGRAM.

Issues Statement In Which He Declares He Will Establish Stable Government as Promptly as Possible.

Shanghai, China.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen, China's first president, elected by the delegates of the 18 provinces of China proper in session at Nanking, has taken up the duties of his administration and has formulated a program to deal with the present critical situation. It is stated on good authority that the president will first demand the withdrawal of the imperial troops from their strategical positions and then order the Manchus to lay down their arms or join the republican forces. His next step will be to extend the existing armistice. With the military situation well in hand he proposes to open negotiations on the subject of pensions for the deposed Manchu princes and officials. President Sen has issued a statement in which he declares he will secure peace and establish the government on a stable basis as promptly as possible.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen.

The election of Dr. Sun Yat Sen to the presidency of the new republic marks the culmination of a dream of 20 years. For at least 15 years he has been actively engaged in fostering the present revolt, making his headquarters in foreign countries and working in China through trusted lieutenants.

Ten years ago the throne began to be alarmed over Doctor Sen's activities and placed a huge price on his head. Many emissaries were sent to America, where Doctor Sen was then making his headquarters with orders to kill him.

Sometimes he would enter the Chinatown of San Francisco or New York masquerading as a salesman for a Japanese silk firm. Again he would pass as a coolie laundryman or a laborer.

At first Doctor Sen was looked upon as a madman. Even the Chinese who had lived in the occident for years and had seen the advantage of a Democratic government could not understand him. China was one of the oldest countries in the world. It was only semi civilized. Its people had always bowed to a monarch. They knew nothing but despotism. Many times the little doctor was denounced as a fool. But he only shook his head and dreamed of the awakening of his countrymen. Years of exhortation in America by Doctor Sen and able work upon the part of his lieutenants in China revealed that the people were advancing. Contributions began to pour into the revolutionary treasury. Drill sergeants from American and European armies were smuggled into the empire. A large army was recruited before the dynasty realized that the rebels were about to strike.

ORLANDO HARRIMAN IS DEAD

Brother of Late Railroad King Passes Away After Operation at Hospital for Diabetes.

New York City.—Orlando Harriman, who has just died after an operation for diabetes at a sanatarium in East 33d street, was buried from the Hotel Majestic where the Harriman family has resided for some years. Orlando Harriman was the only brother of the late E. H. Harriman, and was himself a millionaire real estate operator.

Mr. Harriman was 68 years old and the son of the late Rev. Orlando Harriman. His business ability in the real estate field is as well known as that of his more famous brother in railroad circles. Both Orlando and E. H. Harriman started in the world with little education save that given them by their father and both developed a far sightedness and financial grasp that brought them wealth.

Success Magazine Suspends.

New York City.—Success has failed. This is not a paradox. It is a cold fact. It tried in vain to cross the line and greet the New Year, but stumbled on the threshold. Success magazine has suspended publication. Its creditors are about to petition to place it in involuntary bankruptcy.

Success was founded 12 years ago by Dr. Orison Swett Marden. Its purpose was to inspire young men and women onward to success. Two years ago the magazine was taken over by the National Post Co.

Five Children Die in Blaze.

Cleveland, O.—Five children, the oldest of them eight years, are dead, killed by a fire that swept through their house while they slept. The mother occupies a cot in a hospital. The family is that of Augusto Mazzo, a baker, who lives in the house where he has his bake shop here. He was away from the house when the fire broke out and came home after his day's work to find the house in flames and his family almost wiped out. He was crazed with grief when informed of his children's deaths.

Drastic Anti-Trust Measure.

Philadelphia, Pa.—An anti-trust bill, drastic in the extreme, a copy of the Sherman anti-trust law appended by several radical additions, was made public here by Senator Clapp of Minnesota as the measure drawn by George H. Earle, Jr., of Philadelphia at the invitation of the senate committee on interstate commerce and, after a long conference with President Taft. It is understood that the bill explicitly expresses the views of President Taft and will be supported in congress by the progressive Republicans.

ASSUMES CONTROL OF 600,000 PHONES

BRITISH GOVERNMENT TAKES FORMAL POSSESSION AND WILL OPERATE BUSINESS.

EMPLOYES TO BE PROTECTED

Will Enjoy Rights of All Other Post-office Department Laborers to Pensions, Sick Benefits and Annual Vacations.

London, England.—At the stroke of midnight ushering in 1912 the British government took formal possession of the 600,000 telephones owned by the National Telephone Co. and thereby assumed actual operation of all public telephones in the United Kingdom. The 180,000 employes of the National Telephone Co. will hereafter be government employes, protected by civil service against the loss of positions and enjoying the rights of all other postoffice department employes to pensions, sick benefits and annual vacations.

Government in Control.

The inadequate telephone system previously owned and operated by the government will be amalgamated with the National system and run in connection with the telegraph system which the government already owns. The government henceforth has an absolute monopoly of all public means of communication by mail, telephone and telegraph. This revolutionary change, which in America would be declared Socialistic, has been effected practically without criticism by an ultra conservative press.

Many New Improvements.

The government, which has had a commission of experts studying the telephone service of other countries, especially in the United States, promises to introduce many new improvements and give better service at a lower cost. Already the government telephones are being installed in private houses in London giving subscribers the benefit of a single party wire for only $25 a year. Subscribers at this rate, unlike New York, Chicago and perhaps other subscribers, are entitled to call any other subscriber in an area embracing a population of over 7,000,000.

TEN DON'TS FOR HUSBANDS

Massachusetts Clergyman Startles Church Full of People When He Delivers Fourth Decalogue.

Brockton, Mass.—Rev. Dr. Albert Marion Hyde, pastor of the Porter Congregational church, startled a church full of people when he delivered his fourth decalogue on ten dont's for husbands. The don'ts are:

Do not forget and leave your little courtesies and gentle kindnesses at some hotel on your wedding trip.

Do not unbosom yourself about your family troubles to your neighbor, to your partner, to your partner's wife, to your stenographer, to your college friend, to a male member of your club or even to a brother or sister in your church.

Do no arrange for your second marriage before your first wife is dead.

Do not support the wife and children of the saloonkeeper at the expense of your own wife and children.

Do not have nervous prostration when your wife asks you to go out with her for an evening to her musicale or club or to see her friends or even to a church social.

Do not make your wife a stranger to your check book.

Do not make your wife a packhorse, harnessed to the kitchen stove, the wash tub and the mending bag.

Do not carry all your religion in your wife's name. You will not be able to realize on it here or hereafter.

Do not overlook the fact that the decalogue of Moses is still on the statute books and that it is written for husbands as well as wives.

Do not forget that the happiest spot on earth is your home and that the truest comrades you find anywhere are in your family circle.

FIRE CAUSES $422,500 LOSS

Sweeps Clean Entire Block in Business Section of City in Buckeye State.

Washington C. H., O.—Firemen gained the upper hand of the fire which swept clean an entire block in the business section of the city, entailing a loss conservatively placed at $422,500, and rendering homeless 40 business firms and families.

The heaviest loser is the Daht-Millikin grocery company, whose building and its contents were totally destroyed. The loss was $100,000. The Masonic temple, valued at $65,000, was totally ruined. A new temple will be built at once. The Imperial hotel loss is $30,000, the Fayette Hardware Co. $10,000 on its building and $45,000 on stock. The Stutson department store loss is estimated at $35,000. All other losses were under $10,000. Mayor R. G. Allen succeeded in saving the city's records.

Veteran Policeman Is Slain.

Mobile, Ala.—Policeman Frank Wasserlobten, one of the oldest men on the Mobile force, was found murdered in a pond near his home and his wife and mother-in-law have been taken into custody. After a grilling session with the police the mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary T. Oodau, confessed that she had shot Wasserlieben while he was in his room. She then wrapped the body in bed clothes and dragged it a quarter of a mile away to the pond where it was found by searchers.

Negro's Acts Costs His Life.

Muldrow, Okla.—Sam Turner, a negro, ended his New Year's celebration which took place a day ahead of time, and his life by furnishing the weight on the end of a rope dangling from a tree near the city jail. His adventures during the day included stealing a locomotive, killing a farmer, assaulting his wife and getting so drunk on whisky that he was easily captured by two men. A mob quickly gathered at the jail and taking Turner to a tree strung him up.

WARDEN MAKES CHARGE

ACCUSES CHARLES W. MORSE WITH TRYING TO BRIBE HIM.

Keeper Asserts He Helped Convicted Banker Make $2,000 and Was Offered Half.

Atlanta, Ga.—That Charles W. Morse soon after commencing his prison term offered him $1,000, which he construed as an attempt at bribery, is the charge made in a formal statement by Warden W. H. Moyer of the federal prison at Atlanta.

Moyer said he gave Morse permission to send a cipher telegram buying some gas stock and that a few days later Morse came into his office and said:

"Warden, I made $2,000 on that deal and I want you to have half of it."

The warden said he promptly told Morse never to offer him money again and advised Attorney General Wickersham of the incident. An investigation by the department of justice, the result of which has never been made known, was made immediately.

Moyer also defended himself against the charge of Morse's attorneys that the banker had been sent into solitary confinement May 13-15, 1910, for giving money to a sick boy. Moyer maintains that Morse was sent to the "solitary" because he refused to tell where he got $50 which was found in his possession. He later admitted that it came from his wife and a business associate. The warden describes the "dungeons" as a well lighted and heated room, with running water.

U. S. BARRED FROM MILLIONS

Negotiations for Construction of Railroads in Persia Practically Terminated, According to Report.

Washington, D. C.—As a direct and immediate result of failure by the American government to stand behind W. Morgan Shuster, whom it selected as treasurer-general of Persia, or to express the smallest sympathy with Persia in her present dire distress, that nation has practically terminated:

Negotiations already far advanced with American bankers, notably I. Seligman & Co. of New York, for a preliminary loan of $50,000,000 for the construction of railroads in Persia.

Negotiations looking toward the physical construction of a railroad from Resht to Teheran, 250 miles in length.

For the physical construction of the trans-Persian railroad, 900 miles long.

For the construction of a system of electric street railways, electric light and ice plants for Teheran and vicinity.

All of these vast enterprises that would have required more than $100,000,000 of American capital and employed American contractors and American engineers were under way.

Had the United States expressed the least dissatisfaction with Russia in her inhuman campaign aimed at Shuster and the Persian people every dollar of the business would have come to America.

News of these sad facts have just been received in Washington from the Persian central committee in Constantinople.

PLAYS JOKE ON HIS CHICKENS

Connecticut Poultry Raiser Lengthens Their Day by Use of Electricity and They Lay More Eggs.

Stamford, Conn.—N. M. Higby, a poultry raiser, claims that he has chickens fooled to a frazzle. He does it with electricity. Higby has arranged a large electric light in his poultry house and he turns on the light at a switch in his own room long before daybreak in the egg laying season and gets the hens started on the laying business. Meantime, Higby goes back for a couple more hours of slumber and by and by, when the sun really does poke his head out, Higby goes out and collects the eggs in time for an early market.

TRADE UNIONISTS GET RAISE

Boston Workers Are Granted Increase in Wages Without Resorting to Strike Methods.

Boston, Mass.—Thirty-one hundred Boston trade unionists on New Years received wage increases and trade betterments that will cost them $300,000 before 1912 comes to an end.

Although eight different industries were affected by this gigantic new year industrial advancement, not one strike was necessary. This was due to the fact that in almost every instance the union concerned had threshed the question out with the employers.

Duma's Members Jailed.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—Although the Russian government held the inquiry behind closed doors, it is an official fact that no less than 29 members of the second duma now are in Siberian prisons on trumped-up charges of treason. Of these six are working in the czar's mines with wheelbarrows chained to their bodies night and day.

Justices' Salaries Raised.

Washington, D. C.—This is the glad new year for the members of the supreme court of the United States. The justices get increased pay beginning New Year's. The chief justice has been struggling along on $13,000 a year but from now on he will get $15,000. The associate judges have their salaries increased to $14,500.

The increases were provided for in the act passed by congress last winter for the revision of the laws relating to the judiciary.

Schwab Will Ring-in Time.

South Bethlehem, Pa.—No more will the high officials and salaried clerks of the Bethlehem Steel works come and go at will. Determined to put a stop to the late arrival and early departure from work of his hundreds of office employes, Charles M. Schwab, president of the company, has installed time clocks in all departments. Hereafter every official or other employe will be obliged to "ring his number" registering the time of his arrival and departure. Mr. Schwab has assigned a number to himself.

RATES HIGH ENOUGH

SECOND-CLASS INCREASE PLAN STIRS PUBLISHERS.

Efficiency of Hitchcock's Management of the Post Office Department Attacked by the A. N. P. A.

Washington.—The A. N. P. A., through its postal committee of which Don C. Seitz of New York is chairman, has joined in the fight against the proposed increase in second-class rates and in its last bulletin the committee attacks the management of the post office department. The bulletin is as follows:

"The extent to which the post office department does not carry second-class matter is well revealed in the following abstract of inquiry of publishers conducted by house committee on expenditures in the post office department (William A. Ashbrook, chairman) concerning the volume, weight and handling of the output of publications entered as mail matter of the second-class for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911:

"'Inquiry was made of all publishers, approximating thirty thousand, of which nearly seventeen thousand are weekly publications.

"'More than ten thousand returns were received, embracing sixty-six plus per cent. of all tonnage of publications.

"'The publications reporting represent an annual output of more than six and one-half billion copies, the weight of which was one and three-quarter billion pounds.

"'These publications delivered by mail in such period weighed 933,012,902 pounds.

"'They delivered by their own carriers, newsboys, and news companies 840,468,574 pounds, of which an unascertained percentage was carried to destination by express and other rail shipments outside the mail. They delivered by express, 202,723,510 pounds, and by other rail shipments 121,481,748 pounds. The rate by express and rail varies from ¼ to 1 cent per pound, but the bulk of these shipments went at a rate of ¼ to ½ cent per pound.

"'The post office for the year ending June 30, 1911, handled 951,001,669 and excluding one-half million pounds free in county matter, it received one cent per pound.'

"All this goes to add to the absurdity of the proposed Hitchcock legislation doubling the second-class rate from one to two cents per pound, and limiting the 'privilege' to publications that carry as much reading matter as they do advertising.

"The proposition was stupid enough when the postal deficit reached $17,000,000 two years ago. It becomes preposterous in face of a surplus.

"What business has a transportation corporation, which is all the post office is, to prescribe how a business shall be conducted?

"Newspapers cannot afford to expand their columns beyond the call of the day's news, nor can they be expected to control the requirements of their advertisers who have a right to reach the public as copiously as they care to.

"It cannot be assumed that such legislation will ever get by congress. But publishers are requested to fight the theory that the right to send their output by mail is a 'privilege.' The figures show it is not.

"The post office is a badly managed business. That is all. We should fight its dictation, its censorship and its inefficiency."

Wanted the Documents.

Commissioner General of Immigration Keefe was hearing the case of a woman who appealed to enter this country notwithstanding serious charges had been brought against her morality.

Her attorney pleaded that she might do better if allowed to start on a new life here. "Look at the case of Mary Magdalene," he said. "See what was done in her case. Why cannot the same be done in the case of this woman?"

Mr. Keefe had been preoccupied. He called to the clerk and said: "Get me the record in that Magdalene case."—New York World.

Went Deep for Foundation.

In excavating the foundation of New York's municipal building a new record has been made for depth. At the southern end of the structure, which will house between 5,000 and 8,000 city employes when finished, the "sandhogs" went down 139 feet below the curbline, or 107 feet below sea level.

Love at First Sight.

"And did you ever love any girl before you were introduced to me, Charlie?" said the bride of a few months.

"Oh, yes," was the man's reply.

"You did?"

"Sure! When I first saw you."

A Backsliding Santa Claus.

Mrs. Peavish says that before they were married Mr. Peavish used to say that if she would let him be her Santa Claus he would devote his life to sliding up and down the chimney for her. And now it makes him mad to have to take up ashes from the grate.

Consistency.

"I suppose you always say exactly what you think?" "I try to," replied Senator Sorghum; "but I also try to avoid thinking anything it would not be expedient for me to say."

High Finance.

A New York thief chloroforms his victims before he robs them of their money. Probably he is a humanitarian. It is such a painful operation to get money from some people that an anesthetic is absolutely necessary.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

In New York.

New York now has all-night banks, all-night saloons and all-night restaurants. We are informed that the churches continue to close early.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Buckeye Notes

Fostoria.—George Dyer of Lima, superintendent of the Lake Erie & Western, recently announced the promotion of W. B. McClaren to the agency at Tipton, Ind., to be succeeded by E. C. Wolfe of St. Marys. Cashier John D. Hullenbough of the local office will succeed Wolfe. Mr. Wolfe was transferred from the cashiership of the local office to the St. Marys agency several years ago. Mr. McClaren has been here ten years.

Newark.—Robert Henry, Charles Schaller and Gene Schlegel were fined $250 and costs each by Mayor Geiger of Kirkersville, for violation of the Rose law. They are proprietors of the places raided by Dr. H. R. Emory and his party, which caused some excitement here two weeks ago.

Marysville.—Common Pleas Judge John M. Bradrick has ruled that a former board of county commissioners had no authority to settle a claim of $800 alleged to be due the county for illegal fees drawn by former County Auditor D. S. Edwards for $100. The case will now be heard on its merits, as if no settlement had ever been made with Edwards.

Findlay.—The Findlay co-operative store, started by Socialists several years ago, has been sold. It is said the investment was unprofitable. It was operated on a stock company plan, stockholders getting price reductions and sharing in the profits.

Columbus.—During the first month of the new year a number of conventions will be held in this city. The Sheep Breeders' association will convene January 10, and January 16 the District Nurses' association will hold its annual convention.

Newark.—Because the defense advanced the theory that Don Moreland, confessed slayer of Elsie Henthorn, aged 13, of Pataskala, last May, is a degenerate, Judge Nicholas of Coshocton suggested the appointment of a medical commission to examine him. Passing of sentence on Moreland was deferred.

Cleveland.—George Lashfort, while stooping to pick up his wife, who had fainted from fright at a fusilade of bullets fired by John Sokar, was hit and fatally wounded by a stray bullet. Police had narrow escapes when Sokar forced his way into the house of Martin Gleven and, by firing from the windows, held the police at bay for a time. A patrolman finally captured him by entering the front of the house while Sokar was firing at the officers from the rear windows.

Mt. Vernon.—Five years in the penitentiary for killing. This was the sentence imposed on Ellsworth Dailey for shooting and killing his wife in this city last July. There were no witnesses to the crime. Dailey was found guilty of manslaughter in a trial lasting but four hours, the speediest trial for such an offense that ever took place in Knox county. Judge Seward imposed sentence.

Gallipolis.—Fire of mysterious origin caused great excitement among the patients of the Ohio Hospital for Epileptics here. The blaze started in the institution's paint shop. Attendants quieted the frightened inmates and the city fire department prevented the fire from leaving the shop. The loss amounts to several hundred dollars.

Columbus.—Federal Judge J. E. Sater has authorized a sale of securities which will bring approximately $150,000 to the coffers of the Union National bank, now in process of liquidation under the receivership of Richard W. Goodheart.

Findlay.—A gas well emitting 2,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily and a pressure of 95 pounds to the square inch was drilled by the G. F. Jackson company for private use. The well is located within a half block from the courthouse, and shows that since the wonderful gas boom here 20 years ago, when hundreds of thousands of people were attracted here, that the pressure is getting back its former strength. Other wells will be put down.

Xenia.—A reward was offered by the county commissioners of Greene county for the capture of Robert Irvin of Philadelphia, alleged to have killed Sinclair Gentry, stepson of former County Commissioner John B. Stevenson, on a farm near this city.

Dayton.—William D. Quail, 72 years old, a civil war veteran and resident of the soldiers' home, was struck by a street car and both legs were cut off above the knees. He died a few minutes later. He was partially blind and deaf.

Findlay.—Thieves in the grocery store of A. Laskam worked at the safe until the combination responded and took therefrom $200 in money. The Pocket Umbrella Co. was robbed of $600 worth of umbrellas, packed and ready for shipment.

Cleveland.—Matthew Mikelson of Russell was watching a game of pool in a saloon, when a small blaze started in paper under a billiard table. He bolted for the door, but fell dead before reaching it. The fire was stamped out.

Columbus.—Myer J. Daniels, formerly a local pawnbroker, who was sentenced to serve 21 months in the Ft. Leavenworth federal prison for perjury in connection with his bankruptcy case, will make an appeal to reverse the decision in the United States circuit court of appeals.

Steubenville.—Church members who voted wet were the target of several pulpit utterances, and it was intimated that the cause of the church would be helped by their repentance and withdrawal. The M. P. pastor notified such members they were in the wrong place.

Fremont.—Charles Noffinger, 20, who just returned from four years' service in the navy, died at Old Fort as the result of an overdose of headache medicine which contained morphine.

Paulding.—Yeggs blew the post-office safe here, riddling the safe and office desk. A few books of stamps and some registered mail were taken. Two men, with $160 worth of stamps and some registered mail, were arrested at Hicksville aboard a B. & O. freight train. They will be brought to Paulding to await action by the authorities.

YEAR JUST GONE ONE OF REVOLTS

Marked by Unrest Involving the Entire World.

"REBELS" ALWAYS VICTORS

Chinese and Mexican Revolutions and Strife Against Graft and Monopoly—Great Strides Made in Aviation.

When the historian of the future records the events of the year 1911, he will lay particular stress on the political and social unrest throughout the world. This was not confined to any one country, nor to a few countries; it was world-wide, involving practically every nation, both civilized and uncivilized. It included revolutions against long-standing governments, battles of labor and capital, wars between different nations and, in short, everything that could be branded as strife against existing conditions or growing conditions.

Most significant of all the events of the year was the explosion in open rebellion of the hatred, that had been accumulating through the ages, of the Chinese against the despotic Manchu dynasty. Passive, unresisting, yet at the same time loathing and despising the power that held them in subjection, the millions in the Far East empire had for centuries submitted to being trodden on by unreasoning, overbearing, all-potent self-styled demigods. But China was gradually awakening and, when the first flames of revolution burst forth, it was the signal for the conflagration to become general.

Rebels the Winners Everywhere.

But the Chinese insurrection was but a larger edition of dozens, yea, scores, of upheavals of various kinds in other parts of the world. They broke forth with such suddenness that it was almost impossible to realize what was occurring until the whole thing was over. Without exception, every one of the great disturbances of the year that reached an ultimate result, wound up in favor of the party or element rebelling against the condition. In not one did the defense win over the offense.

The Mexican revolution, near to our own doors, was a striking example of the overturn of regime. Nearer still was the successful culmination of the battle for statehood of Arizona and New Mexico.

Other struggles of equal magnitude developed during the year, many of them with sensational effect, in which the issue is still being fought. Among these are the battle between labor and capital, the "people" and monopoly and advocates of popular government as opposed to representative government. Campaigns on graft have been waged with fierce resolution by city, state and federal authorities, not only in all corners of the United States, but abroad as well.

The McNamara dynamiting case, the growth of sentiment for popular election of all federal officials, the progress of the woman suffrage movement, trust prosecutions, the campaign for currency reform and that for lower tariffs—all these typify the unrest that exists in our own country.

Year's Important Events.

Aside from the numberless conflicts, many noteworthy things have been penned in the diary of 1911. Science has witnessed vast strides, particularly in the field of aviation. The flights of Atwood from St. Louis to New York and of Rodgers from New York to Pasadena, Cal., were the crowning achievements in this line. About all that remains to be accomplished in aviation, as a feat, is the crossing of the ocean.

When all that is good and all that is bad are considered together, it cannot be said otherwise than that the year was one in which the good predominated.

A chronological table of the important events of 1911 follows:

JANUARY.

1—Juan Estrada inaugurated president of Nicaragua.

2—President Taft officially recognizes the Estrada government.

John Bigelow, America's "grand old man," dies.

21—Russian forces open hostilities with Persia, bombarding the governor's palace at Tabriz.

Again the Poor Fat Man.

Among the passengers on a downtown car the other evening were a fat man, a lean man, who proved to be deaf, and a couple of giggly girls. On one of the side streets a German band was engaged in making life miserable for the residents of the neighborhood. The fat man shifted uneasily in his seat and remarked sarcastically to the lean man in a low tone, "Music!"

The lean man put his hand to his ear and said, "Eh?"

"Music," repeated the man in louder tones.

"Beg pardon, I am not able to hear," said the lean man.

"Music," yelled the fat man, so loud that the passengers all tittered and the little giggly girls all grew red in the face.

"Oh," said the lean man as he turned around and looked about him. The little German band was out of sight by this time, and the passengers laughed immoderately at the vain attempts of the unfortunate man to find the object of the fat man's comments. Fat men are proverbially good natured, and by that time the oddity of the situation had dawned upon this particular fat man.

"Hum," he said, "you folks needn't laugh. Our friend saw fully as much music as you and I heard."

Natural Timepiece.

There is no need for clocks on the Aegean sea any day when the sun is shining. There nature has arranged her only timepiece, one that does not vary though the centuries pass. This natural time marker is the largest sundial in the world. Projecting into the blue waters of the sea is a large promontory which lifts its head 3,000 feet above the waves. As the sun swings round, the pointed shadow of the mountain just touches one after the other a number of small islands, which are at exact distances apart and act as hour marks on the great dial.

The Lesser Evil.

Marks—Why do you allow your wife to run up such big bills?

Parks—Because I'd sooner have trouble with my creditors than with her—that's why.

A Vain Effort.

"Why don't you take an interest in affairs?" said the offhand adviser. "Why don't you read the newspapers so that you can converse intelligently with your husband?" "I tried to," replied young Mrs. Torkins, "but I made a mistake. I read the president's message instead of the football news."

Axiomatic.

Most of us forget rather than forgive because it is easier.—Puck.

Blind Inference.

Doctor—"Thomas, did Mrs. Popjoy get the medicine I ordered yesterday?" Thomas—"I b'leeve so, sir. I see all the blinds down this morning."

Unkind.

"Biggins thinks he is keeping his light under a bushel." "Perhaps he is wise," replied Miss Cayenne; "his light is probably so small that it would go out if he let a draft get to it."

Obstinacy.

"Why in the world did you make that formal application to have your salary cut?" "Because," replied the meek yet obstinate man, "I wanted to be sure of having my own way about something."

A Personal Question.

"Hello, hello, Central! Give me my husband."

"What number?"

"Oh, the fourth, if you must know, you impertinent thing!"—Judge.

HOGAN HOLDS MANY INELIGIBLE

OPINION AFFECTS ONE IN TOLEDO AND HAS MANY DUPLICATES IN STATE.

A CENTENNIAL LABOR DAY WANTED

Educators Seek New Laws for Good of State's Schools—Pardoned Man Still in Pen—Railway Pays Willis Tax.

Columbus.—John Hayworth, a Toledo Socialist, elected to council from the Fourteenth ward, will not be able to serve, as the result of an opinion given by Attorney General Hogan to City Solicitor Schreiber of Toledo. Hayworth's successor will be elected by the new Toledo council.

Hayworth's ward was the old Twelfth, which in the redistricting was renamed the Fourteenth. He moved into the ward in March and Mr. Hogan holds has not satisfied the legal provision, which says that a councilman must reside in the ward from which he is elected for one year prior to election. The present ward was not in existence one year ago, but, relying on a supreme court decision, Mr. Hogan says that ward, as used in law, means the territory composing the ward.

The ruling will throw out scores of councilmen in Ohio cities elected last fall.

Centennial Labor Day Wanted.

Labor interests in the constitutional convention will be discussed by the executive board of the Ohio Federation of Labor, which will meet at the Neil house January 7. The prime purpose of the meeting is to appoint a committee to co-operate with the centennial commission, with the view to have a day set aside for the interests of labor.

Educators to Seek New Laws.

Prominent educators of Ohio, meeting at the statehouse, discussed with Simeon D. Fess, president of the Antioch college and delegate to the constitutional convention from Greene county, measures to be worked for in the convention.

The concensus of opinion was that Ohio needed a state board of education, state-wide pensions for teachers, a revenue to the schools from the mineral output of the state and the purchase and reforesting by the state of thousands of acres of cheap lands in southern Ohio for the benefit of the schools in future years.

It was also suggested that the position of school commissioner become an appointive instead of an elective office, the appointment to be made either by the proposed new state board of education or the governor, and that the term be decreased from two years to one.

A motion was passed empowering E. F. Moulton, superintendent of Warren schools and chairman of the meeting, to appoint a committee of five, composed of himself, State School Commissioner F. W. Miller and three others to frame and present to the constitutional convention the wants of the educators.

Pardoned Man Still in Pen.

Anthony Byron, who was given a conditional pardon from the penitentiary by Governor Harmon, still is in prison. The provisions of the pardon were that his brother come to Columbus from New York and give him employment. His brother cannot be found. Byron is a life man from Portsmouth, O.

Railway Pays Willis Tax.

The Cleveland & Mahoning Valley Railroad company, one of the underlying companies of the Erie, has paid the state $4,8888.80 under the provisions of the Willis tax law.

The company took the question up with the tax commission and expressed a wish to pay the tax and not wait for the suits, testing the validity of the payment of the Willis tax from underlying companies, to reach a decision. The tax commission expressed its willingness to accept the payment and said if the payment was declared invalid when the test is made, it would recommend to the attorney general the refund of the sum paid.

State to Aid Probers.

Auditor of State E. M. Fullington will send one of the best examiners of the state bureau of accounting to Greenville to assist Darke county citizens in running to earth suspected grafters, who are being investigated by the grand jury and Prosecutor Mahor. A number of indictments against former officials have been returned.

Conneaut.—The body of John Ryan, a miner, place of residence unknown, was found badly mangled at Amboy. He is thought to have fallen or been thrown from a Lake Shore train. He had no money or jewelry.

Lang's Annual Report.

Columbus.—Over half of the employed persons of Ohio were affected by a decrease in wages during 1911, according to the annual report of Labor Commissioner Fred Lang today. Only 25 per cent got better money than in 1910.

Of 513,105 employed persons in Ohio, 70,753 are women. The number of males employed increased 11.8 per cent, women 4.7 per cent.

The total amount paid in wages was 18.2 per cent more than in 1910. Operatives of 27 leading occupations put in 299 working days at an average daily wage of $2.40 as compared with wage of $2.49 in 1910. The total capital invested increased 11.3 per cent and value of goods manufactured increased 18.4 per cent.

The free public employment offices placed 47,303 persons at an average cost of 25.7 cents a person.

Delegates Head Towards Capital.

Columbus.—Delegates-elect to the constitutional convention are expected to pour into the city in a few days to take part in the preliminary contests incidental to organizing the convention and preparing for actual opening, January 9. The president will not be elected until the formal opening, and the frowning down upon the proposal to hold party caucuses, as are done in the organization of branches of the general assembly, renders it practically certain that the 65 Democrats in the convention will not attempt to draw party lines.

Both Judge Norris of Marion and Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow of Hamilton, leading candidates for the presidency, are expecting election with the help of Republican votes and hence will not press the caucus proposal.

Quarters must be obtained by delegates and some little time will be devoted to getting acquainted. The delegates are as yet strangers to each other, due in large part to the fact that many of them are men who have not taken any active hand in political affairs.

Delegates from the northeastern part of the state met in Cleveland to discuss the rules proposed by E. W. Doty of Cuyahoga county. Although the invitation was extended to all the delegates-elect, many of them did not accept.

Seeks Federal Appropriation.

Congressman E. L. Taylor has announced that he will arrange a hearing before the appropriations committee on his bill for $100,000 for the Ohio-Columbus centennial celebration next fall. Dates will be selected after congress reconvenes next week and word will be sent to Columbus of the plans.

Mr. Taylor said that progress is being made in the movement for national aid for the centennial. He has strong hopes that the measure will pass. He also declared there are good prospects for the $25,000 appropriation bill for the interior decorations of the new Federal building, which is to be opened formally January 30, with President Taft as master of ceremonies.

To Enforce Sanitation.

Sanitary summer resorts are to be the aim of the state board of health. Decision to take up the question has been made after several months' consideration. The aim, as expressed by Acting Secretary Baumann, is that the board of health may be able to tell the people which resorts are sanitary. They may, he explained, avoid the others.

Under the plan that has been outlined the board will have every resort in the state inspected thoroughly early in the new year. The recommendations of the inspectors will be sent to all proprietors and a reinspection will be made after April 1, thus giving managers ample time to comply with the board's suggestions.

For Good Roads.

Columbus.—That ample funds could be produced for national aid for good roads by increasing the internal revenue tax on beer, whiskey, spirits and tobacco by 25 per cent is the declaration of Jesse Taylor, secretary of the Good Roads federation, who is a member of the legislative committee of the national good roads congress. The latter hopes, at the present session of congress, to get through a measure for national aid to the states.

The principal objection that has been made to such a law is the lack of funds. Congressmen have declared the sentiment is well-night unanimous for the proposition, providing sufficient funds can be raised.

The government's receipts from the internal revenue tax last year were $322,526,000. It will be urged by the good roads advocates that a 25 per cent increase would not be felt seriously by consumers of tobacco and malt and spiritous liquors, while the additional revenue, estimated at $80,000,000, would give an average of nearly $2,000,000 a year to the state.

If the amount raised in each state were proportioned back to it, Ohio would get $5,000,000 a year from the national government for roads.

Salary Grab Act Unconstitutional.

In holding the salary grab act, passed by the recent legislature over Governor Harmon's veto, unconstitutional, Attorney General Hogan knocked the props from under a new and persistent demand for a special session of the general assembly to enact such legislation as would enable the members to draw their $1,000 per year each for 1912. The attorney general has already taken away reasons for two demands for another session.

In his opinion, which was given to Auditor of State E. M. Fullington, Mr. Hogan holds that members of the general assembly who are still qualified to serve may draw $83.33 each month for the time they are permanent residents of the districts from which they were elected. The auditor is instructed not to issue warrants for them for the lump sum of $1,000, which members claimed under the act.

Mr. Hogan agrees with Governor Harmon that the money should continue to draw interest for the state in the depository banks until it has been earned by actual service as members of the general assembly. He holds the salary grab measure in violation of that section of the constitution which forbids any change in the salary of an official during his term of office.

Alliance.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hahn, 62, of Homeworth dropped dead while attending the Christmas festival at the Presbyterian Sunday school at that place.

Taboo for Free List.

Taking its tip from the success of Ohio's passless state fair, members of the Ohio fair circuit, representing 42 county driving associations, at a meeting in Hamilton, will discuss the advisability of placing the taboo on all free admissions.

In addition to fixing tentative dates for county fairs in 1912, the meeting will consider methods of eliminating free race entries. For several years a number of racing associations have entered a certain per cent of horses gratis.

HOW FAMOUS ATHLETES DETERIORATE

"A man attains his greatest strength between the ages of twenty-seven and thirty-two. Then he begins to go back. He does not necessarily lose his strength, but he is not as agile as formerly and he tires more quickly."

Such was the remark made by Frank Gotch, the world's wrestling champion, while in Cleveland on an exhibition tour recently. Continuing, he said:

"That fits my case exactly. I am as strong, perhaps stronger, than I ever was before, but I am getting slower. The 'old get-there' spirit is not present. In the old days when a man tore into me I would have tore right into him. But now I merely sidestep and bide my time.

"That is why I have made up my mind to quit the game in the near future. If I keep at it long enough some man will come along who will down me. Of course, if some logical opponent shows up in the next few months, I will take him on, but it will have to be soon as I intend to quit a champion. I shall not meet with Jim Jeffries' fate. Jim lost because he was a mere shell of his former self. He had the strength but not the speed nor the ability to withstand punishment that he had had once. In his former fights he was always punished severely but he could stand it. When he fought Johnson he couldn't, and that is all there was to it.

"But that never will be my fate. Not for every cent that Jeffries got at Reno would I go through what he did before and after that fight, particularly afterward. I intend to quit with the respect of the public and settle down and live the simple life. I have enough money laid aside now and do not need to wrestle any longer. Why should I continue? Zbyszko? No, I will not meet him. Why should I? I tackled him once and made him look cheap, and he has done nothing since to entitle him to a return bout."

GOSSIP AMONG SPORTS

Harry Howell will umpire in the Eastern league in 1912.

New York State Baseball league has reduced the salary limit from $3,000 to $2,500.

The Louisville club has sold infielder Howard Baker to the Hartford (Conn.) League club.

A Cuban baseball team whipped the New York Giants and, strange to say, nobody was spiked.

Playing managers in the major leagues may soon be an extinct species of the "early days."

A Nashville writer says meeting Ty Cobb is like drawing off a real tight shoe—it feels so comfortable.

Ottawa, Ont., if admitted to the Canadian league, promises Sunday ball at a park across the river in Hull.

Frank Owens, catcher for Minneapolis, was married recently to Miss Helen Winslow in Toronto, his home town.

San Francisco does not think it will miss Tom Tennant on first base, since it has Jackson, the Texas recruit to fill his shoes.

Summer baseball in north and winter baseball in the south is a platform that seems the part of a winner for some.

Fielder Jones has received his annual appointment—by western newspapers—as chief mogul of the Northwestern league.

Walter Slagle, recently purchased by Los Angeles, has bought a farm near Glendale, Cal., and will make his home on it.

A London fight club has barred the kidney punch, but the Olympic club of New York got a scoop on that several days ago.

Only nine football players are reported killed this year thus demonstrating that football is not as great a game as deer hunting.

It is told in Minneapolis that the Cantillons have reasons to believe they can get Long Tom Hughes back from Washington next year.

All two fighters have to do nowadays is to take different sides of the continent and fire broadsides at each other until the promoters take notice.

James O'Brien, better known as Shimmer O'Brien, who pitched for Lawrence a part of last season, has been signed to play with Worcester.

If Walter Camp is prejudiced toward the east he didn't let it enter his family. Walter Camp, Jr., wasn't included among the all-star selections.

An Illinois boy proved himself game by playing a football game with a plaster cast on his rib, and now perhaps we shall see some game that rib is.

Mr. Wolgast has come to the conclusion that a kink in his little insides is worse than a jolt on the jaw, and a surgeon's knife is more deadly than a left hook.

With baseball, football and golf nicely tucked away for the season, there still remains a barrel of opportunity to keep busy. There is bowling; there is skating; there is curling, and a lot of things. Don't be discouraged.

CALLAHAN TO STAY IN GAME

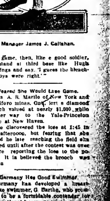
New Manager of White Sox Not Ready to Pilot Team From Bench—Will Listen to Bleacherites.

Jimmy Callahan's bat will figure in next season's chase for the American league pennant. The veteran player and new manager of President Comiskey's White Sox the other day put at rest rumors that he is to be a bench manager.

"I'll go to the bench when the boys in the bleachers behind me tell me to take off my uniform. The bleacher boys are the barometer of baseball, and when they say you've played your best game, then, like a good soldier, I'll stand at third base like Hugh Jennings and say, 'I guess the bleacher boys were right.'"



Manager James J. Callahan.

Feared She Would Lose Game.

Mrs. A. R. Marlie of New York and Thelford mines, Ont., lost a diamond brooch valued at nearly $1,000 while on her way to the Yale-Princeton game at New Haven.

She discovered the loss at 1:45 in the afternoon, but fearing that she would be late reaching the field she waited until after the contest was over before reporting the loss to the police. It is believed the brooch was stolen.

Germany Has Good Swimmer.

"Germany has developed a breast-stroke swimmer, G. Barthe, who promises to be a formidable contender for international honors at next summer's Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden. Barthe is credited with covering [illegible] meters in two minutes and [illegible] seconds and 400 meters in [illegible] and forty-five seconds."

Just Putting Him Wise.

A tall, thin man stood on the deck of a battleship and watched the target practice just outside of the mouth of Chesapeake Bay one morning last April. Near the tall man, who was dressed in civilian clothes, stood a young ensign in natty uniform, his chest stuck into the foreground like that of a pouter pigeon. Ensigns, as a rule, feel indescribable contempt for civilians, civilian clothes and civilian brains.

There was the heavy boom of a discharge from one of the other battleships and a shell, going wide of the target, kicked up a cloud of foam far out to sea.

"That shell," remarked the civilian, "fell far to the left."

"The hell it did!" contradicted the ensign, and continued to gaze toward the horizon.

The tall, thin man regarded his companion in silent amusement for a few moments, and then remarked:

"I suppose I'd better introduce myself. I'm the secretary of the navy."

Whereupon the ensign, remembered the naval regulations against profanity and lost his appetite for three days.—Popular Magazine.

Bird Chokes a Horse.

While in pasture at Seymour, Conn., a horse owned by George Miller, a farmer here, was choked to death by a swallow. The bird, in blind flight, swept into the animal's mouth, momentarily opened for an apple on an overhanging branch. The horse tore frantically about for several minutes, vaulted a fence and was dead when reached by William Owens, a farm hand who witnessed the incident. The bird, also dead, was found wedged in the horse's windpipe.

An Advantage.

The automobile presents another advantage over the horse," said Mr. Chuggins thoughtfully, "that people do not commonly appreciate."

"What is that?"

"When a motor car plays out it goes to the junk pile. Nobody thinks of chopping it up and trying to export it as beef."

Digestive Properties of Eggs.

The latest news of how eggs go in the stomach is: Two freshest soft boils, one and three-quarters hours; two raws, two and one-quarter hours; hard boils, three hours; omelette, three hours. The figures speak for themselves, but do not tell the whole truth, for it looks as if soft boils are more easily digested than raws, whereas, raws are so bland and gentle as not to excite the flow of the gastric juices—not a single squirm of the stomach.—New York Press.

News Disseminators.

A minister at a camp meeting was delivering a discourse on pride, and in cautioning the ladies against it, he said: "And you, dear sisters, may feel proud that our Lord paid you the distinguished honor of appearing first to one of you after the resurrection; but you have no reason for it, as it was undoubtedly done that the glad tidings might spread sooner."

Spanish Hen Holds Record.

The eggs of the Spanish hen, weighing seven to the pound, are the largest produced.

Self Confidence and Bluff.

Self-confidence is usually about 95 per cent. bluff.—Atchison Globe.

LAND WHERE THERE ARE PRACTICALLY NO PAUPERS.

How the Government Has Aided Prosperity—Always a Little Something Put Away for Days of Old Age.

Across a narrow sea from England is a little country which, though densely populated, has practically no paupers, nor do the people emigrate. This is thrifty Belgium, where there is thrift of the individual, thrift of the family, co-operative thrift, national thrift, and prosperity in the face of the keenest competition of its powerful neighbors, England, France and Germany.

The government, instead of paying old age pensions and dispensing charity, has machinery for the encouragement of thrift and thereby for the prevention of dependence. It pays the individual interest on his savings, it insures his life and it will give him an annuity if he saves to pay for it.

In the government savings bank deposits may be made in every post office of the kingdom and in all the branches of the National bank. The minimum deposit is one franc. There is no maximum. The government provides in a special way for those who cannot put aside so large a sum as a franc at a time. It authorizes smaller deposits by postage stamps in order to encourage school children, farm laborers and the like; and rural postmen carry with them the necessary forms for this purpose, and urge the public to make use of the savings bank in this way.

Life annuities may be contracted for at all branches of the savings bank, at all branches of the national bank, at all post offices and at the offices of all tax receivers. The minimum payment that may be made is one franc and the smallest annuity paid by the fund is one franc, while the largest is 1,200 francs. The annuities become payable at the end of each completed year from the age of fifty to sixty-five.

In addition to the annuity fund there is a government insurance fund, the management of which is under government guarantee. Life or endowment policies may be contracted for, the latter payable at the end of 10, 15, 20 or 25 years, or for a period ending at the ages of fifty-five, sixty or sixty-five.

This policy has instilled ideas of thrift in the minds of the school children. It has driven thrift into the household where the income of the husband, or of wife and husband combined, is rarely spent, and in most cases a liberal margin is left for the future. The people live within their incomes. "Our income," they say, "is so much a year; we must live within it and put away something for our old days."

Among English speaking people this is the habit: "We must have this and that and go here and there, and so we must bring our income up to that mark at all hazards."

But the Belgian household enjoys contentment and awaits with patience a larger income before buying this and that and before going here and there; and they do not try to keep the pace set by those whose means are greater. The observer sees on every hand men and women still with the freshness of youth, who have retired from active, bread winning work and are enjoying life on the capital saved by reasonable economy. They have lived wisely—neither slaves nor prodigals—and their declining years are provided for.

Use of Olives and Olive Oil.

The use of olives and olive oil is becoming so country wide that any new uses of these articles are received in all quarters with an inconceivable degree of acclaim. The housewife has learned to know its healthful qualities far better than many of the people that are natives in the countries where the olives are grown. In cases where the olive oil is used for frying of meats or vegetables if the piquant tang is desired to be modified it is best to let the oil come to a boiling point before putting in the materials which you wish to fry.

This will keep the oil from penetrating the meats, etc., and thus there will be less of the taste which it takes time to acquire, but which when acquired will be a hard matter to "discarnate" or discarnere as the Latins are wont to say.

Tabooed Thirteen.

One of the department stores has something like thirty elevators. If you have any doubt that New York is superstitious, go take a look at the north side of this great shop, where the first group of elevators is ranged. The numbers go from 1 to 12 without a break. Then comes the jolt, for that next number is something which must be got over with tact and delicacy. The manager has solved the difficulty by making it 12a, which is decorously followed by 14, just as if nothing had happened.

"Nobody'd ride in it if it bore its own true number," said he, with a grin. "We tried it. The women would give a look up at the sign over the door and then sidestep to the next car. But you never can find a person who will admit he has a superstition."

A Fan's Opinion.

"Do you expect universal peace?"

"Yes, but not until the base ball season is over."

Superfluous.

It was at the top of the heat wave. A fire engine dashed by. "Good gracious me!" cried an old gentleman, mopping his brow. "What ever do people want a fire for on a day like this?"—Punch.

Fostering Talent.

"You refuse to allow your son to study spelling and grammar," said the teacher. "Absolutely," replied Mr. Groucher. "I want him to try his hand at current literature, and I don't propose to spoil his dialect and slang."

The Largest Sassafras Tree.

Atlanta leads the south in many respects, the nation in several ways, but until recently the fact that Atlanta leads the world in at least one thing has been unknown. A sassafras tree is the principal in Atlanta's new bid for fame. The largest sassafras tree in the world, says the department of agriculture.

To most people the name sassafras is associated in their minds with the picture of a low, stunted bush luxuriantly foliaged, from the roots of which their grandmothers made tea to "cure spring fever" and other ills of that nature. A sassafras tree has been a thing unknown.

In the yard of the First Methodist Church of Atlanta the sassafras tree stands, passed by thousands each day, none of whom has realized that in that yard was growing the biggest tree of its kind in the world. Few of the members of the church were cognizant of its existence, though it has shaded little children in their play for many years and will probably perform the same loving task for years to come.

The tree, according to the experts of the agricultural department, is more than 100 years old. It is seven and a half feet in circumference, fifty feet high and has a spread of more than forty feet, overshadowing all the trees in its neighborhood.—Atlanta Constitution.

The "Chestnut" Story.

The origin of the word "chestnut" as applied to an oft-told joke may, according to Joseph Jefferson, the actor, be traced to the stage. In a melodrama entitled "The Broken Sword," written by William Dillon, two of the principal characters were Count Xavier and his servant Pablo. In a dialogue between them is to be found the origin of the word "chestnut" as applied to a story that has lost its first bloom of novelty. Here it is:

"Once," said the count, "I entered the forests of Calloway, when suddenly, from the boughs of a cork tree—"

"Chestnut, count," interrupted Pablo.

"Cork tree," said the count.

"A chestnut," reiterated Pablo. "I should know as well as you, for I have heard you tell the story twenty-seven times."

The count was a veritable Munchausen, for the frequent relation of his exploits, and consequently liable to get a little mixed in his details, so it is that from a cork tree we get the chestnut.

"Sure. He's a baseball umpire."

Valuable By-Products.

Albumen is made from blood secured at the packing houses and used for setting the colors of printed fabrics. Ashes from the hickory and bone used in smoking meats are used for fertilizer. Certain hard bone is ground up and used for case hardening steel. In this process the steel implement is heated while immersed in the powdered bone. Glue is made from the hoofs and sinews of animals.

NEW HOMES

A NUMBER OF RESIDENT HOUSES ARE BEING BUILT.

Painesville Carpenters as a Class are Not Idle This Winter.

Although it is mid-winter, with no well defined boom in sight, still contractors and carpenters generally are busy either here in this city or at Fairport, and every move on the part of carpenters means that other mechanics must carry their respective work along.

Mr. J. Houghton's new residence on Richmond street and the Park, Joseph Callander in charge as contractor, is nearing completion.

Wyman and Gregory are building a new house at the corner of State and Pearl streets. The work is in charge of J. W. West and this place when completed will make the sixth new house built in this immediate vicinity within something like a year.

Harvey Dumond's new residence place on Prospect street is progressing nicely considering the unfavorable weather.

Guy Wyman is making improvements at his residence on Bank street and a new house is being built on Bank street near the Wyman residence. Excavation has been made on Washington street near B. & O. viaduct, for the cellar of a new residence which local men are to build as a matter of investment.

W. B. Pease new house on Avery Place, with E. D. Rust in charge of construction, is already showing the outline of what promises to be a very pleasant residence. The location is one of the best in the city. Mr. Pease is one of Painesville's wide-awake insurance men, and this indication that he has selected this city as the permanent home is not an unfavorable sign.

Mrs. Edmond Burr has a new residence place well underway on South St. Clair street. C. J. Thayer has this work in charge which insures good work promptly done.

These building enterprises, in a place the size of Painesville, do not indicate a great amount of industrial activity, but these new buildings together with the improvements now underway in Fairport means conditions for our local mechanics which are considerably above normal.

NEW FIRM

W. E. CHAPMAN PURCHASES AN INTEREST IN STAR SHOE STORE

Montrose Hoover to be a Member of New Firm Which Starts Out Under Most Favorable Conditions.

W. E. Chapman, for twenty years a popular employe of John S. Lockwood, the veteran Main street merchant, has purchased the interests of J. P. Hoover in the firm of J. P. Hoover & Son, proprietors of the Star Shoe store, and will form a partnership with the junior member of the old firm, Montrose Hoover. Both Mr. Chapman and Mr. Hoover are well-liked and the new firm should be a prosperous and popular one.

RESPECTED CITIZEN DEAD

Joseph Heartwell, Father of Former Auditor Passes Away at Hospital.

Another one of Madison's old and respected citizens has passed on to the Great Beyond. Death came to Mr. Joseph Heartwell at the Painesville hospital last Friday evening, December 5, after an illness of two or three months.

Mr. Heartwell was born in Ontario 75 years ago but for the past 46 years has been a resident of Madison. During his residence in that village the deceased held several municipal offices of trust and was a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. Two children, Miss Grace Heartwell of Madison, and Ex-Auditor E. D. Heartwell of Painesville, survive.

The funeral services were held in Madison from the Heartwell home on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were conducted by the Odd Fellows.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES.

This is the big Democratic year we've all been hearing about.

—o—

George H. Shepherd has offered his home place on Mentor avenue for sale.

—o—

A young woman in Arkansas received an ax as a Christmas present. It bore the inscription: "Try this on your piano."

—o—

The Diamond Alkali Co. of Fairport expect to commence the making of soda ash and by-products on or about February 1st.

—o—

The Perry Farmers institute, after a two days session, Thursday and Friday of last week, was considered one of the best meetings ever held in the county.

—o—

If all the candidates for county offices from Madison were to be elected, who would be left to do the farming in that great big township? Possibly the democrats.

—o—

The question is, why has not Marshal James Maloney of Willoughby, announced himself for sheriff? The officer who "always gets his man" has friends all over the county.

—o—

Judge C. H. Nye, in appreciation of the Citizens' band, has presented that organization with a $5 note. Now we are quite sure that Judge Nye will be a candidate for re-election.

—o—

If Police Justice E. P. Huntington should be elected probate judge, will he find quarters in the court house for the chess club—did some one say it or wasn't it our move? Beg pardon.

—o—

The efforts of the C. P. & E. trolley road to keep cars running during the recent storm are to be commended. The service of the road up to this last storm had been unusually good.

—o—

Dr. M. H. Carmedy has been appointed surgeon for this district of the Lake division of the B. & O. railroad. The trainmen and repair men of the repair shops here number over four hundred men.

—o—

Horatio N. Munson, one of the foremost residents of Mentor, passed away at his home on Saturday morning, after an illness of several months. The Mentor correspondent gives a brief sketch of the deceased's life and work.

—o—

Mayor Wynne S. Smith's first message to the city council seems to favor a progressive administration of the city's affairs fully in keeping with the enterprise shown by the average citizen in conducting his own business affairs.

—o—

Ice men are now busy putting up ice. The shortage of the ice crop of last year insures prompt action this year. It is claimed that about 10000 tons of marketable ice will be put up in this vicinity if the cold weather continues to hold for two or three weeks.

—o—

Frank L. Kelley, one of Painesville's popular young men was elected clerk of council Monday evening. The new clerk of both safety and service departments will undoubtedly be Frank P. Pratt. Messrs. Kelley and Pratt are well qualified for their respective positions.

—o—

According to the Telegraph-Republican, the Burrows administration paid off about $10,000 to $20,000 debts of the Tuttle-Nolan administration, saved the taxpayers $40,000 to $50,000 during two years of service, and turned about $100,000 over to the incoming administration.

—o—

A pretty young lady dropped into a music store and stepped to the counter where a new clerk was sorting music, and asked: "Have you Kissed Me in the Moonlight?" The lobster turned half around and said: "It must have been the man at the other counter, as I've only been here a week."

—o—

Did the practice of turning up trousers originate at the English universities. This serious question is being debated in England. One authority gives a negative answer. He says that the practice originated with young men who wore bright socks and low shoes and wished them to be seen.

—o—

Among the new advertisers in this issue of the Herald is the Painesville Dry Cleaning and Pressing Co. This is a concern that will be greatly appreciated by Painesville people. Mr. Charles Fink, the manager, is a gentleman of pleasant address and what is more to the point has had twenty-five years of successful experience in his line of work.

—o—

The Telegraph-Republican has evidently singled out Safar Murphy, in the new city administration and the heavy artillery will be turned in that direction. Murphy will catch it for the same reason that Tuttle and Nolan did—because they were democrats. But what does Murphy care? He gets $1.94 per week and can stand it!

—o—

On January 17 a postal savings bank will be opened in Fairport. Postal savings banks seem to be popular all over the country, and strange as it may seem, the establishment of these banks does not do any harm to the banking business of state and national banks. Let's have the income tax—we might like that too, when we get it.

—o—

Lippincott's magazine tells of a party where one of the guests, a young man, was asked to sing. The hour was after midnight and the young man suggested that the neighbors might object to music at that time of night. "Oh, never mind the neighbors," exclaimed the daughter of the hostess impulsively. "They poisoned our dog last week."

—o—

The Buffalo Express views 1912 with alarm. It says:

The year which has just been ushered in is classed by some seers as a year fraught with much danger. Dire happenings are predicted. The stars forecast them. Men need to be cautious in their comings and goings and in all their doings. There are evils to be avoided, catastrophes to be guarded against. One must be watchful, alert, vigilant. For 1912 is a leap year.

—o—

The results of the recent horse feeding experiments at Manhattan, Kan., seem to be important. They were conducted by the Kansas Agricultural college in co-operation with the United States government, and were the most extensive ever made, 937 horses owned by the government being used for the test. The object was to find, if possible, a grain or mixture of grains that would take the place of oats, and the outcome, if supported by longer experience, is eminently satisfactory. It was definitely proved that oats, though more expensive, is a better feed for work horses than corn. On oats horses gained 16 pounds while on corn they lost 29 pounds. But corn in combination with alfalfa gave as good results as oats and was 50 per cent cheaper. Alfalfa was found superior to either timothy or prairie hay, and cheapens the rations from 25 to 40 per cent. The best ration found, though not the cheapest, was six parts of corn, four of oats, four of bran, and timothy hay, but with alfalfa practically as good results were got at a considerably lower cost.

LECTURE FREE

EXPERT TO TELL FRUIT GROWERS ABOUT PESTS.

Stereopticon Views Will Help To Show Facts of Value to all Farmers

At the Congregational church parlors in Painesville, Saturday, Jan. 13, commencing at 1 p. m., the manager of the insecticide department, H. M. Ashby of the Sherwin-Williams Co., Cleveland, will give a lecture on fruit tree pests and diseases of fruit, orchard culture and methods of spraying. This lecture will be illustrated by the use of stereopticon views.

The executive committee of the Lake County Horticultural society have planned what will be an interesting and beneficial program for the ensuing year.

In connection with the regular program the society, through co-operating with the experiment station at Wooster, is planning an extensive experimental and demonstrational orchard work this year in this county. Fruit growers in this section of the state are in need of experimental work of this sort with the existing conditions here.

It is the plan to solicit the co-operation of every fruit grower and resident of the county in bringing this about, and the art of horticulture up to a very high standard.

The society extends a very cordial invitation to all to attend this lecture, also to attend all the meetings of the society. The Sherwin-Williams people give us this lecture gratis, all request is a good gathering of the fruit growers of the county. It is desired that fruit growers bring specimens of fruit and tree disease to this meeting.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I, the undersigned wish to announce my candidacy for the office of County Commissioner subject to the Republican Primaries to be held in May, 1912.

F. H. ROOD,
Madison, Ohio

NOTICE

The annual meeting of the Lake County Agricultural society for the election of directors and such other business as may properly come before it will be held at the Court House, in Painesville, Ohio, Saturday, at 10 a. m., January 27th, 1912.

One director will be elected for three years from each of the townships of Concord, Kirtland, Mentor, Willoughby and Perry. One director will be elected from Kirtland for one year and one director will be elected from Painesville for two years. The two latter are for unexpired terms, the present incumbents holding office by appointment.

GEO. A. BATES, Secretary.

INJURIES FATAL

JOHN KENNEDY PASSED AWAY AS RESULT OF HOLD UP.

The Deceased Was Well Known Here and a Former Locomotive Engineer

The death of John Kennedy, a former employe of the Diamond Alkali Co., at the hospital Thursday night, Jan. 4th, means that a murder mystery has grown out of what was at first thought to be only a plain case of assault. Kennedy's death was directly due to wounds received in Cleveland, on December 2. Blood poisoning and complications resulted that prevented his recovery, says the Telegraph-Republican.

John Kennedy was 51 years of age and well known in this vicinity where he has lived for many years. At the time of his death he made his home with his sister, Mrs. Kittie Vosburgh of Concord. Besides Mrs. Vosburgh four daughters survive, Mrs. John Pike, Mrs. James Alford, Mrs. Frank Dowling and Miss Rose Kennedy. The remains have been taken to the Kennedy home in this city and the funeral services will be held from St. Mary's church Monday a. m., at 8:30 o'clock.

Discovered Again.

It was to have been expected that John Orth, the long missing Archduke John Salvator of Austria, would again be "discovered" in various parts of the earth as a result of the publication of the remarkable autobiographical volume by Princess Louisa of Tuscany, former crown princess of Saxony and divorced wife of the present Saxon king. In the book, which she entitled "My Own Story," the ex-crown princess has told in dramatic fashion of the manner in which the missing archduke, her uncle, took leave of her and her brother, warning them never to believe in his death and declaring that he would eventually reappear. It seems that the man who has now "discovered" the archduke in Mexico had with him a copy of the book and fancied that he saw a resemblance to a reproduced picture of the archduke in an eccentric character whom he met in a remote district. While it is of course possible that John Orth is really living in Mexico, it may be pointed out that the hereditary eccentricities of the Hapsburgs, which seem to have been so intensified in the archduke John, his niece, Louisa, and in various others of the line, offer reasonable ground for the belief that he could not ever live for very long in any part of the world without attracting so much attention as to speedily establish his identity.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

FREE EXHIBIT

Experiments and Demonstrations.

The Ohio Exhibit car will travel Ohio for 100 days, to show the needs of the State, and to emphasize its possibilities and the room there is for improvement and increased yields. Everything is free. Nothing will be sold. Nothing advertised but the State of Ohio. The car will be conducted by the State Board of Agriculture, the College of Agriculture and the Ohio Experiment Station.

The New York Central Lines furnish and move the car free of charge at request of the State.

Everybody from city and country should visit this—the finest Exhibit Car ever run in Ohio. Long stops, good instructors, good literature, good wages by coming.

Following is the time the train will stop near the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Ry. Depot:

Willoughby, Jan. 18, from 9:00 a. m. to 11:16 a. m.; Mentor, Jan. 18, from 11:24 a. m. to 12:17 a. m. Jan. 19, Painesville, Jan. 19, from 12:22 a. m. to 11:31 a. m., Perry, Jan. 19, 11:44 a. m. to 12:29 a. m. Jan. 20; Madison, Jan. 20, from 12:33 a. m. to 11:56 a. m.; Geneva, Jan. 20, from 12:04 p. m. to 9:38 a. m. Jan. 21.

Items of Interest on the Ohio Booster Car.

Samples of clovers, alfalfa, soy beans, cowpeas, vetches, etc.

An exhibit showing the comparative yield of 20 varieties of oats.

The shrinkage in corn grown from western or southern seed, as compared with home grown seed.

Variations in type and color of the soybean—a plant destined to occupy a very large place in Ohio's agriculture.

The difference in yield of corn per acre at the end of 15 years' continuous culture without manure on the one hand and a like period of rotation cropping with phosphated manure.

A comparison of different feeds, including tankage, for fattening pigs. Feeding pigs in dry lots and on soybean and rape pasture how to save the corn and at the same time to make more and cheaper pork.

Rations for fattening lambs and the quantity of feed required to make a pound of grain.

Variation in egg yields from hens of the same age and breeding—one laying 198 eggs in her first year and another only 81.

Many specimens of troublesome weeds by which the weeds of the farm may be identified.

The different sorts of ear corn, showing how to distinguish the new cob rot.

Killing poison ivy with salt spray.

Orchard treatment, showing how old orchards that had been condemned to the ax have been rejuvenated and made to yield $400 per acre and upward.

Insects pests, showing how to distinguish the destructive kinds and how to prevent their ravages.

Showing how forest trees save the soil, and how inferior timber may be so treated as to triple its durability in the soil.

Showing how nearly $400 worth of timber may be grown on an acre in 22 years' time.

Showing the wrong method of tree growing—a method to be avoided.

Show how the value of a ton of manure may be brought up to nearly five dollars.

Thanks respectfully,
A. P. Sandles, Sec'y
Ohio State Board of Agriculture.

WM. GORDON

Late Democratic Candidate for Congress Speaks Plainly.

Lake county democrats will be interested in a letter written recently by Attorney Wm. Gordon, of Cleveland, to Sec'y of Agriculture A. P. Sandles. Mr. Gordon is a progressive democrat, and will probably be the choice of the democrats of this district as a candidate for congress again this year.

"I have just read your denunciation of those Democrats who prefer some one other than Gov. Harmon as the Democratic candidate for president this year. You see through a glass darkly—the glass doors and windows of the office of secretary of the state board of agriculture.

"I am one of those Democrats who do not believe that it would be wise to nominate Harmon for president. It would be 1904 over again and your experience as the crucified head of the Democratic state ticket in that year ought to satisfy you that it is not wise or expedient to nominate a candidate against whom the real progressive sentiment of the party is in revolt.

"We ought to nominate a political leader like Woodrow Wilson, a man who appeals to the reason and intellect and does not resort to the weapons of the political boss and time-server to get things done.

"The one great achievement of Gov. Harmon's administration which will live in history is the enactment of legislation which the people of the state are given a more just and equitable system of taxation than they ever had before, and yet when Tom Johnson proposed this reform, Judson Harmon was so violently opposed to it that he is said to have refused to support the Democratic ticket in 1903.

"It is not wise to select as our leader in this year of our Lord a man whose only progress has been made under the whip and spur of his personal ambition. The Democrats of this state and nation demand better proof of Gov. Harmon's title to leadership of a progressive Democratic party than the testimony of his office holders.

"You assume to speak for the Bryan Democrats. I voted for Bryan three times for president and yet I have never been classed as one of his personal followers. Perhaps you can tell us what the attitude of Bryan's friends will be toward the Harmon candidacy. You know, and I know, that if Harmon is nominated and Bryan refuses to support him it will be another march through a slaughter house to an open grave such as you led in 1904.

"I have met more Democrats who said they would not vote for Harmon if he is nominated than I have heard express a desire for his nomination. Let us reason together on this question. I voted for Harmon twice for governor and have never said that I regretted it. I do not agree with you, however, that because he has not done anything 'disgraceful' since his last election we are guilty of 'damnable conduct' because we prefer some other candidate for president.

"Do not assume that Taft will be the Republican candidate and that Democrats may therefore safely delegate to the officeholders in this state, present and prospective, the duty of selecting our candidate for us.

"Are you in favor of giving the Democratic voters an opportunity at the May primary election of recording their choice for president? Please let me hear from you in reply to this last question."

Facts.

The annual expenditure for education in the United States is about $450,000,000.

School books alone cost less than three per cent of this sum, or $12,000,000.

Now while we spend $12,000,000 for school books, at which we often complain, we spend the following sums every year and make no objection:

Cigars and cigarettes, $215,000,000.

Cigar boxes, $7,569,000.

Liquors, $440,000,000.

Candy and soda water, $117,000,000.

One would think from this that when we spend for the stomach's sake, we don't complain, but when it is for the intellect—mind, brain, or call it what you will—we think $12,000,000 a large sum.

PERRY.

The Farmers' Institute held in the Baptist church of Perry last Wednesday and Thursday, was both interesting and educational.

Each year we grow more enlightened
Every true, honest task is of God
Yet the world as in previous ages,
Deems its noblest work to cultivate the sod.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Baptist church realized $34 from the meals served on institute days.

On account of the illness of Rev. Smith, the evangelistic meetings under the auspices of the Men's Bible Class, have been indefinitely postponed. Mr. Smith was unwell when he accepted the call to Perry, but was in hopes of strength to conduct the meetings. Saturday he was accompanied to Cleveland by Rev. Buckles, where every effort to secure a man for the work was put forth in vain, so, until further notice, no meetings will be held at the I. O. O. F. hall.

JUDGING BY DOG'S SILENCE

Supervisor-Elect Has His Suspicions as to the Society in Which the Pet Moved.

Here is a true story of a young lady of local society but recently married. What breed of a dog it is, we are not exactly sure, having spent most of our time at dog shows in gazing at gowns, but it is of that very small variety that can be easily carried in a muff, and lives on kisses and candy. It was impossible for the lady's husband to go to the opera with her, so she thought of "Cuty" (we will call it that). "Cuty" had never heard grand opera in his little life, and he really must hear "Manon." Had he not always indicated his ear for music by running away from a graphophone. Well, "Cuty" went—tucked inside a large ermine muff. Only the tip of his tiny ear showed, and the point of his shiny nose. The doorkeeper and the ushers missed him entirely. Only the lady friend who accompanied his mistress was aware of his presence, and the Supervisor-elect who sat on the other side of her and who also likes French opera. During the whole performance "Cuty" was a perfectly good doggie and kept as quiet as a mouse, perhaps because he did not want it known that he could not understand the French language. When it was all over the lady friend, who knew the Supervisor-elect, and could not in courtesy help but recognize him, introduced him to her companion, who was perfectly charmed with the way her dog behaved.

"Isn't he a little dear?" she praised. "During the whole performance he never interrupted once with a single syllable."

The Supervisor-elect smiled sardonically. "Which gives one great reason to doubt, madam," he supplied, "that he really belongs to the best society."—San Francisco News Letter.

London's Mansion House.

The Mansion house at London, which will be the future residence of the new Lord Mayor, was built by the elder Dance between 1739 and 1753. This prolonged delay was caused by the discovery of numerous springs of water in digging the foundations, which had to be based upon piles. Originally the facade had a heavy attic story commonly called "The Mare's (Mayor's) Nest." The famous Egyptian hall, which is the principal room, was so stated because intended by the architect to reproduce exactly the Egyptian hall described by Vitruvius. The cost of the Mansion house, £71,000, is alleged to have been partly defrayed from fines inflicted upon Nonconformist members of the corporation for not receiving the sacrament according to the rites of the Established church, as required by the corporation act of Charles II.

Electricity From Windmill.

A patent has been granted for a system of generating electricity wherein the prime movers are a windmill and an internal combustion engine, both operating on the generator shaft and connected together by means of a clutch. When the windmill is idle the load is taken by the engine, and as the windmill gathers speed it works both the dynamo and the engine until the speed attains that which is designated the critical point, when the engine is disconnected by governor balls, and the ignition circuit is opened, thus stopping the engine. A reduction in the speed of the dynamo causes the cycle of operations to work in the opposite order, with the consequence that the windmill runs free and the engine takes the load.

Ps and Qs.

"Bishop Logan Herbert Roots of Hankow," said a New York clergyman, "must be profoundly interested in the Chinese revolution. Bishop Roots stands very high with the Hankow Chinese.

He once told me that, when he first went to China, he had a good deal of difficulty in remembering faces. He mentioned this difficulty to a mandarin. He said:

"'I'm getting over it now, but in the beginning here in Hankow you all looked as like as two peas.'

"'Two peas?' said the intelligent mandarin, smiling. 'But why not any two queues?'"

Blasting With Air.

The idea of making use of compressed air as a blasting agent is said to have been so far perfected that it is now resorted to in some parts of Europe to a great extent, and its use seems to indicate that it will soon come into general use. The work is accomplished surely and rapidly and without danger to the miner and the greatest economy of the material being blasted.

Candid Declaration.

"What sort of a ticket does your suffragette club favor?"

"Well," replied young Mrs. Torkins, "if ye own right up, I think most of us would prefer matinee tickets."—Washington Star.

No Doubt About It.

We are told that most of the verses in a recent book of poems were written immediately after the author's 30-day fast.

Thirty-day fast! He surely must be a poet!

Important Consideration.

"Do you like dogs?" asked the owner of a temperamental terrier.

"'Scuse me," replied Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "but my 'pinion 'bout dogs doesn't 'pear to make much diff'rence. What I wants to know is how dat dog feels towards folks."

THRILLING BLAZE IN GREATER NEW YORK

MAGNIFICENT BUILDING OF THE EQUITABLE LIFE IS COMPLETELY DESTROYED.

HUMAN LIVES ARE SACRIFICED

Acts of Heroism in Rescuing Men From Flaming Furnace and Tragic Death of Battalion Chief Mark Burning of Structure.

THE DEAD.

William J. Walsh, battalion chief, New York fire department; lost life while directing subordinates to safety. Leaves widow and six children.

William Campion, captain night watch Mercantile Trust Co.; lost life while aiding president of the firm to rescue valuable papers. Leaves widow and two daughters.

Frank J. Meider, special policeman on watch in deposit vaults.

Massina Fratta, porter. Jumped from seventh floor to Cedar street.

Guiseppi Conti, kitchen helper Savarin restaurant. Jumped from roof.

John Sozzi, kitchen man. Jumped from window Lawyers' club.

Unknown man, seen to fall back into flames when about to jump from fourth floor window.

PROPERTY LOSS.

Estimated property loss, including value of buildings, $16,408,623.

Building originally cost $18,761,640, but was carried on company's books for last few years at value of $5,000,000. Actual loss on building estimated at $250,000.

New York City.—The magnificent building of the Equitable Life Assurance society, 120 Broadway, was destroyed completely, in the most thrilling fire in the history of downtown New York. Firemen and others sacrificed their lives in the terrific battle to save lower New York from a tremendous conflagration. The work of rescue was the most amazing ever witnessed.

Acts of Heroism.

The cold wave which has had the city in its grasp for several days added to the difficulties of the men fighting the fire, coating men and apparatus with heavy casings of ice and some of the missing are believed to have lost their lives because of the rapid freezing of the water that poured into the vaults below the level of the streets.

The heart of the great financial world was pierced. For hours big business was demoralized. And when darkness fell the city men remained appalled at the tremendous property loss. The uncertainty of even greater misfortunes will remain until the great ruins are sufficiently cooled to permit exploration of the vast vaults which underlie the tomb of granite.

Three great thrilling features stand out distinctly in the record of a day of remarkable heroisms. They concern the tragic death of Battalion Chief William J. Walsh, the tearful two hour battle to rescue William Giblin, president of the Mercantile Safe Deposit Vault Co. and one of the vault watchmen, which succeeded, and the heroic deed of Engineer Davis who prevented the explosion of the huge boilers by seven hours of unaided toil in which time he drew all the fires while the great building was consumed over his head.

Battalion Chief Killed.

Facing weather conditions which were frightful, with a wind that was almost a gale urging the fire fiend on, the city fire fighters worked under direction of Chief Kenlon until they froze to their posts. And as each battalion, benumbed and stilled, was dragged from its post, another relay leaped into the ice breaches and kept up the work.

It was just after this system had got into good working order that Walsh lost his life. With three companions he managed to reach the fourth floor of the doomed structure from the Nassau street side. Great blocks of stone were cracking with the heat and hurling to the street as he dashed up the ladders and, urging his men to follow, fought his way with a nozzle toward an opening into the high domed center of the Equitable. Suddenly those working at his side saw a member of the party fall, overcome with smoke. Then a great crash resounded as the huge dome crashed through the building.

"Every man for himself, run, run," shouted Walsh. The firemen scrambled to the windows and yelled for aid and ten men sprang to draw them out. But they came without Walsh. Just as the third man of the party was lifted from the window, the entire floor caved in and Walsh was seen no more.

DEMOCRATS NAME BALTIMORE

Choose Maryland City for Holding Their National Convention and Set June 25 as the Date.

Washington, D. C.—On a viva voce vote, the Democratic national committee adopted the resolution of Senator Chamberlain indorsing the presidential primary plan.

The resolution expresses indorsement of a preferential primary in all states where such a plan could be put in operation without interference with state statutes.

It was unanimously agreed to name Chairman Mack chairman of the convention committee of arrangements. He and nine other members of the national committee will plan the convention.

In addition to Mack, P. L. Hall, national committeeman from Nebraska, and Urey Woodson, national committeeman from Kentucky, were named as members of the arrangements committee. The other seven will be selected by these three men.

The national Democratic convention of 1912 will be held at Baltimore, Md., on June 25. This was the decision after more than two hours deliberation. The date for meeting was chosen without difficulty, but two ballots were necessary in a selection of a city.

Cure for Infantile Paralysis.

New York City.—Dr. Simon Flexner, the noted head of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, has announced the discovery of a drug which, in his belief, will conquer infantile paralysis.

The new remedy is known as Urotropin, and is formed by the action of ammonia of formaldehyde. So far experiments in its use have been upon monkeys. The remedy is administered direct into the nervous system by injection into the brain through a hypodermic needle.

Ends Life With Bullet and Gas.

New York City.—Grief over the tragic death of her son, who committed suicide by shooting himself on December 5, in his lodgings in Philadelphia and estrangement from her husband, are believed to have been responsible for the suicide of Mrs. Lottie Hyde Buffington, who was found dead in bed in her apartment with a bullet wound in her mouth and the gas flowing from two open jets. On the bed beside the woman's body was a note of farewell written by the dead woman.

SENDS REPORT TO TAFT

MONETARY COMMISSION AFTER HARD STUDY SUBMITS PLAN.

Members Believe Recommendation, If Enacted Into Law, Will Accomplish Needed Reforms.

Washington, D. C.—"There is a general agreement among intelligent students of the subject that to remedy defects in the present monetary system it is necessary to prepare a comprehensive reorganization of credit and a thorough reconstruction of our banking systems and methods. We submit herewith our recommendation providing for such reorganization in the form of a bill, which if enacted into law will, we believe accomplish these results."

With this statement the report of the monetary commission, which was sent to President Taft, begins. The report which is the result of much study and travel has just been completed. It continues in part:

"It is proposed to incorporate the National Association of the United States with an authorization of capital equal to 20 per cent. of the capital of all the subscribing banks of which one half shall be paid in, the remainder shall become a liability subject to call under provisions of section 4 of the bill. It is also provided that before the reserve association can commence business $100,000,000 of capital must be paid in cash. All state banks and trust companies conforming to the provisions of the bill with reference to capitalization and reserves, and all national banks are entitled to subscribe to stock and become members of the association.

"The principal function of the local association is to guarantee upon application and commercial paper of individual banks which may be offered to the branches for rediscount. The bill provides that the entire country shall at first be divided into 15 districts with a branch in each district. The executive officers of the National Reserve association are to consist of a governor, two deputy governors, a secretary and such subordinate officers as may be authorized. The governor who is to serve ten years is selected by the president of the United States from an eligible list not less than three in number furnished by the directors and the deputy governors are elected by the board of directors. The board is to chose from among its number an executive committee consisting of nine members of which the government and the two deputy governors and the comptroller of the currency shall be ex-officio members. The board is also to elect from among its number a board of examination of which the secretary of the treasury shall be ex officio chairman.

"The bill provides that the National Reserve association shall become the principal fiscal agent of the United States and as such shall serve through its branches as the custodian of the general funds of the treasury as the depositary of its receipts and the instrumentality through which its disbursements shall be effected. The system of storing surplus revenues in independent vaults and of withdrawing the money from the channels of business into useless inactivity has not been followed in other countries for centuries and is contrary to the methods followed by our state and municipal governments as well as by private corporations and individuals. In the provisions of the bill for the election of directors of the National Reserve association we provide for 30 directors two to be elected by each of the 15 districts defined in the bill, and nine additional directors to be elected by voting representatives of the districts.

"New York, under these provisions with 29 per cent. of the banking resources of the country would have 8 per cent. of the representation on the board. New England with 12 per cent. of the resources would have 8 per cent. of the representation, the eastern states as defined in the bill with 41 per cent. of resources would have 15 per cent. of representation, the middle west with 21 per cent. of resources would have 31 per cent. of representation, the southern states with 11 per cent. of resources would have 23 per cent. of representation and the western and Pacific states with 12 per cent. of resources would have 23 per cent. of representation. The New England, eastern and middle west states taken together with 77 per cent. of the resources could elect only 21 out of the 46 directors in the reserve association, while the southern, western and Pacific states with 23 per cent. of the resources might have 48 per cent. of the representation.

"We think that this statement must of itself show conclusively that there can be no local domination—no domination of selfish interests in this organization and that fear of possible Wall street control can have no substantial foundation."

WOULD ELIMINATE POLITICS

President Taft Advocates Placing 500,000 Federal Employes Under Civil Service.

Washington, D. C.—A plan practically revolutionizing the business methods of the federal government and placing its half million employes, with the exception of heads of important bureaus, under the classified civil service, is recommended by the commission on economy and efficiency in its report, now in possession of President Taft. If the civil service recommendation is carried out it will have the effect of taking nearly all federal officers out of politics and removing leaders from their present control of political organizations, held through patronage.

It is pointed out by the commission that under methods now in existence throughout the government, any business corporation in the United States long since would have been forced to the wall. It is the purpose of the president to send the report to the senate accompanied by a message giving his approval.

Girl Is Jailed for Flirting.

Trenton, N. J.—Whether flirting is a crime or a disease is the question that is engaging the serious attention of Trenton authorities following the action of Magistrate Noer in sentencing Sarah Reed to serve six months in the workhouse for that offense or ailment, whichever it may be. Several physicians criticise the sentence on the ground that flirting is a disease and lawyers contend that if this is the case the guilty persons are not responsible for their acts and therefore can appeal to higher courts.

"Hello Kid" Is Met With Punch.

Findlay, O.—"Hello, Kid, who are you?" was the greeting given Miss Nevada Beemer of West Carrollton, by a young man while she was on her way home from down town at a late hour at night.

Miss Nevada Beemer handed the young man a left that sent him sprawling and followed up her advantage by jabbing him several times with a hatpin.

Before medical aid could be called he regained his feet and made good his escape.

OLD COUPLE ARE BRUTALLY SLAIN

BODIES ARE FOUND IN THEIR TWO-ROOM APARTMENT IN TENEMENT HOUSE.

MURDER BAFFLES OFFICERS

One Eye Each of Man and Wife Are Gouged Out by Some Sharp Instrument and Faces Otherwise Mutilated.

New York City.—One of the most baffling mysteries, one that even the mind of Sir Conan Doyle would hardly dare trace in imagination for his Sherlock Holmes, confronted the police of New York in the discovery of the murder of an aged and well-to-do couple in their two-room apartment in one of the lower East Side tenement houses—one of the most thickly populated sections of New York. The victims of the tragedy were Isaac Futterman, 80, and his wife, Rachael, 72.

Scene of Crime.

The scene of the crime was in the rooms of the couple on the rear of the second floor of 101 Norfolk street. Here in the small, but neat and well kept apartments the lives of these two old persons were taken in the most shocking manner. One eye each of the old gentleman and his wife had been pierced by some sharp instrument—something in the nature of an ice pick—and their faces otherwise mutilated. The crime was committed, beyond a doubt, while hundreds of persons were hurrying by on the crowded streets. Several persons are under surveillance.

Familiar Figures.

Futterman and his wife have been familiar figures in the East Side district for a long time. Here they were married and there they have lived for the past 40 years, declining all requests of their sons and grandsons, who are now well-to-do businessmen uptown, to leave the crowded quarters and join them in more pretentious apartments.

There is absolutely no known motive upon which the police can direct their search for the murder or murderers except that it was committed in revenge for some fancied wrong done by either one of the aged couple.

REV. RICHESON CONFESSES

Preacher Admits That He Murdered His Former Sweetheart, Miss Avis Linnell.

RICHESON'S CONFESSION.

Boston.—The full text of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson's confession, addressed to John L. Lee, William A. Morse and Philip R. Dunbar, his counsel, reads:

"Gentlemen: Deeply penitent for my sin, and earnestly desiring, as far as in my power lies, to make atonement, I hereby confess that I am guilty of the offense of which I stand indicted.

"I am moved to this course by no inducement of self benefit or leniency. Heinous as is my crime, God has not wholly abandoned me, and my conscience and manhood, however depraved and blighted, will not admit of my still further wronging by a public trial her whose pure young life I have destroyed.

"Under the lashings of remorse, I have suffered and am suffering the tortures of the damned. In this I find a measure of comfort. In my mental anguish I recognize that there is still, by the mercy of the Master, some remnant of the divine spark of goodness still lingering with me. I could wish to live only because within some prison's walls I might, in some small measure, redeem my sinful past, help some other despairing soul and, at last, find favor with my God.

"You are instructed to deliver this to the district attorney or to the judge of the court."

Boston, Mass.—"Thank God, I have eased my conscience of that load."

Those were the words of Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson on January 4, when he delivered to his attorneys the confession which was made public January 6. In this confession, the preacher admits that he murdered his former sweetheart, Avis Linnell, that he might be free to wed another.

It is reported in police circles that Richeson besides confessing his crime in writing informed his counsel that he gave the fatal draught of poison to Miss Linnell while they were seated on a bench in the Fenway on the afternoon of October 14.

Believed Poison Kills Four.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Driven insane because of her husband's abandonment Mrs. Bridget Flanagan, who conducted a boarding house at 1323 North 24th street, is believed to have placed poison in the food of her boarders with the result that three of her own family were killed. Mrs. Flanagan also died in great agony.

Asks Leasing Law for Alaska Lands.

Washington, D. C.—Enlarged application of the leasing principle as applied to the public domain, especially a liberal leasing law for the development of the mineral resources of Alaska, particularly its coal lands, and immediate consideration by congress of the whole subject of water power development and control, are the most important recommendations contained in the annual report of Secretary of the Interior Fisher. A general overhauling of conditions in Alaska is needed, the secretary says.

Gas Is Fatal to Three.

Toledo, O.—Three lives have been claimed by escaping gas here within 48 hours. R. O. Sheldon, a teamster, 32, was found dead in bed at his home early in the day. A partly opened gas jet had allowed the room to fill with gas.

Edward Geraux, 74, was found dead sitting before a grate in his room. A gas jet above his head was open.

Louis Dihhand, 22, died in the evening at a hospital from gas poisoning as a result of inhaling gas fumes in his room previously.

FOE OF COLLEGE DIES

ENEMY OF HIGHER EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS EXPIRES.

Richard T. Crane Contended That Cash Could be Spent More Profitably in Industrial Movement.

Chicago, Ill.—Richard T. Crane, head of the Crane company and foe of universities and higher educational institutions, died at his home after a three-day illness of grip. The death of Mr. Crane was sudden, as his illness had not been considered serious. A casual examination by physicians led to the belief he had suffered from an attack of heart disease.

Nearly 80 years old, Mr. Crane, who had been without the advantages—or disadvantages, as he characterized it—or training in universities, and had worked his way to the head of a large iron working company, contended all his life that the university was a useless fixture, and that the money devoted to higher education could be spent more profitably in extending industrial education and aiding persons who had met with adverse fate. His death occurred within a few hours of the issue of his last attack on schools, an attack called forth by repudiation of his theories by college professors and presidents. In it he renewed his assertion that college graduates were ill equipped for earning a living and that many of them could not command the salary of a skilled mechanic. Culture, not livelihood or the means of earning it, was the only purpose he could discover for the existence of colleges.

Mr. Evans' last attack, directed against the University of Illinois, says in part:

"The further I go in this education question, the more firmly am I convinced that I was right when I took the ground some years ago that this university, as well as all others, ought to be burned down, and that the money spent on them should be expended where it would do some good."

He conducted this autumn and winter an investigation of the success attending efforts of university graduates to get remunerative positions. His figures indicated that out of the schools devoting attention to civil engineering, mechanical or electrical engineering and agriculture, only a small part of the men members of the graduating classes procured positions which, he contended, were compatible with the ability they should have had if the schools were meritorious.

PAY TRIBUTE TO 'OLD HICKORY'

Prominent Democrats Gather Around the Banquet Table in the National Capital.

Washington, D. C.—Fully 1,000 of the leading Democrats of the country honored Andrew Jackson as they sat about the table. Never before in the history of the party has there been so brilliant a gathering. Democrats from every section of the land, from every great city, even from the distant insular possessions were there, all inspired with a common purpose.

The new banquet hall of the Hotel Raleigh, where the dinner was held, had been gorgeously decorated for the occasion. The stars and stripes were everywhere, over the heads of the speakers, draped about the dais on which they sat, entwined in the fresco around the walls and enfolding the fine portrait of "Old Hickory" that beamed down over the heads of the chairmen and toastmaster.

FOUR DIE RAILROAD CRASH

Passengers on Canadian Trains Perish, While Others Are Hurt, When Collision Occurs.

Montreal.—Four persons were killed and five injured when a train from Quebec crashed into a train from Montreal at St. Vincent De Paul station, about 30 miles from this city. Both trains were crowded with passengers, bound for their country homes after attending special Epiphany services in Quebec and Montreal.

According to the officials of the Canadian Pacific, on which road the wreck occurred, the train from Montreal was standing west of the St. Vincent De Paul station when the Quebec train overran a switch on which it should have taken a siding.

Richeson Pleads Guilty to Murder.

Boston, Mass.—A plea of guilty of murder in the first degree was made by Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson in the superior court here, and he was sentenced by Judge Sanderson to death by electrocution some time during the week of May 19, 1912. It is understood that a petition may be made to Governor Foss and the executive council of the state to commute the death penalty to imprisonment for life.

Auto Truck Plunges, Two Die.

Wheeling, W. Va.—A large automobile truck containing forty-two persons comprising a wedding party plunged over a 30-foot embankment near Bellaire, O.

Two persons are dead and many injured. There were several women and children in the party but it is thought they all escaped serious injury. The passengers were returning from a wedding of foreigners in this city to Neffs, O. It is said the chauffeur lost control of the automobile in going up a steep hill.

Freight Agent Is Indicted.

Jefferson, O.—The grand jury has just brought in 22 indictments against Milo S. Davis, former Lake Shore freight agent at Ashtabula, on charges of embezzlement and 33 indictments for alleged forgery. Davis, who had been agent in Ashtabula for three years, was arrested October 20 after the railroad company had charged he had padded pay roll statements and obtained money for the payment of men supposed to be in his employ. Davis is the second agent to be arrested here.

One Thing I Do

By Rev. E. P. Record, Pastor of Church of Unity, Springfield, Mass.

TEXT—But one thing I do.—Philippians 3:13.

The life of St. Paul is a conspicuous example of the power of a fixed purpose. For years he was the most hated and feared of all the enemies of the infant church. And yet when converted to the new faith he became as ardent in its advocacy as he had been zealous in its persecution. The same concentration of effort and focusing of energy which gave us Saul the persecutor gave us also Paul the apostle. Take away this power of concentration and he might have held the same convictions, but they would have been powerless for either good or ill. A large part of the tragedy and pathos of the world comes from the existence of so many thoughtless, purposeless lives. Talented men and women fail to attain the goal to which they aspire through too great diffusion of effort and dissipation of energy. In the field of mechanics we have the man who is jack-of-all-trades and consequently good at none. In business we have the industrial vagabond who drifts from one position to another and never makes good in any one. In college or university life we have the student who comes almost to the end of his college career before he gains any adequate idea of why he is there and then looks back with regret over a long array of wasted opportunities.

The only remedy for the perversion of many a good and wholesome institution is the concentration of all one's powers and faculties upon what is vital and essential to the institution itself. As we open the doors of our public schools we need to remind ourselves and those to whom we intrust our children that a system of instruction which stores the mind with facts, but fails to impart strength of will and strenuousness of purpose is barren. And as we open the doors of our Sunday schools and churches we need to remember that a religious institution which makes the supreme end of its existence anything but the cultivation of a religious spirit and the application of that spirit to life is sterile.

It is often said that the church keeps itself too remote from human life, that it does not concern itself sufficiently with the practical details of every-day life. We are told that it must enlarge its function and diversify its activity. It should champion this philanthropy and espouse that reform. Its ministers should become experts in scientific agriculture or in economics or sociology. The criticism may be just. It is possible that there has been too great a gulf between religion and life, between the church and other human institutions. It is well for the country minister to know something of scientific farming and for the city minister to know something of economics and sociology, but for either of them to regard this as the essence of his ministry and therefore as the supreme business of the church would be nothing short of a calamity. The church has no right to become so deeply interested in subordinate ends and aims that it neglects the father's business—the redemption of human life and of human society through the cultivation and diffusion of a genuinely religious spirit and character.

The real test of the worth of any church member is his ability to put first things first and keep them there. And foremost among these first things is the institution of public worship. Church attendance is the first duty to be entered upon and the last to be given up, for it is dynamic to them all. With this duty fulfilled we shall be all the better prepared to serve in other departments of the associated life of the church. This community needs the service of a liberal Christian church. This church needs the services of liberal Christian men and women. Those two needs must be met together or not at all. If we fail in our duty to the church, the church must fail in its duty to the community. As we meet together after the vacation period can we not say, "This one thing I do: by the grace of God and with the strength that he has given I will do all in my power to make this church a more efficient factor in this community and in the world."

Famous Men on Drink.

Some remarks by famous men about drink:

The mother of sins.—Southey.

Stupifies and besots.—Bismarck.

A scandal and a shame.—Gladstone.

Traps for workingmen.—Earl Cairns.

The devil in solution.—Sir Wilfrid Lawson.

A huge nuisance and misery.—London Times.

Liquid fire and distilled damnation.—Robert Hall.

Devilish and destructive.—Lord Randolph Churchill.

The nation is being throttled by the traffic.—Lord Rosebery.

A poison in politics as well as in society.—Sir W. Harcourt.

The mother of want and the nurse of crime.—Lord Brougham.

Cost of Drinking.

Sir Thomas Whittaker contributes to a popular magazine a most interesting article, which is a valuable contribution to temperance literature. Not only will such an article in a popular magazine do much good, but it shows which way popular opinion is flowing. Sir Thomas Whittaker sums up in these words: "The system must be judged as a whole. Evil is inseparable from the common sale and general use of intoxicants—not in every individual case, but in every community. There is no nation in the world today—and there never has been one—of which this is not true. It is in the very nature of alcohol that it should and must be so."

"How," demanded his majesty, "were you so remarkably preserved?"

The blackbirds, visibly disconcerted, offered no reply.

"Was it by the use of benzoate of soda?" thundered the king, thoroughly aroused.—Puck.

He Knew the Worm.

A country girl was home from college for the Christmas holidays and the old folks were having a reception in her honor. During the event she brought out some of her new gowns to show to the guests. Picking up a beautiful silk creation, she held it up before the admiring crowd.

"Isn't it perfectly gorgeous!" she exclaimed. "Just think, it came from a poor little insignificant worm!"

Her hard-working father looked a moment, then turned and said: "Yes, darn it, an' I'm that worm!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

HOSPITALITY OF PRIMITIVE PEOPLE

VILLAGE IN CENTRAL AFRICA

ONE of the most unique traveler's tales heard in New York for some time was related by an Englishman at luncheon downtown recently.

"You have done so much for me, Mr. Black, since I have had to be here on this steel business," he said, "you have put yourself out to be so hospitable that I shall always think of you as worthy to be a Society Islander."

"How's that? Why unless they have changed very much since I was in the middle of the Pacific some years ago the Society Islanders are the most hospitable people in the world. Of course, their way of doing things isn't just like New York or London. But it's right from the heart.

"I was in Tahiti, and my savage host wanted to do me honor. These people make a very wonderful and curious bark cloth. As we sat under trees close to this 'big man's' house a young girl came toward us. I knew something of the South Sea dialects, and I had no difficulty in understanding that here was a great present for me, the best he could give.

"The girl was an extraordinary sight. She was wrapped with yards and yards of this native cloth, wound so that it covered her completely except her head and arms and stuck out below her waist as if she were wearing an old-fashioned hoop skirt. My Tahitian friend grinned and pointed at her. She was a pretty girl and I was just wondering whether I should have to carry a dusky beauty back to Liverpool when she lay down flat on the ground. A girl who had accompanied her, dressed only in a sort of sash, began to unwind her, yes unwind. Over and over the pretty brown girl rolled, her companion pulling away the cloth, which soon was in a great heap by itself. Then the first girl jumped up, now wearing nothing more than the same kind of sash, and smiling ran away. My friend pointed at the great pile of stuff and said in Tahitian, 'Yours!' There was a host for you!"

"Very often, when it comes to the test, the 'heathen in his blindness' evens up pretty well with the white man in taking care of his guests," remarked another member of the party. "Here on Fifth avenue or Broadway what they do sounds queer, but on the spot it feels good. If I should tell you that a North American Indian tribe I dropped in upon late one afternoon gave me a Turkish bath to remove the dust and fatigue of a long day's journey through the desert, you'd say I was crazy, wouldn't you? Well, that is exactly what happened.

"The Indians were the Havasus, or the Havasupais, whichever way you want to call them. When I arrived at this village of theirs, hot and covered with grime, I was as complete a stranger as there ever was. The chief motioned me to a seat beside him, and I was well satisfied to being received kindly and allowed to rest. No Indian, as you know, ever talks much, and hence no warning of what was to come was given me. It could hardly have been much over half an hour before a youth beckoned me. I found out afterward that he was a son of the chief, intrusted with these special rites of hospitality toward strangers.

"He led me to a tent. Later I learned that was known as the 'first guest house.' It was practically air tight, its entrance covered by a double flap of blankets. In it women of the village had, ever since my arrival, been placing red hot stones, under the direction of the lad. By now it was filled with heat and steam.

"The boy told me it was part of his duty to care for my clothes while I went inside. I made a record in getting them off. There never was a bath as delightful as that."

Odd Custom of African Tribe.

"My story will seem tame after those of you two," put in the man who was giving the luncheon, "but there's a tribe in Africa, the Ovambos, whom Stanley or Livingstone or Lord Kitchener or Roosevelt—somebody, at any rate—called the 'Merry People,' that have your Tahitians and Indians beaten a mile when it comes to oddities of hospitality. Their way isn't nearly so pleasant as those we have been hearing about. What do they do? Hold water in their mouths as soon as you are seated at a meal and squirt it in your face. You are expected to be greatly delighted at this, and then your host comes around to you and rubs your face and head with fresh butter. If a white guest protests he is looked upon with suspicion.

"There is another African tribe, you may like to know, the Nuehrs of central Africa, that have a custom very like this. They greet those they are about to entertain by spitting, yes, spitting, on your hands and face. It is the most gross and bitter insult if you do not spit back. One traveler, it is said, who didn't know of this custom, became terribly angry at being spat upon. His first thought was to knock the negro down. Then, in his rage, a better way suggested itself. He spat in the man's face good and hard. To his astonishment the ruler of the tribe groveled before him. 'Now I know,' he said, 'that you are a great chief!'"

The whimsicalities of hospitality are unending, though civilization is clearing them away piecemeal. It may not be true, as some have predicted, that a New Zealander will ever stand and look on the ruins of London bridge, because by the time that famous structure does fall there will not be any New Zealanders left, but as witness the Japanese transition from picturesque garments to frock coats and top hats, expanding commerce levels and gradually does away with oddities. Returned missionaries, explorers and those who travel in out of the way regions of the globe keep constantly bringing back tales of the strange ways much of mankind still have with their guests.

With the Apingi tribe of Africa just below the equator the essence of hospitality is to include among the presents of food handed over to the visitor a fat slave. "He is young and tender," the donor says, thinking that no one can fail to approve of this gift so much better than the fowls, etc., that have been thrown in. "Kill him for your evening meal." On the other hand, the Navajo Indian considers the finest tribute he can pay is to have his wife shampoo the head of the passing traveler with amole, the root of a plant grown in Mexico and some parts of the southwest, that is a very good substitute for soap. The Papuans of New Guinea in the Pacific have an even more novel way of showing great friendship for the stranger. Water signifies peace and satisfaction with them, so when a boat approaches bearing people of whom they approve at first sight they sprinkle water on their heads and dance wildly and gayly in the shallow water around the boat.

The average traveler would much rather not become friends with a Terra del Fuegian for the people of that nationality know of no better way of expressing liking and showing honor than by hugging the stranger. As these savages of the tip end of South America are very nearly the dirtiest on record, and as their bodies are covered with grease, clay and vermin, such hugging is most offensive. It is not to be avoided, though, if any native of high rank takes a strong liking to his visitor.

There is a Siberian tribe that makes a practice of eating a guest whom it much admires or whose virtues it greatly desires to emulate, in order, so the story goes, that his virtues might abide—"in their midst." The tourist, however, is, generally speaking, safe in this Russianized country. If he visits the Tchuktchi close to Bering's straits and gets into one of their big tents he will find a family almost completely nude. The women will not mind at all. If he passes muster they will honor him and make him feel at home by putting strings of glass beads in their hair that has been copiously covered with grease. Then, of course, having been shown this courtesy, he must stay in the smoky, stifling atmosphere and sup on hot boiled reindeer.

The visitor to an Abyssinian village must first sit under a tree and let himself be observed. Then some important individual will step forward and give him the freedom of his home. The Ashangos meet the traveler with dishes of red paint, and the man who does not paint himself at once is definitely "queered" in that village. The Zunis of New Mexico and Arizona offer their guests a "cocktail." It is made of mesquite beans pounded in an earthen jar, parched corn and flour, and is reported to be a very superior appetizer.

The black Batokas of the Zambezi roll on their back and deal themselves resounding slaps on their naked skins. If the rolling is prolonged and the slaps and the attendant yelling very loud the guest is high in favor. Some New Zealanders squat on the ground and weep. The Nubians wait anxiously for the coming visitor and are eager to entertain. A jar of fresh water is always ready in each house of the tribe for the stranger and no one else. The Kaffirs assure each white visitor that he ranks as a chief and make good in the way they entertain him.

An extraordinary custom prevails among one South Sea nation. It allows, as a great favor, its superannuated men and women to invite as their guests for a final feast those who will make a meal of them when they are killed. This is a novelty in the way of banquets. The hospitable Gani of Africa have strangers met by the village chief. He heads a procession of his councilors and women. One of the women carries a white chicken, another a plant with flowers growing on it, yet others vessels of intoxicating liquids.

STATE BANKS ARE STRONGER

Showing Is Better Than Ever Before In History of these Institutions.

SUPT. BAXTER GETS REPORTS

Total Deposits are Less But This is Due to Recent Withdrawals of Public Funds. People Have Put In More Money.

Columbus.—The state banks of Ohio are in better condition and stronger financially now than they have ever been before in their history. This is shown by the report of State Bank Superintendent F. E. Baxter, based on reports made to him by these banks in response to his call for a statement of their financial condition.

The combined resources of these banks at that time reached the enormous aggregate of $314,848,623.95, an increase of approximately $38,000,000 over the showing made by these banks when the last call was made by Superintendent Baxter the latter part of 1910.

Although the total deposits show a decrease, there is an actual increase of $2,650,891.75, in the deposits made by the people since the preceding report, covering the condition of business on September 25, 1911, the decrease in the grand total being due to a reduction of $5,716,087.36 in the deposit of public funds.

The condition of these banks, as revealed by the report, is exceedingly gratifying because as a rule the last call for the year shows a falling off in resources, more money being drawn from banks at this time of the year than at other periods.

Wants License Money.

Secretary "Pat" Sandles has asked Auditor of State Fullington to transfer from the general revenue fund to the agricultural fund a total of $46,000 collected by the state since 1853 from show licenses. The law says that revenues from show licenses shall be turned into the agricultural fund, but because the legislature in making appropriations for agricultural purposes has always taken into consideration the sum so available from that source, the auditor of state's department has always put this money to the credit of the general revenue fund. This was done on the theory that if the money was put into the agricultural fund, the legislature, in appropriating from the general revenue fund for the agricultural board, would reduce the allowance to the extent that there was money available from the show licenses in the agricultural fund.

Game Law Violations.

Unless they are witnesses, game wardens, sheriffs, deputies, policemen or other officers may not prosecute violations of the state game and fish laws without the authority of a county prosecutor or the attorney general. This was the substance of an opinion by Attorney-General Hogan to Prosecutor T. J. Kremer of Woodsfield. In the event the officer prosecutes an alleged violation which he did not witness, according to the attorney general, and the defendant is acquitted or dismissed by the court, the county is not responsible for the costs of the case unless the prosecutor or attorney-general approved the prosecution.

Taxpayers.

Taxpayers who failed to make their complaints last year concerning their valuations within the time fixed by the statute are deemed to have slept on their rights by the state tax commission, and no regard will be paid to their protests. This was formally announced by that body. Those taxpayers who did file complaints with the state tax commission will be informed that their grievances will be referred to the board of review in their counties for action.

Support Extension.

Officials of the Columbus, Urbana & Western Railway Co. are uncertain of their future plans now that the Ohio public service commission has refused permission for the issuance of $5,500,000 in bonds to extend the line from Kenton to Wapakoneta, a total of 125 miles. The chamber of commerce has taken the matter up and has appointed a committee to reopen the case, if possible, with the commission.

Thief's Evidence No Good.

Holding that the evidence of a convicted thief is worthless and incompetent, Judge Osborne, in police court, dismissed Bessie Goldschmith, accused of taking a raincoat from A. S. Webster, who admitted having stolen it.

Need More Help.

Remonstrances against the overtime work required of the clerks in the Columbus postoffice, and an appeal to the postoffice department at Washington for additional clerks for the local office, will be embodied in resolutions which will be passed by the Columbus Postoffice Clerks' association, at its annual meeting next Sunday. Postmaster Harry Krumm has made a request on the department at Washington for permission to employ additional help, but as yet no order has been received.

Immunity to Voter.

Not many voters know that on election day when they are on their way to the polls to cast their ballot, they are practically immune from arrest. However, this immunity is guaranteed to the voter by the Ohio constitution, which the convention which assembled Tuesday will seek to revise. Section 2, of article V, says: "Electors, during their attendance at elections, and in going to and returning therefrom, shall be privileged from arrest in all cases except treason, felony and breach of the peace."

Boy Prisoner Is Sent Home.

Rolla Ferris, 18 years of age, a blue-eyed, baby-faced prisoner at the Ohio State Penitentiary, serving a term from Wood county for burglary, is to be sent home to his mother to die. He is hopelessly ill of tuberculosis.

Governor Harmon pardoned the youth upon the recommendation of Warden Jones and three penitentiary physicians. Dr. J. W. Clark, chief surgeon, wrote:

"The boy's age appears on the prison register as 18. He presents the the appearance of a child of 16. I recommend that he be sent home to his mother to die."

Anton Elias, serving a life sentence for the murder of a Syrian, at Chillicothe, was pardoned because he is hopelessly insane and it expected to die soon.

Harry Perk, sentenced to three years in the prison for forgery, from Medina, O., was pardoned on the plea of his sister, Miss Sarah Perk, of Cleveland, who told Gov. Harmon that her father was dying and her mother was seriously ill.

Nine More Depositories.

The state board of deposits created some additional state depositories. The Farmers & Merchants State Banking company of Wilshire, was awarded a deposit of $10,000, on which it will pay 3.35 per cent interest. These banks will get deposits in the amounts given, for 3.30: Citizens Bank company, Beverly, $10,000; Third National Bank, Dayton, $100,000; Farmers & Traders National Bank, Hillsboro, $20,000; Hillsboro Bank and Savings Company, $10,000; First National Bank, Lewisville, $5,000; Kent National Bank, Kent, $20,000; Rocky River Savings Banking Company, Rocky River, $25,000; Commercial National Bank, Sandusky, $25,000.

Asks Approval.

Application for an issue of $60,122 of stock to be sold at par was made by the American Gas Co., of Carrollton, to the public service commission. The authorized capital of the company is $150,000, and nearly half of the capital stock, $73,325, was sold before the public utilities law took effect. Through mistake, it is claimed, $16,553 more was sold since July 1. The company asks approval of this sale.

Bell Phone Changes.

Rollo R. Stevens is announced as appointed to the position of commercial superintendent of the Ohio division of the Bell telephone lines. He has served in the past as agent for connecting companies in the toll department. His assistant will be J. T. Daniels, who was local manager at Columbus, this latter position being filled by the transfer from Dayton of J. T. Dieukemiller.

Win Five Firsts.

The finest White Orpington chickens in America are grown on a farm south of Columbus. So the judges of the National Poultry Show said at Baltimore, when they awarded the five first prizes in that class to E. S. and W. R. Aldrich, sons of Judge O. W. Aldrich, for chickens raised on their poultry farm near Columbus. Fourteen other birds won first and second prizes in liberal numbers.

To Address Conference.

Dr. Washington Gladden, Mayor George J. Karb of Columbus, and Mayor Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, have promised to speak at the conference of about 84 municipalities, to be held at the Chamber of Commerce and the City Hall January 24 and 25, to discuss constitutional provisions as they affect municipalities. The Virginia will be the hotel headquarters.

Delegates Appointed.

Mayor Karb on Saturday appointed twelve delegates to attend the meeting to be held January 24 and 25, in Columbus, of representatives of the eighty-four cities of Ohio, to decide whether to organize to keep an eye on the doings of the constitutional convention in its actions relating to cities—meaning municipalities with a population of 5,000 or more.

Noted Speakers.

Twelve speakers, representing the leadership of the Sunday School work in the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, will address the second annual conference of Ohio Methodist Sunday School Superintendents to be held in Wesley Chapel, February 6 and 7.

Can Use All or Part.

Attorney General Hogan has advised the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical society that it may use what it deems necessary of the $100,000 appropriated for its new building going up on the Ohio State university grounds for equipment and apparatus.

Thomas Broke.

E. R. Thomas, of New York, who formerly lived in Columbus, and a curious comet in the world of finance, has confessed judgment in the New York supreme court for debts amounting to $1,234,487.

To Erect a Clubhouse.

Members of the Woman's College club have decided to erect a $50,000 clubhouse at O. S. U. At a meeting of the building committee held at Oxley hall, arrangements were made for the formation of a stock company to sell stock in the clubhouse at $10 a share. Mrs. John E. Sater is chairman of the committee. Rev. Dr. Carl S. Patton will address the next meeting of the club. The Girls' Glee club will sing, and members of the club who attended Wellesley and Smith colleges will act as hostesses.

Can Mandamus Mayor.

Action mandamusing the mayor of Barberton to place his signature on an ordinance fixing salaries for officials under the city plan which recently became operative in that place was advised in an opinion by Attorney General Hogan to City Solicitor O. D. Everard, of Barberton. According to the solicitor Barberton became a city thirty days after the proclamation of the census and the village council, which is presided over by the mayor, passed an order to fix salaries to the city government.

FESTIVAL IS ARRANGED FOR

Knights of Pythias Will Have Great Time In Columbus At Annual Fete.

SOME BIG MEN TO BE PRESENT

Parade To Be Feature If Weather Permits—Several Battalions Will Do Escort Duty.

Columbus.—The Pythian association, at its annual meeting at Castle Hall, 122½ South High street, elected Charles H. Dozer, president, J. M. Izor, vice president, and E. E. Hite, treasurer. These with Mr. Izor, chairman of the general committee, will have charge of the local arrangements for the Ohio Pythian Festival, which is to be held in Columbus January 24.

Arrangements for the Pythian Festival were discussed to some extent at a banquet served in the hall after the annual meeting, and Mr. Izor was selected as chairman of the general committee. A committee on reception was also appointed as follows: Colonel George B. Donovan, chairman, Judge E. B. Kinkead, Major A. L. Frey, of the military branch, John B. Cochran, Charles H. Doty, Jacob Woehrle, the grand chancellor of the order in Ohio, and George H. Behrens.

The festival will be attended by prominent men, members of the order from all over the country, and the guests of honor will be the supreme officers of the order. The weather permitting, there will be an attractive military feature and a big parade. In any event, there will be several full battalions from the state in uniform, to do escort duty. The principal addresses are to be delivered in the evening at Memorial hall, by the supreme chancellor, Justice George M. Hanson, of Calais, Maine, and H. P. Brown, past supreme chancellor, of Cleburne, Tex.

IMPORTANT CONVENTION

Springfield.—A convention of considerable importance to the building industry of Ohio was held in Springfield on Tuesday and Wednesday when the Ohio State Association of Builders exchanges assembled in annual session. Representatives from Columbus, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dayton, Youngstown, Toledo, Alliance and other cities were present and a number of local builders and material dealers attended the meetings.

Following the reception and business session in the Mitchell building on Tuesday afternoon, the annual banquet of the Springfield exchange was held at which the visitors were Chas. J. Proizman, of Columbus, and other speakers talked on subjects pertaining to the building business. Prominent among the matters discussed was the attitude of the building interests of the state as to the new workmen's compensation law, which technically went into effect Jan. 1, but the application of which is being temporarily delayed on account of a suit pending in the supreme court to test the validity of the act.

FIRE AT WESTERVILLE.

Westerville.—Fire destroyed the plant of the Cellar Lumber Co., on East College avenue. The loss was about $5,000, partially covered by insurance. This catastrophe can be blamed upon the weather man.

The fire started in the office of the plant, caused by an overheated stove in an attempt to offset the freezing atmosphere.

The fire alarm was promptly turned in, but the department could not do much on account of frozen water mains and hose. When these were finally thawed out, it was too late to save much.

NEW DEPOT.

Ironton.—A rumor to the effect that the N. & W. Railroad Company may build a fine new freight depot in the lower part of the city is now going the rounds. It is said that the company intends erecting a modern depot comprising ground owned by the company reaching from Lawrence to Pine street on Front street, and that the work will begin within the spring or summer months.

LICKING WET.

Newark.—Licking county joined the wet column in the special election held under the Rose county local option law. The majority for the return of the saloon was close to 1,360. In the city of Newark the wets had a majority of 2,573 against a majority of 1,167 three years ago, and the vote of Saturday fell 950 short of the vote cast at the first election.

I. O. O. F. AT HAMILTON

Arrangements were made for a big meeting of Odd Fellows in this city on January 24th at which time Grand Master Bachtel and Grand Secretary J. H. Lyman will be present and arrangements made for the grand lodge which meets here next June. After this meeting Chairman Bartlow will appointment a committee to meet with the Chamber of Commerce to plan for the entertainment of the delegates, about 3,000 being expected.

FAIR ORGANIZES.

Waverly.—The Waverly Fair Association is to be recognized under the rules of the state board of agriculture and will seek to secure the state allowance which hitherto has been going to the Piketown Fair Company.

Dayton.—The circuit court, in a lengthy decision, made perpetual the injunction restraining the city from awarding a ten year contract for lighting the streets to the Dayton Gas company.

WOULD ABOLISH CIRCUIT COURT.

Public Service Commission Complains of Delays Caused by Appeal.

Columbus.—Complaining of the delay, occasioned by the additional appeal to a circuit court before a case can be finally adjudged by the supreme court, the Ohio public service commission, in its annual report submitted to Gov. Harmon, brands this judicial institution as the greatest existing enemy to the work of forcing public utilities to give efficient service, and in so doing recommends the abolition of the circuit court.

State officials and members of the convention regard the recommendation as most significant in the light of the fact that Commissioner Oliver H. Hughes and Secretary C. A. Radcliff are attorneys.

The formal wording of the recommendation suggests that the judicial procedure be changed so that cases under the public utilities act may be appealed directly from the trial court to the supreme court, thus eliminating several months and perhaps years of delay.

The report shows that 11,000 persons were killed or injured in railway accidents during the year, and makes a complete digest of the cases formally disposed of by the commission. It is shown that 35,000 cars and safety appliances on railroads were inspected. The report covers the work up to the time when it ceased to be the railroad commission and entered upon its duties as a public service commission under the new public utilities act.

TUBERCULOSIS

In Either Person Would Justify the Breaking of a Marriage Promise, Rules Ohio Judge.

Columbus.—Judge Edgar B. Kinkead, of the common pleas court, added a new chapter to the interpretation of marriage laws by instructing a jury that tuberculosis in either party would be a valid bar to marriage and that either party would be justified in breaking a promise of marriage if he suspected the other of having the disease.

The ruling was in a breach of promise suit for $5,000 brought by Miss Edith Temple against James H. Davis, a traveling salesman. Davis admitted his betrothal, but Miss Temple's continued ill health made him confident that she was a victim of tuberculosis.

He had no proof to submit to the court, and neither side adduced evidence upon the point, but Judge Kinkead instructed the jury that the fact should be considered as a mitigating circumstance in arriving at the sum of the verdict. The jury awarded Miss Temple $500.

B & O TO IMPROVE SHOP.

It Is Rumored That Plant At Chillicothe Will Be Thoroughly Modernized.

Chillicothe.—The B. & O. is planning great things for this city. Improvements will be made to the company's shops here.

The improvements contemplated, plans of which are now being prepared, consist of the turning of the old paint shop into an up-to-date boiler department fitted with pressers, shearers, rollers, and other modern tools for work on modern locomotives. The shop formerly used as a passenger car shop will be turned into an erecting shop for the repairing of locomotives. This shop will be re-arranged and new machinery installed in it.

There is a strong probability that when these improvements, should they be approved, are put into effect, they will be accompanied by the installation of a new and up-to-date heating system.

WIRELESS STATION.

Chester Dilts and Ross McGregor Complete Apparatus For Flashing Messages.

Springfield.—As a result of the industrious efforts of two local young men, Springfield witnessed her first "flash" in wireless telegraphy. The first test proved decidedly successful and the two young men, Chester Dilts and Ross McGregor, are being congratulated by their friends over their success. The first dash was received at the rooms of the Central Union club in the Arcade building, where one of the wireless stations is located. The other is located at the home of Mr. McGregor in East Springfield. The boys have been working upon the apparatus for some time and gave it the first test in the presence of a number of friends Thursday evening.

WINS PLACE, THEN QUITS.

Bellefontaine.—At the first meeting of Zanesfield council, Mayor [illegible] Gulland announced his resignation. Gulland and J. A. Hockett were tied at the November election. Gulland drew the lucky straw. He took the oath of office and his first official act was to resign. He gives no reason.

TAKES HER LIFE.

Sidney.—Mrs. Frances [illegible], 78 years of age and a lifelong resident of Sidney and highly respected, went to her room at the home of her son-in-law, Charles Bush, and is said to have tied a cord around her neck, fastened it to a high post bedstead and hanged herself.

She had been ill for some time and it is said was temporarily insane. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Bush and Clara, and one son, Edward, in business in Philadelphia.

DESERVES A MEDAL.

Springfield.—Constable Louis Quentin deserves a Carnegie hero medal. With rare presence of mind he prevented what might have proven a most serious railway accident at Center and Washington streets. As it was, he succeeded in stopping the 8:30 east bound passenger train on the Big Four when the engine pilot was within fifteen feet of crashing into an S. T. & P. traction car. The traction car, due to leave here at 9 o'clock, split the switch at Center and Washington streets.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys.

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good-bye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K-2058 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Misleading Sneezes.

"How did you come on with your study of the Russian language?"

"Not well. While I was trying to pronounce a few words our family physician came along and forced me to take all kinds of medicine to break up a cold."

You will sneeze; perhaps feel chilly. You think you are catching cold. Don't wait until you know it. Take a dose of Hamlins Wizard Oil and you just can't catch cold.

Some women never take anything seriously, not even their husbands.

The only way the Democrats can come back in 1912 is to throw the Wall Street Jonahs overboard.

A public question is like a piece of paper. Much may be written on both sides, but a journalist must only write on one side.—Israel Zangwill.

Mr. Bryan was progressive when the present Republican progressives were working overtime to put a high tariff across—why look any further for our next President?

The Chicago meat packers are at last facing a jury on charges of criminally violating the anti-trust laws. They put it off, however, nine years through technical maneuvering by their lawyers. If any proof is needed that technicalities may be used to subvert the purposes of the law, it can be found in this one case alone.

The Progressive Democrats who met at Columbus last week spoke only the truth when they said: "The suggestion of the nomination of any other man than a known, tried and true progressive Democrat brings immediately to our memory the disastrous defeat of 1904, when in Ohio Parker lost the state by more than 253,000, out of the 24 congressmen we lost 20, out of 450 county officers we lost 400 and out of 88 counties we lost 71."

Illinois is abolishing the poorhouse. That is the avowed aim of a new law which has recently taken effect. It is not mandatory, but any county is free to adopt the new plan. Six counties promptly put it into operation and others are expected to follow. If the results are as satisfactory as is hoped, it is only a matter of time when in Illinois that refuse heap called the poorhouse will be a thing of the past with its squalor, its depressing accumulation of misery, its petty tyranny, its periodical scandals and housecleanings. The new way, whatever its difficulties in administration, offers immense advantages. Poor families are to be kept together. Poor mothers will be pensioned and will take care of their own children instead of having to send them to an institution. Marvelous wit, to hire the mother instead of a stranger to nurse the child! It transforms her at a stroke from a pauper to a paid employe of society. Each case is carefully investigated to see that the mother is needy and of good character, with qualifications for bringing up her children. That ascertained, she is granted the pension, and no further questions are asked. Mother and children simply live the ordinary normal life of the community. The orphanages, of course, are retained, yet more and more stress is being put upon the importance of putting as many orphans as possible into good families. The modern revolt from institutionalism is striking, and the Illinois experiment will be followed with great interest by other states.

AN ACCOMPLISHED REFORM.

Fourteen million dollars in postal savings banks in the United States after but one year of operation! This is one of the novelties of the financial reports of the New Year. This record marks the practical success of an experiment about which there was never the slightest doubt. They are now 5,185 post offices with postal banks. When the system is fully developed and popularized annual deposits of $200,000,000 are anticipated. Now for a limited parcels post!

A STINGER IN THIS ONE.

The Reciprocity act passed last summer provided for the removal in part, of the duty on paper imported from Canada. This provision did not require Canada's endorsement. Since then more than 80 independent paper companies have started business in opposition to the paper trust.

Notwithstanding, the Reciprocity act, with the single exception of the paper provision, became dead and defunct when Canada declined to accept it. Senator Heyburn has introduced a bill for the repeal of the whole act. Were this bill to pass unamended it not only would uselessly repeal an inoperative act, but would put the duty back on paper. There is a stinger in the Heyburn repealer that will bear watching.

"WORLD WIDE" CAUSES.

Already during this session of Congress many of the orators among the Standpat Republicans have tried to explain the prevailing high prices with the argument that the high price wave is world-wide. This is another of the half-truths which the Republicans seek to have the people accept as a whole excuse.

Mr. R. H. Hooker, of London, read a paper before the Royal Statistical society of England recently, in which he showed that the increased cost of "all commodities" was twice as much in high-protection Germany and high-protection United States, as in free trade England.

"Comparing food prices for this year with 1899," said Mr. Hooker, "we find there has been an increase of 1 per cent in France, 8 per cent in England; 25 per cent in Germany, 28 per cent in Canada, and 34 per cent in the United States."

PROTECTION AND IMMIGRATION.

High protectionists always address their appeals to farmers and workingmen. "High tariff," they argue, "means high prices for farm products and high wages for the workers."

Last year 145,000 American farmers, all of whom were supposed to be enjoying the fruits of a high tariff, left this country and went to Canada. In the same period approximately a million laborers came to this country from abroad, 81 per cent of them coming from the south of Europe, where wages are low, education almost nothing, and standards of living primitive and filthy. These laborers are taken in by the trusts at wages but little better than they got at home and under conditions of employment unthinkable to American working men.

Thus the high tariff drives out good American farmers and brings in — what?

HE IS MAD AT BRYAN.

An amusing letter appears in Bryan's Commoner from an indignant Ohio sheep raiser, who professes to be a free trader but objects to removal of the tariff from wool. What makes his indignation ridiculous is not only his apparent desire for free trade in everything but his own product, but his tale of woe as well. He says he has 200 sheep to feed, which for a year cost him $600, while the sale of their wool brought him just $320.

So the Payne-Aldrich tariff has helped him lose at least $280 in one year, to say nothing of his labor and trouble. Yet he is fool enough to be angry with Mr. Bryan for advocating free wool. It would be interesting to learn how much more unprofitable the wool raising business would have to become to compel most farmers to get out of it, regardless of whether the tariff be high or low.

It is bad enough to tax consumers of woolens to enable sheep raisers to make more money than an open market will permit, but when the tax not only burdens the consumer, but fails to help the sheep raiser, it can not be a high grade of intelligence that insists on retaining it.

OHIO AND BRYAN.

The meeting of the Progressive Democrats at Columbus and the action taken in resolutions which point strongly Bryanward indicate that there is to be a battle royal in the Buckeye state for the control of the delegation to the Democratic national convention. The Ohio progressives on the Democratic side are no more inclined toward Gov. Harmon than the Ohio progressives on the Republican side are toward President Taft.

That the Bryan sentiment is still very strong throughout the country is hardly to be doubted. There is an intense feeling among democratic Democrats who have followed him proudly through three glorious if unsuccessful campaigns that now the promised land is in sight a new leader should be called to the front to reap all the rewards and all the honors.

Beyond any rational dispute William Jennings Bryan was the original progressive. Long before any of the others who now enjoy prominence in the radical or progressive fold had even been thought of in connection with ideas now so widely accepted, the Boy Orator of the Platte was proclaiming them with matchless courage and with a power perhaps unequaled in the annals of American politics. He drew about him a body of men in his first campaign who have ever since followed his standard loyally and with a just appreciation of his magnificent leadership; and many of these contemplate with inexpressible regret and even with a sense of rebellion the apparent necessity or at least the supposed expediency of retiring him to the ranks in favor of one of the newer apostles of advanced Democracy.

The Progressive Democrats of Ohio evidently cherish this feeling and they do not hesitate to give it voice. That the same feeling will find voice in other states before the battle for delegates is over we may rest assured. Indiana is ostensibly for Marshall; but down deep in the heart of Hoosier Democracy is the same sentiment which John J. Lentz proclaimed with such earnestness at Columbus.

Still we do not expect to see Bryan again a candidate for the nomination. He has definitely taken himself out of the field and there is no evidence anywhere that he is casting anchors to windward. Apparently Nebraska is to send a Wilson delegation to the national convention and it is an open secret that the governor of New Jersey stands high in the estimation of Mr. Bryan.

All in the Game.

Cy Clark used to keep a hotel up Fox Lake way and maintained a fleet of rowboats for his guests. It was his fancy to tack a playing card, with the individual's name on it, on the bow of the boat, indicating temporary possession. A boarder who had made himself more than solid by his liberality made a complaint that all the boats were out but one, and he wanted to go fishing. At the time the landlord was trying to straighten out into packs a couple of hundred playing cards that had been bundled carelessly. "Whose boat is it?" asked Cy. "I don't know," said the boarder. "It has a nine of diamonds tacked on it." "Take it," returned Cy. "Here's the ten."—Chicago Evening Post.

Forcing Plant Growth.

A German florist recently discovered an effective method to force plant growth. The high temperature required for this purpose was produced by hot water bottles. The pots containing the plants were inverted over the receptacle in which the water is heated. The leaves and branches are immersed while the earth and roots remain dry. The inverted pots rest upon slats placed across the hot water bath. A syringa was subjected to this forcing process and bloomed beautifully five weeks later. Another plant, receiving the same treatment except for the bath, had not even started to flower. Matting or rugs are placed over the pots to retain the heat during the bathing process.

Duck Shooting in Peru.

Duck shooting at an altitude of 14,000 feet, on the Junin pampa, along the shore of the lake of that name, is a sport that can be followed in Peru. Very peculiar effects are noted in this rarefied region, probably the highest altitude for this sport in the world. The guns kick viciously and the shot does not scatter promptly, making long shots successful. This phenomenon is due to the lack of density of the air, which is only about eight pounds to the square inch, against 15 at sea level. Another interesting fact is that the ducks have no fishy taste, as fish do not exist in this altitude.

If your children are subject to attacks of croup, watch for the first symptom, hoarseness. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the child becomes hoarse and the attack may be warded off. For sale by all dealers.

Facing a Famine.

An untimely biting frost effectually completed the mischief done earlier by the insect enemies of Mr. Barden's potatoes. The tops of the plants, which had served as pasturage for the pests, were entirely destroyed, and with them Mr. Barden's hopes of a crop. He was not selfish, however, and could think of others in the hour of adversity. Going to town in the afternoon, he was accosted at the post-office by James Hayes, an intimate acquaintance. "Hello, Dilest! How's everything up to the corners?" "Trouble enough, Jim. Trouble enough!" was the gloomy response. "Ten million 'tater bugs, and nothing for 'em to eat!"—Youth's Companion.

Violin Worth a Fortune.

Probably the most valuable violin in the world is possessed by Herr Fritz Kreisler, whose recent concert at the Queen's hall aroused so much interest and enthusiasm. It belonged to Mr. George Hart, the well-known connoisseur, and Mr. Kreisler paid £2,000 for it. It is not only a genuine Guarnerius, but in other ways a remarkable instrument. On the tail-piece the maker's initials and the date (1737) appear in diamonds, the pegs and buttons are set with diamonds and rubies, while the case alone is worth £200, being of solid silver overlaid with tortoise-shell and decorated with arabesque and other ornamentations.—Tid Bits.

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefited by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

WENT IN SOME HASTE

IN HIS PAJAMAS DOCTOR RESPONDED TO CALL.

"Joke" That the Physician Must Have Greatly Enjoyed—And All Wife Wanted Was for Him to Take Her Home.

How a prominent Indianapolis physician—recently a visitor in Chicago—answered a hurry call from a "patient" clad only in a heavy overcoat thrown over his pajamas and his house slippers, and instead of finding the supposed patient was confronted by a hilarious party of his own friends, was told here at the Auditorium hotel by the physician himself.

"Yes," the Indianapolis doctor began, "I believe I hold the record for being the brunt of the practical joker's tricks. Listen to this tale and see if you don't agree with me.

"To begin with, my wife is a bridge whist enthusiast, while I myself would rather go to jail than to a card party. On the night in question we had both been invited to a friend's home to play bridge. She—my wife—went and I staid at home. Clad in my pajamas, with a sweet old meerschaum in my mouth and my feet poked close to a blazing log in my bedroom fireplace, I settled down to read a new detective story which I had bought a day or two before.

"Along about ten o'clock I grew sleepy. I closed my eyes almost unconsciously and my chin fell on my breast. How long I would have dozed that way before the fire I don't know, had I not been awakened by a frantic ringing of the telephone bell in my office room.

"I blinked once or twice and hurried to answer the call.

"'Hello!' came the voice through the receiver, 'Is this Dr. P——?'

"'Yes,' said I.

"'O, doctor, won't you hurry up to my house? This is Mrs. Thomas. My baby is terribly sick and I don't know what is the matter, or what to do. Please hurry, doctor.'

"It was rather cold out of doors, but I was in a hurry. Mrs. Thomas was a friend of mine and of my wife. It was at her home that the bridge whist party was being held, but I did not remember that in my haste; I threw my overcoat over my pajamas and went to the shed where I kept my runabout. There was a heater in it and as I had not more than half a mile to ride I thought I would be able to withstand the cold. So I started, my coat collar turned up, no hat and the automobile running on high speed.

"As I came near the house I noticed many lights and I thought that truly the baby's illness must be serious. When I pulled up at the block at the curbing I jumped out and ran into the house, never pausing in my hurry to ring the bell. It was perhaps a case of life and death, I thought, and in such cases we physicians never pause for formality.

"'Just step in here a moment, doctor,' spoke Mrs. Thomas, who met me in the hall.

"I thought it rather strange that I was not taken right to the patient, but I went into the room she indicated and sat down. I was indeed a unique sight for the eye. My hair was sticking up all over my head and at my throat my pink pajamas showed an inch or two and below my overcoat they showed a foot. I had on brown leather house slippers, and between them and my pajama bottoms showed a couple of inches of bare skin. I was a sorry looking sight, I admit.

"Suddenly four electric lights in a chandelier in the middle of the room shone brilliantly, and I heard what sounded like laughter coming from a hundred maniacal persons. In reality, there were only eight of them, but they were maniacal, all right. The first person I saw was my wife, and she was laughing so that tears coursed down her cheeks. The others in the party were literally doubled up. My wife, when she could control her laughter, said:

"'John, I wanted to get you over here in the machine so that you could take me home. But I didn't think you would come without your clothes.'"—Chicago News.

Puzzles for Patients.

Although the patient had waited half an hour for her interview with the doctor the time had not dragged. "I worked on one of these puzzles," she said. "By the way, doctor, you are not a children's specialist; then why do you keep so many puzzles in you reception room?"

"You answered your own question before you asked it," the doctor said. "I keep them to amuse the grown-ups. Most people who feel bad enough to visit a doctor can entertain themselves better with a puzzle than a book or magazine. Every puzzle that has achieved popularity in the last 25 years has a place in that cabinet. Dentists also rely on puzzles to keep waiting patients in good humor, for even toothache will share attention with a good puzzle."

No Second Violins for Her.

A social leader at Narragansett was arranging for a musicale, and called a local "professor" into consultation.

"I think," he said, "we'd better have two first violins, two seconds—"

"No," said the prospective hostess, "I wish to spare no expense. Let us have only first violins, if you please."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Blistering Once Universal.

Blistering formerly was an almost universal treatment for internal congestion to draw the diseased fluid to the surface. It acted as a counter-irritant. It was also used for sciatica. Blistering is still used to a considerable extent, but a milder application is more frequently employed.

Bronze Replacing Brass.

Bronze is taking the place of brass in the fixings of railroad coaches.

PARISIAN POLICE "HANG ON"

One American Autoist Found Them Relentless, and Was at Last Glad to Settle.

Anyone who has ever attempted to fight the police of Paris has been woefully defeated, and an American automobilist, who has just made a heroic attempt to resist this powerful institution has met his Waterloo like all his predecessors. Returning from a drive to the suburbs one day last summer he made a mistake of three liters in the declaration of the amount of petrol in his tank. He refused to pay the penalty and was taken, handcuffed, to the police depot. Proceedings were instituted against him and the refractory automobilist was sentenced to a fine of $20 and costs. As an alternative he might choose one month's imprisonment. "I shall go to prison," he said.

Some time passed and he was not molested. He imagined that the police had forgotten all about him. But one morning as he was coming out of his house two policemen laid their hands on him and took him a second time to the depot, where he was put in a cell with common criminals. He spent the whole day here and in the evening he was taken with the rest of the prisoners—one of them a notorious apache—to the Sante jail.

The following morning he was offered the usual pittance in an old prison can, the very sight of which disgusted him, and he refused it. He asked for some food to be sent to him from the outside and offered to pay, but this favor was refused because, he was told, he was only "transitory" at the prison and no account could be opened for him. He did without the food the whole day and the following morning the same food was offered him and again declined.

In the afternoon he was put in the dark police omnibus and after hours of jolting over the rough suburban paved streets he was landed at the general prison at Fresnes. Here, on the third day the common fare was again offered to him. He was unable to take it and, at last, after a heroic fast of 72 hours he preferred to pay the fine and costs and was released. The police had its way and it would be a good lesson to any foreigner who might be tempted in a similar case to protest. Better pay any small penalty at once than to arouse the wrath of the terrible institution that holds Paris in its grip.

The Lonely Pope.

Il Secolo of Milan, one of the most considerable papers in Italy, lends its columns approvingly to reproducing from La Perseveranza an article which describes Pope Pius X as dying in the Vatican from homesickness. In the blistering heat of midsummer Rome he pines for the cooling canals which make his beloved Venice one of the most pleasant of summer cities.

According to this authority, the physicians who have the care of the Pope understand perfectly that if he could leave the Vatican and return to Venice he could easily survive the ills he labors under and even greater ones.

As for the political consequences of such a removal, the Perseveranza's Rome correspondent says that if the Pope were to be removed to recover among the old friends where he was so long priest and Bishop, the Government would not regard it as an acceptance of the law of guarantee or as an event of political consequence. "He who would emerge from the Vatican would not be Pope Pius X, but Joseph Sarto seeking a cure."

A Gift for the Editor.

"The only way I purchase stamps these days—and I use a lot of them—is in the little books which the government charges you a cent for," said a man who writes things for magazines now and then. "It will be a long time before I forget how the last lot of loose stamps got away from me. I bought $2 worth and after holding them so that the gummy sides wouldn't meet I carefully placed them in an envelope. It happened that envelope contained a bit of verse that I had prepared a couple of days before and addressed to an editor, but had not sealed, intending to glance over it once more.

"Well, I did not look at the stuff after all and, of course, forgot about the stamps and sent the letter off. Shortly afterward the verse came back with the usual regrets. A postscript was attached which read like this: 'P. S. Don't bother to send stamps with your next dozen manuscripts. Your credit will be good.'"

Missed.

Senator Penrose, chairman of the committee on finance, said in Washington of a movement he disliked: "These people are overzealous. They try to do too much. Such people always fail. They are like the foreign grocer who came to Philadelphia. He got on all right, but, as he lived in an Irish neighborhood, he thought he'd have more success if he changed his German accent for an Irish one. He thought then his Irish neighbors would take him for one of themselves.

"It was a Sunday morning that he decided to adopt this change. He had set out for a walk, and, a couple of blocks from his shop, he accosted an Irish policeman. 'Py jabers, offacer,' he said, 'gen you dell me dey vay to der Manayunk trolley cars, pwhat?'

"The officer, who prided himself on being a linguist, looked the grocer over, and answered, with a good Parisian accent: 'Oui, monsieur.'"

Few There Are Who Learn Wisdom.

A Chicago woman tried to undo a hard knot in her dress by burning it. She succeeded in exactly the same swift, comprehensive way in which the reluctant morning fire is started with kerosene. So few are the wise people who learn from experience of the foolish ones.

RESOLUTION NO. 200

A resolution authorizing the Director of Public Service of the City of Painesville, Ohio, to purchase certain property for the enlargement of Evergreen Cemetery and to take such option as may be necessary therefor.

MENTOR.

Well, sure enough we have winter now! The mercury tumbled way down to six below on Saturday (and some say much lower—but we are putting it as mild as possible for the information of our folks in Florida and in southern California). Today, the blizzard is again upon us, pumps are all frozen up, there is a beastly wind blowing from the south, east, west and north, carrying the little snow in great eddies and flurries clear over the tops of houses. Very few people are to be seen on the streets, those few well muffled up in scarfs and fur caps—while they hurry along, clapping their hands to get them warm! The children have started in to school again today, though the smaller ones are being kept at home, (where they will tease to go—will whimper and pout, declaring 'taint cold, no such thing! 'n I'll get way behind 'n then you'll [illegible] tion, the poor mothers will (by Wednesday) tog them up and let them go, half hoping they will get frozen!

With the bad weather, comes more trouble, some of the Willoughby friends have had their hot water pipes frozen up while they snoozed peaceful away in the night! Some of the Mentor folks have gotten up two or three times during most every night this past week, to watch furnace and pipes, pumps and plants! Such is life right here—now, but 'tis good old winter-time, with "sausage and buckwheat cakes with maple syrup, in the morning."

Many of our people are sick. Frances Case has had a terrible throat, partly the result of having tonsils cut out and largely the result of a severe cold. The attack has turned into quinsy, with what might have been called diphtheria by some doctors.

Robert Case is quite ill, has had Dr. Darby down from Cleveland to counsel with Dr. Lowe, and has had him since, for our Dr. Lowe is ill in bed himself.

Mr. Robert Radcliffe is in a very dangerous condition, with little if any hopes for his recovery.

Mr. H. N. Munson passed away at five o'clock on Saturday morning, after a week or so of acute suffering. The funeral services are set for Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock at his residence "Maple Street Cottage."

Mrs. Ackley died on yesterday (Sunday) morning, passing away very peacefully and quietly, not seeming to suffer much at the last.

Mr. Edward H. Cleveland has returned from his sojourn in Kirtland with his daughter, Mrs. Frank Millard, where he has taken the day of the day of the fire that burned down his house at the Center. He is with his youngest daughter, Mrs. James Moran. For a man over eighty years of age, Mr. Cleveland has endured the excitement of being burned out much better than was feared at first.

Perry Worcester and his family have returned to their home in Oberlin, having made a Christmas visit here with relatives.

Roy McKane has left the employ of A. D. Carlston temporarily, and has entered the Business College in Cleveland, intending to take a complete course of study there.

Mr. George Hart, has taken the charge of the delivery wagon for the Carlston groceries, all orders still are being looked after by the oldest son of the firm, Mr. Lloyd Carlston.

Miss Josephine Baker has left the Whitcomb store, and has returned to her old trade of dress-making, much to the satisfaction of her many friends.

George Sawyer has gone back into the Case school of Applied Science, after being out during the fall term. Mr. Sawyer is studying electricity with a view to making electrical engineering his life business.

Miss Nellie McCrae was married the day after Christmas, to Maurice Markell of Kirtland. We understand that these young people wished to keep the matter a secret, but some [illegible] hungry ears of the newspaper reporters.

Miss Gertrude Brecht is being employed by the Wilson-Knight greenhouses over in Willoughby at present.

The new building being put up by Mrs. Bostwick, is having a tar roof put on by some Cleveland parties and will in a few days be wired for the use of electricity.

Electricity has also been recently put into the West Mentor hardware store, and also into the Mentor Village Library. This last great improvement was brought about by Mr. Ed Sawyer (in the absence of Mr. T. G. Hart, the other member of the Lighting Committee) and the trustees of the Library are all very much pleased over the outcome. Mr. Sawyer was able to trade in the old Acetylene Gas plant towards the present outfit, with much less expense than was feared, and now the Library is well lighted.

Mr. Frank Smith was expecting to start for Cambridge Springs on Saturday for a few weeks rest in the Sanitarium there.

Mrs. George Marsh has been spending a short time with her son, Ross, who is in business at present at Gary, Ill.

Mrs. Clark Brudway accompanied by her daughter Ruth, has been visiting her mother and other relatives at North Girard, Pa., recently, but has returned.

Evers Parsons was at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Parsons over the Christmas vacation. Mr. Parsons is a student in the Western Reserve College, one of the brightest up there we are informed.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Jacks have recently been visited by their brother Mr. George Jacks, whose home is in Webster, Iowa.

Mrs. William Ellsworth and her daughter, Mrs. Rush of Hudson, who have been visiting Mrs. Harry King at their home "Pepperage Place" were detained several days last week by the present unwelcome blizzard but succeeded in getting off on Saturday.

The many friends of Mr. Charles Johnson were very sorry to learn that he is in a hospital in Pasadena having been very sick with pneumonia just the thing he dreaded, and went to California to get rid of this winter, having had it here, and having been told by doctors that he must seek a milder climate. At last report, however, he was getting along all right, and would soon be discharged.

Mr. and Mrs. Beebe and Mrs. Oeyhardt have been enjoying a visit from their daughter and sister Mrs. Dey (nee Irene Beebe) of Cleveland, very recently.

Dr. Elish Sawyer was down here a few days ago for a very short time with the families of his two brothers, the Messrs. E. S. and W. A. Sawyer. We were very much gratified to learn that Dr. Sawyer is one of the examining physicians for tuberculosis in Cleveland, and is considered the highest authority on the subject in the city.

The subject of the Mentor Park, is still in our minds and some of the tax-payers wish to know just what is the "modus operandi" anyway, in order to get this park. Unless the limits of Mentor village are extended eastward so as to include the desired park property, would it have to be a "township" park? Many people are anxious to have said limits extended, in order to get electricity into their houses, but we are told that a few prefer remaining as they are, lamps and candles "being good enough for them."

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sanborn and daughter Dorothy, have been guests of their uncle, Mr. Fred Larned and his family in the city lately.

Mrs. Elizabeth Corning Allen, of Portland, Oregon, who is spending the winter here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Corning, is at present in Oberlin with her two small children with her aunt Mrs. Emily Worcester.

The family of Mr. John Newell have returned to their Cleveland quarters and Jack Newell has gone back to school in Chicago, where he is preparing for some eastern College another year.

Mrs. Jean Munson Hanson returned on Saturday from her short stay with her husband in Boston, but arrived too late to see her father alive, he having passed away a few hours before. Mr. Albert Hanson is expected to arrive today. Not another man in all the village of Mentor could have been taken, who would have left such a record of faithful service to the church and the community, as that of Horatio Munson.

Mrs. A. R. Tabor, of Crider, Mo., had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended. Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by all dealers.

MEN THAT WASTE YOUR TIME

Writer Sets Down Certain Class, and With Much Truth, as Being Merely Loafers.

To a heap of people, maybe the big majority, life is just loafing along, writes Tip in the New York Press. There's the fellow who sits smoking on a porch or stoop and throws a dozen or so matches upon the lawn or into the yard. It would be just as easy, and a million times as decent, for him to put them in an ash receiver—too much trouble to get one—or lay them in a little pile beside him to be disposed of afterward. But it takes somebody a quarter of an hour to go and gather up the half hundred sticks that he has scattered everywhere. He prides himself, perhaps, upon not being finicky, would be mad as a hornet to be told he was just a loafer.

There's the fellow who sticks a fine steel blade into acid fruit, spoiling the fruit and the knife, not even bothering to wipe the blade. It takes a second to do the damage; it would take forever to undo it. There's the fellow who goes and finds a screwdriver in its proper place to tighten up a window hasp, say, and, after tightening it so that it will not work at all, puts the screwdriver down anywhere, so that the one who must untighten the hasp has to hunt for hours all over the house for the screwdriver. The fellow has no doubt he was being useful; he was being a ding-goned nuisance, wasting other people's valuable time.

There's the fellow who knows that it's about time for an axle to need oil or grease, but tomorrow will do when it's handy, so the hot box that comes along before then puts the thing out of commission and costs dollars to get in shape again. He thinks he was in hard luck that it wouldn't run long enough for him to find the lubricant without any trouble. He was just a good-for-nothing.

There's the fellow who burns a cigar when he needs it, and goes off leaving it burning just the same when he doesn't need it. He's very likely to plume himself on not being penny-wise, he has the responsibility and sense of a Digger Injun. There are 10,000 ways in which that sort loafs along through life, cock-sure they are useful human beings, but mostly leaving wreck and ruin in their wake. From the start they have no chance for success; at the finish they are ghastly failures. And every mother's son of them takes his oath, at any stage of the game, that he is being passed by somebody all the time merely because the other is smiled upon by fortune and pampered by favoritism.

Fame Dickens Gave Bath.

Bath is a city for which the Dickens lover ought to have a peculiar affection. Dickens stayed frequently in Bath in his early days, when engaged on reporting work, and his tobacco jar and beer mug are still piously preserved at the Saracen's Head. About six miles from Bath is the tiny village of Pickwick, through which Dickens often passed, and he bestowed the name upon his most famous creation. Many of the scenes in "Pickwick" are, it will be remembered, laid in Bath. There is at the present moment—or was until quite recently—a tradesman in Bath of the name of Snodgrass. But can you find a Tupman in the world to bring an action against a novelist?—London Chronicle.

Laws That Favor Women.

The Women Lawyers' Journal of New York gives a list of the amendments to the laws of New York state that have been proposed so that women may be more equal in the sight of the law with men than they are at present. One gives a mother equal rights with the father in the property of the children as he is now sole heir of his child. One makes her a joint guardian as he is now sole guardian of the children, equal shares in property, revoking the will made under a subsequent marriage, giving the woman the right to any money she may earn and other interesting amendments are mentioned.

Educating the Filipinos.

Last year in the Philippines more than a half million boys and girls were brought under the influence of American educational institutions, and the Philippine government spent over $3,975,000 of local revenue for education. There are at present employed as supervisors and classroom teachers over 9,000 American and native instructors.

A Word to the Foolish.

Borrow trouble for yourself, if that's your nature, but don't lend it to your neighbors.—Rudyard Kipling.

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold. Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit. For sale by all dealers.

POKER MONEY FOR CHURCH

How Statesman of the Past, With Gambling Proclivities, Helped Out Institution.

"Thad Stevens, the illustrious Pennsylvania statesman, used to be a faro bank fiend in the old days when big gambling houses flourished on Pennsylvania avenue," said Mr. E. W. Creecy, a prominent Washington patent lawyer, at the Stafford. "The games are merely memories now, for gambling is no longer fashionable with the solons of the present, at least not the kind that was in vogue in old Thad Stevens' days.

"If luck went his way Mr. Stevens was just as apt as not to tarry all night in his fight to beat the 'tiger,' and on a certain occasion which I remember as vividly as though it were yesterday, starting in pretty early one Saturday evening, he played until the church bells began ringing the next morning. Thoroughly tired, but in a gracious frame of mind, he descended the steps at Teel's resort, between Four and a Half and Sixth streets and emerged on the avenue chuckling to the thought of the big roll of bills he had brought away. Fortune had been with him and he had hit the bank hard.

"He had hardly turned in the direction of his hotel when a good lady whom he knew in the friendliest way accosted him. Little did she suspect what the grim old senator had been up to during the preceding 12 hours. Politeness demanded that he should listen to her talk.

"'Mr. Stevens,' she began, 'I am awfully glad to see you this morning. The truth is that I want you to help our church a bit. The congregation is sad and distressed at its inability to raise enough money to pay off a long due mortgage. Will you kindly give us a donation?'

"'Madam,' responded old Thad, 'it will be a genuine pleasure for me to help your church. How much will it take to wipe out the whole debt?'

"'The mortgage is for $2,000.'

"'Here, then,' said Stevens, going down into his jeans, 'is the exact sum. Take it with my compliments,' and before the astonished woman could recover enough to even thank him he was stumping down the avenue, repeating to himself: 'God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform.'

"The donation was to a dollar what he had won at faro, but the good church folks had never the slightest suspicion that they had accepted tainted money."

One Tie That Binds.

"In some cases the tie that really binds is the same pet superstition," a woman said. "Since last Thursday my maid and I have had a much keener appreciation of each other's virtues. Sadie went shopping. When she had been gone half an hour she telephoned that she had left behind the carefully compiled list of things she wanted to buy and was afraid to cross her good luck by coming back for it. Would it be too much trouble to look it up in her room and send it by the janitor's boy to the store where she was waiting?

"My heart throbbed with sympathy. Sadie had always seemed rather a taciturn person, but that message showed that she was very human after all. She felt just as I did about going back for a forgotten article, therefore no service I could perform for a fellow sufferer could be too much trouble. The janitor's boy was out, so I spent time and money to take the list to the store myself. But I do not regret it, for are not Sadie and I friends for life?"

Splitting Paper.

Here are two good ways to split a piece of paper: First, lay the paper on a piece of glass, soak it thoroughly with water and then press it smoothly over the glass. By using care, the upper half of the sheet can then be peeled off, leaving the under half on the glass. When dry it will come off easily. Be sure that the glass is perfectly clean.

Second, paste a piece of cloth or strong paper on each side of the paper to be split. When it is thoroughly dry, suddenly and violently pull the two pieces of cloth apart. Then soften the paste with water and take the two halves of the sheet from the cloths.

Overwork a Waste of Time.

Overstrained faculties can never bring out the best results. Overwork is always a waste of time, and though it may not seem to be so at first, eventually the sad truth is always manifested. To cut off needed recreation, to curtail the hours of sleep, to postpone a holiday indefinitely, to refuse to take a rest and ease and change, under the impression that thus time is saved, is always a short-sighted policy and often a fatal mistake. The time arrives when the poor, abused faculties take their revenge and refuse to serve altogether, or do in so feeble a fashion as to show their deterioration.

Persia Bans Jules Verne.

The censor of literature in Persia has banned a Persian translation of Jules Verne's "Voyage to the Moon" on the ground that it is irreligious, and from his point of view he is right. It will be remembered that a party of scientists was shut up in a shell which was fired at the moon from a great gun. Now the moon is Mahomet's coffin, and to shoot at the moon is a crime in Persia. It is true that the shell didn't hit the moon, but the intention constituted the crime in Persia.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE proposition which will be urged upon congress at its present session to provide for the retirement and pensioning of employes of the United States Life-Saving Service is directing public attention to one of the bravest and most conscientious corps of men in the world. The plan to pension the members of [illegible] disabled in the performance of their duties or who have grown gray in rendering such humanitarian service to their fellow-men has been agitated for some years past. Congress at its last session was on the point of passing the necessary law thus to give recognition to the life-savers and it is believed that these faithful servants of the people will not have to wait much longer now to be accorded their rights—for, be it known, the life-savers only seek such relief from the conditions of physical disability and old age as is freely accorded men in our military and naval service.

Nor is it merely that such a plan of retirement and pensions will do justice to the surfmen who, it is claimed, run greater risks and endure more hardships for the wages paid them than do the men in any other branch of the government service. Quite aside from this is the influence that will be exerted upon prospective recruits for the service. Indeed the officials of the Life-Saving Service assert that with a satisfactory retirement and pension plan in operation a superior class of men will be attracted to this vocation where so much must needs depend upon the individual. And, by the way, probably very few of our readers know that the United States Life-Saving Service is the largest as well as the most efficient in the world. Like the firemen in our cities, they are on duty all the time and they risk their lives every time they go to a wreck. But, for that matter, if the surfmen did no more than discharge the duties of their "night patrol" on the lonely storm-swept beaches they would have to their credit more hazardous and more arduous work than almost any other class in the community.

The scope of the relief work of the American Life-Saving Service is expanding all the while. During the past year the life-savers rendered aid in the case of nearly 1,600 wrecks and thanks largely to the aid of these brave and experienced men only seventy-four out of this large number proved to be a total loss. Measured in dollars and cents, the service rendered by these fearless men was even greater. In the wrecks of the past year there was involved property, including vessels and cargoes, to the total value of $11,860,003, and of this amount the surprising proportion of $10,057,000 was saved. This in itself makes the two million dollars a year which Uncle Sam spends on his Life-Saving Service seem like a pretty good investment and that is without taking into consideration the lives imperiled on the shipwrecked vessels. There were 6,661 persons on board the craft that met disaster last year and the total loss of life, which was fifty-five, would have been many times that number but for the succor afforded by Uncle Sam's heroes of the beaches.

Former Governor William A. Newell of New Jersey is generally recognized as the founder of the Life-Saving Service and he took the initiative as the result of a marine disaster which he happened to witness during the summer of 1839 when the Australian bark Count Perasto was wrecked on Long Beach, New Jersey. The thirteen members of the crew, all of whom were drowned, might readily have been saved had there been at hand apparatus such as now constitutes the regulation equipment of the United States life-saving crews.

The need thus pointed out made so forceful an impression upon the mind of Mr. Newell that he soon after entered upon experiments with bows and arrows, rockets and a shortened blunderbuss as a means of throwing lines to ships stranded in positions inaccessible by small boats. Eventually his experiments culminated in complete success by the use of a mortar or carronade with ball and line. About this time Mr. Newell was elected to congress and on the first resolution day of the first session of the thirtieth congress—on January 3, 1848, to be exact—he introduced in the national legislature the measure which laid the foundation of our Life-Saving Service.

The national government now maintains upward of three hundred life-saving stations distributed on the coasts of the Atlantic, the Pacific, the Gulf of Mexico and the Great Lakes. Each of these stations is manned by a crew of from six to eight surfmen—hardy and fearless fellows who are splendid specimens of physical manhood and who are skilled in handling boats in angry seas and in manipulating the various mechanical appliances which Uncle Sam provides as aids to the brawn and the quick wits of our coast patrolmen in the dangerous task of cheating the deep of its prey. For devotion to a duty that necessitates eternal vigilance and the most fatiguing service the life-savers receive the modest wage of $60 per month. Moreover they receive that pay for only nine months a year, the crews being laid off during June, July and August, at which season severe storms and wrecks are almost unknown. Should a life-saver be injured during his summer "lay-off" he not only cannot get back into the service but he cannot under existing conditions draw any pension or retirement pay, no matter how many years he has faithfully served the nation.

The vast majority of rescues effected by the life-saving crews are accomplished by means of lifeboats or surfboats. These stanch craft, which as now manufactured are almost unsinkable, are the ideal vehicles for taking considerable numbers of persons from imperiled vessels in a limited space of time. If the patrolman who in his vigils on the beach discovers a vessel ashore and hastens to the life-saving station for assistance, reports that the use of a boat is practicable, either the large lifeboat is launched from its ways in the station and proceeds to the wreck by water, or the lighter surfboat is hauled overland to a point opposite the wreck and launched as circumstances may dictate. Formerly all of these boats were propelled by oars and many of them yet are, but latterly there have been introduced big motor lifeboats, which are a vast improvement in every way over their predecessors.

Ofttimes a ship meets disaster in so dangerous a position or with such a high sea running that it is manifestly hopeless to attempt to reach the imperiled craft with a small boat. Under such circumstances recourse is had to the wreck gun and beach apparatus with a view to carrying on rescue work through the instrumentality of the breeches buoy or the life car. First of all a shot with a line attached is fired across the stranded vessel by means of a powerful little mortar or snub-nosed cannon, which will hurl a line over a wreck 400 yards distant, even in the teeth of a gale. With this preliminary line in their possession the crew of a shipwrecked craft can quickly haul out a larger line and finally a three-inch hawser. Attached to the hawser is a board which bears in English on one side and in French on the other instructions as to how to make the hawser fast to a mast or the best place that can be found.

When the shipwrecked mariners signal that they have obeyed instructions as to fastening the hawser the life-savers on shore haul the hawser taut and perhaps elevate the shore end by means of a tripod in order to lift it well clear of the water, after which there is sent off to the ship a breeches buoy, suspended from a traveler block, or a life car depending from rings running on the hawser. Only one person at a time can be landed by the breeches buoy, but from four to six people can be carried ashore at each trip of the life car. Whichever be the vehicle employed the trips continue until all the imperiled persons are safely ashore, after which an ingenious mechanical device known as the hawser cutter is drawn out to the wreck along the cableway and upon arriving at the terminus of the hawser automatically cuts the rope, allowing the life-savers to haul it ashore and thus preserve intact a valuable part of their apparatus.

Ambitious inventors are constantly devising new forms of apparatus for the use of the United States life-saving crews. Indeed, these inventions are so numerous that the federal government has felt obliged to create a board of experts whose special duty it is to test novelties and who hold such trials several times a year. However, not many of the new ideas that are advanced prove practicable, for the exacting conditions of the rough and ready service involved and the above mentioned classes of apparatus continue to be the standbys on which our life-savers place the greatest dependence. However, there has latterly been an advance in facilities for signaling and there is now in use a form of beach light so powerful as an illuminant that it enables one to read the face of a watch at a distance of more than nine hundred feet.

Survival of Beauty

It is to be observed that the woman whose face and figure and hair remain youthful, while her former schoolmates have joined the double-chinned brigade, is not in all respects in an enviable position. "Grow old along with me," is the song of her contemporaries, and they are properly outraged that she does not accept their cordial invitation. [illegible] ing her for this unnatural extension of youth, and in their whisperings together accuse her of spending a fortune in the establishments of beauty specialists.

Perhaps the duration of troublous beauty has been made brief because of all the mischief it can do even in those few years. And yet after all there are moments when it seems a pity that a woman cannot have at least a life interest in beauty, instead of seeing the precious possession deteriorate from day to day. And as the beautiful face has more to lose, the ravages of time are more cruelly written there. Physical mediocrity often suffers less. Yet there is hardly any woman who would hesitate to accept, if the glorious gift were offered her. Shakespeare said that "beauty is a witch," and doubtless every feminine creature has dreamed of [illegible] to ensnare and enslave the hearts of all men—to be the world's desire, the world's unrest.

Not to Be Thought Of.

"Look here: you're big and strong. Why don't you go to work instead of beating your way?"

"I'd like to, boss, but I made a bet early in life dat I could live to be an old man without ever doin' a stroke. You wouldn't want me to ruin ma career at dis late day, would you?"—Judge.

Madame Merri's Advice and Suggestions

Regarding Leap Year Parties.

There have been some adverse criticisms on leap year parties, but I do not see why the right kind of boys and girls cannot give such an affair with just as much propriety as any other novel entertainment. Whatever is done depends entirely upon the characters of the individuals participating and this is true at all times. I am very glad to comply with the request of one who says she always reads the department and relies upon its opinion and who asks about the leap year problem.

I will tell about a party that was given in a city suburb at the clubhouse to which most of the guests belonged. It was a delightful affair and other similar evenings may be given at private homes or in school assembly halls. The invitations were sent out by the young women in the most correct style, asking the pleasure of the young men's company, saying who were to be the chaperons, so that each man's mother felt assured that her son would be in proper society. Flowers were sent, in most instances bunches of violets. Two girls took one carriage or automobile and called for their respective boys. The chaperons were paid due attention, each man being returned to his watchful mother or aunt, whoever it happened to be.

Several of the boys were attended by valets, in lieu of maids. The girls wore stiff collars and white lawn ties, and some wore white vests. The boys wore soft lace collars or jabots, carried fans or wore them on long chains. All had on gloves, both girls and boys.

The men "poured" coffee and chocolate, which was served with sandwiches and small cakes. A large bowl of frappe was conveniently placed where the young women saw to it that the thirst of their partners was duly quenched. Promptly at 12.30 "Home Sweet Home" was played.

The 29th of next month is oftentimes selected for a "Leap Year" function, as it makes it more novel, the date coming only once in four years. I hope the many letters I have received regarding this subject will be satisfactorily answered in the above.

A Crowned Head Dinner Party.

A hostess renowned for her ingenuity in getting up and carrying out unique entertainments scored a great success when she issued invitations for her "Crowned Head" dinner. There were 20 guests seated at five small tables. The usual evening gown was worn and the head and shoulders were in exact imitation of some royal personage. Men wore just the conventional evening dress. Just imagine your best friend with her hair dressed "a la Mary Queen of Scots, or as Marie Antoinette. One quite stout round-faced matron went as the late Queen Victoria. It was a remarkably interesting study to see the transformation made by costuming the head in an entirely different mode from the present. Tiaras and crowns were constructed from the "Five and Ten" store jewels and one clever matron built her enormous emeralds, rubies and diamonds from big gum drops; the effect was really fine.

Every one said it was just the jolliest kind of a dinner. Most of the heads were copied from histories with colored illustrations, and the public library furnished excellent books on costumes of the different periods. It was a source of pleasure to all who participated—as one young woman remarked, "she felt on quite intimate terms with royalty."

Party Pastimes.

I am going to give a party to a number of girl friends and want to ask you to tell me of some games we can play after supper. We have no music, so I thought some game on the order of "pinning the head on a donkey." Also say what are three nice prizes for girls fifteen to seventeen years old, something for first, second and third prizes. Hope I am not asking too much.

Did you ever try having funny stunts to do, like sewing buttons on squares of cloth, stringing beads, picking up beans with toothpicks and even bean bags? See who can do the best in each test in a given space of time, and then award prizes as follows: Pretty cup and saucer, plate and china candlestick, or perhaps you would rather give a box of stationery, a fine handkerchief and a dainty silk bag.

MADAME MERRI.

Frocks for Children

ON the extreme left is seen a pretty frock for a little girl, in soft white Liberty satin. It is embroidered with thick white silk.

The second sketch is of a smart little frock in a pretty shade of blue, with bands and buttons in a deeper shade of satin. The Puritan collar and cuffs are of lace. A soft leather belt encircles the waist.

Next is shown a smart little coat of white ratine. The deep sailor collar is finished with embroidery. The coat is hemmed with white fur, which is also used on the collar and cuffs. A little cap of velvet and fur gives an altogether delightful finish to the scheme.

On the right is a dainty party frock in palest pink ninon, with lace. In place of a waist band there is simply a thick satin cord wound around the waist, and falling in tasselled ends at the side.

IN VOGUE

There seems to be no deviations from the straight, slender lines in dress.

The rage for brilliant oriental coloring is expressed in the new evening dresses.

The waist line is getting back to its normal place, and the sleeves are a trifle wider at the elbow.

The high waist and the draped bodice are two striking notes in the full swing of the winter styles.

In thin materials the skirts are cut a trifle wider at the base, but in tailored costumes the skirt is still conspicuously narrow.

There seems to be no end to the designs in scarfs just now and the materials used also—satin, velvet and fur, as well as lace and batiste.

Some of the new coats are slightly double-breasted at the waist line and have only two buttons to keep them in place. While they open far down over the figure, they do not give that appearance because they have immense double revers or sailor collars that lap over the bust.

Embroideries.

The craze for wool embroideries seems to be in imminent danger of being overdone, although it is undeniably effective when artistically applied.

Especially in millinery one must be careful in selecting a hat showing flowers or garlands of wool.

Hatbands or crocheted ornaments of wool are popular. They are used on every kind of hat, beaver, fur, felt and velvet. The most attractive are wreaths of small blossoms, crocheted from various brightly colored wools and interspread with green satin leaves.

Be careful in selecting a hat with large wool flowers on it, for unless they are very carefully worked, and in only one color tone, they are generally bizarre.

ECZEMA ON HEAD COMPLETELY CURED

West Philadelphia Woman Tells How It Was Accomplished.

So many people go through life troubled with eczema of some sort or other, and the disease is so loathsome, that we beg all to read the following letter as a benefit to themselves and their friends:

"Resinol Ointment and Soap completely cured me of Eczema of the head in about three weeks. Have recommended them to several friends, who have found them excellent articles for all skin-eruptions. I shall continue to recommend them wherever possible."

IDA B. LESHER,
West Philadelphia, Pa.

It may be a simple burn, a cut or a boil, or a carbuncle, or a felon, or eczema, or barber's itch, or pimples, or blackheads, or boils, or rash, or prickly heat, or piles, or itching, or eruptions from poison ivy. If it is a skin trouble, Resinol Ointment is always effective. It gives instantaneous relief. It must not be classed with patent preparations. Resinol Ointment is a product of science. It has stood the test of years. It is practically impossible to find a physician who does not both use it and recommend it.

All kinds of skin irritations, from the common pimple to something serious, yield to its healing properties. It contains no lead or mercury or other harmful ingredient. It doesn't grow old and is as easy to apply as cold cream. Resinol Soap used in conjunction with the Ointment aids in the speedy healing of irritations. For sale by all druggists. Send for free sample to Dept. 78, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

Woman's Way.

"A woman's convention, eh? What do women know about enthusiasm? Now at the last national convention we men cheered our candidates for an hour."

"That's all right," said his wife. "We threw kisses at ours for sixty-seven minutes by the clock."

Reconnoitered.

Mamma was dressing when seven-year-old Freddy burst into the room with a loud "Boo!"

"Why, Freddy, dear," expostulated she, "you mustn't open my door without knocking. I mightn't have been dressed at all."

"Oh, this was all right," said Freddy, "I looked through the keyhole first."—Judge.

Simply Blushing.

A Gilman man, it is related, has a very red nose, and recently a very inquisitive person said to him: "Please don't take offense, but I'm curious to know why your nose is always red?" And this is the reply the inquisitive got. "My nose is merely blushing with pride over the fact that it has never butted into any one's business."—Fort Smith Times-Record.

Uncle Sam's Representative.

Senator John Sharp Williams tells of a negro lad in a southern town who was not the least zealous of Uncle Sam's servants. One day when the mail bag for that town was thrown from the train the pouch was caught up by this diminutive courier, who started off, as was his wont, on a brisk trot to the postoffice.

As he was rounding a corner of the station he encountered a larger boy, with the result that the little courier was upset. When the latter got up and readjusted himself he turned upon the other exclaiming:

"Look heah! Yo' wants to be keerful 'bout dis chile! When yo' jars me yo' jars de gov'ment of de United States. I carries de mail!"

IN MATCHTOWN.
Fortunately no Faith Was Required, For She Had None.

"I had no faith whatever, but on the advice of a hale, hearty old gentleman who spoke from experience, I began to use Grape-Nuts about 2 years ago," writes an Ohio woman, who says she is 40, is known to be fair, and admits that she is growing plump on the new diet.

"I shall not try to tell you how I suffered for years from a deranged stomach that rejected almost all sorts of food, and digested what little was forced upon it only at the cost of great distress and pain.

"I was treated by many different doctors and they gave me many different medicines, and I even spent several years in exile from my home, thinking change of scene might do me good. You may judge of the gravity of my condition when I tell you I was sometimes compelled to use morphine for weeks at a time.

"For two years I have eaten Grape-Nuts food at least twice a day and I can now say that I have perfect health. I have taken no medicine in that time—Grape-Nuts has done it all. I can eat absolutely anything I wish, without stomach distress.

"I am a business woman and can walk my 2 or 3 miles a day and feel better for doing so. I have to use brains in my work, and it is remarkable how quick, alert and tireless my mental powers have become." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR PRESIDENT MURPHY.

Roger Bresnahan, Who Seeks Apology From Cub Boss.

Roger Bresnahan, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, has filed formal complaint with the national commission against Charles W. Murphy, president of the Cubs. Bresnahan alleges Murphy called him a liar, and made a further statement that he knew things about Bresnahan which, if published, would drive him out of baseball.

In his letter to the commission Bresnahan demands that Murphy's allegations be investigated by the commission, and if found true Murphy be disciplined as severely as the laws of

The trouble started at the New York meeting when Murphy asked waivers on Vic Saier. Bresnahan would not pass up his title to the player and alleges that Murphy accosted him in the Waldorf hotel and made the assertions of which the Cardinals' boss complains. Bresnahan declares Murphy made the allegations in a boisterous manner, and that they reflect so severely upon Bresnahan's integrity the commission should go into the subject fully and inflict a penalty.

"If this had been a personal matter there would have been no need of applying to the commission to have it settled," Bresnahan said. "I could have attended to that myself quite handily, but as it attacked me in my professional capacity I thought it best the supreme court of baseball should handle it."

ATHLETIC PLAYERS ARE SOLD

Catcher Paddy Livingstone Goes to Cleveland and "Topsy" Will Play With Toledo Team.

Manager Connie Mack of the Philadelphia American Baseball club, announced the sale of Catcher Livingstone to the Cleveland club of the same league and of "Topsy" Hartsel, outfielder, to the Toledo club of the American association.

"Topsy" Hartsel.

Worth of Kid Gleason.

Kid Gleason, whom Jimmy Callahan tagged for the White Sox, was once a pitcher and later an infielder. The "Kid" has a wonderful noodle for detecting signals and keeping his weather optic glued on the pill, to use the vernacular of Ping Bodie. It will be mighty hard to "pull" anything on the White Sox next season with Cal, the "Kid," Sully, Lord and Tannehill on the same club.

NOTES of SPORTDOM

Ed Konetchy, first baseman of the Cardinals, has become a magnate. He owns an indoor ball club in St. Louis.

Hank O'Day said he was tickled "almost to death" to quit umpiring. Hank says he wants some friends before he dies.

Otto Seiler, some drop kicker, from George Huff's own school, has joined the Stagg party against summer baseball for the colleges.

Of the 16 managers in the major leagues, 12 are Irishmen. Most magnates want to combine the duties of a policeman and manager in one.

There may be better catchers in the American league than Syd Smith, on whom Cleveland asked waivers, but there are also several worse ones.

When the Chinese have a national and international league they will also have another way of smuggling their race into the land where baseball originated.

British soldiers may have been trained on the football fields of Eton, as a famous general once remarked, but British suffragettes have been trained in bargain sales.

Scout George Huff says the summer baseball ban is a huge joke. He thinks a person who advocates the rule is either stupid or blind. Coach Stagg can't "see" this at all.

Joe Choynski, the veteran heavyweight pugilist, who is living in Pittsburg, declares himself a come-back, and wants to meet Jack Crouse in a six-round bout to prove it.

Manager Harry Arndt of South Bend announces the signing of Outfielders McGee and Alderson, Pitcher Frank Moore and Catcher Waranke. McGee and Moore come from the Western league.

Jack Slattery, who led the Pacific Coast league in batting in 1908, the Eastern league in 1910, and finished third in the Eastern in 1911, is spending the winter in South Boston, Mass. He is a free agent.

VARIOUS AGENCIES CONCERNED IN FORMATION OF THE SOIL

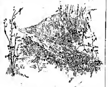
Two Things Suggested to Farmer to Prevent Exhaustion of Fertility—First Is to Assist Nature by Means of Good Tillage and Second Is Use of Manure and Fertilizers.

(By ALFRED VIVIAN.)

Vegetation begins with the very simplest forms of plants, such as lichens and mosses, and is, of course, very scanty at first. These plants on dying become a part of the soil, all of the plant nutrients used by them being thus returned.

Food that has once been used by plants is very readily made available to succeeding crops through the process of decay. The soil is now able to produce a larger crop, as it contains the plant food in the previous growth in addition to that added through the agencies detailed above.

In this way the growth gradually becomes more abundant. The plants upon decaying give rise to humus, and this increases the fertility of the land both by being a source of plant food and by increasing the water-retaining power. Humus is a very important factor in fertility. During the decomposition of the plants, acid substances are formed which act upon the rocks in such a way as to make more of the plant food available.



Nature's method of increasing the humus and soil fertility. Notice the rotten log and leaves decaying, thus returning plant food to the soil.

One of the products of decay or fermentation is carbonic acid gas, and this is dissolved in the soil water, and this gas-containing water is an important help in disintegrating the rocks.

As the nutritive materials increase from these various causes the lower simpler forms of plant life are gradually replaced by those which are more highly organized.

With the advent of plants like our common crops, which bear roots, other factors in the formation of soils are introduced. The roots secrete an acid substance that has a solvent effect on the mineral matter of the soil, and the roots themselves also assist mechanically in breaking down the rocks.

All are familiar with the tremendous force exerted by plants in breaking apart rocks and stones if once their tender rootlets obtain a foothold in a crevice.

The roots penetrate the soil sometimes to great depths, and, as they decay after the death of the plant, they leave little channels in the soil which serve to carry down water laden with carbonic acid, as well as to introduce the oxygen of the air, that, in its turn, is a factor in bringing about chemical changes in the soil, which assist in making plant food available.

Sooner or later in the process of soil formation, plants of the pulse family (leguminous plants), such as clover, vetches, lupines, etc., are introduced.

If you dig up some of these plants you will find little nodules or tubercles on their roots. These nodules are the homes of numerous bacteria, which enable the plants to derive part of their food from the nitrogen of the atmosphere.

This peculiar property of leguminous plants is of great importance, for it is undoubtedly nature's principal method of increasing the supply of nitrogen in the ground.

It will readily be understood that the various agencies concerned in the formation of the soil do not act separately nor necessarily in any such order as that in which they have been discussed.

As a matter of fact all the processes described take place simultaneously. The lower plants do not wait for the rocks to be pulverized, for we see such organisms as the lichens growing on rocks from which one would think it impossible to obtain food.

If the lichen is removed, grooves or furrows will be found on the surface of the stone, due to the action of the plant.

Nor are all soils formed directly from the original rocks, for one of the effects of weathering, etc., is to separate such rocks as the granites into simpler substances, with the result, for example, that huge deposits of limestone are formed in one place, and in another whole hills of sandstone.

The soil is almost constantly moving, for some of the same agencies which form soils are continually carrying them away. Running water grinds the rocks, but at the same time transports the fine particles to lower levels. It cuts deep valleys in the surface of the earth and carries away the debris, depositing it at various distances from its source.

This study of the formation of the soil then suggests two things that the farmer can do to prevent the exhaustion of the fertility.

The first is to so treat the soil as to assist and hasten nature in the process of converting the plant food into available forms by means of good tillage.

The second is to return to the soil by means of manure and fertilizers an amount of plant food equivalent to that removed by the crop.

Care of Farrowing Sow.

During the farrowing hour, the sow should be kept quiet and should seldom be approached by any person. She will not need the attention of man and as she is extremely nervous and irritable at this time, all causes of excitement should be removed as far as possible.

Shoats for Killing.

Pick out the very smoothest and most likely shoats for the winter killing, keep them in clean quarters and feed so as to make well balanced meat—not too much fat.

EFFECTIVE PIG TROUGH GUARD

To prevent hogs getting their feet into trough the arrangement shown above is effective. The width of the side boards depend upon the size of the pigs to be fed. A small trough, with six inch side boards, may be used for the small pigs, and 12 to 16 inch stuff for breeding sows. The size of pieces C and D depend upon the weight of the animals and the strain likely to come on the frame. For pigs of ordinary weight, a piece 2 by 4 inches should be used for the ridge pole C and pieces 1 by 3 or 1 by 2 inches for the guard bars D. These should be securely nailed to the side of the trough in the pig house, spiked to the floor to prevent breaking off. The upright E, firmly spiked to B, secures endwise rigidity. For delivering slop to the trough, a spout or small trough is arranged to enter at the end of the feed trough. With this arrangement, when the distance between the bars has been properly adjusted to the size of the animal, only one can get to the trough between each space, and all sidewise crowding is prevented.

DAIRY LESSONS AT STATE FAIR

Care Taken By Operator in Handling Milk to Prevent Contamination Was Revelation to Spectators.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

One of the most practical lessons of our state fair this fall was that taught by the state agricultural college which had set up in an amphitheater holding about 1,000 persons, a complete modern dairy. In this dairy all the operations of separating milk, testing it with the Babcock tester and making butter were performed daily and the amphitheater was never large enough to hold the interested crowds.

The care taken by the operator to prevent contamination of milk and butter was evidently a revelation to many of the farmers and their wives, as exclamations of surprise were frequently heard when the utensils were washed and scrubbed again and again, plunged into hot water and the whole process of butter making gone through without once having been touched by a human hand.

The spectators were for the most part composed of practical dairy workers more or less versed in their business. They asked innumerable questions upon every phase of dairying, often showing almost perfect knowledge of the business; but the operator in charge, a remarkably well informed and alert young man, never failed to give instant and satisfactory reply.

Two demonstrations daily were made in this dairy and during the five days of the fair it is safe to say that 10,000 persons received valuable instruction in the way of object lessons in good dairying.

Angora Goat Industry.

During recent years angora goat raising has become a money making industry. Goats are hardy animals.

Burbank Potato.

The Burbank potato is said to be adding $17,000,000 a year to the agricultural output of this country.

HAVE YOU SUSPECTED YOUR KIDNEYS?

There are Two Ways to Find Out Whether the Kidneys are Sick or Weak

There are two ways to tell when you have weak kidneys. The first is through the pains in the back and other outward signs. The second, is by examination of the kidney secretions.

That is why physicians make such a careful examination when you apply for insurance, and if there is any sign of kidney trouble you are surely rejected.

Kidney disease is so dangerous that it is a bad mistake to overlook or neglect it, and if pain in the back, recurring headaches, or a fretful, nervous, tired condition makes you suspect some kidney trouble, take the trouble to watch the kidney secretions. Look for any of the following signs:

More or less than three and one half pints passed daily.
Too dark or too pale a color.
Passages too frequent, profuse, or much reduced, or scalding and painful.
Sandy, gritty or cloudy settlings.
Fat or oily-looking layer which gathers on the surface when allowed to stand, or a jelly-like thickening.
Staining of the linen or bad odor.

Temporary changes may occur for a time from things eaten, but if the changed appearance continues, your kidneys are out of order and need help. Neglect may prove serious.

Doan's Kidney Pills correct and regulate the kidney secretions, stimulate and heal sick kidneys, and thereby drive away backache, rheumatic pain, nervousness, dizziness, bloating and other [illegible] disease.

The following case is typical of the work effected by Doan's Kidney Pills. The testimony is the best evidence.

IN BED FIVE MONTHS.
Cured After Doctors Gave Up Hope.

J. L. Richardson, Red Key, Indiana, says: "A wrong diagnosis of my case caused me six months of terrible pain. When I had been in bed helpless for three months I was a mere bag of bones. The trouble began with pain in the back, and after a few weeks of it my nerves gave way completely and my eyes got bad. I had frequent dizzy spells, felt tired always, and never seemed to get enough sleep. I almost went crazy. The action of the kidneys kept getting worse, and the urine harder to pass. Twenty-four hours would go by without a passage. The doctors began to take the water from me with a catheter. They did this once a day for fifty days. On Christmas Day, five years ago, my doctor told me that my time was about up. I lived through the day and night, contrary to expectations, and the next day a friend gave me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I used it and was encouraged to continue. When I had taken five boxes I got out of bed. I kept on until entirely well, and from that day to this—five years—I have never had a twinge in my back."

PITIFUL SIGHT WITH ECZEMA

"A few days after birth we noticed an inflamed spot on our baby's hip which soon began spreading until baby was completely covered even in his eyes, ears and scalp. For eight weeks he was bandaged from head to foot. He could not have a stitch of clothing on. Our regular physician pronounced it chronic eczema. He is a very able physician and ranks with the best in this locality, nevertheless, the disease began spreading until baby was completely covered. He was losing flesh so rapidly that we became alarmed and decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"Not until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment could we tell what he looked like, as we dared not wash him, and I had been putting one application after another on him. On removing the scale from his head the hair came off, and left him entirely bald, but since we have been using Cuticura Soap and Ointment he has as much hair as ever. Four weeks after we began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment he was entirely cured. I don't believe anyone could have eczema worse than our baby.

"Before we used the Cuticura Remedies we could hardly look at him, he was such a pitiful sight. He would fuss until I would treat him, they seemed to relieve him so much. Cuticura Soap and Ointment stand by themselves and the result they quickly and surely bring is their own recommendation." (Signed) Mrs. T. B. Rosser, Mill Hall, Pa., Feb. 20, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 29 K, Boston.

Was Testing the Baby.

Little Phil Warriner, of Addison road, was detected in the act of pulling out the baby's hair despite her frantic protests.

"I just wanted to see," he said in explanation, "whether she was cold storage baby. Teacher told us that's the way you can tell a chicken. If the feathers come out easily the chicken has been in cold storage."

Needless to say, Phil is doing penance.—New York Times.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity
Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
Now's the Time
—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.
Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.
Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

What Ails You?
Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?
If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.
The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical forest plants. ### [illegible]

[illegible]linor G. Norton of Cleveland, has engaged John Burns of the Headlands to superintend the building of six cribs in the lake here to hold the beach and land along his cottage grove camp. This will prevent further danger from the lake's washing. Mr. Burns has had large experience in the building of cribs.

Word from Bruno Krantz from Bremen, Germany, tells us that he has arrived there O. K. and is nearing his home at Halle on Salle. He will again return to America.

Mrs. Jacob Parker and daughter, Edith, spent two weeks in Cleveland and have just returned. They visited at the homes of Mrs. Parker's father, Wm. Gaus, and sister Lena at East 66th St., and at her brother's Dr. Wm. Daus of Superior Ave., and a host of friends, also enjoying the operas and theaters.

Chas. Schwind has returned from Cleveland where he paid a visit to [illegible].

Last week Wednesday, Mrs. Bessie Jayne visited the school, and Friday Mrs. H. J. Gault. All is fine and dandy up there, one wouldn't think it was cold and blizzardy outside, when in there with that happy flock and their proud teacher, who keeps that great big mountain stove buzzing hot these cold days. Miss Tear is justified in being proud of her school.

Wednesday, Jan. 3rd, Miss Edith Parker was again with us, giving her pupils the usual music lessons.

Miss Jessie Pomeroy returned from her home in Thompson, to her sister's Mrs. Geo. French where she boards, while teaching Dist. No. 7.

Helen Parker is already up and around the house, the broken rib much better and all going along fine due we are told to the usual prompt attention and skill of Dr. A. J. Ingersoll.

Harry Austin and family spent New Year's day at Walter Wheeler's.

B. Ross and family spent the holidays at Sweet's, this place.

John Burr, Jr., is at home now for a spell, from Gates Mills, where he has been employed for some time past.

Geo. Brooks of Painesville spent the holidays with his parents, I. E. Brooks.

Lake Erie is frozen over as far as one can see, and ice banks rising high all along the shore, a sudden change from the last week's view of our beloved and changeable lake. Today the east wind is raging here driving the snow high into the air in beautiful whirlpools buzzing up from all directions. One don't find such beautiful pictures on any stage as are every-day affairs on this island of the Headlands, and they change with the rapidity and variety of a kaleidoscope. Grand old winter!

New Year's day we got a good look at that Eddie Rasmussen Carnegie Hero medal. It's a leather covered booklet, first section is a bronze caste of Andrew Carnegie, head and shoulders, underneath which is inscribed "Established April 15, 1904." Second section in bronze is the Coat of Arms of Sweden, of Denmark, and of the U. S. All round the center of that is inscribed in bronze the following: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." "Edward T. Rasmussen who saved Henry M. Merritt from drowning, Fairport Harbor, Ohio, Aug. 6th, 1909." The Captain is now deciding upon the college where he will send Eddie to be educated with the $2000 he received besides the medal. It will be a military school. The man Merritt weighed over 200 lbs. and Eddie was only fifteen years old.

WILLOUGHBY
Schram District

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sorter visited in Mayfield on Sunday, a week ago.

Jackson Lenty was in the city on business Thursday of last week.

Frank Bigelow of San Diego, Cal., is visiting relatives and friends here.

Mrs. A. Gaus is home after several weeks visit amongst her family.

Several of the farmers here indulged in a fox chase recently, Dexter Brott being the lucky one to shoot the fox.

Although a stinging cold day with the thermometer at zero, our faithful mail carriers made their rounds on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Willis of Orange Hill spent Sunday last with Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Alvord.

Miss Nellie Rogers was given a post card shower on her birthday by her many friends here and surrounding towns, from which she received one hundred and eleven cards, and wishes through these columns to kindly thank all for remembering her.

Pupils of the grammar grades who were neither absent nor tardy during December are as follows: Esther Langshaw, Raymond Smith, Ernest Christensen, Ro[illegible] Scheffler, Do[illegible] Bornemann, Otto Bornemann, Frieda Meier, Flora Heimerdinger, Helen Leigh, Henry Meier, Clarence Mares, Carl Geller, Esther Falstream, Helen Schroter and Anna Wieland. Miss Rogers, teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Foss were in the city on Sunday on account of the death of a nephew.

It is with sadness that we chronicle the death of Mrs. Roy Carpenter, which occurred at her home on the Ridge on Saturday last. She will be better known as Mildred Evis, formerly of this place. Mrs. Carpenter had been in failing health for some time and finally succumbed to the grim reaper, death. Beside the husband, and two children, she leaves parents, two sisters and a brother, all for whom much sympathy is being felt.

"When the night of death came o'er her,
And her eyes began to close,
Happy dreams went on before her
Calling her to sweet repose,
And she fell in slumbers deep,
Leaving us below to weep."

Two Kinds of Socialists.

The Rev. Archibald D. Pinkerton, the well-known Christian Socialist of Duluth, said in a recent address: "I asked a crusty old millionaire the other day to contribute to our book fund. He frowned and said: 'So you're a Socialist, eh?' 'Yes, sir,' said I. 'Well, tell me what a Socialist is,' said he. 'But you must tell me first,' said I, 'what sort of a Socialist you m[illegible] political Socialist or a Christian [illegible]ist. For there is a vast difference[illegible] political socialist says: "Wha[illegible] yours is mine." But the Christian Socialist says: "What's mine is yours."'"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Fascination of Football.

Edgar M. Church, the famous football veteran of Philadelphia, was talking at Franklin field about football's charms. "When I was playing in '91's class games," said he, "there was a '91 chap who lost a dear relative. The funeral took place the day we played '92 and, at the game's end, as I was crossing over to the college, the funeral procession glided slowly past. All of a sudden a head was thrust out of one of the mourning coaches and a voice said: 'Have we licked 'em, Churchy?' 'Yes,' said I. 'Hurrah!' shouted my classmate, and drew in his head again, and drove on sorrowing."—Philadelphia Times.

Favors Women Students.

At the inauguration ceremonies connected with the opening of new buildings of the University of Vienna, the pro-rector, Dr. Doreatzek, expressed regret at the exclusion of women as students in the department of jurisprudence. This was no fault, however, he said, of the faculty, which had expressed itself in favor of the admission of women 12 years ago. Five years ago, when the imperial educational authorities had made no reply to the request, another communication was sent to them asking that women be allowed to matriculate as students of law. This request was also ignored.

Went Something to Exercise On.

Somehow or other the women who feel that they were born to command always get married.—Exchange.

Not So Straight.

Hewitt—"What do you think of Gruet?" Jewett—"He's so crooked that the only way for him to get a night's rest is to sleep on a spiral staircase."

NERVOUS IN PUBLIC

MANY WORLD-FAMED SPEAKERS NEVER OVERCOME THIS.

With Some It Persists as Mannerisms—Yawn and Handkerchief of Late Duke of Devonshire—Gladstone's Peculiar Actions.

Persons who are unaccustomed to speak in public believe that their nervousness is solely due to their inexperience, and that public men can make speeches as coolly as they make conversation. In some cases this may be so, but few speakers are ever able wholly able to cast off their nervousness. Sometimes it persists only in the form of a mannerism, attractive or otherwise, but some old parliamentarians never escape from the tremors and terrors which shook them when their maiden speech was delivered.

The late duke of Devonshire is usually spoken of as the perfect type of the impassive Englishman. When he entered the house of commons as Lord Cavendish, he distinguished himself by prefacing his maiden speech with a prodigious yawn. But he was by no means as languid in fact as he was in appearance.

When he rose to speak he would lean one arm on the nearest of the two iron-bound boxes on the table between the front benches. After a slight hesitation and a few quiet words, the other hand would steal to the tail pocket of his coat and emerge holding a neatly-folded white cambric handkerchief. Without unfolding it he would gently rub the corners of his mouth, and this done, the hand, still holding the handkerchief, would rest on the hip or be thrown back.

Sitting near him, one could observe that the grip on his handkerchief tightened, and that the muscles of the hand were in continuous action. At the close of his speech the hand opened, and one saw not the clean, folded cambric handkerchief, but only a solid, greasy ball, which was quickly returned to the pocket. Here was the safety valve for the impassive nobleman's nervousness.

Gladstone was one in whom nervousness had become mannerism. When he rose to speak he began with a few gracious words on the speech which was about to follow, or some pointed remark as to the character and importance of the subject. In his earlier days this was, no doubt to "get his breath."

His next act was to raise his right hand over his head with the thumb bent down and gently scratch his skull. That is rather common among public speakers. The third action of Mr. Gladstone was his peculiar and individual sign. Throwing his arms downward by his side, he would with his fingers seize the cuffs of his coat and draw these down over his shirt cuffs so as to conceal them completely. The ordinary practice is just the reverse, the desire being to expose and not conceal the white linen of the shirt cuffs. These were the invariable preludes to the great commoner's speeches.—Pall Mall Magazine.

Not in the Library.

Mr. Claptrap arrived at the circulating library the other day with his hands full of small packages and as cross as two sticks because his wife had asked him to fulfill some commissions for her while he was out. With a look which was just as disagreeable as he felt he handed to the little librarian a list which he had made to aid his memory.

"My wife wants these books," he said gruffly. "Be quick about getting them, if you please. I'm in a great hurry."

The girl, who was a trifle shy and inexperienced, flushed, and, saying that he should have the books directly, went to look for them. She was gone some time and when she returned he glared at her indignantly and asked if she expected him to "wait all day."

"I'm very sorry," she apologized, "but you see I've been looking for the last book on the list. Here are the other three, but 'Hairpins and Castor Oil' I can't find and—and I'm afraid it isn't in the library."

"Good heavens!" groaned Mr. Claptrap, quite crestfallen. "Did I put those things down in the book list!"

In Praise of Modesty.

Reginald De Koven told at a musicale in Chicago a pretty story in praise of modesty.

"A group of tourists," he said, "visited Beethoven's house in Bonn. One of the tourists, a girl of twenty or so, sat down at Beethoven's piano and played the 'Moonlight Sonata' none too well. Beethoven's own work, in his own room, on his own piano!

"When the girl had finished, she rose and said to the old caretaker:

"'I suppose lots of famous musicians have been here and played on this instrument?'

"'Well, miss,' the caretaker answered gravely, 'Paderewski was here last year, and his friends urged him to play, but he shook his head and said:

"'No, I am not worthy.'"

A Good One.

"Is little Mrs. Bings' worthless husband going to dine home on Thanksgiving day?"

"No; I understand he is going to stay away for a culinary reason."

"A culinary reason?"

"Yes. He knows his goose is cooked."

Stoics.

The founder of the Stoic School of Philosophy was Zeno, a native of Citium, in the island of Cyprus, born about 350 B. C. Stoicism was in many ways the noblest of all the philosophical systems of antiquity. Its most illustrious follower was the great and good Marcus Aurelius, whose "Meditations" have been the delight of the thoughtful for 1,800 years. The best book on the history and teachings of this renowned school is Zeller's "Stoics, Epicureans and Skeptics." Zeller leaves scarcely anything unsaid on the subject.

C. P. & E. Ask to Have Franchise Extended Twenty-five Years.

At the council meeting Monday night Mayor Smith's communication recommending a rearrangement of the rooms at the city hall was read and referred to a committee for future action.

The report of Board of Health was read by the clerk and showed receipt to have been $72.65, and expenditure of $496.18. The report gave the number of births for past year as 181, deaths 132.

Mr. Appleton, Chief of Police, made a report showing that there had been 81 arrests, which Fire Chief Morgan's report showed that there was a total loss by fire of $495.00 during the year ending Dec. 31, 1911.

The matter of an extension of franchise of the C. P. & E. in exchange for the construction of a line to the township park was discussed briefly but no definite action was taken. The matter was finally submitted to the street committee, Councilmen McLeod, Werner and Mayhew for consideration.

MRS. DAYTON DEAD

Highly Respected Lady At Advanced Age Passes to the Great Reward

Mrs. M. A. Dayton, aged 76 years, a well-known and highly respected resident of Jackson street, this city, passed away at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Dayton is survived by three sons, J. H. Dayton of the Storrs & Harrison Co., James E. Dayton, also of this city, and T. S. Dayton of Willoughby. She was prominent in the Church of Christ here, and as a result the Christian Endeavor service at the Church of Christ last Sunday evening was in the nature of a memorial service for one of their honorary members. Yet mingled with the sadness was a feeling of joy she now shares, for hers was a life so pure and noble in its quiet helpfulness and Christian faith that all life was "helped and made purer thereby."

At the church service Mr. Huntsman spoke appreciatively of Mrs. Dayton's earnest life. In memory of her, he read the sixty-third Psalm, which was followed by the singing "Shall We Gather at the River?" and prayer.

No one can be missed more in the Church of Christ than Mrs. Dayton. It was her delight to always be in her place at church and her quiet, gentle presence seemed a part of all the services.

The funeral services were held from the Church of Christ Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

PHONE RATES ADVANCED

Government Telephone System Faces a Deficit of $150,000.

The operation of the Manitoba Telephone System for the year 1911, will show a loss of nearly $150,000. The Government Telephone Commissioners, according to a statement made by Mr. F. C. Paterson, Chairman, will recommend drastic increases in telephone rates.

A few years ago, the Government purchased the property of the private telephone company. After most exhaustive study on the part of the Telephone Commissioners, the Government now finds that it must raise telephone rates. In the case of Winnipeg, the largest city in Manitoba, the rates must be increased 50%.

The Telephone Commission has spent four years in studying not only telephone conditions and rates in Manitoba, but in every part of the world. The Commission calls attention to the increasing cost of furnishing telephone service, and in addition to a general increase in rates, criticises severely the present flat rate basis of telephone charges. The telephone service should be furnished on a measured service plan, so that the user may pay for his telephone service in accordance with the use he makes of it. This is following the plan laid down for other public utilities operating gas, electric light, water, and the street car systems.

The Commission also finds that the rates for rural subscribers living in the sparsely settled sections of a province are much too low, and that the practice of giving free service between adjoining exchanges is wrong in principle.

Mr. Lutton Dead.

W. H. Lutton, owner of a farm on the Concord road two miles and a half from Painesville, passed away at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Mr. Lutton came here from Cleveland two years ago. He is survived by a wife. The deceased was well known here in Painesville and highly respected.

—o—

Capt. Merwin Thompson left Sunday for New York City, where he will attend the automobile show in the interest of the White Automobile company.

—o—

E. J. Kelly, the new street superintendent, has already earned his salary of $100 per year, but must still serve a little over eleven months longer.

—o—

John Dickey of W. Jackson street is one of the few onion growers in this county to hold a part of his crop for the high price which is now being offered.

—o—

The city officials are wrestling with the problem how to do something without money. Painesville with a $10,000,000 tax duplicate is the poorest fellow around here.

—o—

The entertainment given by the Lake County Horticultural society at the Congregational church last Saturday afternoon brought out a good attendance and was greatly appreciated.

—o—

John R. Williams of East Erie St., reported as being confined to his home by illness was seen on the street Monday of this week and had all the appearance of a man in fairly good health.

—o—

It is claimed that the cold weather of last week has done a great deal of damage to nursery stock of all kinds and the remark is often heard that there will be no peaches in this section this year.

—o—

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat propounds this question: "What is the psychological difference revealed by the fact that in the men's stores there are no articles for 98 cents or 59 cents or $2.71?"

—o—

J. P. Hoover, late member of the firm of Hoover & Son, has returned to his former place of residence in Grove City, Pa. Mr. Hoover made many warm personal friends during his stay in Painesville.

—o—

Don't forget the Ohio Booster car. It will be at Willoughby Jan. 18 a. m., Mentor Jan. 18 p. m., Painesville Jan. 18 p. m., and at Perry the afternoon of same date. At Madison Jan. 20, during the forenoon.

—o—

Not a trace of vindictiveness, but only grief, appears in the following notice published in the Douglass (Kan.) Tribune: "Whoever killed my little dog Rex, please let me know, so I can come and get him with my little wagon and bury him."

—o—

The supreme court today in the case of Ed. Spaller against the City of Painesville, decided against the plaintiff. Spaller had his salary raised by the Nolan administration but the Burrows administration held that the raise was illegal.

—o—

Bobby Manchester has returned from a trip to New York City. He is pleased over the successful conclusion of his proposal to establish an Elk's Home in this city and says that it is now an assured thing, and the Elks are to be congratulated in having such a progressive and enterprising leader.

—o—

Dr. C. O. Warren of Madison, brother of E. D. Warren of Fairport and Painesville, was in the city Monday. Dr. Warren was called to Harpersfield on professional duty one of the coldest days of last week, in fact frequent drives of this kind is making the doctor acclimated to our present spell of zero weather.

—o—

F. D. Malin left again Monday to attend the duties of the Constitutional convention. Mr. Malin voted for Herbert Bigelow for president of the convention and was with the majority on every proposition. Mr. Malin will be one of the solid men of the convention, though he may not be heard from the house tops in spread eagle oratory.

—o—

Judge J. W. Roberts handed down his decision in Jefferson Saturday, in the case of P. K. Smith et al vs. F. P. & E. railroad. The case involved the question of compensation from the new Fairport railroad to the Shorelands property and the decision was in favor of the plaintiff. An injunction was granted, but suspended until the case could be reviewed by circuit court in February.

—o—

They have got William Burns, the late scrapper of Lake county jail, down at Columbus in irons because he won't tell the officials of the penitentiary something they want to know. If the iron treatment works favorably on Burns why not send a car load of iron to Gov. Harmon and see if he will tell whether he is for or against the initiative and referendum.

—o—

Cold weather and disastrous conflagrations usually go hand in hand but during the record breaking weather of last week Lake county seems to have escaped with very few fires. Henry Walding's residence in Madison was burned last Saturday morning, the furniture was saved and house was insured. This one fire was the only one of any consequence reported during the week.

—o—

S. B. BAKER,
Clerk of LeRoy Township.

A STORY

IT MAY NOT BE TRUE BUT READ IT THROUGH

Giving Something For Nothing and Then Paying Interest on the Gift. Good for the Other Fellow.

A respectful, kindly appearing stranger, came into town Monday and approached a well to do but hard working farmer, who is the owner of a team of horses and wagon, and said to him: "Look here my friend, if you will give me that wagon I'll let you give me your team of horses." "What is that you say?" asked the farmer. "Why you see"—said the stranger with a most enticing smile, "that wagon of yours is not worth much, you can give it to me and then I'll let you give me the team of horses." "You are very kind" says the farmer, "but just now I need that team and wagon with which to get my load of grain home." But hold on Mr. Farmer, right there is a matter which I wish to explain to you," said the stranger. [illegible] wagon and I will take your load home for you at a very moderate rate, in fact I will most solemnly pledge you, upon my word and honor, that I will make you a charge for hauling your grain that will be in keeping with a fair rate of interest upon the capital invested, plus the true value of my business sagacity in building up and developing my line of trade."

The farmer turned away in disgust, and as he started for home he was heard to say—"By Jerico! that fellow has got wheels in his head." And as he drove along he kept muttering to himself—"By Gad, he had 'em bad."

This is a most unreasonable story, but after all is it so much different from a corporation asking for a franchise, and then consenting to take a second franchise, capitalizing the franchises, and asking the public to pay interest on this capital hitched up with their wonderful smartness in getting something for nothing.

BARNES' PHARMACY

Sold to Victor M. Gehring of Cleveland Friday.

The announcement that one of Painesville's oldest business men in point of service has retired from business in Painesville, comes as a decided surprise to the people of this city and county. After thirty years of service in the same store on Main street, Fred J. Barnes, the well known and popular druggist, has sold his business and good will to Victor M. Gehring of Cleveland.

Mr. Barnes came to Painesville in March, 1879, to work for J. Wiley Smith and remained with Mr. Smith until the latter went out of business. He then accepted a position with D. Stebbins, Jr., and remained until the doctor's death. On July 2, 1882, Mr. Barnes began to work for Druggist N. O. Lee in the same store from which he now retires. He clerked for Mr. Lee until 1896, when he bought out the latter. On July 2 of this year it would be just thirty years since Mr. Barnes entered the present store.

During the time that he has operated Barnes' Pharmacy he has always maintained a first class drug store in every respect and has built up a splendid trade throughout the county. He has justly earned a reputation for honest and fair dealing, keeping the best of goods, giving honest weight and honorable service. In the operation of his store Mr. Barnes has had much assistance from Mrs. Barnes who has aided a great deal in making the store the popular place that it is.

As a business man Mr. Barnes has always taken a quiet interest in the affairs of the city and although reserved in a way he is known as being fearless and independent in asserting what he believes to be right. He has ever been ready in coming to the aid of the poor and in assisting worthy enterprises.

Mr. Gehring who succeeds Mr. Barnes, is reported as being a successful young business man, having been floor manager of Marshall's drug store at the corner of Superior street and the Public Square in Cleveland for some time. He comes highly recommended as a first class pharmacist, and will undoubtedly have his share of the local patronage and continue the pharmacy in its present policy of good goods and square dealing. The owners of the building intend to have a new plate glass front of modern style put in and the interior overhauled, making it one of the best equipped drug stores in the city.

Mr. Lee was in the store 37 years, Mr. Barnes 30 years, so Mr. Gehring has a good precedent to follow.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have not fully made their plans for the future but they expect to take a well earned rest for the present and travel some.

If your children are subject to attacks of croup, watch for the first symptom, hoarseness. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the child becomes hoarse and the attack may be warded off. For sale by all dealers.

EVENS UP

A Story That Shows the Extremes of Human and Christian Endeavor

A dozen men in the smoking compartment of a Pullman car were discussing the shocking downfall of a Boston minister. The tide ran all one way. Most of them were young—evidently business men, not idlers. For a time the injury done by one recreant minister seemed a crusher. His crime was made to discredit all preachers of righteousness. [illegible]ten was to feel the foundations of good citizenship crack and crumble, says the N. Y. Mail.

Suddenly a quiet man in the corner removed his cigar, laid down the morning paper which he had been reading, and put his finger on a modestly printed news item. "Hear this," he said. "It is in the same daily news. A hardy bishop of Alaska reports that he has covered thousands of miles on snowshoes, with only an Indian guide. Many a time 70 degrees below zero often—generally 50 degrees below. This clergyman is physician to the sick Indians, he is dentist, he is adviser, he marries them, and buries their dead. He begins and ends all with the teachings of the Christian religion. Often he walks hundreds of miles on one trip. Often on his sledges he takes provision to the starving solitary miner's hut."

"That's the kind that evens up!" broke in one young man. Every man echoed the statement. In a moment the whole sentiment, that was slumping in social ruin, was changed. Men smiled as if in real relief.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of the Lake County Agricultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Lake County Agricultural Society for the election of directors and such other business as may properly come before the meeting will be held at the court house, Saturday, January 27th, 1912.

One director will be elected for three years from each of the townships of Concord, Kirtland, Mentor, Willoughby and Perry. One director will be elected from Kirtland for one year and one director will be elected from Painesville for two years. The last two are for unexpired terms, the present incumbents holding office by appointment.

According to the constitution and by-laws everyone who has paid a dollar to the society is a member for one year and may participate in all the business of the coming meeting, as the first meeting called for the organization of the society was held on Jan. 28th, 1911, within a year from the date of the coming meeting.

It is hoped that every member throughout the county will be present and that many more will join the society and take part in the business of this important meeting.

The present board of directors have worked faithfully in securing a suitable site for the fair ground; have secured a Nickel Plate sidetrack adjoining the grounds of the society, have the grading about completed for a race track, have adopted a plan for the entire grounds, showing location of all buildings and other improvements, have arrangements well under way preparatory to presenting the same to the commissioners for a county road adjacent to the fair-ground from Mentor avenue south to Johnny Cake Ridge, committees have been selected for all other improvements, fence, water system, buildings, premium list and advertising, etc., who expect soon to be able to report arrangements for the commencement of early work upon all these features so they will be completed and all ready for the fair next fall.

Thus it will be seen that the work of the board of directors in the succeeding few months will be of the greatest importance to the society and county.

The constitution and by-laws also provide that those who become members by paying one dollar into the treasury of the society are entitled to one dollars worth of admission tickets to the fair, and it is proposed that all present members and all new members shall have the benefit of this provision at the first exhibition of the society.

The complete plan made by the engineers showing the entire grounds improvements, railroad siding and proposed road will be on exhibition at this meeting.

All interested whether they are members or not are invited to attend the meeting on January 27th, at the Court House.

Agricultural Extension School Painesville, February 5, 1912.

Lake County is to be congratulated in securing an Agricultural Extension School again this year. The number of these schools that have been granted this year has been very greatly reduced due to the fact that the last legislature reduced the appropriation for this kind of work. Lake County was at first left off the list but through the efforts of the Educational Committee of the Lake County Y. M. C. A. the schedule was rearranged and Lake County given a place.

The program this year will be of especial interest to the practical farmer. If a comparison can be fairly drawn it is if any a better program than was offered last year. Two hours each day will be given to each of the following subjects: Farm Crops, Soil Fertility and Horticulture. The men who attended last year know how practically the subjects were handled and we can be assured that they will be handled in a like manner at this year's school.

Considering the renewed horticultural interests in this county it seems that the including of a horticultural course in the school this year is very timely. Horticulture is one of Lake counties most paying assets so far as agriculture is concerned. Yet at the same time Horticulture exacts the most careful scientific handling. Those in Lake County who have just set out orchards or who have old orchards or are interested in small fruits ought to make special effort to avail themselves of this opportunity offered by this school.

A "Home Makers Course" has been added this year for the women of the county. Wherever this course has been held it has proven very popular because of its very practical nature. The Program includes such subjects as "The Breakfast Menu," "Food for the Sick," "Food for Children," "Preparation of Meats and Vegetables," "Home Management" and other subjects of similar nature. The work here is largely in the nature of demonstration and lecture. This school is open to all women.

Both the men's course and the women's course are conducted by regular instructors sent here from the Ohio Agricultural College. The ladies who have charge of the Home Makers Course are practical women who have had much experience in this kind of work.

FOR INJURED WORKMEN.

If a workman in a factory in Missouri gets caught in a machine and loses an arm, he may sue for damages, hiring a lawyer on a percentage basis. In the course of years he may get a verdict, says the Kansas City Star. The money that finally comes to him is only a fraction of the amount awarded. Meanwhile the courts are clogged with personal injury cases. In the state of Washington Mr. J. A. Harzfeld, president of the public utilities commission, points out, the injured workman is at once paid a definite sum out of a fund collected by the state. He needs no lawyer. He gets all there is coming to him and he gets it without delay. That is the result of the Washington workmen's compensation act, which was signed last March. Incidentally, it is refreshing to note the opinion of the Washington supreme court in sustaining the act after the New York court of appeals had held a somewhat similar law unconstitutional. The opinion, written by Judge Fullerton, considers the New York decision and says: "Notwithstanding the decision comes from the highest court of the first state in the Union and is supported by the most persuasive argument, we have not been able to yield our consent to the views there taken."

Crusades for a natural flower come, grow, fade and depart as regularly and as sweetly as the flowers themselves. Wherefore we do not take with too great seriousness the campaign said to have been started to make the mountain laurel blossom the official emblem of these United States. But why, when we are choosing a national flower, do we not at least try to find one that has some familiar connection with our daily life? The mountain laurel campaign reminds us of the grocer who came downtown and announced that he had named his son Algernon. "Why," asked his old salesman, sadly, "why don't ye give the poor kid a name he can get work with?"

A disgusted poet is authority for the charge that if a Milton were living in Chicago today he would be a mute inglorious one. Magazine editors, this poet claims, look on poets as space fillers and not as soul-thrillers, which, perhaps, may be ascribed to the baneful influence of a pork packing center on real poetry.

New York is worried over the case of a woman who goes around proposing marriage to every man she meets. If she merely had some scheme whereby she could take his money from every man she met New York would not consider her case remarkable.

SIX ARE KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING

FIVE WOMEN AND ONE MAN DIE WHEN CARRIAGE IS HIT BY FAST TRAIN.

BODIES HORRIBLY MANGLED

Victims on Their Way to Church to Attend Early Mass Tossed High in Air, Thrown on Track and Cars Pass Over Them.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Five women and one man, all servants in the homes of the wealthy Biddle and Massey families, were killed when the carriage in which they were riding to church was struck by a Chicago to New York flyer on the Pennsylvania railroad at the Linden avenue grade crossing at Torresdale, 12 miles from this city. The dead are:

Roddy, Harry, 20
O'Connor, Nellie, 19
Malloy, Bridget, 42
Garrity, Agnes, 21
Gallagher, Rose, 18
Davison, Charles, 50

Davison, a coachman for the Biddles, was taking the women to St. Dominick's church at Holmesburg to attend early mass. They reached the Linden avenue crossing at 7:20 a. m. Davison waited for a freight train to pass and then started the horses across the track behind the last car. The next moment the pilot of the locomotive of the onrushing express hit the carriage squarely, tossing it high in the air and throwing its occupants ahead on the track. The women landed in a heap and before the train was brought to a stop all but the last car had passed over their bodies, mangling them horribly. Davison, who was sitting in the front seat, was instantly killed by the impact and hurled to one side of the tracks.

The accident caused a semi-panic among the passengers on the express. Several women fainted and others went into hysterics and the services of two physicians were required. The engineer and firemen were the first to reach the six bodies and, summoning the other members of the crew, they placed them aboard the baggage car and took them to Tacony Station. The carriage was found stuck fast to the pilot of the engine. The horse was unhurt.

32 HURT IN RAILROAD WRECK

Big Four's Detroit-Cincinnati Express Jumps Track in Ohio and Cars Go Over Embankment.

Carey, O.—While speeding down grade 40 miles an hour the Detroit-Cincinnati Big Four flyer was wrecked three miles north of here, 32 passengers being injured, two probably fatally. A spread rail is said to have caused the disaster.

W. H. Haskin of Detroit and John Moonshook, a Hungarian, are the most seriously injured, and attending surgeons say they probably will die. C. E. Kelly of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Bert McKinley of Middletown, O., also are said to be in a serious condition. The flyer, in charge of Conductor William Caskey, with Engineer Harvey Thomas of Springfield at the throttle, was over half an hour late, and was attempting to make up time on the down grade stretch from Berwick south. The train was composed of three coaches, a combination baggage car and smoker, cafe coach and a chair car. Passengers and train crew agree that the dining car seemed to leave the track first. It was dragged over the ties for 100 yards before turning over. The Pullman was next to roll over, and both were dragged some distance on their sides before they broke from the car ahead and rolled over an embankment.

The scene of the accident is known as the Base Line crossing, marking the boundary line between Seneca and Wyandot counties. It is regarded by railroaders as a "hoodoo" crossing. Two freight wrecks have occurred in the same spot.

BACK HOME AND DEAD BROKE

"The Man From Wilkesbarre" Who Had His Fling in New York City Says He Is Satisfied.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—"I am back and I'm broke, but I've had my fling and I'm satisfied. I hope my taste for prunes isn't forever spoiled."

John J. McDevitt, millionaire and high roller for a day, is plain McDevitt again. He is back in Wilkesbarre much wiser and much poorer. The "man from Wilkesbarre" who went to New York on a special train to spend his money in ascertaining the sensations attending life as a millionaire has returned here. He traveled from New York in the lower berth of a Pullman.

Tell Story of Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—With 40 members of the crew of 50 suffering with frozen noses, ears and fingers, the steamship Indiana of the Goodrich Transportation Co. docked here after being frozen four days in the lake three miles off Edgewater. Despite their suffering, every employe from Capt. Edward Wilson down to the dock hands was ordered to tell nothing of what had occurred on board by officials of the company. All of the nine passengers told a story of suffering.

WOULD CONTROL TRUSTS

ANDREW CARNEGIE DOES NOT FAVOR BREAKING THEM UP.

Little Iron Master Concludes His Testimony Before Stanley Steel Investigating Committee.

Washington, D. C.—Admitting that he gave $15,000 to the anti-imperialists in the campaign of 1900, but disclaiming any knowledge that this sum was used to defeat President McKinley for re-election, Andrew Carnegie concluded his testimony before the Stanley investigating committee.

ANDREW CARNEGIE

Carnegie lined up with the anti-trust views of Theodore Roosevelt as against the trust dissolution plans of President Taft. The little ironmaster engaged in a lengthy argument on the theory of the control of the trusts and with enthusiastic gestures declared for the control and regulation of the large trust units by the government.

"In the solution of this trust problem," said Carnegie, "there are two lines of thought in this country. One is the idea of President Taft, that these big corporations should be broken up and dissolved. The other, as expressed by former President Roosevelt, is that under the existing law we should look to the recognition of these large units under careful, close governmental regulation."

"In which of these classes do you find yourself?" he was asked.

"I know the views of Mr. Roosevelt and I agree with them," the witness answered. "I think for the present that we should allow large business organizations to continue. You should pass laws regulating these corporations and then wait to see what further legislation is necessary."

When Mr. Carnegie was excused he rose and, addressing the committee, he said: "I part with the hope that you will follow my advice to the extent that you will proceed step by step. Get your commerce court organized and then await results. I shall miss your smiling, happy faces and I hope when I am gone you will say, 'Well, Mr. Carnegie was right about some things after all.'"

SOCIALISTS GAIN IN GERMANY

Victorious in Almost Every Community and Will Have Commanding Position in Reichstag.

Berlin, Germany.—In the general election for members of the Reichstag the Socialists were victorious in almost every community, according to the latest returns, and will have a commanding position in the new chamber.

The Socialist party of Germany may be called the party of radical reform. Its demands embrace practically the complete upset or change of all existing forms and regulations, national, political and industrial. Formulated, its program embraces these demands:

Abolition of the monarchy, abolition of the Bundesrath and the upper houses of the state legislatures, abolition of the standing army and creation of a national guard, responsibility of the cabinets to the parliaments, election of all officers by popular vote, initiative, referendum and per capita representation in all legislative bodies, nationalization of all means of production, [illegible] taxation of the great fortunes and incomes, manhood suffrage and ballot for women, abolition of the indirect taxes and of the duties on the necessaries of life, shortening of hours of labor by law, prohibition of child labor, stringent women labor laws, compulsory better safety devices, creation of industrial courts on broader lines, improved inspection of industrial plants and home industries.

Two Children Are Incinerated.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Two are dead, two fatally injured and six seriously hurt as a result of an explosion of a kerosene lamp and fire at the home of Michael Kovall at Ambridge, Pa. Mrs. Kovall was getting her two children ready for bed when the lamp exploded. The burning fluid was thrown over the children and they were incinerated. Mrs. Kovall and her husband were fatally burned.

Man's Ashes Cast in River.

Cincinnati, O.—The ashes of Louis Rorer of Marysville, Ky., were cast into the Ohio river from the suspension bridge, as he had willed. His friend, Attorney Thomas Slattery, scattered the ashes, saying: "Personally repudiating the religious convictions of Louis Rorer, I do here cast into the Ohio river the ashes of his body. May they float peacefully on the bosom of the waters to a haven of rest."

Slain Day After Wedding.

Lorain, O.—On the day after his marriage Frank Horval was murdered. Horval, 28, was killed by John Fejes. The day before he married Rosa Toth, 16. The wedding was followed by a dance in a hall owned by Frank Kraznar, saloonkeeper. The next day Horval went to Kraznar's saloon to pay the dance hall rent. While Horval was engaged in conversation at the saloon, Fejes entered. Neither had ever seen the other before. Fejes, apparently without cause, stabbed Horval, who died later.

Convicts Go on a Spree.

Columbus, O.—Instead of cleaning the snow off the sidewalk outside the prison wall, as directed by Deputy Warden Resch, Charles Pickering, serving two years from Columbiana county for robbery, and William Brown, doing ten years from Fairfield county for horse stealing, took their snowplow back to the barn and with a team started from the institution, saying they were to go to the interurban station to get a package. They finally put in an appearance, both being drunk.

TELLS GOMEZ TO PRESERVE PEACE

TAFT SAYS U. S. WILL INTERVENE IF THREATENED REVOLT IS NOT SUPPRESSED.

SERVES WARNING ON CUBA

President Notifies Head of Island Republic That Trouble About Veterans' Participation in Politics Must Cease.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft has served notice on the Republic of Cuba that unless President Gomez can suppress the threatened rebellion of the veteran organization which is seeking to overthrow the Gomez government, the United States, under the terms of the Platt amendment, will be obliged to send a military force to preserve order on Cuban soil. The attitude of the United States is shown in the following note presented to the Cuban government:

"The situation in Cuba as now reported causes grave concern to the government of the United States. That the laws intended to safeguard free republican government shall be enforced and not defied, is obviously essential to the maintenance of the law, order and stability indispensable to the status of the republic of Cuba, in the continued well-being of which the United States has always evinced and cannot escape a vital interest. The president of the United States therefore looks to the president and government of Cuba to prevent the threatened situation which would compel the government of the United States, much against its desires, to consider what measures it must take in pursuance of the obligations of its relations to Cuba."

As soon as it was known that the ultimatum had been issued men conversant with Cuban affairs expressed the belief that if the American flag is again raised in Cuba it will remain there. Such an intimation in fact was served on Cuba the last time occupation of the island by American arms became necessary.

The "veterans," or the national association of Cuban veterans, which now seeks to overthrow the Gomez government, numbers from [illegible]000 to 30,000 soldiers, all of whom fought against Spain in the war of 1898. Their present commander, General Nunez, who contested the last election with Gomez and will be a candidate in the election next December, is leading them in a demand for the nullification of the civil service law which places on an equal footing the Cuban patriot and the men who fought under the Spanish flag during the long struggle for Cuban independence.

This government regards as an ultimatum the formal demand of Nunez on Gomez that the civil service act shall be nullified and holds the view that Nunez is prepared to organize a dangerous outbreak in case the wishes of himself and his followers are disregarded.

No debates exist as to the obligation of the United States to intervene in case of trouble in Cuba, where there are many American citizens and vast American commercial interests. The right of intervention was explicitly agreed to by Cuba after the Spanish-American war.

JAP CITY SWEPT BY FLAMES

Thirty Thousand Made Homeless in Southern Half of Osaka, the "Venice of the East."

Osaka, Japan.—A series of fires which broke out in the morning swept unchecked across the southern half of this city, fanned by a strong wind.

The conflagration was not under control until late in the afternoon, when, according to official figures, 5,288 buildings had been destroyed and 30,000 persons rendered homeless. During the first four hours the flames consumed more than 1,300 houses.

Osaka, "the Venice of the East," has a population of about a million and is rated one of the most important manufacturing and commercial cities of Japan. It is located on the island of Hondo on the two banks of the river Yodo and is visited by travelers for its Buddhist temples and its picturesque canals spanned by 1,300 stone and bamboo bridges.

AWFUL CASE OF DESTITUTION

Infant Is Found Frozen to Death on Breast of Half Starved Woman by Hospital Surgeon.

New York City.—Entering the two bare and bitterly cold rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Coulilitska here to take the wife to the hospital, Surgeon Markel of Gouverneur hospital found the woman's two months old infant frozen to death on her breast. The mother was half starved. Coulilitska, a tailor, told the surgeon he had been out of work for six months and had been trying to make a living by selling kindling wood. His wife had helped to support the family by taking in washing until rheumatism interfered.

Make Aeroplane Fool Proof.

New York City.—The Wright brothers have made the aeroplane fool proof. The device by means of which an aviator can fly without concerning himself in the least about the equilibrium of his aeroplane has been practically perfected and demonstrated at Dayton. A. L. Welsh, one of the pioneer Wright flyers, announced exclusively to the [illegible] at the Manhattan hotel that he had flown a craft equipped with the device recently for over a half hour in a stiff wind with complete success.

Starving Peasants Sell Children.

London.—The awful conditions prevailing among the peasants in southeastern Russia are depicted in a telegram from a doctor in Orenburg, which is published here as a special article. The doctor says that the starving peasantry in the government of Orenburg on the river Ural, owing to not having received any assistance from the authorities, are selling their children to the Khirgese nomads in the government of Bartos. Many of the people in the vicinity have died from hunger and typhus.

Says Eliminate Middleman.

Albany, N. Y.—That the farmer himself can do much toward lowering the high cost of living was the statement made by Raymond A. Pearson, president of the New York Agricultural society, in the course of his annual address before that organization in the senate chamber.

President Pearson's remedy is the elimination of the middleman. The farmer, he said, should endeavor to deal directly with the consumer in order to get his proper share of the profits.

FROM NEWSY TO SENATOR

LORIMER TELLS STORY OF HIS LIFE TO INVESTIGATORS.

Relates How He Had to Provide for Widowed Mother After Father Had Passed Away.

Washington, D. C.—From bootblack to coal heaver, from car conductor to house painter, from salt shoveler to laundry solicitor, from constable to superintendent of water mains to congressman, to bank president and finally to United States senator at 48.

This is the romance—more remarkable than any told in books—of William Lorimer, junior senator from Illinois, related by himself with quiet but dramatic force before a hushed throng in a crowded room at the senate office building here. Lorimer told his story in answer to a request by Senator Jones of Washington, member of the senate committee investigating his right to his seat, who asked the witness for a statement of his life, his work and the conditions which had surrounded him.

"Immediately after my father's death," said Lorimer, "I realized that it was necessary for me to do something. I was 10 years old at the time. Some of my friends were selling papers. They told me I could make a dollar by selling Sunday papers. My mother objected, but I finally persuaded her to let me do it. I bought 50 papers and sold them, and for three years afterwards I sold papers and blacked boots. Then I worked as cash boy for Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., and awhile later I went to work as solicitor for a laundry. For [illegible] I worked there and in a coal yard. When I was 13, I met Miss Thompson at Sunday School. She became interested in me. I studied what I could at the laundry and I used to go to her house on Monday nights. Then my mother helped me when I got home early enough. So there I picked up the foundation of what little education I have. We got along all right and had no cause for complaint until the fire of 1871. At that time we had a little money saved and kept it in an old wooden trunk, because my mother had lost some money in a savings bank. We carried some furniture away from the fire and when we went back to get the trunk the police drove us off. The fire lost me my paper and shine customers, too. After that I worked in a packing house—the Wilson Packing Co. I started as a laborer and learned the meat canning business in two years. Then I went to work for the Nelson Morris Co. and was laid off when they shut down part of their plant. I found work at Armour's shoveling salt in the cellar and when a new superintendent came on I was transferred to the meat canning department. I worked there nearly three years.

"At the end of that time I took a job as car conductor on W. 12th street and kept it up for five years. When I was about 23 years old I had two or three hundred dollars and I started in business as a house painter. I kept at it as long as my money lasted, and then I went back to the car. About that time I was elected constable. In 1886, when I was 24 years old, I was selling real estate. The next spring I was appointed assistant superintendent of water main extension under the Roach administration. I kept on selling real estate. Then I got a teaming contract and employed about 50 teams for a year. At the end of that time a real estate boom came on and I went into it extensively. I was appointed superintendent of the water department and resigned after a year to take the nomination of clerk of the Superior court, but I was defeated. In 1894 I was elected to congress. That year I traded a lot of odds and ends of real estate, borrowed some money and bought an interest in the Murphy Brick Co. Later I organized what is now known as the Lorimer & Gallagher Construction Co. About two years ago I organized the LaSalle Street National bank. I sold out my interest in the brick company about a year ago. I ran for congress eight times and was defeated once."

MINISTER TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Clergyman Charged With Having Performed Illegal Operation on Pittsburgh Girl Is Arrested.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Rev. William D. McFarland, head of the United Presbyterian mission school at Greeneville, Tenn., who was charged by his former secretary, Elsie Dodd Coe, with having performed two operations which resulted in her death, was arrested at his old home in Cedar Creek, Tenn., where his wife is said to be.

Just after telegraphic notification of the divine's arrest was received the grand jury returned a true bill indicting him for performing an alleged criminal operation and a county detective was sent south to bring him to Pittsburgh when arrested. The "other man" in the case, young Rollin McConnell, formerly a bank clerk in Pittsburg, but now of Chicago, who was named in the girl's deposition as having been responsible for the delicate condition before the operations, came to Pittsburgh voluntarily and told the story of his relations with Miss Coe to the district attorney. He learned of Miss Coe's condition several months ago and came to Pittsburgh, according to his story, and urged her to marry him as the only solution of the difficulty. For reasons which he declares she refused to divulge to him she refused. The district attorney says he does not believe McConnell had any knowledge of the operations.

Remembers Deserted Wives.

Chicago, Ill.—Richard T. Crane, the wealthy Chicago manufacturer and enemy of higher education, who died recently, left $1,000,000 for the benefit of women deserted by their husbands and $2,000,000 for philanthropies. Out of an estate valued at $10,000,000 not one cent was left for education, according to his will, which has just been filed for probate.

The money for aiding husbandless women will be expended in providing country homes near Chicago for such women and their helpless children.

State Assemblyman Slain.

San Francisco, Cal.—State Assemblyman John J. Mullaly, 56, one of the proprietors of a saloon at 116 Eighth street, was shot and instantly killed by a trio of masked highwaymen whom he had attempted to rout when they held up his place early in the morning.

One patron was shot in the leg and three other men who were in the place at the time escaped the volley fired by the bandits by dropping to the floor. The robbers escaped after ransacking the place.

Indian Students Are Married.

Carlisle, Pa.—As the climax to a romance that began when the bridegroom was injured on the football field in the Carlisle-Syracuse game and was nursed in the Indian school hospital by the bride, Henry Roberts, 23, of Pawnee, Okla., and Miss Rose DeNomie, 19, of Ashland, Wis., were married here. Roberts has received a clerical appointment in the Shoshone Indian school in Wyoming at a salary of $900 a year. He will take his bride there. The husband is a Pawnee and his bride a Chippewa.

OFFICERS ARE ALL RE-ELECTED

Ohio State League Meeting Is Harmonious and Much Business Transacted

ADMIT MANSFIELD AND NEWARK

Salary Limit of $1,200 Decided Upon and $1,000 Deposit Required of Each Club Before February 26th.

Columbus.—Admission of Mansfield and Newark to the Ohio State League circuit was decided upon during the annual meeting held here. Springfield territory was released so that that city can take a place in the Central League.

Club owners of Lima, Lancaster, Portsmouth, Chillicothe and Hamilton agreed unanimously to the circuit changes proposed. With seven clubs in line the circuit committee was continued in service, with instructions to make the best possible selection for the home of the eighth club. There are no less than six locations to be considered.

It was voted to operate during the coming season with a salary limit of $1,200 and a fine of $200 for each and every offense against this rule was decided upon. Each club before February 26 will post $1,000 as a guarantee that the season will be completed and all league requirements adhered to.

R. W. Read, president, and Joe F. Carr, secretary and treasurer, were re-elected. League headquarters will be continued in Columbus.

By resolution players of all clubs will be forced to report to the president, when there is any arrearage of salary for more than five days.

Though not settled definitely, the season will not start until late in April or possibly in May.

The clubs were represented as follows: Chillicothe, President Siberill, Directors Bergman and Seigfried. President Gableman, of Portsmouth, met his manager, Pete Childs. Lancaster was represented by E. S. Barnard, vice president of the Cleveland club, and W. O. Nethacker, business manager of it last season after Toledo secured control. Judge J. B. Connaughton, treasurer of the club, came up from Hamilton. Paul Sturgis, president, and H. B. Brunner, secretary, looked after the Mansfield entry. Robert Quinn acted for the Lima club.

INTEREST STOPPED.

Marysville.—On the grounds that $75,000 worth of bonds were sold to Weil, Roth & Co., of Cincinnati, by a former board of commissioners of Union county at par without advertising, Prosecuting Attorney John H. Willis has declared the sale illegal and the interest payment on the bonds has been stopped. The prosecutor has ordered County Auditor Charles A. Morelock not to issue any more warrants for interest on the bonds. Willis is endeavoring to get Weil, Roth & Co. to pay a premium on the bonds, but thus far has been unsuccessful. The bonds were sold in 1908.

WRECK AT CAMBRIDGE.

Cambridge.—Speeding 50 miles an hour, down grade, the Pennsylvania fast train, due here at 9 a. m., ran through an open switch at Trail Run. The train struck and killed Rudor Kocherka, aged 50, who was walking along the track. Chas. Vaugh, the engineer, of Cambridge, stuck to his post. The train shot across the track of the Midland Power and Traction Co., missing by less than a foot a street car carrying eight persons. Then with speed lessened it crashed into a mine train ahead. None of the coaches left the track but the passengers were badly shaken up.

TEMPORARY HOSPITAL.

Portsmouth.—To be in better shape to care for any of the unfortunate men in their employ who may be injured, the Portsmouth Steel Co. has taken steps to furnish and maintain an emergency hospital, which will be fitted out under the direction of their surgeon. The hospital will be equipped with every latest appliance, so that it will be possible to respond to any call. Two beds will be placed in the hospital, and all the injured are assured of the best kind of treatment.

VENERABLE WOMAN DEAD.

Ottoway.—Mrs. Daniel Redman, of this place, died, aged 98 years, 9 months and 1 day. Mrs. Redman was the wife of a soldier of the War of 1812, and drew a pension for her husband's service in that war. She has three sons living and one daughter dead. Her oldest son, Mr. Samuel Redman, of Ottoway, O., with whom she made her home, is 72 years old. Mrs. Redman had many grandchildren, several great-grandchildren and three great, great-grandchildren.

BUILDERS MEET.

Annual Convention of 1913 to Be Held in City of Cincinnati.

Springfield.—Cincinnati landed the 1913 meeting of the State Builders' Exchange, this being decided at the closing session here. The state builders held their annual convention in this city.

Officers were elected as follows: C. A. Schuster, president; J. C. Skeel, Cleveland, first vice president; C. Taylor Handman, Cincinnati, second vice president; John W. Boren, Dayton, third vice president, and L. A. Roberts, Cleveland, secretary and treasurer.

One of the most important actions taken up was the addition of a resolution commending the federal authorities upon their investigation to fix the responsibility for the recent dynamiting outrages throughout the country. Owing to the lack of necessary information the matter of the new workmen's compensation law was referred to the state officers and executive committee for a later report.

A committee composed of F. G. Kemlin and S. S. King, of Dayton, was appointed to represent the association at a meeting of the State Lumber Dealers association in Columbus, when they will consider the subject of a more effective lien law.

DOG COMES NEAR GETTING EVEN.

Six Men Are Badly Stunned While Playing Trick On Stray Canine.

Newark.—Six men were badly stunned at the plant of Lyna Wilson, six miles east of Newark by an explosion of dynamite.

They tied a small stick of dynamite to the tail of a strange dog, which had been about the premises, and took to their heels after lighting the short fuse. The dog, being playful persisted in following his tormentors.

The men ran into an old store building used to store street grading implements.

The dog followed.

The fire on the fuse was getting nearer to the dynamite. The dog was getting nearer to the men. The dog barked and the men yelled. The fuse, fanned by the wind, burned faster. The men were caught in the shed, and slammed the door behind them. The dog found an opening in the wall large enough to enter and was about half way in when the dynamite let go.

Parts of the animal were blown inside and parts outside the building, and every one of the six men was badly stunned by the force of the explosion.

None was seriously injured.

BIG CONCERN ELECTS OFFICERS.

Wellston.—The International Mining and Manufacturing Co., recently incorporated at $8,000,000, with headquarters in this city, has elected the following board of directors: Edward Smith, London; S. F. Howland, New York; E. B. Bingham, Toledo; J. M. Partridge, Wellston, and R. C. Lupton, Wilmington, Del. This is the concern which proposes to build a railroad from Lake Erie to the Ohio river, has options on thousands of acres of land in Jackson, Lawrence and Scioto counties and also plans to build cement and brick plants.

RED MEN OFFICERS.

Cincinnati.—The official count of the election for great chiefs of the great council of the Improved Order of Red Men of Ohio was completed and the result announced by Great Sachem Max Lovy, of Cincinnati, was as followed: Great sachem, J. Guy O'Donnell, Troy; great senior sagamore, M. A. Bridge, Columbus; great junior sagamore, Charles E. Baker, Steubenville; great prophet, Max Lovy, Cincinnati; great representatives, James C. Kerr, Columbus; Sam Gorham, Mansfield; Valentine Rice, Chillicothe; Leslie H. Wise, Dayton.

ODD COINCIDENCE.

West Union.—Robert Crawford, aged 63, a resident of North Liberty, Adams county, died after a short illness with pneumonia. He was a brother-in-law of John McGoveney, who was killed the same day while loading a horse to water. Their deaths occurred within six hours of each other. The two men married sisters over 40 years ago, and had lived neighbors during these long years. Even death failed to separate them but a few hours.

I. O. O. F. AT HAMILTON.

Arrangements were made for a big meeting of Odd Fellows in this city on January 24th, at which time Grand Master Bachtal and Grand Secretary C. H. Lyman will be present, and arrangements made for the grand lodge which meets here next June. After this meeting Chairman Barlow will appoint a committee to meet with the Chamber of Commerce to plan for the entertainment of the delegates, about 2,000 being expected.

SEES BETTER AND CHEAPER SERVICE

President Submits an Economy and Efficiency Message.

RESULTS OF INQUIRY TOLD

Special Commission Found Extravagant and Antiquated Methods in Government Work and Many Unnecessary Offices.

Washington.—President Taft has submitted to congress a special message on economy and efficiency in the government service. The message in part is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I submit for the information of the congress this report of progress made in the inquiry into the efficiency and economy of the methods of transacting public business.

Efficiency and economy in the government service have been demanded with increasing insistence for a generation. Real economy is the result of efficient organization. By perfecting the organization the same benefits may be obtained at less expense. A reduction in the total of the annual appropriations is not in itself a proof of economy, since it is often accompanied by a decrease in efficiency. The needs of the nation may demand a large increase of expenditure, yet to keep the total appropriation within the expected revenue is necessary to the maintenance of public credit.

Upon the president must rest a large share of the responsibility for the demands made upon the treasury for the current administration of the executive branch of the government. Upon the congress must rest responsibility for those grants of public funds which are made for other purposes.

Reason for the Inquiry.

Recognizing my share of responsibility for efficient and economical administration, I have endeavored during the past two years with the assistance of heads of departments to secure the best results. As one of the means to this end I requested a grant from congress to make my efforts more effective.

An appropriation of $100,000 was made June 25, 1910, to enable the president to inquire into the methods of transacting the public business of the executive departments and other government establishments and to recommend to congress such legislation as may be necessary to carry into effect changes found to be desirable that cannot be accomplished by executive action alone. I have been given this fund to enable me to take action and to make specific recommendations with respect to the details of transacting the business of an organization whose activities are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. The operations of the government affect the interest of every person living within the jurisdiction of the United States. Its organization embraces stations and centers of work located in every city and in many local subdivisions of the country. Its gross expenditures amount to nearly $1,000,000,000 annually. Including the personnel of the military and naval establishments, more than 400,000 persons are required to do the work imposed by law upon the executive branch of the government.

Plan of the Work.

In accordance with my instructions, the commission on economy and efficiency which I organized to aid me in the inquiry has directed its efforts primarily to the formulation of concrete recommendations looking to the betterment of the fundamental conditions under which governmental operations must be carried on. With a basis thus laid, it has proceeded to the prosecution of detailed studies of individual services and classes of work, and of particular practices and methods, pushing these studies as far and covering as many points and services as the resources and time at its disposal have permitted.

In approaching its task it has divided the work into five fields of inquiry having to do respectively with organization, personnel, business methods, accounting and reporting, and the budget.

Comprehensive Plan of Organization.

On organization the commission has entered upon the preparation of three series of reports. The first series deals with the manner in which the services of the government should be grouped in departments. This is a matter of fundamental importance. It is only after a satisfactory solution of this problem that many important measures of reform become possible.

The second and third series of reports deal, respectively, with the organization and activities of particular services, and the form of organization for the performance of particular business operations.

One of the reports of the second series is upon the revenue cutter service, which costs the government over two and a half million dollars each year. In the opinion of the commission its varied activities can be performed with equal, or greater, advantage by other services. The commission, therefore, recommends that it be abolished. It is estimated that by so doing a saving of not less than $1,000,000 a year can be made.

Another report illustrating the second series recommends that the lighthouse and life saving services be administered by a single bureau, instead of as at present by two bureaus located in different departments. These services have much in common. Geographically, they are similarly located; administratively, they have many of the same problems. It is estimated that consolidation would result in a saving of not less than $100,000 annually.

Abolition of Local Offices.

Perhaps the part of the organization in which the greatest economy in public expenditure is possible is to be found in the numerous local offices of the government. In some instances the establishment and the discontinuance of these local offices are matters of administrative discretion. In other instances they are established by permanent law in such a manner that their discontinuance is beyond the power of the president or that of any executive officer.

The responsibility for the maintenance of these conditions must naturally be divided between the congress and the executive. But that the executive has performed his duty when he has called the attention of the congress to the matter must also be admitted. Realizing my responsibility in the premises, I have directed the commission to prepare a report setting forth the positions in the local services of the government which may be discontinued with advantage, the saving which would result from such action and the changes in law which are necessary to carry into effect changes in organization found to be desirable. On the coming in of the report, such offices as may be found useless and can be abolished will be so treated by executive order.

Classification of Local Officers.

In my recent message to the congress I urged consideration of the necessity of placing in the classified service all of the local officers under the departments of the treasury, the interior, postoffice and commerce and labor.

The next step which must be taken is to require of heads of bureaus in the departments at Washington, and of most of the local officers under the departments, qualifications of capacity similar to those now required of certain heads of bureaus and of local officers. The extension of the merit system to these officers and a needed readjustment of salaries will have important effects in securing greater economy and efficiency.

In the first place, the possession by the incumbents of these positions of requisite qualifications must in itself promote efficiency.

In the second place, the removal of local officers from the realm of political patronage in many cases would reduce the pay roll of the field services. At the present time the incumbents of many of these positions leave the actual performance of many of their duties to deputies and assistants. The government often pays two persons for doing work that could easily be done by one. What is the loss to the government cannot be stated, but that it is very large cannot be denied, when it is remembered how numerous are the local officers in the postal, customs, internal revenue, public lands, and other field services of the government.

In the third place, so long as local officers are within the sphere of political patronage it is difficult to consider the question of the establishment or discontinuance of local offices apart from the effect upon local political situations.

Finally, the view that these various offices are to be filled as a result of political considerations has for its consequence the necessity that the president and members of congress devote to matters of patronage time which they should devote to questions of policy and administration.

Superannuation.

Attention has been directed in recent years to the need of a suitable plan of retiring the superannuated employes in the executive civil service. In the belief that it is desirable that any steps toward the establishment of such a plan shall be taken with caution, I instructed the commission to make an inquiry first into the conditions at Washington. This inquiry has been directed to the ascertainment of the extent to which superannuation now exists and to the consideration of the availability of the various plans which either have been proposed for adoption in this country or have actually been adopted in other countries. I shall submit in the near future, for the consideration of the congress, a plan for the retirement of aged employes in the civil service which will safeguard the interests of the government and at the same time make reasonable provision for the needs of those who have given the best part of their lives to the service of the state.

Business Methods.

In every case where technical processes have been studied it has been demonstrated beyond question that large economies may be effected. The subjects first approached were those which lie close to each administrator, viz., office practices. An illustration of the possibilities within this field may be found in the results of the inquiry into the methods of handling and filing correspondence. Every office in the government has reported its methods to the commission. These reports brought to light the fact that present methods were quite the reverse of uniform. Some offices follow the practice of briefing all correspondence; some do not. Some have flat files, others fold all papers before filing. Some use press copies, others retain only carbon copies.

Need for Labor-Saving Office Devices.

The use of labor-saving office devices in the service has been made the subject of special inquiry. An impression prevails that the government is not making use of mechanical devices for economizing labor to the same extent as are efficiently managed private enterprises. A study has been made of the extent to which devices of this character are now being employed in the several branches of the government and the opportunities that exist for their more general use.

The efforts of the commission resulted also in the adoption by several bureaus or departments of improved methods of doing copying. The amount of copy work heretofore done by hand each year in the many offices is estimated to aggregate several hundred thousand dollars. The commission exhibited, at its offices, appliances that were thought to be especially adapted to this kind of government work. Following these demonstrations methods of copying were introduced which have brought about a saving of over 75 per cent. in offices where used for six months. This change in one small cross-section of office practice will more than offset the whole cost of my inquiry.

Waste in the Distribution of Public Documents.

Going outside the office, one of the business processes which have been investigated is the distribution of department documents. This is a subject with which both the congress and administration heads are familiar. The prevailing practice in handling departmental publications is to have them manufactured at the government printing office; each job when completed is delivered to the department; here the books or pamphlets are wrapped and addressed; then are then sent to the postoffice; there they are assorted and prepared for shipment through the mails; from the postoffice they are sent to the railroad station, which is only a few steps from the government printing office, whence they started. The results of this laborious and circuitous method is to make the use of the best mechanical equipment impracticable and to waste each year not less than a quarter of a million dollars of government funds in useless handling, to say nothing of the indirect loss due to lack of proper co-ordination.

Wasteful Use of Properties and Equipment.

The use of equipment is a matter which also has been investigated. Up to the present time this investigation has been in the main confined to the subject of electric lighting. The government pays over $600,000 per year for electric current. It has made large capital outlays for wiring and fixtures. With the increasing demands in many buildings the present equipment is taxed to its limit and if the present methods are continued much of this wiring must be done over. In many places employees are working at a great physical disadvantage due to inadequate and improper lighting and thereby with reduced efficiency. In every place where the inquiry has been conducted it appears that there is large waste; that without the cost of rewiring, simply by giving proper attention to location of lights and the use of proper lamps and reflectors, the light efficiency at points where needed may be much increased and the cost of current reduced from 30 to 60 per cent. Other inquiries into the use which is being made of properties and equipment are contemplated which promise even larger results.

Lack of Specifications.

The importance of establishing and maintaining standard specifications is found not only in the possibility of very materially reducing the direct cost of government trading, but also in insuring, in the service materials, supplies and equipment which are better adapted to its purposes. One of the results of indefiniteness of specifications is to impose contract conditions which make it extra hazardous for persons to enter into contractual relations. This not only deprives the government of the advantage of broad competition, but causes it to pay an added margin in price to vendors who must carry the risk.

Excessive Cost of Travel.

One of the first steps taken toward constructive work was the reclassification of the expenditures for the year 1910 by objects. The foundation was thus made for the investigation of government trading practices. While it was recognized that this large field could not be covered within a year except at enormous cost, the subjects of "Transportation of persons" and "Subsistence while in travel status" were taken as concrete examples. The annual cost of travel to the government was found to be about $12,000,000. It was also found that the government employees were traveling in practically every way that was open to the public. It was further found that although the government was the largest user of transportation it was buying railroad tickets on a less favorable basis than would be possible if the subject of traveling expenditures were systematically handled from the point of view of the government as a whole. The form of ticket most often used between such points as New York, Philadelphia and Washington was the single-trip first-class ticket. In two departments definite tests have been made in the use of mileage books and in each practically the same result has been reported, viz., an average saving of a little over one half of one cent per mile.

Better Methods for Purchasing.

Through a long period of years and by numerous laws and orders there has grown up a procedure governing public advertising and contracting that is more burdensome and expensive in some cases than is necessary. The procedure is not uniform in the various departments; it is not uniform in many cases for the different services in the same department. To make uniform the requirements so far as practicable will be in the interest of economy and efficiency and bring about that simplicity that will secure the largest opportunity for contractors to bid for government work, and will secure for the government the most favorable prices obtained by any purchaser.

The Budget.

The United States is the only great nation whose government is operated without a budget. This fact seems to be more striking when it is considered that budgets and budget procedures are the outgrowth of democratic doctrines and have had an important part in the development of modern constitutional rights. The American commonwealth has suffered much from irresponsibility on the part of its governing agencies. The constitutional purpose of a budget is to make government responsive to public opinion and responsible for its acts.

The Budget as an Annual Program.

A budget should be the means for getting before the legislative branch, before the press and before the people a definite annual program of business to be financed. It should be in the nature of a prospectus both of revenues and expenditures. It should comprehend every relation of the government to the people, whether with reference to the raising of revenues or the rendering of service.

In many foreign countries the annual budget program is discussed with special reference to the revenue to be raised, the thought being that the raising of revenue bears more direct relation to welfare than does government expenditure. Around questions of source of revenue political parties have been organized, and on such questions voters in the United States have taken sides since the first revenue law was proposed.

Public-Welfare Questions.

The principal government objects in which the people of the United States are interested include:

The national defense, the protection of persons and property, the promotion of friendly relations and the protection of American interests abroad, the regulation of commerce and industry, the promotion of agriculture, fisheries, forestry and mining, the promotion of manufacturing, commerce, and banking, the promotion of transportation and communication, the postal service, including postal savings and parcels post, the care for and utilization of the public domain, the promotion of education, art, science and recreation, the promotion of the public health, the care and education of the Indians and other wards of the nation.

These are public-welfare questions in which I assume every citizen has a vital interest. I believe that every member of congress, as an official representative of the people, each editor, as a non-official representative of public opinion, each citizen, as a beneficiary of the trust imposed on officers of the government, should be able readily to ascertain how much has been spent for each of these purposes; how much has been appropriated for the current year; how much the administration is asking for each of these purposes for the next fiscal year.

Furthermore, each person interested should have laid before him a clear, well-digested statement showing in detail whether moneys appropriated have been economically spent and whether each division or office has been efficiently run. This is the information which should be available each year in the form of a budget and in detail accounts and reports supporting the budget.

Continuance of the Commission.

I ask the continuance of this commission on economy and efficiency because of the excellent beginning which has been made toward the reorganization of the machinery of this government on business principles. I ask it because its work is entirely non-partisan in character and ought to apply to every citizen who wishes to give effectiveness to popular government in which we feel a just pride. The work further commends itself for the reason that the cost of organization and work has been carefully considered at every point. Three months were taken in consideration of plans before the inquiry was begun; six months were then spent in preliminary investigations before the commission was organized; before March 3, 1911, when I asked for a continuation of the original appropriation for the current year, only $12,000 had been spent.

The expenditure for the inquiry during the present fiscal year is at the rate of $120,000. The mass of information which must be collected, digested and summarized pertaining to each subject of inquiry is enormous. From the results obtained it is evident that every dollar which is spent in the prosecution of the inquiry in the future will result in manifold savings. Every economy which has been or will be effected through changes in organization or method will inure to the benefit of the government and of the people in increasing measure through the years which follow. It is clearly the part of wisdom to provide for the coming years means at least equal to those available during the current year, and in my opinion the appropriation should be increased to $200,000, and an additional amount of $50,000 should be provided for the publication of these results, which will be of continuing value to officers of the government and to the people.

Mixture of Family Names.

This is a good example of what is a common phenomenon in the polyglot Balkans: A man named Pavel—that is, Paul—had five sons; one settled in Athens, called himself Pavopoulo, the Greek form of Paulson; the second went to Belgrade and called himself Pavlovich; the third in Sofia called himself Pavloff; the fourth made his home in Bucharest under the name Pavlescu, while the youngest set up in business in Constantinople, assuming the Turkish form of Pavloglu.

Actual Salesmanship.

A man may make $25 a day in his regular business, and not think much about it, but he always feels like a leading financier when he sells the old bottles in the cellar for 47 cents.—Ohio State Journal.

Love's Results.

Love is the sort of thing that makes men do the most desperate things—cut their throats and shoot themselves, and even break out into poetry!—Tom Gallon.

Why Old Myths Survive.

The destroyers of fine dramatic myths tell us nowadays that the Caliph Omar did not burn the ancient library of Alexandria, and therefore did not have a chance to say that all the books in it that agreed with the Koran were superfluous, and all that disagreed with the Koran were pernicious. Doubtless the perennial freshness and vitality of the tale are due to an everlasting normal human hatred of weed-grown, literary graveyards.

JUDGE WINCH FAVORS RECALL

Of Incompetent Lawyers In Address Before State Meeting of Probate Judges

IS CHIEF REASON FOR DELAYS

Other Jurists Speak at Annual Banquet at Southern Hotel, Which Is Attended By More Than Sixty.

Columbus.—At the annual banquet of probate judges at the Southern hotel Judge Louis A. Winch, of Cleveland, chief of the circuit judges of Ohio, said he advocated the recall of lawyers for incompetency. He maintained that attorneys do more harm by inefficiency than dishonesty. The principal reason for delay and the defeat of justice in Ohio, he said, was the poor pleading of incompetent attorneys. He believed that such lawyers should be recalled or suspended by the trial judge until they should be able to pass another bar examination.

Judge Winch, in speaking of judges themselves, declared that, ever since the time of Pontius Pilate, there had been judges who had disgraced the judicial ermine.

Former Judge William M. Rockell, of Cincinnati, spoke in opposition to the proposed change in judicial procedure in the constitution itself. He admitted that a change was justified, but believed it could be done by the general assembly.

Judge James V. Mynus of Perry county, president of the probate judges' organization, delivered the address of welcome. Judge William H. Lueders, of Cincinnati, was toastmaster. Supreme Court Judge Shauck was one of the speakers. More than 60 attended.

Get Big Award.

Heirs of Charles G. Bledinger, of Cincinnati, recover $38,807.57 from the estate of Ebenezer Bowen through a decision of the Supreme Court affirming the decisions of the Hamilton County Superior and Circuit Courts. Bledinger and Bowen were partners in the manufacture of an improved paper bottle wrapper, the machine for the making of which was invented by Bledinger. Under a contract made in 1890 supplemented by one made in 1893, Bledinger was to receive a handsome royalty. On December 23, 1893, Bledinger suddenly became insane and was incapacitated for several years. Bowen refused his guardian entrance to the factory or to pay the royalty, and this formed the basis of the suit.

How To Kill.

Believing that much unnecessary pain could be avoided through a more general knowledge of the manner in which to kill fish and animals, the Ohio Humane Society has prepared for circulation the following rules on the subject: Large animals—Shoot through brain, or strike heavy blow on head. Crabs—Thrust a sharp knife through the mouth and body with one blow. Lobsters—Insert narrow knife into third joint of tail, severing the spinal cord. Eels—Cut off the head with one blow. Fish—Strike heavy blow on back of head. Fowls—Strike heavy blow on head with short club, and bleed, or, better, cut off head.

Corporation Tax.

Gathering up a few loose ends of lists of foreign and domestic corporations and a small number of public utilities the Tax Commission has certified to the Auditor of State domestic corporations with a subscribed capital of $1,418,010, and foreign corporations with a proportion of $581,672 used in Ohio, and gross receipts and earnings of public utilities in the sum of $67,571. The fees of the various concerns which will be paid into the state treasury amount to $4,382.71. Nearly all of this amount will be paid by companies that have not heretofore filed reports or paid fees in this state.

Percheron Importers.

The annual meeting of the American Breeders and Importers of Percheron Registry Society was held here and elected the following officers: President, M. T. Moorehead, Plainfield, Ohio; Vice-President, Marion Crite, of Pern, Ind.; Secretary-Treasurer, John H. Forney, Plainfield, Ohio. The meeting brought together many breeders and importers from nearly every state in the Union.

Insane Men Pardoned.

Thomas J. Young, an insane prisoner at the penitentiary, has been pardoned by Gov. Harmon on condition that relatives in Kentucky take him to their home and care for him. Young is serving a life sentence from Montgomery county.

To Get That $100,000.

Showing that the appeal of the Ohio-Columbus centennial is statewide, three men from out of Columbus will appear in Washington before the committee on appropriations when that body considers the bill for $100,000 appropriation for the centennial which has been introduced into the house by Congressman Taylor. The men are General Charles H. Grosvenor of Athens, General R. B. Brown of Zanesville and John A. Poland of Chillicothe. They spoke before the committee of the whole Monday.

Judges Banquet.

Fully 50 judges attended the annual banquet of the Association of Probate Judges of Ohio held Tuesday evening at the Southern hotel. Wm. H. Lueders, probate judge of Hamilton county, was in charge of arrangements. Judge James V. Hynus, of Perry county, presided as president of the association. Other speakers were Judge John A. Shauck, of the supreme court, and Louis A. Winch, presiding judge of the circuit courts of Ohio. A feast of good things to eat as well as of oratory was enjoyed.

Court Decides Law Is Good.

Common Pleas Judge Gorman handed down a decision in Cincinnati, holding constitutional Section 12,943 of the General Code of Ohio, which makes it a misdemeanor for any officer or employe of a company, corporation or person, to prevent employes from joining, forming or belonging to a lawful labor union, or to attempt to coerce them by discharging or threatening to discharge them from their positions, because of their connection with such labor unions.

The decision was in the case of Saul Berger, an employe of the Roth Shoe Co., and William Skahn, an employe of the MacDonald & Kiley Co., who were arrested on warrants sworn out by men who claimed that they had been discharged because they belong to the Shoe Workers' union. The arrests grew out of the strike of the shoe workers here, and followed injunction suits that were filed by the shoe manufacturers against the striking workmen.

The shoe manufacturers, fighting the case for their arrested employes, secured writs of habeas corpus for their release, and at the hearing pleaded that the state law is unconstitutional as it is in contravention of the fifth and fourth amendments to the United States constitution and of Section 1, Article 1, and Section 26, Article 2, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, and it was to these points that the case was argued.

Governor Harmon Speaks.

Governor Harmon was the chief speaker at the annual agricultural meeting under the direction of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture here today. He spoke of the importance of agriculture advancement and of soil conservation. W. A. Eudaly, President of the Ohio Farmers' Congress, who introduced Governor Harmon, also discussed soil conservation and the practicability of scientific farming as opposed to the old style hit-or-miss agriculture. Jesse Taylor, Secretary of the Good Roads Association, pointed out the immediate and concrete returns to farmers through road improvement, giving figures to sustain his claims that almost no other form of investment brings such direct results to agriculturists.

In the afternoon Prof. C. S. Plumb, of the State University, talked of the greater possibilities of live stock development.

Plans To Retrench.

State Labor Commissioner Fred Lange has begun a retrenchment scheme to reduce expenses in his department so that he will be enabled to enforce the new mattress inspection law. This law was passed by the last general assembly but no money was appropriated to enforce its provisions. He believes that enough may be saved by economy to supply the deficiency, as he thinks the law should be vigorously enforced.

Stand Pipe Torn Down.

According to N. & W. officials the recent cold wave gave the railroad company all sorts of trouble on the Columbus district. Stand pipes were frozen up solid in no less than five instances, while one of them located at Dorney was torn down when the fireman failed to raise the "spout." The engine picked up the big trough and started off. Before the engine could be stopped, the stand pipe came toppling down.

Health Men Will Meet.

A call has been issued by the state board of health for a conference of local boards of health of the state to be held in the state house January 18-19. Health questions will be discussed, stream pollution being one of the most important. A good attendance is expected and the state board are doing all in their power to arouse interest. Some good addresses have been prepared for the occasion.

Wants Association.

The formation of an association of the Common Pleas Court Judges of Ohio, which will hold regular meetings to discuss matters of legal procedure, is the suggestion contained in a letter written by Judge Wade Cushing to the 101 Common Pleas Judges of Ohio. According to the plan advocated by Judge Cushing Cincinnati is to be the meeting place of the first gathering on February 10.

Delegates Appointed.

Mayor Karb on Saturday appointed twelve delegates to attend the meeting to be held January 24 and 25, in Columbus, of representatives of the eighty-four cities of Ohio, to decide whether to organize to keep an eye on the doings of the constitutional convention in its actions relating to cities—meaning municipalities with a population of 5,000 or more.

Can Use All or Part.

Attorney General Hogan has advised the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical society that it may use what it deems necessary of the $100,000 appropriated for its new building going up on the Ohio State university grounds for equipment and apparatus.

Prominent Minister Dies.

Stricken with paralysis while delivering a sermon from his pulpit in New Lexington, Rev. I. T. Haddox, until last September pastor of the North Methodist church, died at his home without regaining consciousness. Since 1875 Rev. Mr. Haddox had been in the Methodist ministry. In 1885 he was superintendent of the Portsmouth district and from 1898 to 1901 was pastor of the Third Street church in this city. After serving a pastorate in Chillicothe he returned to Columbus as pastor of North church.

Can Mandamus Mayor.

Action mandamusing the mayor of Barberton to place his signature on an ordinance fixing salaries for officials under the city plan which recently became operative in that place was advised in an opinion by Attorney General Hogan to City Solicitor O. D. Evarard, of Barberton. According to the solicitor Barberton became a city thirty days after the proclamation of the census and the village council, which is presided over by the mayor, passed an order to fix salaries in the city government.

VITALITY OF THE BIBLE

MOST books die young. Many books are dead already when they are born. There is no demand for them. They contain nothing that men want. They are not read. They make no impression even on the community where they are published. They are like a feather which flutters through the air and no one hears it pass, and no one knows when or where it falls.

Some books come into the world with a great flourish of trumpets. They are highly commended by reviewers and critics. They leap into prominence in the literary world at a single bound. They create a sensation for a time and are the talk of every town. But after a few years the demand for them declines, they slowly die, and are soon out of print. A few books have lived through many generations. The Iliad of Homer, the history of Herodotus and the Republic of Plato, the orations and essays of Cicero, written thousands of years ago, still live. They contain something which men want and will not willingly permit to perish.

But the Bible, which is one of the oldest books in the world, is the most vigorous book on the globe. Many efforts have been made to kill it. It has been burned, shut up in prison, bound with chains, pelted with rhetoric and logic and eloquence and ridicule. Again and again its enemies have pronounced it dead. They fondly hoped that intelligent people would no longer read it. But it still lives. Its enemies have perished. Their weapons have decayed. But the Bible lives on.

Not as the works of Homer and Plato live does the Bible live. They are read only by a small circle of admirers and students. Their influence on this generation is feeble indeed. But the Bible is the most popular book in the world and the most potent factor in modern thought and civilization. Its enemies have not been able to kill it, time has not destroyed it, and advance of learning and science has not affected its influence.

Few books can survive transportation. They show signs of life while they remain at home where the atmosphere is congenial, but carry them over the sea, where educational, social and political conditions are different they wither and die. They are like trees which will not endure transplanting from one soil to another. But the Bible has crossed all seas and all continents, it has overleaped the boundaries of all nations; it has gone from island to island, from zone to zone, and everywhere it is the same fresh, vigorous, living book.

Translation is a severe test of the vitality of a book. It is almost impossible for a book to carry with it the vigor and freshness of the original into a new language. Translated into a foreign tongue, it seems like another book. It has lost some of the fragrance and richness of its thought and feeling. But the Bible has been translated into four hundred different languages, and sometimes under most unfavorable conditions, and still it carries with it into every language the sweet savor of its truth and life. It is a tree for all climes, a message for all hearts, a song for all tongues, a book for all people. "The grass withereth, and the flower fadeth, but the word of the Lord endureth forever."—Christian Advocate.

Our Portion.

"All things are yours . . . ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."—I Cor. 3:21, 23.

He who is Christ's, surveying the wonders of creation, can say: "Glorious though these things be, to me belongs that which is more glorious far. The streams are precious, but I have the Fountain; the vesture is beautiful, but the Wearer is mine; the portrait in its every lineament is lovely, but that great Original Whose beauty it feebly depicts is my own. 'God is my portion, the Lord is my inheritance.' To me belongs all actual and all possible good, all created and uncreated beauty, all that eye hath seen or imagination conceived, and more than that, for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

"I Will in No Wise Cast Out."

I have preached his Gospel now for many years, but I never met with a sinner yet that Christ refused to cleanse when he came to him. I never knew of a single case of a man who trusted Jesus and asked to be forgiven, confessing his sin and forsaking it, who was cast out. I say I never met one man whom Jesus refused, nor shall I ever do so. I have spoken with drunkards whom he has delivered from their evil habit, and with men guilty of foul sins who have become pure and chaste through the grace of our Lord Jesus. They have always told me the same story—I sought the Lord and he heard me; he hath washed me in his blood and I am whiter than snow."—Spurgeon.

Hindrances.

It might be a small sin that is keeping you back from Christianity. It might be an appetite, one ambition, one desire, one pleasure, that is standing and an obstacle in your way to you sailing peacefully over the seas of life. Cast it away and come to Jesus as you are.—Rev. E. T. Baroody, Presbyterian, Savanna, Ill.

FOR INJURED WORKMEN.

If a workman in a factory in Missouri gets caught in a machine and loses an arm, he may sue for damages, hiring a lawyer on a percentage basis. In the course of years he may get a verdict, says the Kansas City Star. The money that finally comes to him is only a fraction of the amount awarded. Meanwhile the courts are clogged with personal injury cases. In the state of Washington Mr. J. A. Harzfeld, president of the public utilities commission, points out, the injured workman is at once paid a definite sum out of a fund collected by the state. He needs no lawyer. He gets all there is coming to him and he gets it without delay. That is the result of the Washington workmen's compensation act, which was signed last March. Incidentally, it is refreshing to note the opinion of the Washington supreme court in sustaining the act after the New York court of appeals had held a somewhat similar law unconstitutional. The opinion, written by Judge Fullerton, considers the New York decision and says: "Notwithstanding the decision comes from the highest court of the first state in the Union and is supported by the most persuasive argument, we have not been able to yield our consent to the views there taken."

Crusades for a natural flower come, grow, fade and depart as regularly and as sweetly as the flowers themselves. Wherefore we do not take with too great seriousness the campaign said to have been started to make the mountain laurel blossom the official emblem of these United States. But why, when we are choosing a national flower, do we not at least try to find one that has some familiar connection with our daily life? The mountain laurel campaign reminds us of the grocer who came downtown and announced that he had named his son Algernon. "Why," asked his old salesman, sadly, "why don't ye give the poor kid a name he can get work with?"

A disgusted poet is authority for the charge that if a Milton were living in Chicago today he would be a mute, inglorious one. Magazine editors, this poet claims, look on poets as space fillers and not as soul-thrillers, which, perhaps, may be ascribed to the baneful influence of a pork-packing center on real poetry.

SIX ARE KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING

FIVE WOMEN AND ONE MAN DIE WHEN CARRIAGE IS HIT BY FAST TRAIN.

BODIES HORRIBLY MANGLED

Victims on Their Way to Church to Attend Early Mass Tossed High in Air, Thrown on Track and Cars Pass Over Them.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Five women and one man, all servants in the homes of the wealthy Biddle and Massey families, were killed when the carriage in which they were riding to church was struck by a Chicago to New York flyer on the Pennsylvania railroad at the Linden avenue grade crossing at Torresdale, 12 miles from this city. The dead are:

Roddy, Harry, 20.
O'Connor, Nellie, 19.
Malloy, Bridget, 42.
Garrity, Agnes, 21.
Gallagher, Rose, 18.
Davison, Charles, 50.

Davison, a coachman for the Biddles, was taking the women to St. Dominick's church at Holmesburg to attend early mass. They reached the Linden avenue crossing at 7:20 a. m. Davison waited for a freight train to pass and then started the horses across the track behind the last car. The next moment the pilot of the locomotive of the onrushing express hit the carriage squarely, tossing it high in the air and throwing its occupants ahead on the track. The women landed in a heap and before the train was brought to a stop all but the last car had passed over their bodies, mangling them horribly. Davison, who was sitting in the front seat, was instantly killed by the impact and hurled to one side of the tracks.

The accident caused a semi-panic among the passengers on the express. Several women fainted and others went into hysterics and the services of two physicians were required. The engineer and firemen were the first to reach the six bodies and, summoning the other members of the crew, they placed them aboard the baggage car and took them to Tacony Station. The carriage was found stuck fast to the pilot of the engine. The horse was unhurt.

Big Four's Detroit-Cincinnati Express Jumps Track in Ohio and Cars Go Over Embankment.

Tiffin, O.—While speeding down grade 40 miles an hour the Detroit-Cincinnati Big Four flyer was wrecked three miles north of here, 32 passengers being injured, two probably fatally. A spread rail is said to have caused the disaster.

W. H. Haskin of Detroit and John Moonshook, a Hungarian, are the most seriously injured, and attending surgeons say they probably will die. C. E. Kelly of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Bert McKinley of Middletown, O., also are said to be in a serious condition.

The flyer, in charge of Conductor William Caskey, with Engineer Harvey Thomas of Springfield at the throttle, was over half an hour late, and was attempting to make up time on the down grade stretch from Berwick south. The train was composed of three coaches, a combination baggage car and smoker, cafe coach and a chair car. Passengers and train crew agree that the dining car seemed to leave the track first. It was dragged over the ties for 100 yards before turning over. The Pullman was next to roll over, and both were dragged some distance on their sides before they broke from the car ahead and rolled over an embankment.

The scene of the accident is known as the Base Line crossing, marking the boundary line between Seneca and Wyandot counties. It is regarded by railroaders as a "hoodoo" crossing. Two freight wrecks have occurred in the same spot.

BACK HOME AND DEAD BROKE

"The Man From Wilkesbarre" Who Had His Fling in New York City Says He Is Satisfied.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—"I am back and I'm broke, but I've had my fling and I'm satisfied. I hope my taste for prunes isn't forever spoiled." John I. McDevitt, millionaire and high roller for a day, is plain McDevitt again. He is back in Wilkesbarre, much wiser and much poorer. The "man from Wilkesbarre," who went to New York on a special train to spend his money in [illegible] the sensations attending life as a millionaire, has [illegible]. He traveled from New York in the lower berth of a Pullman.

Man Dazed by Hobble Skirt.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Charles Miner was [illegible] dazed by the wonder of what he saw when he was released from San Quentin prison after 20 years.

"For the love of Mike," he exclaimed, "look at that!"

He pointed at a young woman in a hobble skirt.

"Take that skirt and another I saw divided like trousers. If a woman had worn a thing like that before I went over the road they'd have had her in a dippy bazaar in 24 winks."

Tall Story of Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—With 40 members of the crew of 50 suffering with frozen noses, ears and fingers, the steamship Indiana of the Goodrich Transportation Co. docked here after being frozen four days in the lake three miles off Edgewater. Despite their suffering, every employe from Capt. Edward Wilson down to the dock hands was ordered to tell nothing of what had occurred on board by officials of the company. All of the nine passengers told a story of suffering.

ANDREW CARNEGIE DOES NOT FAVOR BREAKING THEM UP.

Little Iron Master Concludes His Testimony Before Stanley Steel Investigating Committee.

Washington, D. C.—Admitting that he gave $15,000 to the anti-imperialists in the campaign of 1900,

ANDREW CARNEGIE.

but disclaiming any knowledge that this sum was used to defeat President McKinley for re-election, Andrew Carnegie concluded his testimony before the Stanley investigating committee.

Carnegie lined up with the anti-trust views of Theodore Roosevelt as against the trust dissolution plans of President Taft. The little ironmaster engaged in a lengthy argument on the theory of the control of the trusts and with enthusiastic gestures declared for the control and regulation of the large trust units by the government.

"In the solution of this trust problem," said Carnegie, "there are two lines of thought in this country. One is the idea of President Taft that these big corporations should be broken up and dissolved. The other, as expressed by former President Roosevelt, is that under the existing law we should look to the recognition of these large units under careful, close, governmental regulation."

"In which of these classes do you find yourself?" he was asked.

"I know the views of Mr. Roosevelt and I agree with them," the witness answered. "I think for the present that we should allow large business organizations to continue. You should pass laws regulating these corporations and then wait to see what further legislation is necessary."

When Mr. Carnegie was excused he rose and addressing the committee he said:

"I part with the hope that you will follow my advice to the extent that you will proceed step by step. Get your commerce court organized and then await results. I shall miss your smiling, happy faces and I hope when I am gone you will say: 'Well, Mr. Carnegie was right about some things after all.'"

SOCIALISTS GAIN IN GERMANY

Victorious in Almost Every Community and Will Have Commanding Position in Reichstag.

Berlin, Germany.—In the general election for members of the Reichstag the Socialists were victorious in almost every community, according to the latest returns, and will have a commanding position in the new chamber.

The Socialist party of Germany may be called the party of radical reform. Its demands embrace practically the complete upset or change of all existing forms and regulations, national, political and industrial. Formulated, its program embraces these demands:

Abolition of the monarchy, abolition of the Bundesrath and the upper houses of the state legislatures, abolition of the standing army and creation of a national guard, responsibility of the cabinets to the parliaments, election of all officers by popular vote, initiative, referendum and per capita representation in all legislative bodies, nationalization of all means of production, heavier taxation of the great fortunes and incomes, manhood suffrage and ballot for women, abolition of the indirect taxes and of the duties on the necessaries of life, shortening of hours of labor by law, prohibition of child labor, stringent women labor laws, compulsory better safety devices, creation of industrial courts on broader lines, improved inspection of industrial plants and home industries.

Two Children Are Incinerated.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Two are dead, two fatally injured, and six seriously hurt as a result of an explosion of a kerosene lamp and fire at the home of Michael Kovall at Ambridge, Pa. Mrs. Kovall was getting her two children ready for bed when the lamp exploded. The burning fluid was thrown over the children and they were incinerated. Mrs. Kovall and her husband were fatally burned.

Man's Ashes Cast in River.

Cincinnati, O.—The ashes of Louis Roser of Maysville, Ky., were cast into the Ohio river from the suspension bridge, as he had willed. His friend, Attorney Thomas Slattery, scattered the ashes, saying: "Personally repudiating the religious convictions of Louis Roser, I do here cast into the Ohio river the ashes of his body. May they float peacefully on the bosom of the water to a haven of rest."

Slain Day After Wedding.

Lorain, O.—On the day after his marriage Frank Horvat was murdered. Horvat, 28, was killed by John Fejes. The day before he married Rosa Toth. The wedding was followed by a dance in a hall owned by Frank Krazanz, saloonkeeper. The next day Horvat went to Krazanz's saloon to pay the dance hall rent. While Horvat was engaged in conversation at the saloon, Fejes entered. Neither had ever seen the other before. Fejes, apparently without cause, stabbed Horvat, who died later.

Convicts Go on a Spree.

Columbus, O.—Instead of cleaning the snow off the sidewalk outside the prison wall, as directed by Deputy Warden Resch, Charles Pickering, serving two years from Columbiana county for robbery, and William Rowe, doing ten years from Fairfield county for horse stealing, took their snowplow back to the barn and with a team started from the institution, saying they were to go to the interurban station to get a package. They finally put in an appearance, both being drunk.

TELLS GOMEZ TO PRESERVE PEACE

SERVES WARNING ON CUBA

President Notifies Head of Island Republic That Trouble About Veterans' Participation in Politics Must Cease.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft has served notice on the Republic of Cuba that unless President Gomez can suppress the threatened rebellion of the veteran organization which is seeking to overthrow the Gomez government, the United States, under the terms of the Platt amendment, will be obliged to send a military force to preserve order on Cuban soil. The attitude of the United States is shown in the following note presented to the Cuban government:

"The situation in Cuba as now reported causes grave concern to the government of the United States. That the laws intended to safeguard free Republican government shall be enforced and not defied, is obviously essential to the maintenance of the law, order and stability indispensable to the status of the republic of Cuba, in the continued well-being of which the United States has always evinced and cannot escape a vital interest. The president of the United States therefore looks to the president and government of Cuba to prevent the threatened situation which would compel the government of the United States, much against its desires, to consider what measures it must take in pursuance of the obligations of its relations to Cuba."

As soon as it was known that the ultimatum had been issued, men conversant with Cuban affairs expressed the belief that if the American flag is again raised in Cuba it will remain there. Such an intimation in fact was served on Cuba the last time occupation of the island by American arms became necessary.

The "veterans," or the national association of Cuban veterans, which now seeks to overthrow the Gomez government, numbers from 25,000 to 30,000 soldiers, all of whom fought against Spain in the war of 1898. Their present commander, General Nunez, who contested the last election with Gomez and will be a candidate in the election next December, is leading them in a demand for the nullification of the civil service law which places on an equal footing the Cuban patriot and the men who fought under the Spanish flag during the long struggle for Cuban independence.

This government regards as an ultimatum the formal demand of Nunez on Gomez that the civil service act shall be nullified and holds the view that Nunez is prepared to organize a dangerous outbreak in case the wishes of himself and his followers are disregarded.

No debates exist as to the obligation of the United States to intervene in case of trouble in Cuba, where there are many American citizens and vast American commercial interests. The right of intervention was explicitly agreed to by Cuba after the Spanish-American war.

JAP CITY SWEPT BY FLAMES

Thirty Thousand Made Homeless in Southern Half of Osaka, the "Venice of the East."

Osaka, Japan.—A series of fires which broke out in the morning swept unchecked across the southern half of this city, fanned by a strong wind.

The conflagration was not under control until late in the afternoon when, according to official figures, 5,268 buildings had been destroyed and 30,000 persons rendered homeless. During the first four hours the flames consumed more than 1,300 houses.

Osaka, "the Venice of the East," has a population of about a million and is rated one of the most important manufacturing and commercial cities of Japan. It is located on the island of Hondo, on the two banks of the river Yodo, and is visited by travelers for its Buddhist temple and its picturesque canals spanned by 1,390 stone and bamboo bridges.

Infant Is Found Frozen to Death on Breast of Half Starved Woman by Hospital Surgeon.

New York City.—Entering the two bare and bitterly cold rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Conlijitska here to take the wife to the hospital, Surgeon Markel of Gouverneur hospital found the woman's two-months-old infant frozen to death on her breast. The mother was half starved. Conlijitska, a tailor, told the surgeon he had been out of work for six months and had been trying to make a living by selling kindling wood. His wife had helped to support the family by taking in washing until rheumatism interfered.

Make Aeroplane Fool Proof.

New York City.—The Wright brothers have made the aeroplane fool proof. The device by means of which an aviator can fly without concerning himself in the least about the equilibrium of his aeroplane has been practically perfected and demonstrated at Dayton. A. L. Welsh, one of the pioneer Wright flyers, announced exclusively to the [illegible] at the Manhattan hotel that he had flown a craft equipped with the device recently for over a half hour in a stiff wind with complete success.

Starving Peasants Sell Children.

London.—The awful conditions prevailing among the peasants in southeastern Russia are depicted in a telegram from a doctor in Orenburg which is published here as a special article. The doctor says that the starving peasantry in the government of Orenburg on the river Ural, owing to not having received any assistance from the authorities, are selling their children to the Khirgese nomads in the government of Bariov. Many of the people in the vicinity have died from hunger and typhus.

Says Eliminate Middlemen.

Albany, N. Y.—That the farmer himself can do much toward lowering the high cost of living was the statement made by Raymond A. Pearson, president of the New York Agricultural society, in the course of his annual address before that organization in the senate chamber.

President Pearson's remedy is the elimination of the middlemen. The farmer, he said, should endeavor to deal directly with the consumer in order to get his proper share of the profits.

FROM NEWSY TO SENATOR

LORIMER TELLS STORY OF HIS LIFE TO INVESTIGATORS.

Relates How He Had to Provide for Widowed Mother After Father Had Passed Away.

Washington, D. C.—From bootblack to coal heaver, from car conductor to house painter, from salt shoveler to laundry solicitor, from constable to superintendent of water mains to congressman, to bank president and finally to United States senator at 48.

This is the romance—more remarkable than any told in books—of William Lorimer, junior senator from Illinois, related by himself with quiet but dramatic force before a hushed throng in a crowded room at the senate office building here. Lorimer told his story in answer to a request by Senator Jones of Washington, member of the senate committee investigating his right to his seat, who asked the witness for a statement of his life, his work and the conditions which had surrounded him.

"Immediately after my father's death," said Lorimer, "I realized that it was necessary for me to do something. I was 10 years old at the time. Some of my friends were selling papers. They told me I could make a dollar by selling Sunday papers. My mother objected, but I finally persuaded her to let me do it. I bought 50 papers and sold them, and for three years afterwards I sold papers and blacked boots. Then I worked as cash boy for Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., and awhile later I went to work as solicitor for a laundry. For a year I worked there and in a coal yard. When I was 13, I met Miss Thompson at Sunday School. She became interested in me. I studied what I could at the laundry and I used to go to her house on Monday nights. Then my mother helped me when I got home early enough. So there I picked up the foundation of what little education I have. We got along all right and had no cause for complaint until the fire of 1871. At that time we had a little money saved and kept it in an old wooden trunk, because my mother had lost some money in a savings bank. We carried some furniture away from the fire and when we went back to get the trunk the police drove us off. The fire lost me my paper and shine customers too. After that I worked in a packing house—the Wilson Packing Co. I started as a laborer and learned the meat canning business in two years. Then I went to work for the Nelson Morris Co. and was laid off when they shut down part of their plant. I found work at Armour's shoveling salt in the cellar, and when a new superintendent came on I was transferred to the meat canning department. I worked there nearly three years.

"At the end of that time I took a job as car conductor on W. 12th street and kept it up for five years. When I was about 23 years old I had two or three hundred dollars and I started in business as a house painter. I kept at it as long as my money lasted and then I went back to the car. About that time I was elected constable. In 1886, when I was 28 years old, I was selling real estate. The next spring I was appointed assistant superintendent of water main extension under the Roach administration. I kept on selling real estate. Then I got a teaming contract and employed about 50 teams for a year. At the end of that time a real estate boom came on and I went into it extensively. I was appointed superintendent of the water department and resigned after a year to take the nomination of clerk of the Superior court, but I was defeated. In 1894 I was elected to congress. That year I traded a lot of odds and ends of real estate, borrowed some money and bought an interest in the Murphy Brick Co. Later I organized what is now known as the Lorimer & Gallagher Construction Co. About two years ago I organized the LaSalle Street National bank. I sold out my interest in the brick company about a year ago. I ran for congress eight times and was defeated once."

MINISTER TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Clergyman Charged With Having Performed Illegal Operation on Pittsburgh Girl Is Arrested.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Rev. William D. McFarland, head of the United Presbyterian mission school at Greenville, Tenn., who was charged by his former secretary, Elsie Dodd Coe, with having performed two operations which resulted in her death, was arrested at his old home in Cedar Creek, Tenn., where his wife is said to be.

Just after telegraphic notification of the divine's arrest was received the grand jury returned a true bill indicting him for performing an alleged criminal operation and a county detective was sent south to bring him to Pittsburgh when arrested. The other man in the case, young Hollis McConnell, formerly a bank clerk in Pittsburg, but now of Chicago, who was named in the girl's deposition as having been responsible for the delicate condition before the operations, came to Pittsburgh voluntarily and told the story of his relations with Miss Coe to the district attorney. He learned of Miss Coe's condition several months ago and came to Pittsburgh, according to his story, and urged her to marry him as the only solution of the difficulty. For reasons which he declares she refused to divulge to him, she refused. The district attorney says he does not believe McConnell had any knowledge of the operations.

Remembers Deserted Wives.

Chicago, Ill.—Richard T. Crane, the wealthy Chicago manufacturer and enemy of higher education, who died recently, left $1,000,000 for the benefit of women deserted by their husbands and $2,000,000 for philanthropies. Out of an estate valued at $10,000,000 not one cent was left for education, according to his will, which has just been filed for probate.

The money for aiding husbandless women will be expended in providing country homes near Chicago for such women and their helpless children.

State Assemblyman Slain.

San Francisco, Cal.—State Assemblyman John F. Mullaly, 56, one of the proprietors of a saloon at 116 Eighth street, was shot and instantly killed by a trio of masked highwaymen whom he had attempted to rout when they held up his place early in the morning.

Gus Patron was shot in the leg and three other men who were in the place at the time escaped the volley fired by the bandits by dropping to the floor. The robbers escaped after ransacking the place.

Indian Students Are Married.

Carlisle, Pa.—As the climax to a romance that began when the bridegroom was injured on the foot-ball field in the Carlisle-Syracuse game and was nursed in the Indian school hospital by the bride, Henry Roberts, 23, of Pawnee, Okla., and Miss Rose DeNomie, 19, of Ashland, Wis., were married here. Roberts has received a clerical appointment in the Shoshone Indian school in Wyoming at a salary of $800 a year. He will take his bride there. The husband is a Pawnee and his bride a Chippewa.

OFFICERS ARE ALL RE-ELECTED

Ohio State League Meeting Is Harmonious and Much Business Transacted

ADMIT MANSFIELD AND NEWARK

Salary Limit of $1,200 Decided Upon and $1,000 Deposit Required of Each Club Before February 26th.

Columbus.—Admission of Mansfield and Newark to the Ohio state League circuit was decided upon during the annual meeting held here. Springfield territory was released so that that city can take a place in the Central League.

Club owners of Lima, Lancaster, Portsmouth, Chillicothe and Hamilton agreed unanimously to the circuit changes proposed. With seven clubs in line the circuit committee was continued in service, with instructions to invoke the best possible selection for the home of the eighth club. There are no less than six locations to be considered.

It was voted to operate during the coming season with a salary limit of $1,200 and a fine of $200 for each and every offense against this rule was decided upon. Each club before February 26 will post $1,000 as a guarantee that the season will be completed and all league requirements adhered to.

R. W. Read, president, and Joe F. Carr, secretary and treasurer, were re-elected. League headquarters will be continued in Columbus.

By resolution players of all clubs will be forced to report to the president, when there is any arrearage of salary for more than five days.

Though not settled definitely, the season will not start until late in April or possibly in May.

The clubs were represented as follows: Chillicothe, President Siborill, Directors Bergman and Beigfried. President Cableman, of Portsmouth, met his manager, Pete Childs. Lancaster was represented by E. S. Bernard, vice president of the Cleveland club, and W. D. Notbacker, business manager of it last season after Toledo secured control. Judge J. B. Connaughton, treasurer of the club, came up from Hamilton. Paul Sturgis, president, and H. B. Brunner, secretary, looked after the Mansfield entry. Robert Quinn acted for the Lima club.

INTEREST STOPPED.

Marysville.—On the grounds that $75,000 worth of bonds were sold to Weil, Roth & Co., of Cincinnati, by a former board of commissioners of Union county at par without advertising, Prosecuting Attorney John H. Willis has declared the sale illegal and the interest payment on the bonds has been stopped. The prosecutor has ordered County Auditor Charles A. Moralock not to issue any more warrants for interest on the bonds. Willis is endeavoring to get Weil, Roth & Co. to pay a premium on the bonds, but thus far has been unsuccessful. The bonds were sold in 1908.

WRECK AT CAMBRIDGE.

Cambridge.—Speeding 50 miles an hour, down grade, the Pennsylvania fast train, due here at 9 a. m., ran through an open switch at Trail Run. The train struck and killed Sudor Kocherka, aged 50, who was walking along the track. Chas. Vaugh, the engineer, of Cambridge, stuck to his post. The train shot across the track of the Midland Power and Traction Co., missing by less than a foot a street car carrying eight persons. Then with speed lessened it crashed into a mine train ahead. None of the coaches left the track but the passengers were badly shaken up.

TEMPORARY HOSPITAL.

Portsmouth.—To be in better shape to care for any of the unfortunate men in their employ who may be injured, the Portsmouth Steel Co. has taken steps to furnish and maintain an emergency hospital, which will be fitted out under the direction of their surgeon. The hospital will be equipped with every latest appliance, so that it will be possible to respond to any call. Two beds will be placed in the hospital, and all the injured are assured of the best kind of treatment.

VENERABLE WOMAN DEAD.

Ottoway.—Mrs. Daniel Redman, of this place, died, aged 96 years, 9 months and 1 day. Mrs. Redman was the wife of a soldier of the War of 1812, and drew a pension for her husband's service in that war. She has three sons living and one daughter dead. Her oldest son, Mr. Samuel Redman, of Ottoway, O., with whom she made her home, is 79 years old. Mrs. Redman had many grandchildren, several great-grandchildren and three great, great-grandchildren.

BUILDERS MEET.

Annual Convention of 1913 to Be Held in City of Cincinnati.

Springfield.—Cincinnati landed the 1913 meeting of the State Builders' Exchange, this being decided at the closing session here. The state builders held their annual convention in this city.

Officers were elected as follows: C. A. Schuster, president; J. C. Skeel, Cleveland, first vice president; C. Taylor Handman, Cincinnati, second vice president; John W. Boren, Dayton, third vice president, and L. A. Roberts, Cleveland, secretary and treasurer.

One of the most important actions taken up was the addition of a resolution commending the federal authorities upon their investigation to fix the responsibility for the recent dynamiting outrages throughout the country. Owing to the lack of necessary information the matter of the new workmen's compensation law was referred to the state officers and executive committee for a later report.

A committee composed of F. G. Kemlin and S. S. King, of Dayton, was appointed to represent the association at a meeting of the State Lumber Dealers association in Columbus, when they will consider the subject of a more effective lien law.

DOG COMES NEAR GETTING EVEN.

Six Men Are Badly Stunned While Playing Trick On Stray Canine.

Newark.—Six men were badly stunned at the plant of Lynn Wilson, six miles east of Newark by an explosion of dynamite.

They tied a small stick of dynamite to the tail of a strange dog, which had been about the premises, and took to their heels after lighting the short fuse. The dog, being playful, persisted in following his tormentors.

The men ran into an old store building used to store street grading implements.

The dog followed.

The fire on the fuse was getting nearer to the dynamite. The dog was getting nearer to the men. The dog barked and the men yelled. The fuse, fanned by the wind, burned faster. The men were caught in the shed, and slammed the door behind them. The dog found an opening in the wall large enough to enter and was about half way in when the dynamite let go.

Parts of the animal were blown inside and parts outside the building, and every one of the six men was badly stunned by the force of the explosion.

None was seriously injured.

BIG CONCERN ELECTS OFFICERS.

Wellston.—The International Mining and Manufacturing Co., recently incorporated at $8,000,000, with headquarters in this city, has elected the following board of directors: Edward Smith, London; B. F. Howland, New York; E. B. Bingham, Toledo; J. M. Partridge, Wellston, and R. C. Lupton, Wilmington, Del. This is the concern which proposes to build a railroad from Lake Erie to the Ohio river, has options on thousands of acres of land in Jackson, Lawrence and Scioto counties and also plans to build cement and brick plants.

RED MEN OFFICERS.

Cincinnati.—The official count of the election for great chiefs of the great council of the Improved Order of Red Men of Ohio was completed and the result announced by Great Sachem Max Levy, of Cincinnati, was as follows: Great sachem, J. Guy O'Donnell, Troy; great senior sagamore, M. A. Bridge, Columbus; great junior sagamore, Charles E. Baker, Steubenville; great prophet, Max Levy, Cincinnati; great representatives, James C. Kerr, Columbus; Sam Gorham, Mansfield; Valentine Rice, Chillicothe; Leslie H. Wise, Dayton.

ODD COINCIDENCE.

West Union.—Robert Crawford, aged 63, a resident of North Liberty, Adams county, died after a short illness with pneumonia. He was a brother-in-law of John McGoveney, who was killed the same day while leading a horse to water. Their deaths occurred within six hours of each other. The two men married sisters over 40 years ago, and had lived neighbors during these long years. Even death failed to separate them but a few hours.

I. O. O. F. AT HAMILTON.

Arrangements were made for a big meeting of Odd Fellows in this city on January 24th, at which time Grand Master Bachtel and Grand Secretary C. H. Lyman will be present, and arrangements made for the grand lodge, which meets here next June. After this meeting Chairman Bartlow will appoint a committee to meet with the Chamber of Commerce to plan for the entertainment of the delegates, about 2,500 being expected.

President Submits an Economy and Efficiency Message.

RESULTS OF INQUIRY TOLD

Special Commission Found Extravagant and Antiquated Methods in Government Work and Many Unnecessary Offices.

Washington. — President Taft has submitted to congress a special message on economy and efficiency in the government service. The message in part is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I submit for the information of the congress this report of progress made in the inquiry into the efficiency and economy of the methods of transacting public business.

Efficiency and economy in the government service have been demanded with increasing insistence for a generation. Real economy is the result of efficient organization. By perfecting the organization the same benefits may be obtained at less expense. A reduction in the total of the annual appropriations is not in itself a proof of economy, since it is often accompanied by a decrease in efficiency. The needs of the nation may demand a large increase of expenditure, yet to keep the total appropriation within the expected revenue is necessary to the maintenance of public credit.

Upon the president must rest a large share of the responsibility for the demands made upon the treasury for the current administration of the executive branch of the government. Upon the congress must rest responsibility for those grants of public funds which are made for other purposes.

Reason for the Inquiry.

Recognizing my share of responsibility for efficient and economical administration, I have endeavored during the past two years, with the assistance of heads of departments, to secure the best results. As one of the means to this end I requested a grant from congress to make my efforts more effective.

An appropriation of $100,000 was made June 25, 1910, to enable the president to inquire into the methods of transacting the public business of the executive departments and other government establishments and to recommend to congress such legislation as may be necessary to carry into effect changes found to be desirable that cannot be accomplished by executive action alone. I have been given this fund to enable me to take action and to make specific recommendations with respect to the details of transacting the business of an organization whose activities are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. The operations of the government affect the interest of every person living within the jurisdiction of the United States. Its organization embraces stations and centers of work located in every city and in many local subdivisions of the country. Its gross expenditures amount to nearly $1,000,000,000 annually. Including the personnel of the military and naval establishments, more than 400,000 persons are required to do the work imposed by law upon the executive branch of the government.

Plan of the Work.

In accordance with my instructions, the commission on economy and efficiency, which I organized to aid me in the inquiry, has directed its efforts primarily to the formulation of concrete recommendations looking to the betterment of the fundamental conditions under which governmental operations must be carried on. With a basis thus laid, it has proceeded to the prosecution of detailed studies of individual services and classes of work, and of particular practices and methods, pushing these studies as far and covering as many points and services, as the resources and time at its disposal have permitted.

In approaching its task it has divided the work into five fields of inquiry having to do respectively with organization, personnel, business methods, accounting and reporting, and the budget.

Comprehensive Plan of Organization.

On organization the commission has entered upon the preparation of three series of reports. The first series deals with the manner in which the services of the government should be grouped in departments. This is a matter of fundamental importance. It is only after a satisfactory solution of this problem that many important measures of reform become possible.

The second and third series of reports deal, respectively, with the organization and activities of particular services, and the form of organization for the performance of particular business operations.

One of the reports of the second series is upon the revenue cutter service, which costs the government over two and a half million dollars each year. In the opinion of the commission its varied activities can be performed with equal, or greater, advantage by other services. The commission, therefore, recommends that it be abolished. It is estimated that by so doing a saving of not less than $1,000,000 a year can be made.

Another report illustrating the second series recommends that the lighthouse and life saving services be administered by a single bureau, instead of as at present by two bureaus located in different departments. These services have much in common. Geographically, they are similarly located; administratively, they have many of the same problems. It is estimated that consolidation would result in a saving of not less than $100,000 annually.

Abolition of Local Offices.

Perhaps the part of the organization in which the greatest economy in public expenditure is possible is to be found in the numerous local offices of the government. In some instances the establishment and the discontinuance of these local offices are matters of administrative discretion. In other instances they are established by permanent law in such a manner that their discontinuance is beyond the power of the president or that of any executive officer.

The responsibility for the maintenance of these conditions must naturally be divided between the congress and the executive. But that the executive has performed his duty when he has called the attention of the congress to the matter must also be admitted. Realizing my responsibility in the premises, I have directed the commission to prepare a report setting forth the positions in the local services of the government which may be discontinued with advantage, the saving which would result from such action and the changes in law which are necessary to carry into effect changes in organization found to be desirable. On the coming in of the report, such offices as may be found useless and can be abolished will be so treated by executive order.

Classification of Local Officers.

In my recent message to the congress I urged consideration of the necessity of placing in the classified service all of the local officers under the departments of the treasury, the interior, postoffice and commerce and labor.

The next step which must be taken is to require of heads of bureaus in the departments at Washington, and of most of the local officers under the departments, qualifications of capacity similar to those now required of certain heads of bureaus and of local officers. The extension of the merit system to these officers and a needed readjustment of salaries will have important effects in securing greater economy and efficiency.

In the first place, the possession by the incumbents of these positions of requisite qualifications must in itself promote efficiency.

In the second place, the removal of local officers from the realm of political patronage in many cases would reduce the pay roll of the field services. At the present time the incumbents of many of these positions leave the actual performance of many of their duties to deputies and assistants. The government often pays two persons for doing work that could easily be done by one. What is the loss to the government cannot be stated, but that it is very large cannot be denied, when it is remembered how numerous are the local officers in the postal, customs, internal revenue, public lands, and other field services of the government.

In the third place, so long as local officers are within the sphere of political patronage it is difficult to consider the question of the establishment or discontinuance of local offices apart from the effect upon local political situations.

Finally, the view that these various offices are to be filled as a result of political considerations has for its consequence the necessity that the president and members of congress devote to matters of patronage time which they should devote to questions of policy and administration.

Superannuation.

Attention has been directed in recent years to the need of a suitable plan of retiring the superannuated employes in the executive civil service. In the belief that it is desirable that any steps toward the establishment of such a plan shall be taken with caution, I instructed the commission to make an inquiry first into the conditions at Washington. This inquiry has been directed to the ascertainment of the extent to which superannuation now exists and to the consideration of the availability of the various plans which either have been proposed for adoption in this country or have actually been adopted in other countries. I shall submit in the near future, for the consideration of the congress a plan for the retirement of aged employes in the civil service which will safeguard the interests of the government and at the same time make reasonable provision for the needs of those who have given the best part of their lives to the service of the state.

Business Methods.

In every case where technical processes have been studied it has been demonstrated beyond question that large economies may be effected. The subjects first approached were those which lie close to each administrator, viz.: office practices. An illustration of the possibilities within this field may be found in the results of the inquiry into the methods of handling and filing correspondence. Every office in the government has reported its methods to the commission. These reports brought to light the fact that present methods were quite the reverse of uniform. Some offices follow the practice of briefing all correspondence, some do not. Some have flat files, others fold all papers before filing. Some use press copies; others retain only carbon copies.

Need for Labor-Saving Office Devices.

The use of labor-saving office devices in the service has been made the subject of special inquiry. An impression prevails that the government is not making use of mechanical devices for economizing labor to the same extent as are efficiently managed private enterprises. A study has been made of the extent to which devices of this character are now being employed in the several branches of the government and the opportunities that exist for their more general use.

The efforts of the commission resulted also in the adoption by several bureaus or departments of improved methods of doing copying. The amount of copy work heretofore done by hand each year in the many offices is estimated to aggregate several hundred thousand dollars. The commission exhibited, at its offices, appliances that were thought to be especially adapted to this kind of government work. Following these demonstrations methods of copying were introduced which have brought about a saving of over 75 per cent. in offices where used for six months. This change in one small cross-section of office practice will more than offset the whole cost of my inquiry.

Waste in the Distribution of Public Documents.

Going outside the office, one of the business processes which have been investigated is the distribution of department documents. This is a subject with which both the congress and administration heads are familiar. The prevailing practice in handling departmental publications is to have them manufactured at the government printing office; each job when completed is delivered to the department; here the books or pamphlets are wrapped and addressed, then are then sent to the postoffice; there they are assorted and prepared for shipment through the mails, from the postoffice they are sent to the railroad station, which is only a few steps from the government printing office, when they started. The results of this laborious and circuitous method is to make the use of the best mechanical equipment impracticable and to waste each year not less than a quarter of a million dollars of government funds in useless handling, to say nothing of the indirect loss due to lack of proper co-ordination.

Wasteful Use of Properties and Equipment.

The use of equipment is a matter which also has been investigated. Up to the present time this investigation has been in the main confined to the subject of electric lighting. The government pays over $600,000 per year for electric current. It has made large capital outlays for wiring and fixtures. With the increasing demands in many buildings the present equipment is taxed to its limit and if the present methods are continued much of this wiring must be done over. In many places employees are working at a great physical disadvantage due to inadequate and improper lighting and thereby with reduced efficiency. In every place where the inquiry has been conducted it appears that there is large waste, that without the cost of rewiring, simply by giving proper attention to location of lights and the use of proper lamps and reflectors, the light efficiency at points where needed may be much increased and the cost of current reduced from 30 to 60 per cent. Other inquiries into the use which is being made of properties and equipment are contemplated which promise even larger results.

Lack of Specifications.

The importance of establishing and maintaining standard specifications is found not only in the possibility of very materially reducing the direct cost of government trading, but also in insuring to the service materials, supplies and equipment which are better adapted to its purposes. One of the results of indefiniteness of specifications is to impose contract conditions which make it extra hazardous for persons to enter into contractual relations. This not only deprives the government of the advantage of broad competition, but causes it to pay an added margin in price to vendors who must carry the risk.

Excessive Cost of Travel.

One of the first steps taken toward constructive work was the reclassification of the expenditures for the year 1910 by objects. The foundation was thus made for the investigation of government trading practices. While it was recognized that this large field could not be covered within a year except at enormous cost, the subjects of "Transportation of persons" and "Subsistence while in travel status" were taken as concrete examples. The annual cost of travel to the government was found to be about $12,000,000. It was also found that the government employees were traveling in practically every way that was open to the public. It was further found that although the government was the largest user of transportation, it was buying railroad tickets on a less favorable basis than would be possible if the subject of traveling expenditures were systematically handled from the point of view of the government as a whole. The form of ticket most often used between such points as New York, Philadelphia and Washington was the single trip first-class ticket. In two departments definite tests have been made in the use of mileage books and in each practically the same result has been reported, viz.: an average saving of a little over one-half of one cent per mile.

Better Methods for Purchasing.

Through a long period of years and by numerous laws and orders there has grown up a procedure governing public advertising and contracting that is more burdensome and expensive in some cases than is necessary. The procedure is not uniform in the various departments; it is not uniform in many cases for the different services in the same department. To make uniform the requirements so far as practicable will be in the interest of economy and efficiency and bring about that simplicity that will secure the largest opportunity for contractors to bid for government work and will secure for the government the most favorable prices obtained by any purchaser.

The Budget.

The United States is the only great nation whose government is operated without a budget. This fact seems to be more striking when it is considered that budgets and budget procedures are the outgrowth of democratic doctrines and have had an important part in the development of modern constitutional rights. The American commonwealth has suffered much from irresponsibility on the part of its governing agencies. The constitutional purpose of a budget is to make government responsive to public opinion and responsible for its acts.

The Budget as an Annual Program.

A budget should be the means for getting before the legislative branch, before the press, and before the people a definite annual program of business to be financed. It should be in the nature of a prospectus both of revenues and expenditures. It should comprehend every relation of the government to the people, whether with reference to the raising of revenues or the rendering of service.

In many foreign countries the annual budget program is discussed with special reference to the revenue to be raised, the thought being that the raising of revenue bears more direct relation to welfare than does government expenditure. Around questions of source of revenue political parties have been organized, and on such questions voters in the United States have taken sides since the first revenue law was proposed.

Public-Welfare Questions.

The principal government objects in which the people of the United States are interested include:

The national defense, the protection of persons and property, the promotion of friendly relations and the protection of American interests abroad, the regulation of commerce and industry, the promotion of agriculture, fisheries, forestry and mining, the promotion of manufacturing, commerce, and banking, the promotion of transportation and communication, the postal service, including postal savings and parcels post, the care for and utilization of the public domain, the promotion of education, art, science and recreation, the promotion of the public health, the care and education of the Indians and other wards of the nation.

These are public-welfare questions in which I assume every citizen has a vital interest. I believe that every member of congress, as an official representative of the people, each editor, as a non-official representative of public opinion, each citizen, as a beneficiary of the trust imposed on officers of the government, should be able readily to ascertain how much has been spent for each of these purposes, how much has been appropriated for the current year, how much the administration is asking for each of these purposes for the next fiscal year.

Furthermore, each person interested should have laid before him a clear, well-digested statement showing in detail whether moneys appropriated have been economically spent and whether each division or office has been efficiently run. This is the information which should be available each year in the form of a budget and in detail accounts and reports supporting the budget.

Continuance of the Commission.

I ask the continuance of this commission on economy and efficiency because of the excellent beginning which has been made toward the reorganization of the machinery of this government on business principles. I ask it because its work is entirely non-partisan in character and ought to apply to every citizen who wishes to give effectiveness to popular government in which we feel a just pride. The work further commends itself for the reason that the cost of organization and work has been carefully considered at every point. Three months were taken in consideration of plans before the inquiry was begun, six months were then spent in preliminary investigations before the commission was organized, before March 8, 1911, when I asked for a continuation of the original appropriation for the current year, only $12,000 had been spent.

The expenditure for the inquiry during the present fiscal year is at the rate of $130,000. The mass of information which must be collected, digested and summarized pertaining to each subject of inquiry is enormous. From the results obtained it is evident that every dollar which is spent in the prosecution of the inquiry in the future will result in manifold savings. Every economy which has been or will be effected through changes in organization or method will inure to the benefit of the government and of the people in increasing measure through the years which follow. It is clearly the part of wisdom to provide for the coming years means at least equal to those available during the current year, and in my opinion the appropriation should be increased to $200,000, and an additional amount of $50,000 should be provided for the publication of those results, which will be of continuing value to officers of the government and to the people.

Mixture of Family Names.

This is a good example of what is a common phenomena in the polyglot Balkans: A man named Pavel—that is, Paul—had five sons; one settled in Athens, called himself Pavopoulo, the Greek form of Paulson; the second went to Belgrade and called himself Pavlovich; the third in Sofia called himself Pavloff; the fourth made his home in Bucharest under the name Pavlescu, while the youngest set up in business in Constantinople, assuming the Turkish form of Pavloglu.

Actual Salesmanship.

A man may make $25 a day in his regular business, and not think much about it, but he always feels like a leading financier when he sells the old bottles in the cellar for 47 cents.—Ohio State Journal.

Love's Results.

Love is the sort of thing that makes men do the most desperate things—cut their throats and shoot themselves, and even break out into poetry!—Tom Gallon.

Why Old Myths Survive.

The destroyers of fine dramatic myths tell us nowadays that the Caliph Omar did not burn the ancient library of Alexandria, and therefore did not have a chance to say that all the books in it that agreed with the Koran were superfluous, and all that disagreed with the Koran were pernicious. Doubtless the perennial freshness and vitality of the tale are due to an everlasting normal human hatred of weed-grown, literary graveyards.

JUDGE WINCH FAVORS RECALL

IS CHIEF REASON FOR DELAYS

Other Jurists Speak at Annual Banquet at Southern Hotel, Which Is Attended By More Than Sixty.

Columbus.—At the annual banquet of probate judges at the Southern hotel Judge Louis A. Winch, of Cleveland, chief of the circuit judges of Ohio, said he advocated the recall of lawyers for incompetency. He maintained that attorneys do more harm by inefficiency than dishonesty. The principal reason for delay and the defeat of justice in Ohio, he said, was the poor pleading of incompetent attorneys. He believed that such lawyers should be recalled or suspended by the trial judge until they should be able to pass another bar examination.

Judge Winch, in speaking of judges themselves, declared that, ever since the time of Pontius Pilate, there had been judges who had disgraced the judicial ermine.

Former Judge William M. Rockell, of Cincinnati, spoke in opposition to the proposed change in judicial procedure in the constitution itself. He admitted that a change was justified, but believed it could be done by the general assembly.

Judge James V. Hynus, of Perry county, president of the probate judges' organization, delivered the address of welcome. Judge William H. Lueders, of Cincinnati, was toastmaster. Supreme Court Judge Shauck was one of the speakers. More than 60 attended.

Get Big Award.

Heirs of Charles G. Biedinger, of Cincinnati, recover $36,807.57 from the estate of Ebenezer Bowen through a decision of the Supreme Court affirming the decisions of the Hamilton County Superior and Circuit Courts. Biedinger and Bowen were partners in the manufacture of an "improved paper bottle wrapper," the machine for the making of which was invented by Biedinger. Under a contract made in 1890, supplemented by one made in 1893, Biedinger was to receive a handsome royalty. On December 23, 1893, Biedinger suddenly became insane and was incapacitated for several years. Bowen refused his guardian entrance to the factory or to pay the royalty, and this formed the basis of the suit.

How To Kill.

Believing that much unnecessary pain could be avoided through a more general knowledge of the manner in which to kill fish and animals, the Ohio Humane Society has prepared for circulation the following rules on the subject: Large animals—Shoot through brain, or strike heavy blow on head. Crabs—Thrust a sharp knife through the mouth and body with one blow. Lobsters—Insert narrow knife into third joint of tail, severing the spinal cord. Eels—Cut off the head with one blow. Fish—Strike heavy blow on back of head. Fowls—Strike heavy blow on head with short club, and bleed, or, better, cut off head.

Corporation Tax.

Gathering up a few loose ends of lists of foreign and domestic corporations and a small number of public utilities the Tax Commission has certified to the Auditor of State domestic corporations with a subscribed capital of $1,419,010, and foreign corporations with a proportion of $691,672 used in Ohio, and gross receipts and earnings of public utilities in the sum of $67,971. The fees of the various concerns which will be paid into the state treasury amount to $4,382.71. Nearly all of this amount will be paid by companies that have not heretofore filed reports or paid fees in this state.

Percheron Importers.

The annual meeting of the American Breeders and Importers of Percheron Registry Society was held here and elected the following officers: President, M. T. Moorehead, Plainfield, Ohio; Vice-President, Marten Crite, of Peru, Ind.; Secretary-Treasurer, John H. Forney, Plainfield, Ohio. The meeting brought together many breeders and importers from nearly every state in the Union.

Insane Man Pardoned.

Thomas J. Young, an insane prisoner at the penitentiary, has been pardoned by Gov. Harmon on condition that relatives in Kentucky take him to their home and care for him. Young is serving a life sentence from Montgomery county.

To Get That $100,000.

Showing that the appeal of the Ohio-Columbus centennial is statewide, three men from out of Columbus will appear in Washington before the committee on appropriations when that body considers the bill for $100,000 appropriation for the centennial which has been introduced into the house by Congressman Taylor. The men are General Charles H. Grosvenor, of Athens, General R. B. Brown, of Zanesville, and John A. Poland, of Chillicothe. They spoke before the committee of the whole Monday.

Judges Banquet.

Fully 60 judges attended the annual banquet of the Association of Probate Judges of Ohio held Tuesday evening at the Southern hotel. Wm. H. Lueders, probate judge of Hamilton county, was in charge of arrangements. Judge James V. Hynus, of Perry county, presided as president of the association. Other speakers were Judge John A. Shauck, of the supreme court, and Louis A. Winch, presiding judge of the circuit courts of Ohio. A feast of good things to eat as well as of oratory was enjoyed.

Court Decides Law Is Good.

Common Pleas Judge Gorman handed down a decision in Cincinnati, holding constitutional Section 12,943 of the General Code of Ohio, which makes it a misdemeanor for any officer or employe of a company, corporation or person, to prevent employes from joining, forming or belonging to a lawful labor union, or to attempt to coerce them by discharging or threatening to discharge them from their positions, because of their connection with such labor unions.

The decision was in the case of Saul Berger, an employe of the Roth Shoe Co., and William Skahn, an employe of the MacDonald & Kiley Co., who were arrested on warrants sworn out by men who claimed that they had been discharged because they belong to the Shoe Workers' union. The arrests grew out of the strike of the shoe workers here, and followed injunction suits that were filed by the shoe manufacturers against the striking workmen.

The shoe manufacturers, fighting the case for their arrested employes, secured writs of habeas corpus for their release, and at the hearing pleaded that the state law is unconstitutional as it is in contravention of the fifth and fourth amendments to the United States constitution and of Section 1, Article 1, and Section 26, Article 2, of the constitution of the state of Ohio, and it was to these points that the case was argued.

Governor Harmon Speaks.

Governor Harmon was the chief speaker at the annual agricultural meeting under the direction of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture here today. He spoke of the importance of agriculture advancement and of soil conservation. W. A. Endaly, President of the Ohio Farmers' Congress, who introduced Governor Harmon, also discussed soil conservation and the practicability of scientific farming as opposed to the old-style hit-or-miss agriculture. Jesse Taylor, Secretary of the Good Roads Association, pointed out the immediate and concrete returns to farmers through road improvement, giving figures to sustain his claims that almost no other form of investment brings such direct results to agriculturists.

In the afternoon Prof. C. S. Plumb, of the State University, talked of the greater possibilities of live stock development.

Plans To Retrench.

State Labor Commissioner Fred Lange has begun a retrenchment scheme to reduce expenses in his department so that he will be enabled to enforce the new mattress inspection law. This law was passed by the last general assembly but no money was appropriated to enforce its provisions. He believes that enough may be saved by economy to supply the deficiency, as he thinks the law should be vigorously enforced.

Stand Pipe Torn Down.

According to N. & W. officials the recent cold wave gave the railroad company all sorts of trouble on the Columbus district. Stand pipes were frozen up solid in no less than five instances, while one of them located at Dorney was torn down when the fireman failed to raise the "spout." The engine picked up the big trough and started off. Before the engine could be stopped, the stand pipe came toppling down.

Health Men Will Meet.

A call has been issued by the state board of health for a conference of local boards of health of the state to be held in the state house January 18-19. Health questions will be discussed, stream pollution being one of the most important. A good attendance is expected and the state board are doing all in their power to arouse interest. Some good addresses have been prepared for the occasion.

Wants Association.

The formation of an association of the Common Pleas Court Judges of Ohio, which will hold regular meetings to discuss matters of legal procedure, is the suggestion contained in a letter written by Judge Wade Cushing to the 101 Common Pleas Judges of Ohio. According to the plan advocated by Judge Cushing Cincinnati is to be the meeting place of the first gathering on February 10.

Delegates Appointed.

Mayor Karb on Saturday appointed twelve delegates to attend the meeting to be held January 24 and 25, in Columbus, of representatives of the eighty-four cities of Ohio, to decide whether to organize to keep an eye on the doings of the constitutional convention in its actions relating to cities—meaning municipalities with a population of 5,000 or more.

Can Use All or Part.

Attorney General Hogan has advised the Ohio State Archaeological and Historical society that it may use what it deems necessary of the $100,000 appropriated for its new building going up on the Ohio State university grounds for equipment and apparatus.

Prominent Minister Dies.

Stricken with paralysis while delivering a sermon from his pulpit in New Lexington, Rev. L. C. Haddox, until last September pastor of the North Methodist church, died at his home without regaining consciousness. Since 1875 Rev. Mr. Haddox had been in the Methodist ministry. In 1885 he was superintendent of the Portsmouth district and from 1898 to 1901 was pastor of the Third Street church in this city. After serving a pastorate in Chillicothe he returned to Columbus as pastor of North church.

Can Mandamus Mayor.

Action mandamusing the mayor of Barberton to place his signature on an ordinance fixing salaries for officials under the city plan which recently became operative in that place was advised in an opinion by Attorney General Hogan to City Solicitor O. D. Everard, of Barberton. According to the solicitor Barberton became a city thirty days after the proclamation of the census and the village council, which is presided over by the mayor, passed an order to fix salaries in the city government.

VITALITY OF THE BIBLE

MOST books die young. Many books are dead already when they are born. There is no demand for them. They contain nothing that men want. They are not read. They make no impression even on the community where they are published. They are like a feather which flutters through the air and no one hears it pass, and no one knows when or where it falls.

Some books come into the world with a great flourish of trumpets. They are highly commended by reviewers and critics. They leap into prominence in the literary world at a single bound. They create a sensation for a time and are the talk of every town. But after a few years the demand for them declines, they slowly die, and are soon out of print. A few books have lived through many generations. The Iliad of Homer, the history of Herodotus and the Republic of Plato, the orations and essays of Cicero, written thousands of years ago, still live. They contain something which men want and will not willingly permit to perish.

But the Bible, which is one of the oldest books in the world, is the most vigorous book on the globe. Many efforts have been made to kill it. It has been burned, shut up in prison, bound with chains, pelted with rhetoric and logic and eloquence and ridicule. Again and again its enemies have pronounced it dead. They fondly hoped that intelligent people would no longer read it. But it still lives. Its enemies have perished. Their weapons have decayed. But the Bible lives on.

Not as the works of Homer and Plato live does the Bible live. They are read only by a small circle of admirers and students. Their influence on this generation is feeble indeed. But the Bible is the most popular book in the world and the most potent factor in modern thought and civilization. Its enemies have not been able to kill it, time has not destroyed it, and advance of learning and science has not affected its influence.

Few books can survive transportation. They show signs of life while they remain at home where the atmosphere is congenial, but carry them over the sea, where educational, social and political conditions are different, they wither and die. They are like trees which will not endure transplanting from one soil to another. But the Bible has crossed all seas and all continents; it has overleaped the boundaries of all nations; it has gone from island to island, from zone to zone; and everywhere it is the same fresh, vigorous, living book.

Translation is a severe test of the vitality of a book. It is almost impossible for a book to carry with it the vigor and freshness of the original into a new language. Translated into a foreign tongue, it seems like another book. It has lost some of the fragrance and richness of its thought and feeling. But the Bible has been translated into four hundred different languages, and sometimes under most unfavorable conditions, and still it carries with it into every language the sweet savor of its truth and life. It is a tree for all climes, a message for all hearts, a song for all tongues, a book for all people. "The grass withereth, and the flower fadeth, but the word of the Lord endureth forever."—Christian Advocate.

Our Portion.

"All things are yours . . . ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's"—1 Cor. 3:21, 23.

He who is Christ's, surveying the wonders of creation can say: "Glorious though these things be, to me belongs that which is more glorious far. The streams are precious, but I have the Fountain, the vesture is beautiful, but the Wearer is mine, the portrait in its every lineament is lovely, but that great Original Whose beauty it feebly depicts is my own. 'God is my portion, the Lord is my inheritance.' To me belongs all actual and all possible good, all created and uncreated beauty, all that eye hath seen or imagination conceived, and more than that, for eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

"I Will In No Wise Cast Out."

I have preached his Gospel now for many years, but I never met with a sinner yet that Christ refused to cleanse when he came to him. I never knew of a single case of a man who trusted Jesus and asked to be forgiven, confessing his sin and forsaking it, who was cast out. I say I never met one man whom Jesus refused, nor shall I ever do so. I have spoken with drunkards whom he has delivered from their evil habit, and with men guilty of foul sins who have become pure and chaste through the grace of our Lord Jesus. They have always told me the same story—"I sought the Lord and he heard me, he hath washed me in his blood and I am whiter than snow."—Spurgeon.

Hindrances.

It might be a small sin that is keeping you back from Christianity. It might be an appetite, one ambition, one desire, one pleasure, that is standing and an obstacle in your way as you sail peacefully over the sea of life. Cast it away and come to Jesus as you are.—Rev. E. T. Baroody, Presbyterian, Savanna, Ill.

"The postoffice department has come to be a huge political machine, used by any party in power to control party organizations," declared Representative Norris of Nebraska, in explaining a drastic bill he introduced, which would place every postal employe except the postmaster general under the competitive classified service "The roll call of a Republican convention," said Mr. Norris who is a progressive Republican, "sounds like a list of second-class postmasters"

When Baltimore's representative was able to wave a certified check for $100,000 as that city's bid for the democratic national convention every onlooker at all experienced in the ways of the politicians knew that the demonstration meant victory. Aside from the $100,000 consideration, Chicago was, of course, the convenient and desirable meeting-place for an inclusive national gathering of this kind. But here is a case where the eloquence of money can be seen and read of all men that che k could do more talking than all the rest of the aspiring cities put together

The election of Rev Herbert S Bigelow of Cincinnati as president of the Ohio state constitutional convention was followed by a grant of full power to him to appoint all of the convention's committees These facts demonstrate how completely the convention is under radical control Mr Bigelow has been noted for 10 years in Ohio as a social reformer and political radical with democratic affiliations. He was a stout supporter of the late Tom Johnson, and in 1902 he ran for secretary of state of Ohio on the democratic ticket His political activity in those years forced him out of his Cincinnati pastorate and he has since been at the head of an independent "people's church" in that city. As president of the state constitutional convention Mr. Bigelow has promised to be scrupulously fair to all delegates and all interests, while remaining loyal of course to those who placed him in the chair. His committee appointments thus far have satisfied even his opponents. An innovation in the rules which the convention will doubtless adopt requires "all lobbyists who wish to approach members for any purpose whatever to register their names with the clerk, obtain a card of authority and file a full report of their purpose, the compensation which they receive for their work and by whom this is paid." It is hoped by this method to bar illegitimate lobbyists and enable the convention also to identify and punish those who having been granted cards, may abuse their privileges.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

A LIVE SUGGESTION.

Why would it not be a good idea for all Democrats, everywhere, to hereafter taboo the use of the word "tariff," and in its place use the term "tax," which is what a tariff really is?

If every Democratic writer and speaker would use the term "The Payne-Aldrich tax bill" instead of "The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill" from now until the polls close on November 5, there need be little conjecture as to the outcome of the election

Who doubts but that if the Dingley tariff bill had been known and referred to generally as the Dingley tax bill, and the McKinley tariff bill as the McKinley tax bill, and the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill as the Payne Aldrich tax bill, the Republican party would not be in power today

The word "tariff" is too indefinite There are hundreds of thousands of men who may be brought to believe that it would be to their advantage in some indirect, mysterious way to vote for a tariff, but who could be cajoled or coerced into the conviction that it is to their individual interest to vote for an enormous tax on everything they eat, wear, and use.

If Democratic editors will make it a standing order in their offices to substitute the word "tax" for "tariff" in every article having to do with protection, and if every stump speaker [illegible], and if the movement will be made nation-wide, the problem of reversing Republican victories at the polls will have been solved

Think this over!

Mrs. A R Tabor, of Crider, Mo had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by all dealers

Times Change.

Our fathers had a plain sort of piety; if you will, a gross and coarse piety They had their own sort of sentimentalism. They were quite willing to weep over Smike But it certainly never occurred to them to weep over Squeers No doubt they were often narrow and often visionary No doubt they often looked at a political formula when they should have looked at an elemental fact. No doubt they were pedantic in some of their principles and clumsy in some of their solutions No doubt, in short, they were all very wrong, and no doubt we are the people and wisdom shall die with us But when they saw something that in their eyes, such as they were, really violated their morality, such as it was, then they did not cry "Investigate!" They did not cry "Educate!" They did not cry "Improve!" They did not cry "Evolve!" Like Nicholas Nickleby they cried "Stop!" And it did stop—Gilbert Chesterton.

Beginning of the Year.

The Athenians began the year in June, the Macedonians in September the Romans first in March and afterward in January, the Persians on August 11, the ancient Mexicans on February 23, the Mohammedans in July The Chinese year which begins early in February is similar to the Mohammedan in having twelve months of twenty nine and thirty days alternately, but in every nineteen years there are seven years which have thirteen months What is now called old style the Julian calendar established by Julius Caesar prevailed until the sixteenth century when the Gregorian calendar, now in general use was established by Pope Gregory XIII in 1852 This calendar was adopted by Great Britain and the colonies in 1752 The difference between old style and new style is thirteen days December 7 old style being December 20, new style Russia still adheres to old style and Christmas there comes on our December 12

Persian Envoy's Wife a Cook.

Mme Ali Kuli Khan, wife of the Persian charge d'affaires, who was Miss Breed of Boston, is the best cook in the diplomatic corps This fact is attested by the Shah of Persia, who, as a testimonial of her housewifely virtues, has conferred on her the Order of the "Lion and the Sun," and she is the first woman thus honored. Mme Ali Kuli Khan has earned her title chiefly through the Persian dainties she has learned to make since her marriage Other gifts conferred on her officially by the Persian government are a turquoise ring and a gold medal studded with diamonds given her as Persia's delegate to the International Mothers' congress at its recent meeting here. Mme Ali Kul Khan has adopted the dress of her husband's country. She has also adopted his state religion, Bahaism.—New York American ### Monument to Richelieu.

Richelieu, a pretty little place about twelve and a half miles from Chinon, in the department of Indre-et-Loire, derives its name from the family of Cardinal Richelieu, whose patrimonial lands extended to an area now occupied by part of the town The people have not shown any undue haste in commemorating their townsman, who, after all, stands in little need of a monument. A committee has been formed and has, appropriately the high and unanimous patronage of the Academie Francaise which owes its existence to the cardinal Other learned societies are represented It has not been decided whether the monument will be in bronze or stone —London Globe

What They Go By.

O O Netler the secretary of the International Pure Food Association of the White Cross was discussing in New York a campaign he has recently commenced against the French menu. "Where is the Parisian let alone the American" Mr Netler exclaimed "who would know the meaning of 'dindonneau a la Wall street,' or 'Pommes Taft' or 'Poulet a la Sugar Trust'? These menus puzzle everybody That is frankly and universally admitted I said the other day to a waiter 'Waiter those dishes are all in French' 'Yes, sir' he answered, 'but the prices are in English' Most people go by them"—Washington Star

Good Health.

Good health is the pivot of a happy life Money will buy it sometimes, but it can and does exist with a lean pocketbook. Those who are tied to work ing hours retain health by living more or less by rule, by regular habits of eating, by careful doses of recreation, and by an abundance of sleep. Knowing what we do about the recuperative power of sleep, it is not to be wondered at that we spend liberally for bed furnishings—it is rather strange that with knowledge and expense we do not have a keen desire for bed of proper season.

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefited by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

HOLD GRAVES SACRED

CHINESE ARE EXTRAORDINARILY CAREFUL OF THEIR DEAD.

Reverence Carried to an Extreme in the Yellow Country—Case in Point Shows How Obstinate They Can Be.

Better strike a Chinaman than step upon his ancestor's grave. They are finding that out to the great detriment of industry and agriculture all over Cathay—for the Chinaman will simply not allow a railroad or a plow to pass through what he suspects is the dust of one of his honorable forbears and there is no condemnation law in China to force him to sell the graves

The instance of the Russian railroad from Harbin to Port Arthur, which made a 26-mile detour to avoid the ancient Manchu tombs at Mukden, has been often cited to show the expense and trouble that may arise from this cause This was many years ago and there seems to be a popular idea, even among old foreign residents of China, that the going for the "right of way" men and the builders of railways is much easier now than then. As a matter of fact, since people are dying right along and the number of graves increasing as a consequence, it is very doubtful if conditions are not becoming worse rather than better. The Chinese have accepted the railway as a convenience in transportation, not as a destroyer of their beloved graves They have shown the greatest readiness to patronize it once it is built, but they never have ceased, and never will cease, pulling obstacles in the way of a line that disturbs so much as a single isolated ancestral resting place

Many of the foreign educational institutions of China have been years acquiring the land for their grounds—principally on account of graves—and the blue print maps of some of their holdings remind one of the drawing of the original "gerrymander" congressional district in Massachusetts The Canton Christian college in South China, has a striking monument to the obduracy of a solitary grave holder in the form of an upright cylinder of yellow clay in the middle of its basketball field Not the desecrating touch of the feet of the hated "foreign devils" not the turmoil of the mad games that surge around it not even the fact that its elevated crest is occasionally utilized by an irreverent student as a coign of vantage from which to toss a goal has led the old woman that owns it to accept the generous offer made her by the college authorities for her little "six feet of soil" Her husband used to sleep with all the babies crying she says philosophically and it is hardly likely that a little noise will trouble him now He will let her know through the priests when he is disturbed and until then she knows that he will rest better where he is Of course the obvious thing for the college authorities to do would be to pay a visit to the geomancers and arrange that the old lady should be instructed that the "fengshui" decreed that her late husband would rest quieter in some other place, but as "subtlety" of this class is hardly in the line of a Christian institution it is not unlikely that the strange looking cylinder of yellow clay may stay the campus basketball field until the game old lady is herself numbered with her ancestors

The New Hydracycle.

First came the bicycle, with which all are familiar Next came the motorcycle, clipping it through the streets at terrific pace—the power being supplied by a mysterious box under the rider's seat, which gives the machine its name Now comes an inventor at Oakland, Cal E Frey, with a new machine called the hydrocycle, which is a motorcycle designed to run on water Mr Frey has long since won recognition in mechanical contrivances—his new gas engine, now in general use, demonstrating the fact that he is something more than a mere dreamer of dreams His hydrocycle has three wheels, which are floated by two air tanks located in the center of the machine Rudders for steering are attached to the tanks on either side and are controlled by a small wheel placed between the handle bars The third or extra wheel is in the rear—the three wheels being in line or tandem The rider's seat is located between the first two wheels while the third wheel in the rear is supplied with ten paddles on either side, which extend six inches beyond its rim and so reach down into the water The hydrocycle is thus a motorcycle propelled by a third wheel carrying paddles at the stern

A Devoted Constituent.

"That member of congress says you have voted for him for the last 15 years"

"That's right," replied Farmer Corntossel

"You must think a lot of him"

"Well I dunno You see, 15 years ago I had a couple o' hoss trades with him, an' since then I've allus felt safer with him spendin' so much of his time in Washington"

Importance Recognized.

"Do you think that man fully appreciates the importance of the office to which we have elected him?" said one constituent

"I guess he does," replied the other "The first thing he did was to say it ought to command a larger salary"

Declined With Thanks.

The Duke of Wellington, who had a taste for anything that Napoleon had liked, applied to David, the artist, who had painted Napoleon's portrait, requesting David to execute one of himself. "Sir," replied David, "I paint only historical characters."—Life.

CAN'T BAR ALL THE DIVORCED

Monarchs of Great Britain and Russia Find They Must Modify Their Ideas

Queen Mary on her husband's accession to the throne caused it to be known that she intended to revive the rules and regulations of Queen Victoria. She even went a step further, says the Metropolitan, and intimated that the men concerned in divorce cases, as respondents or as corespondents, would be regarded with disfavor in the highest quarters.

Queen Victoria never visited her displeasure on the men implicated in divorce cases, save in the solitary instance of Sir Charles Dilke Indeed several of her most famous and most trusted ministers, such as, for instance, Lord Melbourne, Lord Palmerston and the now octogenarian Lord Llandaff, were mixed up in all sorts of divorce cases, without ever forfeiting either their office or her good will.

Both King George and Queen Mary, however, found that it was quite impossible to put their avowed intentions into practice. They could not exclude divorced women from their court unless they barred therefrom the king's own first cousins, Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia and Princess Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, as well as a host of other royal and imperial foreign personages more or less closely related to them by ties of blood.

In Russia divorce was condemned formerly both by the court and by society. Moreover, it was extremely difficult to accomplish, being granted only on the grounds which would suffice to secure a decree of nullity from English and American tribunals, or else for infidelity. But in the latter case the legal conditions were exacting and the cost of a suit so expensive that demands for the dissolution of marriage ties were few and far between.

Now, however, the situation has entirely changed Divorces have become frequent in Russian society, and despite the objections of the emperor and of his Hessian born but English bred consort, the court has had to open its doors. Thus the wife of General Soukhomlinov, the minister of war, one of the most popular figures at the court of St Petersburg and in the great world on the banks of the Neva, was first married to M. de Butewitch, with whom her union was legally and ecclesiastically severed in 1909

Countess Witte, wife of the former premier who represented Russia at the peace conference at Portsmouth, N. H., in 1905, and who is still a minister of state, is also a divorcee and is received at court. Moreover, there are a number of divorces in the imperial family itself, something wholly unknown until the present reign.

Nile and Lake Once Connected.

Geologists are not confined to the testimony of fossils in ascertaining the changes that have taken place on the earth's surface, sometimes living animals are equally good as evidence. In the center of the vast and almost unexplored part of Africa south of the Sahara lies Lake Chad, which just now is the goal of many scientific expeditions. In several parts of this lake there have been found specimens of a fresh water shrimp of a variety found nowhere else except in the Nile. Seeds may be carried by birds for long distances, but the eggs of this shrimp are too fragile for this. The conclusion is that there must at some time, not too far away as geologists reckon, have been a junction between Lake Chad and the Nile or at least that the two must have been close enough so that in time of flood the waters mingled. Now they are separate by many hundreds of miles of desert. This has been imperfectly explored, but it is known that for a thousand miles or more to the east of the lake there extends a series of depressions that might easily be the bed of an ancient arm of the lake. This region is almost flat, and the lake even now has a habit of shrinking for miles from its banks during the dry season. Possibly engineers of the future may reopen the old course.

Questioner Floored.

One of the members of the school committee undertook to sharpen up the wits of the boys by propounding the following question:

"If I had a mince pie and should give two-twelfths to John, two-twelfths to Isaac, two-twelfths to Harry, and should keep half the pie for myself, what would there be left?"

There was a profound study among the boys, but finally one lad held up his hand as a signal that he was ready to answer.

"Well, sir, what would there be left? Speak up loud so that all can hear," said the committee man.

"The plate," shouted the hopeful fellow

The committee man turned red in the face, while the other members roared aloud.

His Specialty.

"I like a very sensitive horse for hunting."

"Why do you prefer a sensitive one?"

"Because he naturally is quick to take a fence."

Not Always.

"It is always wise," said the sage one, "never to take a step without attaching weight to it."

"But," objected the foolish one, "that is what the convict with chain and ball does."

Keeping Hubby Peaceful.

There are two critical periods in a wife's day—one when her husband comes down to his breakfast, the other when he returns home in the evening. In the morning he is usually (we are not speaking of the paragon) grumpy or abstracted; in the evening he is usually tired and inclined to be cross. At both times it is wise to leave him alone as much as possible; don't worry him; minister quietly and pleasantly to his wants. The fits will soon pass under such tactful treatment, and "Richard will be himself again."

MENTOR

The weather this past week has been something perfectly frightful and altogether too awful to contemplate! There has been a "blizzard" most of the time, when the wind blew in every direction at once making it absolutely impossible to keep warm and comfortable. Then all at once, the wind stopped and Mentor folks thought it had "moderated." Some went out driving without fur caps on, and froze their ears! Some wore fur caps, but forgot to pull them down over every speck of ear—and so got the uncovered part well frosted! A few came home with noses well bitten! Two school girls, each twelve years old were so overcome with wind and cold that they were unable to get home, one was found crying in an old shed, the other had fallen by the side of the road unable to take a step farther Had not the father of the first girl started out to look after her she would have died in that shed, and had not a Salvation Army neighbor just happened to be driving along that lonely road and happened to see the second little girl lying by the side of it, and have picked her up and taken her home, she too would have frozen to death, right here in old Lake County! Friday morning there were signs of better weather, just to fool us! On Saturday morning, at seven o'clock the mercury registered eighteen below zero, and some of our people up at six, say it was twenty-two below at that time, while those watching with sick ones, declare that between three and four it was much colder than at any other time, everything seeming to stop and stand still Certainly, it has been the most peculiar winter ever, so mild and nice until up to the first of January then all at once the coldest weather ever known in this part of the state Even today, while men are very busy drawing ice, the breath from their nostrils floats out in great white clouds, and an icicle fully five inches long is to be seen hanging from the mouth of one of the horses patiently plodding back and forth in front of a bob-sled drawing logs

Mr Albert Hanson starts back today to Boston, having been called here by the death of his wife's father Mr H N Munson

Mrs Clark Bradwell has been quite sick, but is somewhat better now as is also Miss Louise Upham. Mr H. [illegible] and others of our people. However, as fast as one gets better there seems to be some one else ready to take the place, so we are kept constantly worried to death by news of sick folks. Mrs Frost is ill and in bed. John Barbine is very sick with pneumonia and Robert Radcliffe is no better

The ice gatherers are quite happy as the "crop" is fine and getting better every hour, measuring a good twelve inches at date and plenty of it Seems as if every team in the village must be busy drawing it

Mr Lowe is able to be around again, and Fred Parmelee has returned home from the Painesville hospital, while the news has come of the improvement of Mr Charles Johnson who has been very sick in a hospital in Pasadena, but is again around, and feeling almost as well as ever

Miss Caddie Haskell of Cleveland has been spending the holidays here with her father, Mr Albert Haskell and her auntie, Miss Emily Haskell

The Mentor branch of the Lake County Young Men's Christian Association, recently held their semi-annual election of officers, at which Pardee Sawyer was made president John Gallagher secretary, and Lynn Carleton treasurer The meetings are held in the old "Green Parker" house next the Methodist church, now owned by Mr John Oliver and made quite comfortable and cozy with electric lights etc. This house is on the new Mentor park property and will come in very conveniently when we get the "Park"

Mrs Amelia Hudson has returned from spending a short time in Cleveland with her husband's relatives and also as guest of her grand-son, Mr Raymond Doty and his wife

Miss Evalyn Smith entertained four of her Cleveland friends over the New Year's time, at her father's home here Miss Evalyn has been here for a number of months, taking an enforced rest, but expects to return to her position with the Kinney & Levan firm sometime in the spring, if strong enough by that time

Mr Grant Cole has just returned from his visit with relatives in Michigan, and is again with his cousins Mr and Mrs T D Morley

The funeral of young Samuel Downing was held in the Disciple church here on Friday, he having been killed by an engine on the Lake Shore tracks in Collinwood, particulars farther not known as yet

Miss Alma Stohl has recently returned from a visit with friends in Akron and vicinity

Mr Frank Smith is in Cambridge Springs for the present, and Mrs Smith has been a recent guest of her brother and his family in Cleveland

Mr Harry King sent eight Black Minorcas to the New York State Poultry Exhibition held in Buffalo, and took seven ribbons and one first prize on his exhibit, which seems pretty good. He will also enter the show ranks at the coming Exhibition of fine poultry to be held soon in Cleveland.

Mr. H. F Lapham was recently surprised by some thirty-five or forty of his many friends, his castle taken by storm, and himself given a handsome rocking-chair as a small token of esteem Such things warm one's heart, so that old winter with his hateful breath is all but forgotten.

Next Sunday afternoon, the Sabbath-school teachers, officers and all interested in such work in the entire county, are to hold their second union meeting in the Methodist church here, and after the session is finished will adjourn to the basement, where their lunch baskets will be unpacked and spread on the table, (the Mentor teachers furnishing hot coffee) and while they eat together, will talk over the work and the problems thereof

Mr and Mrs Maurice Rosenthall have been spending the holidays up in Grand Rapids, Mich Mr. Rosenthall is engaged in the Knitting Mill business here, and Mill always taking a vacation of a week or two at Christmas time, when there are repairs to be made, etc

The funeral of Mrs. W S Ackley was held from the home of her oldest daughter, Mrs Dr Lowe on Wednesday last, Rev Dunbar of Lisbon having charge of the services, and burial being in our own little cemetery here The pall bearers were friends of her children as well as of herself, for every one loved gentle Mrs Ackley who had lived twenty years in our village and had grown to be a part of the community

Mrs Jackson accompanied by her daughter, Miss Hazel Sperry, spent the Christmas vacation in Cleveland with her son, Mr Peter Sperry and family

The north and south roads here have been so badly drifted that men have had to get out with shovels and literally dig out so that teams could get through! Even the oldest inhabitant has nothing to say about weather not being half so bad as at some other time!

Two more of our Mentor boys Neville Bryson and George Talbot are taking a course of study at the Ohio State University at Columbus, and are proud of their school, of course

Our Mentor young folks had a dance at the Village Hall on Friday evening, and a number of the Painesville high school seniors and juniors drove out in sleighs during the bitter cold of Saturday evening for a similar frolic

The funeral of Mr H N Munson took place Tuesday afternoon one of the very worst days we have ever known in this county, when few people had the courage to face the high wind and bitter cold! That such weather was on hand seemed unfortunate, for the entire village mourns the loss of Mr Munson, who has lived a long and useful life among us, and who was generally loved, admired and trusted He had been Superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school for over twenty-one years and county surveyor for nearly as long a time, besides being honored as executor for a number of estates He was always a friend and a peace-maker! Always glad to help any one in time of trouble, always meaning to be on the right side! He was a man "cast in a large mould" said his friend Rev Frank Dunbar, and "much more than an ordinary man—one whose place in the community no one else can ever quite fill."

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit For sale by all dealers

KIND HE WEARS HIMSELF

Clerk Sells the Editor Some "Non-Itchy" Underwear But His Veracity is Doubted.

We believe in giving every man the benefit of the doubt. We do not like to attack anyone's veracity in haste. Often men have deceived us as to facts and conditions, but always we have liked to think they were mistaken. We have gone our way confident that they had not intentionally led us astray.

But there is a certain clerk in a certain underwear shop in this town whom we would not believe again under oath. We were in search of some new white undergarments We hesitated in our choice. The clerk saw that we were slipping from his grasp, to-wit: that he was about to lose a sale.

"Now this garment," says he, "is one of the kind that I always wear myself."

Pulling back his coat and shirt sleeve he exhibited his undergarment. Aside from the fact that it wasn't quite as clean it looked like the very stuff on the counter

"Does it itch?" was asked

"Not a bit," he replied "That's the beauty of this make. I've never had any trouble You can put a suit of this right on and it won't bother you a particle"

He looked so honest and straightforward and frank when he said it that we fell for his line of talk That we haven't known a moment's peace since we need not relate. What we wish to emphasize is the fact that that young man, with the honest countenance, must have had a back red with itching and scratching when he told us that unmitigated falsehood His legs and arms must have been crimson with irritation, yet he stood right up there and denied it Either that or he lied when he said that he wore the kind of flannels he sold us Even as we write we hardly know whether to finish this sentence or get up and scratch our back against the door.—Detroit Free Press.

Knowing One Another.

I have a friend who says:

"When I first saw the Oriental rugs of the professor of our new red brick high school building's wife, hangin' on the line, I says to myself 'No Not that woman I won't never vote for her for president of the Ladies' Aid. She ain't one of us' And while they was votin' that day I set over in one corner feelin' mean, and thinkin' 'No You don't get no ballot out of me You ain't folks.' And then the next mornin', while I was gettin' breakfast she comes walkin' acrost the yard between our two houses, and she asks: 'Oh, Mis' Arthur, I'm makin' Johnny Cake, and I can't tell whether you put in soda or bakin' powder Which do you?' And when I'd told her how, and she'd started back, I stood inside the screen door just lookin' after her And I thought 'Why, my land Underneath your Oriental rugs you was like that all the time Why you're folks—'"

The thing is as simple as the light: Getting to know one another is the problem Social centering is the way to work it out And at the last, democracy is the answer.—Zona Gale in La Follette's Magazine.

"Geological Tuberculosis."

The Washington monument at the national capital, highest of stone structures, and designed by its builders to stand as long as the pyramids, is suffering from a disintegration that, while not immediately fatal, will shorten its life, says John S. Mosby, Jr, in the December Popular Mechanics Magazine.

The great shaft, 555 feet in height, consists of walls 15 feet thick at the base. These walls are made up of an outer facing of marble blocks and a four-foot inner wall made of granite and other hard stone. Between these two walls there is a filling of heterogeneous stone, held together by a cement. This describes the first 100 feet, which is the part now affected. This part was built continuously from the beginning of the structure. Then, for years, the construction halted at that height. It is the interior filling between these walls that is now, through the deadly effect of heat and cold and dryness and dampness attacking it alternately, beginning to disintegrate and ooze out between the joints of the outer wall and the crevices made by the action of the elements.

A Real Delicacy.

A New York clubman who prides himself on his knowledge of things epicurean was much interested in an item he discovered in the menu laid before him on the occasion of his visit to a town of the middle west The item was "green bluefish"

"Waiter," demanded the New Yorker, "what sort of bluefish are green bluefish?"

"Fresh, sir," quickly responded the servitor "Right from the water"

"How dare you impose upon me?" continued the clubman "You know well enough that bluefish are not taken at this season"

Whereupon the waiter picked up the menu and gave it a careful scrutiny as if by that action he would solve the mystery Then, with an air of one suddenly enlightened, he added

"Oh, that, sir? That's hothouse bluefish."—Lippincott's.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo. # BREEDING AMERICAN THOROUGHBREDS

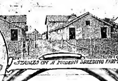
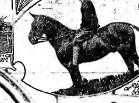
A TYPICAL AMERICAN THOROUGHBRED



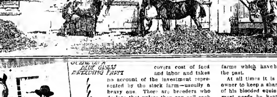
STABLES ON A MODERN BREEDING FARM



A BLUE RIBBONER OF THE OLD DOMINION

AMERICA'S FOREMOST HORSEWOMAN MRS ALLEN POTTS OF VA

READY FOR A TRY-OUT



SCENE ON A BLUE GRASS BREEDING FARM

A FINE EXAMPLE OF A HIGH-PRICED STALLION

ALTHOUGH horse racing on many of the most prominent tracks in America has in recent years gone into eclipse and the [illegible] gone by are, to a great extent, a thing of the past, the breeding of thoroughbreds continues and thrives. The market nowadays is not found so much among the owners of racing stables as among that large and increasing percentage of the public that has means and inclination ot keep fine riding horses. Not even the vogue of the automobile seems to have dampened the enthusiasm of these cross-country riders and hunters and polo players who demand and are willing to pay for special qualifications in horse flesh.

The reader will of course understand that the term thoroughbred, as here used, refers to running horses. There are persons who are under the impression that the high-class American trotter has as much right as the running horse to designation as a thoroughbred, but in strictly correct usage horsemen refer to the fine trotters as "standard bred" and reserve the first mentioned term for the runners—the hunters and the "timber-toppers," as the jumping horses requisite for cross-country riding are designated.

The modern American thoroughbred, as we see him at our present day race meetings and horse shows, is the product of four centuries of breeding, training and experimenting. The ancestors of the present numerous equine family were brought to Virginia by the early English settlers and Virginia and adjacent parts of the South have always been famous as the breeding ground of thoroughbreds. However, much of the breeding of thoroughbreds which is and has been done in this favored region has been carried on for love of the task rather than for financial returns.

There is a wide difference between American thoroughbreds and those bred in other notable horse-raising sections (for instance, Ireland), but it would be difficult to find an American horseman who will not argue up and down that the Yankee steeds are as fine examples of all-around training as may be found anywhere on the globe. The American thoroughbred is admittedly shorter than his English prototype, but it is claimed that this lack of stature is more than counterbalanced by soundness and superior constitution.

Horsemen in the United States and in the United Kingdom hold to different ideals in breeding that are bound to be reflected by certain dissimilarities in the animals produced. In America the tendency has been to develop thoroughbreds that will run comparatively short distances at maximum speed, whereas in England greater attention is bestowed upon the problem of breeding horses that will run long distances and will carry weight. It is to be expected that with the passing of racing as the supreme field of usefulness for the American thoroughbred there will be a tendency on the part of Yankee breeders to more nearly approach the English standard, which is supposed to produce horses ideal for private use.

The breeding of thoroughbreds in America has been carried on most extensively in the States of Virginia, Kentucky, California, Montana, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, New York and New Jersey. The principal requisites are an equable climate, good soil with a foundation of limestone, plentiful water and an abundance of sweet grass. There are yet in existence many breeding farms of modest pretensions, but the tendency of recent years appears to be to create vast estates where wealthy men specialize in the breeding of thoroughbreds by aid of every facility that money and thought can provide. In Kentucky a few years ago eight old-fashioned stock farms were merged by a millionaire into one vast breeding estate of fully two thousand acres.

Experienced breeders figure that it costs not less than $125 to raise a thoroughbred yearling at an up-to-date stock farm and this sum merely covers cost of feed and labor and takes no account of the investment represented by the stock farm—usually a heavy one. There are breeders who declare that unless they can sell each of their yearlings for a price close to $500 they do not make a reasonable profit, but in the South, where labor is cheap and where the initial cost of much of the land was fairly low, it is possible for breeders to make money from sales at lower figures than that mentioned.

The organization and management of an up-to-date breeding farm is interesting from the manner in which it insures attention to detail. The owner of the farm is usually his own manager, but in some instances there is also a resident manager to handle matters when the owner is absent—as he must be much of the time if he attends the fairs, horse shows and horse sales. Under the manager are a number of skilled trainers, each of whom is responsible for the education of a certain number of horses, and has the assistance of several helpers in his work. In addition to this staff there is a boss or foreman for each barn and under each barn boss is enrolled a number of grooms, exercise boys, etc. At some of the costly farms in Virginia and Kentucky we find every modern facility from a private electric light and power plant to feed cutters that not only take the grain from the private elevator and crush it, but mix the feed in any desired proportions.

The education of a thoroughbred at a modern stock farm begins very early in life and is very thorough. However, careful handling is requisite, for a majority of the foals are decidedly shy. When the age of seven or eight months is attained the average young thoroughbred is sufficiently broken to undergo a preliminary trial. As a yearling he is subjected to further tests, but it is not until the animal is well into the second year that the breeder determines whether the youngster gives promise of a turf career or is better adapted to service as a roadster or a mount for the huntsman. Sales of yearlings are usually held in midsummer and there is seldom any dearth of bidders for the equines [illegible] farms which have been awarded blue ribbons in the past.

At all times it is essential for the breeder or owner to keep a sharp watch regarding the health of his blooded equines. Particularly close watch must needs be kept as to the condition of the mouth, legs and feet of each animal. It is obvious that a horse cannot eat properly and be adequately nourished if he has a sore mouth, just as he cannot run satisfactorily if his feet are in bad condition or the shins are "bucked"—the bugbear of two-year-olds. Training a thoroughbred for racing involves, of course, special instruction quite aside from anything included in the animal's education at the breeding farm, but for that matter every step in the life of a young thoroughbred taxes the temper of the nervous, high-strung animal. And the men in charge of one of these equines must show judgment and patience in introducing a four-footed charge to each new experience even though it be something so simple as initiation into the mysteries of a box-stall or the donning of a blanket for the first time.

Since the decadence of racing in the United States a number of American millionaires who breed thoroughbreds primarily in order to supply their own racing stables have transferred the scene of their activities to the Old World. There are several in England; quite a few in France and a number in Ireland, where Richard Croker, former Tammany leader, is among those who have established important breeding farms. With most of these wealthy men, however, breeding is a fad. The men who breed thoroughbreds for a livelihood continue to do business at the old stand in America and most of them obtain satisfactory profits for their efforts.

LAW'S INJUSTICE MADE PLAIN

Farmer's Grievance Was That Story Once Accepted Should Not Remain Good.

A story is being told at the expense of an old English farmer who was recently called upon to explain why he had failed to take out a license for a favorite fox terrier dog. "'E's nobbut a puppy," the defendant remarked, in response to a question as to the animal's age. "Yes, yes! So you say. But how old is he?" "Oh, weel, I couldn' tell to a bit," was the reply. "I never was much good at remembering dates, but 'e's nobbut a puppy." On the other hand, it was maintained that the animal in question was a very, very old-fashioned puppy, and the magistrate inflicted the usual fine. Shortly afterward the farmer was met by a friend who wanted to know how he had fared at the police court. "Nobbut middlin'," was the reply. "Did they fine you?" "Yes," responded the victim, "an' 'ang me if I can understand it! Last year an' the year afore that I told the same tale about the same dog, an' it wor allus good enough afore! Who's been tamperin' wi' the law sin' last year?"

Walking for Nerves.

The nerves suffer from want of pure oxygen. They run like a network all through the skin and when they are overwrought the skin is apt to be dry and colorless. Walking is an excellent tonic for the nerves. It gives them strength to control themselves.

If one has means or leisure, there are plenty of other more enjoyable exercises. But few forms are so beneficial as the regular daily jaunt of four or five miles for obtaining a good complexion.

The trouble with a good bit of reform is that it is badly in need of reforming.

Why He Couldn't Sit Down.

Harry, aged six, is an orphan, but an indulgent grandmother and kind maiden aunt have taken care of him. The first pair of knickerbockers were secured recently, and it was a proud moment for the boy when his aunt put them on him on Sunday morning and he was permitted to go to church with his grandmother. Naturally maiden aunts know very little about the arrangement of knickerbockers, and there was a suspicious fullness in front and an equally mystifying tightness in the back to be observed, as the little chap trudged happily along. In church Harry sat down, but did not appear comfortable and stood up. "Harry, sit down," whispered his grandmother. He obediently climbed back on the seat, but soon slipped off again. "Harry, you must sit down." "Grandma, I can't. My pants is choking me." She looked more closely than her dim sight had before permitted, and discovered the new little knickerbockers were on hind side before. Harry stood up during the remainder of the service.

Saw No Difference.

"People who seek books from the fiction section make some funny breaks," says a librarian of the Library of Congress. "I have made note of a number of these, but none of them amused me more than the request of a sour-looking spinster.

"She sternly demanded of me a copy of 'The Recollections of a Liar.' I told her that I didn't know it, but that I could give her 'The Recollections of a Married Man.'

"'That will do,' said she acidly, 'it's practically the same thing.'"—Lippincott's.

His Exact Sort.

"What kind of a glass of fashion did Ophelia consider Hamlet?" "As long as she called him Lord Hamlet, I suppose she considered him a peer glass."

Ingredients of Life.

The ingredients of health and long life are great temperance, open air, easy labor and little care.—Philip Sidney.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules. Easy to take as candy.

Man and Meter Both Unique.

A Kansas City man notified the gas company that his meter was running slow. Greater honesty hath no man than this.

RECOGNIZED THE ACTION.

Little Nell—I didn't know that they played "I Spy" in church, mamma.

Mamma—What do you mean, my child?

Little Nell—Why, the preacher said "Let's Play," and everybody held their hands up to their faces.

High Aim.

"Let us endeavor so to live that when we come to die even the undertaker will be sorry."—Mark Twain.

THE RUINATION OF SAM BUD

STORY OF A MAN WHO MIGHT HAVE LIVED HAPPILY IF HE HADN'T HAD SO MANY RELATIVES

I kin remember when th' only feller that had a suit case wuz some dude with two sets o' scenery that attended all th' out-o'-town dances. Now, ever' one you meet, Hunyaks an' all, has a suit case an' is goin' some place er jist gittin' back. Ever' time I read about somebuddy returnin' home after "a delightful two weeks' visit," er see a ole battered up pasteboard suit case, I think o' Sam Bud's fate.

Sam Bud got married long before he begun t' shave, an' he never seemed able t' find anything t' do at home that jist suited him. He wuz allus talkin' about "acceptin' a position," an' when he'd go 'way t' accept it he'd allus come back an' say, "Aw, they didn't want t' pay nothin'." He didn't want a job with wages er he didn't even want a situation. He wanted a light position with a good salary. Nobuddy knew what he wanted t' do fer he couldn't do nothin'.

His relatives got kind o' tired o' him after he fooled around eight or nine years, an' I guess he [illegible] oak dresser an' four chairs, a plaid husk mattress an' a blue enamel bedstead up by th' livery stable an' sold 'em at auction an' him an' his wife lit out.

Nothin' wuz heard o' em for nearly ten years. When one day Pinky Kerr found a ole city paper in a empty egg case. Th' fust thing he read wuz this: "While Samuel Bud, a wealthy an' prominent manufacturer, wuz crossin' Washin'ton street Tuesday evenin' he wuz struck by a tourin' car an' taken t' his home at 10757 North Meridian street. He wus not seriously injured."

Sam Bud, wealthy manufacturer! Jist think o' it! An' livin' on th' North side, too. That wus enough for his kin folks.

So one evenin' Sam Bud went home he found his verandy covered with relatives an' th' hall full o' suit cases. Weeks went on an' they kept comin' an' goin'. Ever' few days a new family group appeared. Sometimes it wus Uncle Jim an' his family. He'd bring a 40-cent dressed hen an' they'd all stay two weeks, then Aunt Lide an' th' girls would come with a pound er two o' pale butter an' say, "Now, Ellie, don't you go t' no trouble on our account. Th' Lord knows we hain't used to much," then Cousin Bill would jist happen t' be in th' city an' he'd say, "Now Sam, remember, no didoes. I kin eat anything you kin," then Sam's father would drop along with one side of his suit case full o' Early Rose pertaters an' th' other side full o' socks—enough t' run him a month. He allus mixed business with pleasure an' when he wasn't out t' th' stock yards he'd set on th' verandy in his stockin' feet an' watch th' autos go by.

Th' relatives kept comin' till Sam had t' sell his interest in th' factory an' go t' bookkeepin'. Then his big home went next an' he rented a flat an' had t' put in foldin' furniture an' cots.

Ever'buddy from th' ole town looked Sam up an' brought him hickory nuts an' sorghum an' pawpaws an'—remained over.

One Saturday he returned home after puttin' a delegation o' home folks on th' interurban an' fell int' a easy chair an' picked up th' daily paper. Purty soon his wife, who wuz peelin' some turnips in th' kitchen, heard a muffled report. Rushin' int' th' room she found Sam layin' on th' floor. In his hand wuz a clippin' from th' paper sayin': "The State Grange will meet in this city next week."—Abe Martin, in Indianapolis News.

Man Arises With Protest

Unfortunate Individual Thinks He Has a Grievance Against Society as at Present Organized.

The following incident may be commended to the attention of the society for the promotion of equal rights for men. If there is no such society there ought to be and shall be. A dejected looking man carrying in his arms a young baby applied to an eastern magistrate for advice. He stated that his wife was in the habit of leaving him for many days at a time in the pursuit of happiness, and the care of the baby consequently devolved upon him, to the ruin of his business. Would the law protect him? The magistrate explained that the law would not. The government of the country in such matters was of women, for women, and by women. It made no mention of men. The husband asked if he might have a maintenance order on behalf of the child. No, he might not. Maintenance orders would be issued in favor of women only. Persons who had been so ill-advised as to select the male sex at birth must take the consequences, and it was to be hoped that the applicant had now learned a lesson that would stand him in good stead next time. For this occasion only he might consider that he left the court without a stain upon his character, but upon his next appearance the court would deal less mercifully with him. Just at this moment the infant awoke and demanded nourishment. Finding that nature was unaware of the new order of things and that its father was but ill-equipped for purposes of provender, it raised its voice in sturdy remonstrance and the applicant was hustled into the street by the indignant usher and was last seen making his way disconsolately to the river.—Exchange.

A Hold-Up

An Oppressive Trust.

Before the Coffee Roasters' Association, in session at Chicago on Thursday, Thomas J. Webb, of Chicago, charged that there is in existence a coffee combine which is "the most monstrous imposition in the history of human commerce."

There is very slight exaggeration about this statement. It comes very close to being literally true. There is a coffee combine in Brazil, from which country comes the bulk of the coffee used in the United States, which is backed by the government of Brazil and financed by it, which compels American consumers, as Mr. Webb said, "to pay famine prices for coffee when no famine exists."

The worst thing about this is that the consumers of the United States have been compelled to put up the money through which this combine, to further cinch them, has been made effective. There were formerly revenue duties imposed upon all coffee entering the United States. Those taxes were denounced as an imposition upon the people; as taxing the poor man's breakfast table, and the like. The taxes were removed. Immediately thereafter Brazil imposed an export duty upon coffee up to the full amount of the former customs taxes in this country. The revenue which formerly went into the treasury of the United States was diverted to the treasury of Brazil. The poor man's breakfast coffee continued to cost him the same old price.

But this was only the commencement. The "valorization" plan was evolved in Brazil. Through this plan the government, using the revenues derived from the export duties for the purposes, takes all of the surplus crop in a season of large yields and holds it off the market, thus keeping the supply down to the demands of the market and permitting the planters to receive a much higher price than they would otherwise have done.

The United States consumes more Brazilian coffee than does the rest of the world. We are the best customers of Brazil, and Brazil buys little from us. Now Brazil is promoting, financing and maintaining a trust designed, and working effectively for the purpose, to compel American consumers to pay an exorbitant price for the coffee they use. What is the remedy?—Seattle Post-Intelligencer—Nov. 19, 1911.

Standard statistics of the coffee trade show a falling off in sales during the last two years of over two hundred million pounds. Authenticated reports from the Postum factories in this city show a tremendous increase in the sale of Postum in a like period of time.

While the sales of Postum invariably show marked increase year over year, the extraordinary demand for that well-known breakfast beverage during 1911 is very likely due to a public awakening to the oppression of the coffee trust.

Such an awakening naturally disposes the multitude who suffer from the ill effects of coffee drinking to be more receptive to knowledge of harm which so often comes as a result of the use of the drug-beverage, coffee.—Battle Creek Evening News—Dec. 19, 1911.

POSTUM

is a pure food-drink made of the field grains, with a pleasing flavour not unlike high grade Java.

A Big Package
About 1¼ lbs. Costs 25 cts.

Economy to one's purse is not the main reason for using Postum.

It is absolutely free from any harmful substance, such as "caffeine" (the drug in coffee), to which so much of the nervousness, biliousness and indigestion of today are due. Thousands of former coffee drinkers now use Postum because they know from experience the harm that coffee drinking causes.

Boil it according to directions (that's easy) and it will become clear to you why—

Her Home, Her Interests.

A Clothes-Pin Party.

A mother of a twelve-year-old daughter was at a loss just how to entertain for her. The doll and playing at house and "Come to See" period was past and she was too young for a card party, so her clever brain evolved the clothes-pin party, which I am about to describe.

The invitations were written and folded, held fast by a wee gilded clothes-pin and delivered by an obliging young brother. When all had arrived, a big basket of ordinary clothespins was placed in the middle of the room and all were told they could have ten minutes in which to build a block house on the floor, following these instructions, which the mother read aloud:

Start the house foundation with two clothespins laid down parallel and sufficiently far apart for two more clothespins to bridge over the intervening space. Be sure to place the clothespins so that they rest on the open edge of the prongs and lie steady, for the round edge is apt to roll and slide.

Lay the second two pieces across with their ends on the first two pins. Build up the lower part of the house in this way, eight layers high. The upper part of the building will need longer logs, which may be made by taking two pins and fitting the prongs together; with these cross the top of the house so the edge projects an equal distance on both sides. After the four logs are adjusted proceed with the second story the same as the first. Use all long logs and continue until it's ten "pins" high, then make a brown paper or pasteboard roof.

Next take clothespins, dress them like "early settlers" and see how good and lifelike they appear. Plenty of black, white and colored tissue paper must be provided, and paste, scissors and thread. Prizes awarded for the best little men and women manufactured by the young artists.

The table centerpiece was a clothes-pin house in a yard with miniature "pin" figures, small trees, animals and chickens completed this most realistic scene. The napkins were pinned together with gilded "pins," the same card tied to the top.

Confectionery Contest.

Try this "sweet" contest the next time you want something amusing yet not too difficult. For prizes use candy in odd boxes. What candy would be purchased by a:

1. Lover (kisses).
2. Schoolmaster (stick candy).
3. Negro (chocolate drop).
4. Flatterer (taffy).
5. Coiner (mint candy).
6. Pickle manufacturer (spice).
7. Minister (divinity fudge).
8. Miller (barley sugar).
9. German (sauer kraut candy).
10. Dentist (gum drop).
11. Pugilist (jaw breaker).
12. Shoemaker (shoe strings).
13. Dairy-maid (butterscotch).
14. Calendar designer (date candy).
15. Cranberry picker (marshmallows).
16. Milkman (cream candy).

MADAME MERRI.

IN VOGUE

Expensive afternoon gowns are trimmed with large quantities of rich lace.

Rich velvet corduroys will make many of the most fashionable tailored suits.

While lace waists will undoubtedly have a great vogue throughout the winter.

Ostrich feathers are dyed in every modish shade—green, red, gray and the like.

DAINTY FANCIES FOR THE CHILDREN

This picturesque little smock worn by the boy on the left is of white shantung embroidered in jade floss silk and outlined with French knots. On the right is a dainty cap of dewdrop chiffon, edged with tiny moss-rose buds, and with a frill of Valenciennes lace. In the center the child is wearing a Liberty velveteen dress made in one piece with a tasselled yoke in Berlin canvas embroidered in red, blue, and yellow wool. In the dress worn by the girl in the left hand corner, the chief features are the gauged Magyar sleeve and the tablier overdress of green cashmere embroidered in floss silk. The underdress is a pale shade of green Liberty silk. The little dress on the right is of nattier blue satin charmeuse, with a folding bandeau buttoning on to the embroidered waist belt. The chemisette and sleeves are of the palest blue crepe de chine.

Simple Frocks for Girls.

Embroidery plays an important role in some of the chic little evening frocks, but it is most often to self color and has no touch of gorgeousness such as is shown in many of the embroideries for older folk. A little crystal or gold or silver is admissible, but nothing striking or elaborate.

A delightful little frock of the palest of pink tulle was made up over a pink silk foundation. The tulle was sprinkled with crystal dewdrops. The only trimming was ruches of tulle trimming the lace fichu and bands of lace trimming which edges the ruffle on the skirt. At the right side of the frock at the waist line there was a large black bow edged with a plaited frill.

For Flowers.

The girl who likes a few growing things around her, no matter how simple they are, should not bother about procuring handsome vases. She should take up the new fancy for using old English beer jugs. They are made in America as well as in England, and have all sorts of pictures on them, from Westminster Abbey, in London, to the Independence Hall in Philadelphia.

The jugs are low and broad and have wonderful coloring. They come in purple, in green and in brown and sell for reasonable prices.

Muff Cords Again.

Some years ago it was the fashion to wear the muff hung from the neck by a cord, ribbon or chain. It is likely that this fad will return this winter.

The muff suspended from the shoulder by a thick tasseled silken cord is the latest novelty of the furriers.

Carried in this fashion the muff suggests one of the enormous aumoniere bags which were the fad of the moment a season ago. When worn with an evening wrap the muff, made en suite with the cloak, is suspended from the wrist by plaited satin ribbons.

Still increases the favor to waists having the peplum or girdle finish to wear outside the skirt.

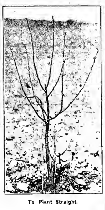
PRUNING CORRECTLY INCREASES SIZE AND IMPROVES QUALITY

Important to Know Which Limbs are Useless and Which Valuable—Apple Trees Should be Kept Low and Open so Spray and Light May Reach Everywhere—Aid in Picking.

Pruning done correctly will increase the size and improve the quality of most common fruits. The expense of picking will be lessened and the expense of handling will not be so great, because there will be more of the first grade and less of the poorer grades of fruits. Then the results of spraying will be more satisfactory and if the tree has been pruned, injuries to the wood and fungous pests are not so likely to be present. This was the information given a few days ago by D. E. Lewis, assistant in horticulture at the Kansas Agricultural college.

The object of pruning, Mr. Lewis says, is to obtain as much good fruit as possible from as little wood as possible. Apples are borne on wood two or more years old, while peaches grow only on one-year wood.

The apple tree should be kept low and open so the spray may reach all [illegible]sible; to change the tree from an undesirable to a desirable shape; to rid it of disease spots and dead wood, and to open it to admit light and air. Fungous growths develop best in dense shade. Pruning makes conditions unfavorable for them because light is admitted. But care must be taken that direct sunlight does not reach the larger limbs for too long a period every day. That may cause "sun-scald."



To Plant Straight.

It is important, before trying to prune, to know where and how the fruit is borne. Then enough bearing wood to produce a good crop the following year should be left. This may be done and the tree made the desired form at the same time. Apples the limbs easily and the fruit be gathered easily.

You may take advantage of a year when cold has killed the fruit to rid peach trees of all surplus wood. They will stand a great deal of pruning and should be cut back so as to have just as little useless wood as possible.

Pruned and Protected.

The larger limbs may be left as stubs, but there should be plenty of one-year limbs left to renew the top.

Cherry trees do not need so much pruning, but it is well to keep the tree in the proper shape with the top fairly open so that insecticides and sprays may be applied if necessary. A knowledge of the variety is needed to insure a proper pruning of the plum tree.

Raising Pigeons.

Pigeons must have clean water for bathing once every day. It should be given them early in the morning. The birds cannot live without it.

The bathing dishes should be emptied after the birds have used them, as they quickly become foul and should not be allowed to stand.

The pigeon that goes about with drooping wings is a sick bird.

At the first sign of sickness the birds should be taken out of the pens and placed by themselves. Unless they are very valuable they should be killed at the end of three days if they are not entirely well.

Live Stock in New Zealand.

The livestock farmers of New Zealand use canvas covers for cows and horses in cold or wet weather. The climate is cold and wet in winter, but mild enough to permit grazing, although the cattle need some protection as described during spring and autumn. The covers are used only at night.

Rough Usage of Cows.

Be convinced of what rough usage of your cows will do by using the Babcock test when the cows are handled quietly and properly and again when they are hurriedly huddled into their stable by some "don't care" person.

SOUTHDOWN BREED IS UNEXCELLED

The Southdown breed belongs to the short-wool class and for quality it is unexcelled in the markets. Each year the butchers select these lambs as being the best for the market. Indeed the mutton from this breed of sheep commands the best price in the market on account of its quality.

This breed has been used to improve the quality of some of the other Down breeds of sheep to a larger extent than has any other distinct breed. Its low set, broad back, well sprung rib, full leg and stylish appearance make it attractive wherever found.

This breed has a comparatively dense fleece of good quality but short in staple. The cross on the western bred ewe was a good one, the lambs being good feeders, but were smaller than other breeds when finished.

FARM WORKSHOP IS INVALUABLE

Place Where Many Hours are Spent That Otherwise Might Be Thrown Away—Good for Boys.

It is hard to estimate the value of the shop on the farm.

The room should be well lighted and of such size as to accommodate a portable forge, two sets of trestles and a long workbench with two sides to it.

On the joists overhead may be stored lumber for repairing the different parts of wagons, sleds, plows and harrows.

Some may say they have no one to do that sort of work so what is the use of having a shop. If there are boys in the family teach or have one of them taught to do repair work such as wood work and blacksmithing.

The shop should be at such a distance from the other buildings of the farm so as not to endanger them from sparks of the shop fire.

On winter days that are not fit for working outside a few new single-trees are made and ironed off, the broken ones mended on the old ones. A few gates are made each winter and set up and braced against one side of the shop so as not to warp or settle crooked.

If the gate stuff is thoroughly seasoned they are given a good coat of paint. If the material is sappy or green the gates are not painted until the next summer.

All shavings and chips made in the shop are carefully put in boxes and used as kindling for the fires in the dwelling house.

Just build one and stock it with some good tools and material and you will wonder how you ever got along without it.

The support for the work bench which may be easily made of ordinary dry goods boxes makes a nice place to keep the tools, nails and bolts.

IN LESS STRENUOUS TIMES

Explanation of the Difference Between Domestic Standards Now and Those of Long Ago.

In the Woman's Home Companion there is an interesting presentation of the difference that exists between the domestic standard of young married women of today and those of the past generation. How did the women of the middle class of a generation or two ago manage when they could not keep help? Following is the answer quoted from a Companion editorial:

"They lived according to their means; they did not set up impossible standards, and they knew much less about the science of bringing up children. They had no special style to keep up, gave the children a weekly bath, kept the table set between meals, did not serve their meals in courses, but put all the food on the table at once, confined their social affairs to evening calls and parties and church suppers, at which they wore the same black silk dress for at least two seasons; in short, every woman did only what she could, and her friends made it easier for her by doing likewise."

IN AGONY WITH ITCHING

"About four years ago I broke out with sores on my arms like boils. After two months they were all over my body, some coming, and some going away. In about six months the boils quit, but my arms, neck and body broke out with an itching, burning rash. It would burn and itch, and come out in pimples like grains of wheat. I was in a terrible condition; I could not sleep or rest. Parts of my flesh were raw, and I could scarcely bear my clothes on. I could not lie in bed in any position and rest. In about a year the sores extended down to my feet. Then I suffered agony with the burning, itching sores. I could hardly walk and for a long time I could not put on socks.

"All this time I was trying everything I could hear of, and had the skill of three doctors. They said it was eczema. I got no benefit from all this. I was nearly worn out, and had given up in despair of ever being cured when I was advised by a friend to try Cuticura Remedies. I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and used exactly as directed. I used the Cuticura Remedies constantly for four months, and nothing else, and was perfectly cured. It is now a year, and I have not had the least bit since. I am ready to praise the Cuticura Remedies at any time. (Signed) E. L. Cate, Exile, Ky., Nov. 10, 1910."

Where the Fruit Grows.

Michael Casey, a politician in San Francisco, who has been in office and on the city payroll for many years, was addressing a meeting of his fellow-citizens. It was a labor meeting.

"You men must know," spouted Casey, "that you are the great body politic in this city. You are the roots and trunks of our great municipal tree, while we who represent you in office are merely the branches on that magnificent tree."

"True for you, Mike," piped a man in the back of the hall, "but did ye ever notice all the fruit grows on the branches?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Women's Secrets
There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.
Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. ### PERRY

The W. C. T. U. will meet this week at the home of Mrs. H. J. Norton.

The Ladies Auxiliary of St Anne's Episcopal church meets Thursday at the home of Mrs R. S. West.

Mr. Archie Merriman is spending a few weeks in Orwell on business.

Mr and Mrs. Frank Langshaw were shopping in Cleveland Thursday.

Mr. Smith is expected to return to Perry shortly. He will come as soon as he is physically able.

Miss Carrie Shook is staying at home at present.

Examinations were given throughout the Perry public schools last week, and the second terms work has commenced. In the high school classes were changed about, as the new studies were brought in, causing a change of teachers in many branches.

Although the weather is terrifically cold, it brings one gleam of comfort. It may not take a fortune to buy ice next summer. Much ice is being cut on all the ponds in Perry. L. V. Axtell has been busy cutting most of last week and Mr. Van Ness commenced to cut Monday.

During the severe cold weather Miss Esther Wood is staying at the home of T. B. West.

Miss Jessie Teaney will spend the following week with friends in Thompson.

A large part of Perry's population was in Painesville Monday. Mr James McVitty, Mr. C. A. Vizzard, Mrs Brewster and daughter, Lorna, Mrs Max Craine, Mrs A. F. Hamley, Mrs Sparks and sister Hazel Main, Mrs. Sivalls and Miss Jessie Teaney all had business in Painesville Monday.

Mrs R. N. Sweet is suffering from an attack of the grippe.

Farmers who own bobs and cutters have taken advantage of the heavy snow, and Sunday fairly echoed with the jingle of sleigh bells, as the cutters came dashing up to the church doors.

The Odd Fellows Lodge will give a banquet to its members and friends Tuesday, Jan. 23.

NORTH MADISON

Mrs May Crocker is very low with pleural pneumonia. Dr. Wiggins is attending her.

The L. A. S. is to meet at the parsonage in Madison with Mrs. Yeager, Thursday, the 18th. A chicken pie dinner will be served and every one is cordially invited to come.

Eugene Harris has been confined to the house for several weeks with erysipelas.

Mrs. Durward Trask has recently spent a week in Cleveland.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wakelee of Forest City were guests of her parents on the Dock Road.

Mrs Geo. Shaw entertained two of the Gospel Team workers from Western Reserve University for a week, while they were conducting meetings at the N. Congregational church.

Mr and Mrs O. S. Foster and John Carlip were Sunday guests at L. A. Foster's.

Everyone thinks this a record breaker for this part of the country when the mercury goes 26° below zero we are quite sure it is pretty cold and we think we would rather stay in by the fire.

Mr Firoly has sold his place to John Wehr, brother of James Wehr, who purchased the W. Wheeler farm.

Mr Brainard, one of the hack drivers of the North Ridge school had quite an experience, one in which he will always remember. While returning home Tuesday evening his hack overturned pinning him underneath "as he was out hunting his whip." Fortunately there were no children in the hack. Mr Brainard received three fractured ribs and other bruises. Hack drivers and R. R. post men do not have so much of a snap after all especially this weather.

Our R. R. delivery man Tommy Crumb did not get back to Madison until 6 o'clock Tuesday evening. They were trying to locate him by phone thinking he was frozen to death or had lost his way, as ordinary weather he should be in at 3 o'clock.

Roy Crocker of Painesville came to see his mother Tuesday.

Mrs. Julia Platt and Mrs. Mary Beebe are both on the sick list.

Mr and Mrs John Perry were recent guests at the Clark farm.

Ice houses are being filled rapidly this weather. The Cumings camp are putting in their ice for the coming summer, also for the house at the Park is being filled this week.

Mr Earl Colter of Madison is to have the care of "Oladmere Park" for the coming summer.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Foster were guests of their daughter, Mrs. Lynn Fuller Monday.

Mr. Will Ross is visiting his parents in Lenox, Ohio.

MADISON

Miss Myrtle Graves spent several days last week with friends in Collinwood and Cleveland.

The Martha's and Mary's Sunday school class held a sale of bakery goods and aprons Friday afternoon. They realized fifteen dollars from the sale. This is to be given to the Y. M. C. A. of Madison.

Saturday morning about ten o'clock the home of Miss Celia Williams of East Main street was burned to the ground. The fire company was called but were unable to get water, and as the fire had gained such headway there was no way of controlling it. Had this fire occurred on one of those windy days many more might have been left homeless. Usually the fire company have been able to get water from the creeks for this end of the town, but at this time they could not as the creeks were all frozen. Miss Williams had remarked, when asked to sign for paving, give us better fire protection first.

Mr. A. S. Stratton left Thursday morning for California. He will visit other points in the West before returning home.

Born—Wednesday, Jan. 10th, a little daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Baxter of West Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Abel Kimball entertained at a six o'clock dinner Tuesday evening about twelve of their Geneva friends.

The Fortnightly Club will meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs H. G. St John.

Prof. R. G. Crocker of Lake Erie College was called home by the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. May Crocker. Later Mrs Crocker passed away about seven o'clock Monday evening.

Mrs. W. Corlett has been spending several weeks with her daughter Mrs George Moodey in Painesville.

Friday night was one of the coldest nights of the season. Some thermometers going as low as 28 degrees below zero.

Population of China.

According to the very latest figures the population of the entire Chinese empire is 320,542,000, of which number China proper has about 304,003,000. Peking is given a population of 1,017,208, while with the metropolitan district outside the old city proper the outside is 4,054,210, about that of greater New York. It was found that the number of families in the whole empire was 58,824,318, the number of individuals in each family being about 5.5. The area of China proper is about 1,335,000 square miles, and the average number of people per square mile is 188.

Gates Gave a Big Tip.

"The biggest tip I ever saw given a waiter in my life was bestowed by the late John W. Gates in Paris," said a man who is accustomed to be generous in that line himself. "This happened about ten or twelve years ago. Gates entertained a party of about a dozen of us to dinner at the Ritz hotel, and had the little private dining room on the right as you go toward the restaurant. Before the meal was finished Gates called for Olivier, the head waiter. John never did succeed in getting that man's name right. "'Oliver,' he said, 'here's a little something for you,' and he handed him a 1,000 franc note ($200). I told Gates he was foolish, and that he was spoiling things for the rest of us, but he guessed he knew what he was doing."

Windows in Manila.

Perhaps in no other country in the world are conches used as a substitute for window glass. These shells are flat, nearly round, and average four inches in diameter. The edges are trimmed off, so as to leave pores about three inches square, and these are set in narrow strips of wood. The shells are, of course, translucent rather than transparent, and the result is a soft, opalescent light, very agreeable in a country where the glare of the sky would be intolerable if ordinary glass were used. To obtain the maximum window openings the sashes are made to slide horizontally on wide sills of hard wood in a manner similar to that adopted by the Japanese. By this means openings as wide as 12 feet are obtained.

Good-by, Jonesy.

Donald is five years old, and with his parents lives over the Jones family, who sleep very late in the morning. Donald's mother spends a great deal of her time urging him to be quiet mornings so as to permit the Joneses to sleep in peace. This has evidently made a very unfavorable impression on the infant mind of Donald. Recently he met Mrs. Jones in the hall and informed her that he had seen Santa Claus in one of the big department stores. "What is he going to give you for Christmas, Donald?" asked Mrs. Jones. "Three big guns!" replied Donald. "And what are you going to do with them?" asked the lady. "I'm going to shoot you and Mr. Jones, so I can play mornings!" replied the boy.

Buy It In Painesville.

No one will take the time to buy out of town once he is convinced of the real worth of the merchandise in the local stores and of the "right" prices.

Painesville stores are now filled with a choice line of all kinds of merchandise. An inspection of these displays ought to be an affirmative to the argument that it pays to

THE BOOSTER CAR

WHILE IN COUNTY VISITED BY MANY HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE

Its Value as a Means of Education and Betterment Apparent to all Who Saw the Exhibition.

The so-called Booster car was in Lake county two or three days of last week, at Willoughby and Mentor Thursday, at Painesville and Perry on Friday. On Saturday forenoon the car was at Madison. At all the places the car was crowded with interested people who were anxious to see and learn.

This trip of 100 days, has been made possible by the public spirited movement of the New York Central railroad in cooperation with the different departments of the state having the great subject of agriculture in charge. The railroad mentioned furnished car and transportation free of charge. The State Agricultural college at Columbus, the State Experiment Station at Wooster, and the State Board of Agriculture all combined in making the exhibit and bearing the incidental expenses of the trip.

It has become quite common to see cars fitted out with the farm products of western states—tall grass, big stalks of corn, large bright colored apples and beautiful pictures, all telling but one side of a story, and directed by men who have something to sell. The Ohio car was in marked contrast, the commercial features were lacking, there was not so much as an effort to sell railroad transportation. The sole aim of those directing this traveling exhibition seemed to be educational and betterment. There were of course large apples, big potatoes, perfect grain and remarkable yields were noted, but side by side of good results were charts and pictures showing defective conditions which might be bettered by scientific farming. The treatment of barn-yard manures in order to produce the best possible results when applied to the soil. The object lessons shown by the judicious use of commercial fertilizers. The charts showing parts of state where soil conditions could be improved by adding certain elements. The maps showing parts of state where forestry and fruit growing might be followed up with profit considering the low price of land. Samples of wool, showing the dirty condition of Ohio wool when offered for sale, as compared with wool from Australia and New Zealand. The big perfect apples grown by careful trimming of trees and treatment against insects, side of the small imperfect stock grown where trees and cultivation had been neglected. All these and many other lessons that could be learned from a careful study of the exhibition in the Booster car seemed to indicate that the movement was prompted by those who fully realize the great natural advantages that Ohio has as an agricultural state and the great unlimited opportunities for betterment and growth that is possible when the true conditions are properly understood and when scientific farming is applied to those parts of the state that do not today show good returns from the efforts made.

The car while here was in charge of Harry E Eswine and H. J. Speaker, the former connected with Agricultural Extension College of Agriculture O. S. U., and the latter connected with the State Department of Agriculture. Both these gentlemen are enthusiastic workers in the one great industry of Ohio that means more to the future prosperity of the state than any other, possibly all other industries combined.

The activity and enthusiasm of the State Board of Agriculture under the leadership of O. W. McFarland, president, and A. P. Sandles, secretary, is being noted by the farmers generally over the state, and is calling out words of the highest commendation.

JURYMEN

The Names of Representative Business Men Who Will Serve on Grand and Petit Juries.

The names of the following gentlemen residing in Lake county were drawn from the jury wheel and will be summoned to appear before the common pleas court to act as jurymen during the next term of court:

Grand Jury—(Called for January 29)—G. J. Booth, Kirtland; Lyal McCue, Fairport; W. M. Donaldson, W. E Evans, W. L. Pries, E. B. George, Painesville; M. J. Toomey, Wickliffe; John Childs, Lucian Gibbs, Perry; B. L. Bailey, S. L. Baker, Madison; Courtney Barrett, Concord, C. H Harvey, Willoughby; W. B. Moore, Mentor; A. M. Walborn, Leroy.

Petit Jury—(Called for February 12)—J. Northcotte, Colonel Parker, Mentor; C. P. Page, George H. Smith, Henry Brooks, Willoughby; Willis E Prouty, Martin O. Adams, Concord; A. H. Hawgood, B. B. Dockery, J. B Trail, W. B. Blair, Painesville; W. C Skedd, Kirtland; T. N. Fouts, W. H. Wood, W. J. Vandervaer, Madison; C. H. Callow, Leroy; Ray McCwins, Richmond; P. Lockotoeh, Fairport; Melvin Keener, Perry; O. W. Teachout, Madison.

DIVORCE

Prominent Painesville People About To Separate.

Suit has been filed in common pleas here, by Mrs Edith Silverthorne Odell daughter of the late W. H. Silverthorne, president of the Railway Steel Springs Co. of New York.

She charges her husband, H. B. Odell, with gross neglect of duty. The Odells were formerly well known in Cleveland and have two children.

Mrs. Odell has been living at the fine Silverthorne summer home on Mentor avenue just west of this city. Odell has been in the south for several months.

Women in Public Life.

"What I hope to do is to go among the teachers, meet them at their work, find out their ideas and, while helping them as I may, get from them ideas that will help me in administering the schools." This is the declared policy of Harriet Keeler, the new Superintendent of public schools in Cleveland—the second woman for that position in a large city, Ella Flagg Young of Chicago being the first. It is the same policy that Mrs. Young has successfully introduced in the Chicago schools: leadership instead of drivership. Cleveland's adoption of the later and better Chicago policy of putting a woman in charge, is significant of a growing realization of the need of the feminine spirit and influence in public affairs.

Marriage License.

Thomas Morley Warren, 31, Detroit, Mich., Grace Barrows King, 29, Painesville.

MADISON

Will Walding of Detroit, Mich., was a recent guest of his brother, Fred and family, of Safford street.

Miss Celia Williams is making her home for the present with Mr. Fred Griswold's folks of Safford street.

The Madison orchestra furnished exceptionally fine music at the Congregational S. S. Sunday morning. The Glee Club sang at the evening service.

Mrs. Weldy and son Carl, did not arrive home last week as reported, as Mrs. Weldy is ill at the home of her parents in Berea, Ky.

Mrs. James Bmead and Miss Bessie Kimball were recent Ashtabula visitors.

O. O. Griswold and H. O. St. John were in Cleveland, Saturday.

F. M. Leyde had business in Geneva, Monday.

Mrs Samuel Ross and Miss Maggie Ross were in Painesville and Cleveland shopping Saturday.

Editor of the Madison Review, Lynn I. Fuller, has been confined to the house several days with the grip.

M. A. King left Monday for Philadelphia.

Miss Bessie Phelps and Miss Ruth Blanchard are in the employ of the Reed Millinery Co. of Cleveland.

Mrs. Lyon Fuller was in Geneva, Monday.

Miss Myrtle Graves was an over Sunday guest of Ashtabula friends.

Sultan St. John of Painesville attended the funeral of Mrs. Crocker Thursday afternoon.

Onions, like butter, are soaring sky-ward. Buyers are now paying $1.50 per bu. Potatoes are bringing $1.00 per bu. Certainly here is the high cost of living.

S. E. Gordan of Cleveland was in town Tuesday.

Every one should attend the Charity Ball at City Hall Monday evening, January 29. Everyone who can not attend should buy a ticket, the price is 50 cents and every penny goes to help those who are unfortunate.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

Willoughby now has three restaurants and all of them seem to have a liberal patronage.

* * *

Mr. Ed Spaller of the local police force has announced himself as a candidate for sheriff.

* * *

It is about time for everybody to tell everybody that Lake county is going to have a county fair this year.

* * *

The many friends of J. F Mathews will be sorry to learn that there is no improvement. He is still in a critical condition.

* * *

A Tennessee moonshiner says he never drank any of the whiskey he made. Probably intended it for the dry counties.

* * *

A Youngstown man has found a flock of 200 robins wintering in a ravine just outside that city. Yes; Youngstown is "wet."

* * *

Mr. J. F Barrows can now understand why porters, generally, smash trunks, instead of permitting trunks to smash them. Mr. Barrows will be all right in a few days.

* * *

The many friends of Mrs. Judge Nye will be pleased to know that she has made improvement which permitted her being taken from the hospital to her home on Erie street last Monday.

* * *

West Mentor has a new two store business block about completed. The building is two story and basement, built of concrete, and is situated on the south side of street directly opposite the public library building.

* * *

F L. McConnell has opened a general merchandise store at Concord on the old Corlett farm and already has a nice business worked up. Mr McConnell is a hustler and here is wishing him all kinds of success.

* * *

There has been a rumor of a street car line from Fairport to Conneaut. The proposed line if built will follow close to the lake. Efforts are also being made to build a trolley line from Conneaut to Youngstown.

* * *

If you want to know how long to allow cows to stay out in the winter just take off your coat and go out into the yard and stand around a while. When you begin to feel uncomfortable and feel like going into the house, put the cows in the barn.

* * *

To buy large tracts of farm property for the purpose of raising fruit and selling the land in apportionments is the object of the Ashtabula Farm Improvement company, incorporated at Columbus last Friday. The capital stock of the concern is $50,000.

* * *

James C. Phillips of Unionville was in the city Saturday last, and Wednesday of this week, looking after his political chances for the nomination as county commissioner. Prof. Adams, whose home is also at Unionville, has a good word to say for his fellow townsman.

* * *

Mr. F. H. Murray, president of the Painesville National bank, who resides in Concord, where he owns large farm interests, contemplates setting out a number of acres of fruit trees this spring, and he will try the experiment of blasting the ground before setting out the trees.

* * *

Mrs Mary Conkin, wife of David Conklin of Mentor, passed away Sunday after a short illness. The deceased was born in Pennsylvania 64 years ago but has lived in Mentor for some time. Her husband, David Conklin, and a sister, Mrs. Ella Sumner of Painesville, survive. The funeral services will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

* * *

Fletcher O. Malin, delegate to the Constitutional convention was honored with appointments to the two most important committees of the convention, the initiative and referendum and the woman suffrage committees. We understand that Mr Malin is favorably inclined to the adoption of both of these important changes in the constitution, and if he should ever happen to be a candidate again, not only all the male voters will be for him but also all the women.

* * *

Mrs. Lydia Pomeroy Denton, 54, who resided in Geauga county all her life, died at her home at Chardon, Monday, Jan. 22. She was the mother of four newspaper men: Franklin E. Denton, formerly editorial writer on the Cleveland Plain Dealer; Hal P. Denton of Pittsburg, many years Washington correspondent of the New York World; Richard L. Denton, editor of the Geauga Republican, and George M. Denton of Massillon, former editor of the Middlefield Times.

In the Agricultural Extension School held at Painesville, Feb 5-6, 1912, ten lectures will be given on soil fertility. Few people realize that the soil is one of the three sources of all life and wealth. The other two forces, the atmosphere and the sun, cannot be controlled by man, but the soil may be either very fertile or very poor as he may make it. There is no reason why every farmer should not be making his soil more fertile from time to time and thus grow greater and more profitable crops. The Agricultural School is going to assist every farmer who attends it not only to maintain his soil fertility but to make the soil richer.

The mayor of Schenectady, New York, opened his administration with an inaugural address that sounds good to us, and a model for other mayors to adopt, and the spirit of the message is refreshing and almost unique among the common place inaugurals we read. "To us," the vigorous message concludes, "government is not a mere routine to be followed more or less mechanically. It is a great problem to be solved. We look upon government not as the continuation of a precedent or as an adjunct to private business. For us, government is the instrument through which wrong can be righted, poverty abolished, life made secure, cities healthful, citizens happy."

A farmer in northern Ohio who attended one of the Agricultural Extension Schools says that he increased his corn crop this year at least five bushels per acre by putting into practice some of the things taught at the School. He grew about 45 acres of corn. That means an increase of 225 bushels on his entire crop, or a gain of about $125. This man is about 50 years old and we believe he would not make such a statement unless he was sure of the facts. The instructor who is to teach in the Extension School at Painesville, beginning Feb. 5, 1912, says that a man can make $42 per day by properly selecting seed corn and that Ohio can increase its corn crop 10,000,000 bushels by keeping until July the moisture received in the Spring. Proper cultivation will help do this. He further says that many farmers are too determined to grow corn and wheat on soils that should be growing soy beans or alfalfa, which are not only great money producing crops but also wonderfully improve the soil. It will pay any farmer to hear these topics discussed at the Extension School. This school means profits and prosperity to all interested in agriculture.

PERRY

Mrs. Joseph Wood was visiting in Geneva Sunday.

Mr. John Cunningham has business in Cleveland the later part of the week.

The W. C. T. U. postponed the meeting which was to be held at H. O. Norton's, until Tuesday of this week.

There is a case of diphtheria in Perry. The disease has broken out in the Farrell home.

Miss Golda Corwell, who is working in Cleveland, was at home Sunday.

It is reported that Mr. Frank Sawdey, a postal clerk, was quite seriously injured in a wreck Friday.

The I. O. G. F. banquet announced in last week's news as to be held Tuesday evening, is to be held Friday evening instead. Special music has been secured and there will be dancing and other amusements all during the evening.

Mr Julian Vosey has been detained from school on account of illness.

Several sleigh ride parties were postponed last week, because of the melting snow, but at present the week end looks propitious for the disappointed joy riders.

On account of the Ohio Booster Car being in Perry on Friday afternoon, those schools near enough to the center to visit the car were given a half holiday. It was certainly worth while, for the specimens were both interesting and instructive. It is good to know the weeds that are common in one's state, to know the various kinds of blight which attack our trees and the preventive, and lastly it is good to know that the vegetables and fruits raised in Perry compare most favorably with those displayed in the car.

Mr. Ryle of Painesville will give another stereopticon lecture at the Baptist Church Friday evening.

A dancing party was held Monday evening at the Harper Hall to entertain a crowd of Geneva people who came to Perry in bobs.

Attractive Homeseekers Rates Via Nickel Plate Road.

THE ARRANGEMENTS FOR CHARITY BALL ABOUT COMPLETED

The Object For Which Ball is Given Insures a Large Attendance and Good Returns For Efforts Made

Arrangements for the charity ball to be held at city hall Monday night January 29th, have been completed, and the occasion promises to be the event of the season. Through the indefatigable efforts of M. Saslow of the Up-to-Date store everything has been furnished free of cost including the hall, music, light, heat, etc.

The gentlemen and firms mentioned below have shown a kindly charitable disposition in donating flowers, plants and bulbs. The money received from the sale of these things will go to augment the proceeds of the ball, and besides, the auction sale will be an interesting feature of the evening's entertainment.

Donations made for Charity Ball are as follows: Metkle & Son, Mentor, 100 carnations which will be sold at the door; Werner Bros., Painesville, 150 Dahlia Roots, 100 Canna Roots, 200 Gladiolus Bulbs; Storrs & Harrison, 12 beautiful plants; Parmelee farm, Painesville, 50 geraniums.

The plants and bulbs will be auctioned at the City Hall between the entertainment and dance. The Parmelee farm and Werner Bros. will kindly keep their donations until Spring when the highest bidder may get them by having an order signed by three of the committee. The plants donated by Storrs & Harrison Co will be at the City Hall and will be delivered to the highest bidders.

Tickets for the Charity Ball are for sale at the following places: Lightner's Book Store, Royal Candy Store, Corner Pharmacy, Ghering's Drug Store, West's Meat Market, Jackson's Cigar Store, Levy's Cigar Store, The Columbia, National Restaurant, Radcliffe's Bakery, The Dairy, Saba Fruit Store, Hoover & Chapman's Eureka Cigar Store, Crosby Cigar Store, Kelley Barber Shop, Doolittle's Cigar Store, Austin's Pharmacy, and from any one of the following gentlemen who compose the committee of arrangements: M. Saslow, W. E. Chapman, E. Callender, V. L. Brooks, John Lynch and James Hurley.

M. Saslow, who originated the idea of a charity ball, will donate the printing necessary. The price of admittance will be 50 cents per couple, extra lady 25 cents. The committee of arrangement mentioned above will also have charge of the dance.

CONCORD

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Winchell attended Pomona Grange in Painesville last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lutey are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy born Monday Jan. 15th.

Word has been received here of the serious illness of Mrs. John Reade of Chardon. Mr. and Mrs. Reade were former residents of Concord for many years before going to Chardon, and her many friends hope for her speedy recovery.

Just to show Mail carrier Charles W. Tesr of Route three that they appreciated his efforts to do his duty in serving every one with his daily paper, this cold, snowy weather, the patrons made up a purse and presented him with a nice warm fur overcoat, cap and gloves. When summer sun shines warm and the roads are dry it is delightful to drive over Concord hills but when winter's snows sweep over the same hills it is a different thing. The cuts fill with snow from five to ten feet deep and no human being can keep them passable, it is then the mail carrier has his troubles.

CONCORD

W. H. Lutton passed away at his home Saturday morning. Burial will be in Lakeview cemetery, Cleveland. Mr. Lutton purchased the farm known as the Joseph Tuttle farm about two years ago.

F. L. McConnell has built a new store on his farm on Corlett's corners and is carrying a full line of groceries and country supplies in general.

Clifton Adams has been on the sick list but is reported better.

Miss Mary Taylor and Ralph Curtis were married in Cleveland last week. Concord friends extend congratulations.

Miss Mary Lutey is spending some time with her brother, George Lutey and family.

We are looking for that January thaw that the oldest inhabitant says we always have.

Those who braved the cold last Friday evening and attended the Orange installation of officers report a good time and a big crowd. On returning home hardly any of them believed that they had a thermometer that was reliable, as they all registered any where from twenty to thirty degrees below zero, and only the "Old Reliable" saved their reputation as cold registers for their owners in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Manley are visiting at W. P. Warren's for a few days.

In Memoriam.

When the word came that Mr. Horatio Munson had passed on into the other world, our hearts cried out in the words of King David when Abner died: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen in Israel this day?" This whole community is suffering the loss of just such a man, and like Israel of old—we are weakened because of the taking off of this strong man who has lived his good, pure, useful life among us. We try to comfort ourselves by saying: "God will raise up others to take his place; the workers die, but the work goes on." While to a great extent this is true, we know that no man can fill another's place, for each man occupies his own and has his own work to do. There will never be another Horatio Munson! There may be others as good, pure and true, but never just such another personality. As when a costly flask is broken that contained some rare perfume, we gather up the broken pieces and inhale the fragrance before it vanishes and becomes only a memory, so would we, who called this man friend and brother—linger awhile to gather up some of the fragments of his beautiful life, and impress forever upon our minds some of the lovable qualities.

Our thoughts fly back through the years, when as impressionable children we loved to "go a visiting" to the Methodist Sunday school. It was the genial Superintendent who gave such a bright atmosphere to the room and we were always sure of a warm handshake and a hearty "Come again." For twenty-one years, he was Superintendent, and only those who have been engaged in Sunday school work can understand what that means of self-denial and fervent desire for the welfare of childhood and youth. Rising before it was day, working at hard manual labor on a farm, or tramping the fields in all kinds of weather as county surveyor, sitting at his desk until midnight—if any man would be excusable for wanting to sleep late on Sunday morning, one would think he might be—but he never seemed to think of such a thing. He loved the Sunday school and took a personal interest in every boy and girl, and that interest followed each one through life. When quite a young man he gave attention to the claims of the Gospel and definitely accepted Jesus Christ as his Savior and guide. Throughout the years this allegiance never wavered, and to him—the Christian life was the only sane one to live. His faith in a personal crucified and risen Savior, was a continual source of joy, and kept his heart young.

In the church, he was a pillar of strength—always in his place at the services, giving freely of his time thought and means to its upbuilding. One never heard him put up a whine because "because there was always some call for money, somebody begging for something," instead he seemed to look upon such calls as opportunities for investing in heavenly realities. He was such a wise counselor, as one of the stewards said today "so dependable," so sweetly reasonable, one always knew where to find him.

He was not bubbling over with enthusiasm during a revival, and listless and indifferent the rest of the year, but his zeal for the cause of Christ burned brightly all the time.

A ready, forcible talker, he was chief spokesman, and when he rose in the meetings, people listened—for he not only had something to say, but said it in a bright, interesting way.

Of all his noble characteristics it seems to us that the chief one was the gift for friendship. He possessed the rare power of binding other men to himself, and it takes a large nature to make friends among those of one's own sex.

While he was quick to denounce evil, he was ever pitiful towards the offender. If one through wrong-doing called down upon himself the condemnation of the community, we never remember having heard Mr Munson join in the general denunciation. When appealed to for his opinion, would say, "Oh, well, I don't think people understand what a heavy load So and So has been carrying," or "What if he has stumbled and fallen, he doesn't have to stay down—maybe we haven't been as watchful and helpful as we ought to have been." He believed in the square deal for everyone.

In his family life, he was all that the old Saxon word "house-band" signifies. One came away from his home with a wider outlook upon life, and a clearer conception of the beauty and blessedness of a Christian home.

Of his fine mind, business ability, scholarly instincts, love of good literature and the fine arts, we cannot speak at length, but in all of these, he was far beyond the ordinary.

In his make-up, strength and refinement, heroic endurance and tenderness were harmoniously blended. We remember his love for "God's out-of-doors" and how he exulted in the charms of each passing season. We call his fondness for the early spring flowers—their courage in lifting up their heads in the face of cold blasts, seemed in some way to appeal to him. Many were the clumps of Hepaticas set in patches of leaf-mold and moss, the whole cleverly fastened to some piece of bark that found their way into church of a Sabbath morning, and to the room of some "Shut-in" afterwards, carrying its message of love and life to a sad heart. No need to ask who sent them, one always knew. Oh friend of the big heart and the broad mind, how much of helpfulness and good cheer went from our midst when thou didst pass on to Paradise! Thou hast cut a wide swath, oh reaper in life's field, we who are left—must needs draw closer together and pray the Lord of the Harvest to send forth laborers.

"Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
He rests from his labors
And his works follow him."

NORTH MADISON

H. B. Kellogg had business in Cleveland Wednesday.

Al Chapman has been confined to the house by illness but is better at this time.

The funeral of Mrs. Mae Crocker occurred at her late home Thursday, Jan. 18th. She had been a resident of North Madison for over thirty years, and a faithful member of the Chapel M. E. Church for 25 years. Mrs. Crocker was 67 years of age, her husband Mr. Walter Crocker having died 22 years ago leaving her with four children, two of which were small. She has kept the home and cared for the children. She leaves three sons, Claud, Clair and Roy, and one daughter Mrs. Florence Fuller of Mexico, all to feel the loss of a good and kind mother, besides a host of friends and other relatives to mourn her loss. The services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Yeager, assisted by Rev. Dunbar. There was a large profusion of floral gifts which spoke of the high esteem in which she was held. The music was exceptionally fine, one solo by the vocal soloist of Lake Erie College of Painesville, was fine. It was truly said while we are the loser, Heaven is richer by the one who has just passed over.

Tom Foster was a Geneva visitor Saturday.

Mr and Mrs Best of Illinois, were in attendance at her sister's funeral, Mrs. Crocker, Thursday, and returned to their home Saturday.

Mr and Mrs Wm Davies were Painesville guests recently.

Miss Grace Goldsmith of Ashtabula was a Sunday guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Haywood.

Mrs. Harriet Putnam is confined to her bed by illness.

Miss Cora Vesey is at home for a week's vacation.

Mr and Mrs. J. R. Miller are guests of relatives in Painesville and Collinwood for a week.

E. J. Foster and family of town were Sunday guests of her parents.

Mrs. Celia Brown is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Wheeler are the proud parents of a little son born Jan. 20th.

Claud Crocker lost his cow about a week ago. It became frightened by a neighbor coming in to care for it, broke loose and went north from his place. A search was made for it but it could not be found until it had been gone about a week, was found about three miles from home in the wood. When the animal came in sight of Mr. Crocker it walked up to him seemingly so pleased to see him.

Ralph Quirk was a guest of his aunt, Miss May Burns of Madison Monday.

Mrs James Hill entertained a company of friends recently in honor of Mr. Hill's birthday.

UNIONVILLE

Mr. Raymond Rummells of Los Angeles, Calif., is a guest of A. Webb.

Miss Emily Pethtel of Madison was an over Sunday guest of Miss Carrie West, and attended the entertainment at the church on Saturday evening.

Mr and Mrs. Bert Adams were recent guests of his parents, Supt. J. R. Adams and wife.

A. A. Fullea is still under the doctor's care and confined to the house.

The second number of the series of entertainments was given by Illavin, a magician and clay modeler, at the church, on Saturday evening.

Mrs. Kelley who has been visiting her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kelley for the past week, returned to her home in Ashtabula on Monday.

Miss Helen Foster was on Friday a guest of Miss Esther Sites.

A number of the High School pupils and others attended the basket ball game in Geneva on Friday evening.

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefited by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I, the undersigned, wish to announce my candidacy for the office of County Commissioner subject to the Republican Primaries to be held in May, 1912.

SMALL FARMS FOR MEXICANS

They Are to Be Made From Large Tracts Purchased by the Government.

The first move of the government toward buying large tracts of land for the purpose of cutting them up into small farms and inviting their settlement by Mexican agriculturists seems about to be undertaken.

The Sautene hacienda, an enormous property owned by Inigo Noriega, Barron Zayas and Gen. Porfirio Diaz and situated in the northern part of the republic, will be acquired.

Gustavo Madero and Gen. Manuel Garcia Cuellar are at the head of the syndicate which will make the purchase and begin the irrigation of the land at once. The purchase price and the cost of irrigation will be, it is asserted, not less than $17,000,000.

Gen. Diaz had a similar plan in view and had arranged for the government to pay to the owners the sum of $5,600,000 for the purpose of irrigating the property, with the understanding that it was to be sold in the government to be parcelled out among small farmers on easy payment terms. The $5,000,000 was deposited in the Central bank in this city in furtherance of the plan, and the money is still there for such purpose.

As soon as the irrigation development is well under way the hacienda will pass into the hands of the government and then all Mexicans who are living in Texas will be invited to come to Mexico and take up the lands for settlement and cultivation.

In the middle of the big hacienda there is a small ranch called Colombres. It is intended to cut this ranch up into building lots and build a town there as the center of the farming community.—Mexican Herald.

Fingers and Toes.

Dr. Lucas Lucas, an eminent London anatomist, predicts that in the course of time, say in 1,000,000 years or so, men will become a one-toed animal. His theory is that the outer toes being less and less employed, will gradually disappear.

This recalls a curious though quite a different thing. There lives in a certain region of Pennsylvania a wealthy family the male members of which all have five fingers on each hand, the fifth one appearing just back of the fourth finger on the normal hand, the extra member being as well developed and serviceable as the others.

This peculiarity has been inherited by the males of the family from generation to generation, and so far from being regarded by them as a deformity the chances are that if a son with only four fingers on each hand were born to any of them he would be looked upon as a defective.

When Your Play Goes to Rehearsal.

When your play goes into rehearsal it is the child of your fancy adventuring dubiously among ruffians. The actors, I dare say, feel like doctors trying to save a rickety child. The artist must be an egoist, and the actors violate the egoism. In playwriting it is impossible to maintain the austerity of your vision, impossible even to persuade yourself that it may be maintained. The theater is fascinating, but I can imagine that a writer of plays might conceive a distaste for it. He might write his plays for the stage and then jealously guard them from performance. There would be more of this, perhaps, if it were not rather difficult to get plays produced; those who would remain aloof are very readily taken at their word.—A. N. Monkhouse.

Lucky Stumble.

On Christmas day William White of Brooklyn was walking along Nantasket beach near his summer home when he stumbled against a gray looking mass. The Brooklyn man turned and gave the object a kick. Then he looked at it. It certainly was like nothing he had ever seen, so he carried it to his cottage. When he came to New York he brought the stuff with him and has discovered that it is ambergris and worth $19,500. The chemist told him it was probably cast up by a sick whale.

More Sundays Than Weeks.

The first and last days of 1910 fell on Sunday, making 53 Sabbath days in the Christian religion. There being 52 weeks and one day in each ordinary year, there is room for 53 Sundays when the first and last days are Sabbaths. In 1939 it will happen again and the same thing occurred 28 years ago. A calendar which is 28 years old will answer many of the purposes of one which is up to date, as 28 years is a solar cycle and in years a cycle apart the days of the week and month conform.

Slight Modification.

"Competition is the life of trade," said the business man.

"Of course it is," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "Only we want to get trade so regulated that folks will be competing for a chance to buy instead of a chance to sell."

Superseded.

"Do you think eloquence is as much in request as it used to be?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "Nowadays prizes are given for aviation and not for flights of oratory."

Is Talk Really Cheap?

"Talk is cheap," commented the ready-made philosopher.

"That remark," replied Senator Sorghum, "proves that you have never undertaken to pay the traveling expenses and hotel bills of a party of campaign orators."

No Danger.

Peevish Person (in crowded car)—Madam, you have pricked my cheek with that barbarous hatpin!

Stylish Woman—Don't be alarmed, sir! I sterilize it every day.—Judge.

STENOGRAPHER TAKES OWN LIFE

GIRL SWALLOWS LAUDANUM WHEN MOTHER DECIDES TO MARRY THIRD TIME.

OBJECTS TO STEPFATHER NO. 2

Young Woman Worked Hard Eight Years to Support Herself and Parent and Does Not Want Another Man to Share Home.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Because she could not persuade her mother to give up her plans to wed a third time, Caroline Long, a pretty stenographer, swallowed laudanum and died later. The attractive 20-year-old girl had typed letters for the Howard Construction Co. eight years to maintain herself and mother and when she learned recently that the latter intended to bring a second stepfather to the home she had kept up she declared she never would welcome him.

Police Hear Arguing.

About midnight neighbors heard the girl, her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Shrader and John Barwin arguing. Then the girl screamed hysterically and fearing from the indications that serious trouble would follow someone called the police. Officers found the mother and the man discussing the daughter's opposition to the wedding. Being unable to calm the man the police told them they must be quiet or they would be arrested. The daughter in negligee then appeared and according to the police, asked if she had changed her mind. Receiving a reply in the negative the girl drew a revolver from the fold of her gown and pointed it at her temple. It was knocked from her hand.

Drinks Deadly Potion.

The police ordered the girl to dress, but before complying she turned to the mother and asked if she intended to marry again.

"Don't be foolish," the mother replied, "John will make you a good father."

As the girl turned toward a closet as if to reach her garments she said "Well, remember what I told you."

Instead of taking down her clothing she reached to a shelf, secured a bottle and raised it to her lips. The policemen again sought to save her, but fighting them off she managed to drain its contents.

FOUR DIE IN RAILROAD WRECK

James T. Harahan, Former President of Illinois Central, Is Among the Victims.

Centralia, Ill.—James T. Harahan, Sr., former president of the Illinois Central; Frank O. Melcher, second vice president of the Rock Island; E. B. Pierce, general solicitor of the Rock Island, and Eldridge E. Wright, son of Luke E. Wright, former secretary of war, were killed in a collision of two Illinois Central trains at Kinmundy, Ill., about 20 miles from here.

Decatur, Ill.—James T. Harrahan, former president of the Illinois Central, was killed in the wreck of a passenger train near this city. Mr. Harahan retired about a year ago from the presidency of the road with which he had been identified for 40 years, the occasion of his retirement being made notable by a magnificent banquet at the Hotel Blackstone in Chicago.

Three persons in addition to Mr. Harahan were killed, and a large number are reported injured. The wreck occurred near Kinmundy, Ill. Mr. Harahan was traveling in a private car belonging to the Great Northern Railway Co., which was attached to a regular train.

KEY WEST EXTENSION OPEN

Big Celebration Marks the Completion of Remarkable Railway Over the Florida Keys.

Miami, Fla.—The completion of one of the greatest engineering feats of the present age was celebrated January 22 when the first great "railroad over the sea," the Key West extension of the Florida East Coast railway, was formally opened. By using the Florida Keys as stepping stones, this steel highway runs over 156 miles of salt water, from a point a few miles south of Miami to the island city of Key West.

A special train bearing American and foreign notables was sent over the remarkable construction as the feature of the exercises formally commemorating the putting into service of the extension. Many of the foreign embassies and legations had sent representatives to take part in the celebration at the invitation of President Taft, among them Italy, Mexico, Portugal, [illegible] the Dominican Republic, [illegible] Salvador and [illegible]

Mother Fights With Lunatic.

New York City.—A desperate battle for the lives of two little children was terminated by the quick wit of Mrs. Robert E. Voll, their fear crazed mother who when on the point of succumbing through fatigue, put forth all her strength and pushed an insane domestic with whom she had been battling for over ten hours through the door of her parlor, turned the key in the lock and staggered to the telephone to summon aid. The servant was taken to a hospital where she died later.

Says Fowls Have Language.

Washington, D. C.—Surpassing even the achievement of Dr. R. L. Garner, who learned to talk with monkeys, Nelson R. Wood, chief taxidermist of the National Museum, declares that he is able to hold conversations with fowls in their own "language." According to Mr. Wood, fowls have a distinct language of their own and they use it in communication with each other. Mr. Wood says turkeys have the largest vocabulary and pigeons the smallest. The detested crow, however, is the smartest bird.

YOUNG BIRDMAN KILLED

MEMBER OF RICH FAMILY LOSES CONTROL OF MACHINE IN AIR.

Daring Aviator Drops Fifty Feet to Ground, His Neck and Back Being Broken, Also One of His Legs.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Rutherford Page, 24, a graduate of Yale of the class of 1910 and a member of a wealthy New York family who was issued an aviator's license only recently, flew in his professional capacity to his death on Dominguez field, when at 4:10 p. m. he jumped from his Curtiss biplane, over which he had lost control, dropped 50 feet to the ground and was almost instantly killed. Page struck on the back of his head. His neck and back were broken, also one of his legs. The aeroplane was completely wrecked.

It was a tragedy very different from that which, in jocular terms, Page had pictured as his fate. About two weeks ago, when he was a student in the Curtiss school at North Island, near San Diego, the young man said:

"If I am killed I want it to be in full view of a grandstand packed with people after I have descended from a flight with my barograph showing I have broken the world's altitude record."

More obscurely than this fancy was the real happening which brought to an abrupt climax his brief career, for of the thousands packed in the grandstand, it is doubtful if more than a few hundred saw the final fraction of his flight, though his leaving the starting line a minute before had brought the applause for what he had so daringly done early in the afternoon.

Once more as in the long list of tragedies of the air, the verdict, "too daring," may be written across the sombre scroll. Page's earlier performances promised him a headline as star of the meet.

A moment before the fall Page was circling from the course, having just passed before the grandstand, flying low and in a westerly direction beyond the row of hangars. He swerved to the right and climbed to a higher level, possibly one hundred feet. He attempted to make a spectacular turn and the planes were tipped earthward at an angle of 75 degrees. Page was unable to regain control of the machine, which started hurtling to the earth. When within 50 feet of the ground, he jumped and fell clear of the aeroplane, but unfortunately turned in the air and struck on his head.

SECRETS OF THE STEEL TRADE

Commissioner of Corporations Smith Makes His Preliminary Report to President Taft.

Washington, D. C.—How United States Steel makes its millions annually has just been revealed.

The secret of its vast earnings lies in the profits of the intercompanies.

The United States Steel Corporation sells a ton of heavy standard Bessemer rails for $28. It costs the corporation $16.67 to make this ton. However, the books of the corporation show that it costs $21.— to manufacture this same ton of rails. The difference of $4.63 is "book cost." That is, it represents profits made by companies which belong to the corporation. One-half of this "book cost" is transportation profit.

These secrets of the steel trade were made public here in a report received by President Taft from Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations. It is called "a preliminary report on the cost of production in the steel industry."

Three principal points are made in the report. The first is that unreasonable profits are made on iron ore of the lake region. The second is that excessive earnings flow into the treasury of the United States Steel Corporation from its ore transportation facilities. These excessive earnings suggest the necessity, from the standpoint of public policy, of segregating the ore railroads from the giant corporation. The third point made by the commissioner is that large intercompany profits are made by the consolidated ore, iron and steel companies.

DOCTOR WILEY IS ACQUITTED

Pure Food Expert Is Found Not Guilty of Conspiracy to Evade Law by House Committee.

Washington, D. C.—Dr. Harvey Wiley is held "not guilty" of conspiracy to evade the law, in a report just filed with the house by the committee which conducted an investigation last August into the charges upon which President Taft was asked to dismiss the nation's chief chemist from the government service.

Not only does the committee absolve Doctor Wiley from criticism for the employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York as a government expert at a technical rate of $20 per day, when the established limit was $9 per day, but it attacks the whole administration of the national pure food law and demands of congress action to change the method in the department of agriculture by which the law is now applied.

"We find from the evidence that the charges of conspiracy have not been established," says the committee report, "but on the contrary that the accused officials were actuated throughout solely by a desire to procure for the bureau of chemistry an efficient assistant in the person of Dr. H. H. Rusby under terms and conditions which those officials believed to be in entire accord with the law."

Nitroglycerin Explosion Hurts Three.

Findlay, O.—John W. Ash, 40, his son Lile Ash, 17, both of Rising Sun, O., and R. T. Levan, 35, of this city, were frightfully injured while preparing to shoot a well near Bluffton. A solidified nitroglycerin was being used, something new in oil well shooting, and several drops had seeped out on the end of the can holding it. When Levan was attempting to make a hole in the can the few drops exploded.

For a time the three were in a critical condition.

Gas Blast Injures Two.

Akron, O.—An explosion of gas blew up the two-story frame residence of W. W. Miller, 442 Bowery street, and badly injured Miller and his wife. At the time of the explosion there were six people in the house and all escaped injury but two.

Miller went into the cellar to fix the furnace. He struck a match to light the gas and this was followed by the explosion. Mrs. Miller, who was on a couch in the parlor of the house, was thrown against the ceiling and received several bruises.

WOULD INCREASE CHEMICAL DUTIES

DEMOCRATS PLAN TO BOOST TARIFF ON IMPORTED PERFUMES AND FANCY SOAPS.

LUXURIES ARE TO BE TAXED

Members of Ways and Means Committee Believe Change Will Increase Revenue of the Government About $1,000,000.

Washington, D. C.—Dainty women who use rare perfumes, fastidious persons who wash themselves with fragrant soap, and gourmands who must have their food well spiced, will have the privilege of paying back to the government the $1,000,000 a year it will lose if the Democratic steel bill is passed.

The Chemical Schedule.

It has just been learned that the Democrats ways and means committee will next report out the chemical schedule of the tariff bill, and that it expects to change it sufficiently to increase the revenue of the government about $1,000,000. This increase will be brought about principally by placing on the dutiable list certain oils and perfumes used separately and in the manufacture of fancy toilet soaps. Spices also will be heavily taxed.

The committee believes that the great majority of the people use plain soap, and that an increase in the price of fancy perfumed soap will affect only those who are well able to afford it. Another point taken into consideration is the impetus the new tariff would probably give the manufacture of soap in which cottonseed oil is used, inasmuch as this is a home product.

Representative Francis Burton Harrison of New York, chairman of the subcommittee who is in charge of the chemical schedule revision, said: "If there is one thing that ought to be taxed, and taxed heavily, it is perfumes, pomades and similar articles. Their ingredients are going up, you may depend upon that."

Calls for Heavy Duties.

The tentative revision, it is said, calls for heavy duties on all grades of imported perfumes, toilet waters, scented soaps, hair tonics, fancy massage preparations, all manner of liquid complexion concoctions, pomades, theatrical paints and rouges, in addition to their raw materials. Heavy duty on the latter will increase the cost of domestic perfumes not a little bit.

In some instances, it was learned, the duty will necessitate dealers charging as much as $8 an ounce for highly concentrated perfumes from the south of Europe now selling for from four to five dollars. The same applies to delicate pomades and powders. Rouge that now sells for $2 an ounce box will cost $5 and $6. Certain classes of toilet waters and massage preparations will be increased proportionately.

Representative C. B. Randall (Texas) and Representative A. C. Peters (Washington), the other members of the subcommittee, are of the same opinion with Mr. Harrison that such luxuries of the weaker sex have only too long escaped a proper and sufficient taxation. They are inclined to wage war generally on everything in the chemical schedule that can not be regarded as a necessity.

DETROITERS VOTE DOWN GRANT

Defeat Franchise Giving Railway Company Further Lease of Twelve Years.

Detroit, Mich.—A franchise giving the Detroit United railway a further lease of 12 years on the streets of Detroit, which was fathered by Mayor William B. Thompson and the local board of commerce, went down to defeat when the people recorded a majority of 7,000 votes against the grant. The franchise needed 60 per cent of the total vote to carry.

The defeat means: Five-cent fares over two-thirds of the city system; no voluntary extensions of trackage; renewal of litigation suspended temporarily during campaign; municipal ownership, involving complete revision of city charter as the first step to be sought; suit by company to compel city to carry out agreement in franchise of 1891 to pave between tracks used by existing three cent lines, involving expenditure variously estimated at about $1,000,000; no transfers from existing three cent lines to five cent lines.

MINSTRELS SCALDED TO DEATH

Two Men Meet Horrible Death When One Train Runs Into Rear of Another in New York.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Two men are dead as the result of a wreck at Chenango Forks. Train No. 912 on the Syracuse division of the Lackawanna, ran into the rear end of train No. 812 of the Utica division, where the tracks of the divisions meet on a Y switch.

Edward C. Hoyes of Indianapolis and George F. Kelley of Claremont, both members of John W. Vogel's minstrel troupe, were fatally scalded, and died a few hours after accident.

Owes Life to Cake of Ice.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—Emmott Taxter, a wealthy resident of this city, was driving his automobile in a race over the iced surface of the Hudson and was hitting a 30-mile clip when the machine struck an air hole and plunged into the water. Taxter owes his life to the huge cake of ice which the car broke off and took down with it. The ice struck the bottom of the river and with the front of the car resting on the cake and the rear of the chassis suspended from the solid surface, Taxter was easily rescued.

Well Known Doctor Dies.

New Philadelphia, O.—Stricken while attending a patient in his office, Dr. J. E. Wenman, 58, died of heart failure here. Doctor Wenman was editor and publisher of The Light of Life, a widely read religious magazine. Before becoming a physician he was a Baptist missionary in the West Indies for many years. He is survived by two sons, both surgeons in the English army, stationed at Hong Kong, China. Doctor Wenman had practiced in Cleveland, Lorain and Norwalk.

FORCED TO BARE SOUL

YOUNG GIRL TELLS SAD STORY IN CROWDED COURT ROOM.

Seventeen-year-old Wage Earner Sues Doctor on Charge of Betrayal Under Promise of Marriage.

San Francisco, Cal.—Only a child, a wage earner since her thirteenth year, Ethel Williams, complaining witness, in the trial of Dr. Otto C. Joslen, on a charge of betrayal under promise of marriage, has had to bare her very soul to bring to trial this wealthy "specialist." From first to last the trial of this 17-year-old girl has been a terrible demonstration of the pitiless plight of the poor and defenseless in the courts. Ethel, on the first painful day when her story was told in police court, was attended by her younger sister, Hazel, and her mother. The place was packed to the doors with the usual tenderloin habitues, always on the watch for entertainment in police courts.

Mrs. Williams and the sister, as witnesses to be later introduced, were excluded and the girl faced alone the crowd, the leering officials, and the insulting lawyers of the rich physician. Her plight was discovered by Miss Ray Wallsohn, settlement worker, who rallied club women to the support of the girl.

Trying to escape the ribald amusement of hundreds of eyes under the shadow of her cheap little hat, her great blue, heavily fringed eyes lifted now and then in frightened pleading, her little face growing paler under the battery of cruel questions, she was a pitiful example of police court justice. The presiding judge joined with the Joslen attorneys to confound this child, whose sin had been to be born with a lovely face and to be forced to earn her living.

She told of being forced with her mother out into the world that the rent might be paid and the little sister kept in school. She told of the different candy shops where she had worked, how she was "glad when people admired her and gave her pretty things," because she had never had them before. She was then 13 years old.

When she met this rich doctor with his automobiles, his presents, his fine dinners and glittering promises, her poor little curly head was absolutely turned. She had never in her life had plenty of clothes, or even enough of any sort, and when this new wonderful person begged her to come to Los Angeles and marry him and tell not even her mother until afterwards, she believed him, and went.

She told of her black awakening when the man laughed at her pleading and told her he had a wife, of her taking up her old work once more beset by Joslen with fresh promises. She told of his overtures to her little sister Hazel, when the frantic girl finally appealed to friends and told of her shame, to be at last forced into the courts as a last means to save her 15-year-old sister.

The attorneys of Doctor Joslen combed the tenderloin in search of witnesses to swear away the reputation of this young girl. Almost at the outset three of them were arrested for perjury.

The trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury and now Ethel Williams must again bare her soul.

SCOLDED WIFE KILLS SELF

Woman Calls Husband to Telephone After Quarrel at Home and Ends Life With Bullet.

New York City.—Piqued because he had scolded her for the first time, Mrs. Nora Hauch, wife of Ulysses Grant Hauch, an inspector in the department of agriculture, called her husband on the telephone at his office and, as he listened attentively, shot herself dead with a revolver in her home here.

The Hauch's had quarreled and Mr. Hauch told his wife he would not be home at night, meaning to discipline her. She called him on the telephone in the afternoon and begged him to come home.

"I have made up my mind not to come," he replied.

"Then, dearest, I want you to hear something that may interest you," Mrs. Hauch cried over the wire. "Just hold the receiver a few moments."

She left the telephone and shortly returned and said: "Now, dearest, can you hear perfectly?"

Hauch said he could and the next moment heard the shot. Rushing home he found his wife dead.

BLOODY BATTLE IN ECUADOR

One Thousand Killed or Wounded in Fight as Result of Struggle Between Rival Political Factions.

Guayaquil, Ecuador.—Over 1,000 men were killed and wounded in a battle at Yaguache, to the northeast of the city.

An army supporting the Quito government under the command of General Julio Andrade, formerly Ecuadorian minister to Colombia, attacked and defeated an army of Guayaquil troops supporting the provisional government proclaimed by General Montero, under the command of Gen. Flavio Alfaro.

The present conflict is the result of a bitter struggle between rival political factions in an effort to choose a successor to the office of the president to fill the vacancy caused by the death very suddenly of the former incumbent about a month ago.

Clark and Folk Make Pact.

Washington, D. C.—Speaker Champ Clark has pledged himself to rest his claims to the Democratic nomination for the presidency in the hands of the Democrats of Missouri, who will meet in convention at Joplin on February 20.

This means that if the convention should repeat its course of two years ago and endorse former Gov. Joseph W. Folk, the speaker will withdraw from the race and magnanimously throw his support to the man whom the state leaders favor.

Two Steeplejacks Are Killed.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Two steeplejacks fell 130 feet to death when one of them attempted to save his companion, who had slipped from a ladder on the top of the North Broad street Presbyterian church.

When a passerby who had witnessed their fall, reached their bodies he found the hand of Herman Greenwald, 25, still clutching the overalls on the body of August Johnson, 45, whose life he had vainly attempted to save. The two men were engaged in placing new slates in the steeple of the church.

FOREIGN SECRETARY UPHELD

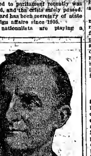
Sir Edward Grey's Anglo-German Negotiations Approved and His Resignation Not Tendered.

London.—Those well-informed in British state affairs say that it was the intention of Sir Edward Grey, Great Britain's foreign secretary, to resign his post unless supported in his Anglo-German negotiations. His statement on the subject, which was submitted to parliament recently was approved, and the crisis safely passed. Sir Edward has been secretary of state for foreign affairs since 1905.

Irish nationalists are playing a waiting game in parliament. Members of the usually turbulent little band which sits below the gangway of the house of commons have kept themselves in hand so far, although they are deeply interested in the insurance bill which is occupying all the time of the house.



Sir Edward Grey.

William O'Brien and his handful of followers sometimes try to excite their fellow countrymen by engaging in sarcasm at their expense, but without success. The nationalist benches are quietly waiting for 1912, "Ireland's year," as they call it.

While the rankers of the nationalist party are doing missionary work in the lobby, the leader, John Redmond, is busy explaining home rule to the people of England. Mr. Redmond's campaign already has extended from Scotland in the north to the extreme south of England. The colonial secretary, Lewis Harcourt, accompanied him in the midlands, and at other places ministers and liberal leaders have sat with him on the platform.

Press reports of the meetings record very few interruptions of the Irish leader.

Mr. Redmond and other Irish members impress upon their audiences that what Ireland demands is not separation, but "the right of managing its own affairs in a subordinate place, subject to the supremacy of the imperial parliament, a demand that never has been made by any community of white men in the empire and refused except in the case of Ireland".

GIANT ROCK LIKE A SPIRE

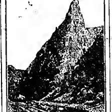
Curecanti Needle in Black Canyon Rises to a Height of 1,600 Feet Above Surroundings.

Gunnison, Colo.—An enormous splinter of rock, the Curecanti needle, is an isolated mountain spire rising to the height of 1,600 feet above the Black canyon of the Gunnison in Colorado. The Gunnison Canyon is deemed equal in natural beauty to that of the Royal gorge.



Curecanti Needle.

The Gunnison river dashes through this wild canyon with such impetuousness that it is beaten to foam amidst the ragged bowlders. The canyon walls are pleasingly colored and are constantly opening and closing to the view. Chipeta falls dashes down a lofty wall and the tremendous splinter of the Curecanti needle pierces to the clouds. It is a region of wild and rugged beauty.

Elks Battle in Park.

San Francisco, Cal.—The killing of Insurgent, one time master of the herd of elk in Golden Gate park, by Outlaw, one time leader in the paddock, in a battle to the death was avenged by Stranger, a four-year-old buck, when he all but sent Outlaw to the happy grazing grounds. Only the timely arrival of Sergeant of Police P. H. McGee and two policemen saved the game old warrior from his younger foe.

When the police broke up the battle Outlaw's side was badly gored and his hide torn from contact with a wire fence, against which he had been driven by his adversary.

Steps will be taken by the park authorities to prevent further battles for supremacy among the bucks of the herd. The big pen will be divided if necessary and each given a separate compartment.

PILES SATISFACTORILY TREATED WAY DOWN IN TENNESSEE

Resinol the Secret—Sold Everywhere.

There seems to be no end to the uses to which Resinol is put. Here is a man who first used it for piles, then local troubles, and lastly for perspiring feet. All experiments have proven successful. Read what he says:

"I began the use of Resinol Ointment about ten years ago for piles; results satisfactory; finally used it for all local troubles, and lastly for perspiring feet, and it was more than satisfactory, and that after I had spent over a hundred dollars for different remedies and medical fees without results. Since then have recommended it to dozens of people, and it has never failed to cure.

"D. L. KILLIAN,
"Memphis, Tenn."

Not only is Resinol Ointment good for piles, but it is unsurpassed in relieving scalds and burns, chilblains, cracked lips, itching, blackheads, boils, or any form of eruptive skin disease, as eczema, tetter, ringworm, barber's itch, etc. Resinol Ointment can be purchased from your druggist in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, but if you prefer to try a free sample, write to Department 63, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

See Value in Open-Air Schools.

During the year 1911 the greatest percentage of increase among the different forms of anti-tuberculosis work was among the open-air schools for anemic and tuberculous children. On January 1, 1911, there were only 29 open-air schools in operation or provided for in the entire country. On January 1, 1912, there were 91, an increase of 214 per cent. Sixty-two new schools have been established or provided for this past year. This entire number of open-air schools have been established since January 1, 1907.

Accident in U. S. Printing Office.

Washington, D. C.—Wm. Moncure, a government employee, severely strained his back lifting heavy type. Three weeks in bed under Doctor's care could not relieve his intense suffering. A fellow printer advised Tomlinson's Green Ointment. Three applications relieved him and he is now sound and well. Apply the Ointment immediately for erysipelas, burns, cuts, sores or sprains, and especially piles, 25c by mail. Tomlinson Co., 43 Bliss Bldg., Washington, D. C. Agents Wanted.

Great Northern Railway

Gives Away

Million Books

Thousands of people in the East interested in the possibilities of homemaking in the Northwest did not have an opportunity to visit the Western Governors' Special train, which recently toured the East, nor hear the Governors tell of the Golden Great Northern States. In order that everybody may learn of the splendid chances for making homes in Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, the Great Northern Railway is distributing free, a million copies of handsomely illustrated booklets describing these states. These books describe the soil, climate and agriculture, quote letters from men who have gone West and become independent. They are profusely illustrated from actual photographs and contain detail maps in colors. They tell what others have accomplished and show what you can do.

From them you can learn the locations for free homestead land in Montana and Oregon, where cheap logged-off lands can be procured in Minnesota, Washington and Oregon, and what North Dakota offers the general farmer. You can procure one of these booklets free. Simply ask for booklet on the state in which you are interested and for information about special low fares. Write today to

CORN OFFICERS NEWLY ELECTED

Resolutions Adopted Favoring Larger Appropriations to Teach Agriculture.

GOOD ROADS GIVEN A BOOST

By Exercising Progression in Office the New Roster of Officers Shows a Complete Change in the Personnel.

Springfield.—Resolutions favoring the livery parcels post, larger appropriations for carrying on the work of agricultural improvement and education throughout the schools of the state, the granting of $2,000 to the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster for the purpose of combatting the disease of cob rot, and also favoring ample provisions in the constitution for improvement of Ohio's roads were unanimously adopted by the Ohio Corn Improvement association.

John Cunningham of Gambier, president, succeeds W. H. Hardman of Yellow Springs; vice president, James W. Cook of Forest; D. W. Galehouse of Wooster, secretary; C. S. French of Salem, treasurer.

RECORD CHARTER FREE.

Senator Tod and Others Incorporate $15,000,000 Steel Company, Paying State $15,000.

The Brier Hill Steel company of Youngstown, to mine ores and manufacture steel products, was incorporated at the office of the secretary of state with $15,000,000 capital stock. This is the largest incorporation authorized by the department for several years. The company paid the state a fee of $15,000.

NEGATIVE WON BOTH.

Delaware—Ohio Wesleyan debaters, upholding the negative on the question, "Resolved, That all elective administrative officials in Ohio should be subject to the recall," were unanimously awarded the victory over the Oberlin team.

The debaters for Ohio Wesleyan were H. W. Sisson of Nebraska City, Neb., H. G. Hageman of Delaware, G. J. Slosser of Delaware. The Oberlin debaters were L. W. Fifield, B. H. Stowell and L. H. Gulick.

Oberlin—Oberlin debaters won from Western Reserve, arguing the negative on the recall, as applicable to Ohio elective administrative offices. S. L. Orr, L. B. Davenport and A. H. Wurtz were the Reserve team; C. H. Slocum, Jerome Davis and Robert Whitehead that of Oberlin.

THEIR EYES BURNED OUT.

New Bremen—The steam gauge burst while William Herschfeld, engineer at the Bell Handle works, was making a survey of the boiler and the boiling water struck him in the face, burning him so badly that he will die. His eyes were burned out.

Coshocton—Mary, the 5-year-old daughter of Joseph McDeavitt, was fatally burned. Her skirts ignited from an open grate. Her eyes were burned out.

RHODE ISLAND VOTES $25,000.

Cleveland—The prominent participation of Rhode Island in the Perry centennial celebration, to be held in 1913 at Put-in-Bay and various other ports on Lake Erie, has been assured by the action of the legislature of that state in appropriating $25,000 for that purpose.

CANNERY PAYS FARMERS WELL.

Port Clinton—Farmers and fruit growers of this section were paid more than $50,000 for their products last season. They bought 1,944,297 pounds of apples, 851,125 pounds of peaches, 2,864,297 pounds of tomatoes and 122,361 pounds of plums, besides pumpkins, cherries and rhubarb.

COAL MEN LIKE QUEEN CITY.

Cincinnati—It has been decided to hold the annual convention of the Michigan-Ohio-Indiana Coal association in Cincinnati in June. It also is said that the annual powwow of the Imperial Order of Ko-Koal will be held in Cincinnati at the same time.

NEWARK WORKHOUSE URGED.

Newark—The grand jury reported, returning 31 indictments, only six of which were made public. The jury recommended that the city and county join in the construction of a workhouse.

BABY INHALED STEAM.

Zanesville—Little James Moore, 3, son of George Moore of Cumberland, died from the effects of inhaling steam from a teakettle. While his mother was busy in the kitchen he climbed on a chair and placed his mouth over the spout of the kettle, from which the steam was pouring.

Cincinnati — Schoolmasters discussed the proposed pageant of all nations in Eden park on May day, or some day next spring.

Cleveland—Peter C. Dick, for 11 years head of the United States secret service department in Cleveland, and recently chief of the Burns detective agency here, announces his resignation from the latter.

Coshocton—An ice gorge that opened the Muskingum river, flooded the forks and lower portions of this city.

Newark—Newark Masons announce their incorporation, [illegible] for erection of a temple.

ONLY TWELVE LEFT.

Survivors of Regiment Tramp Over March of Fifty Years Ago.

Urbana—Fifty years ago the Sixty-sixth regiment of Ohio Volunteer infantry left its camp, south of Urbana, on what is now known as the old county fair grounds, and marched to this city, where it took the train for the front.

In commemoration of this occasion, 14 members of the regiment gathered at the old camp and marched to the city over the same route they did 50 years ago.

Fifty years ago, when the regiment was marched in Urbana, there were 1,100 in line.

BOTKINS EDITOR DEAD.

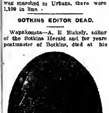
Wapakoneta—A. E. Blakely, editor of the Botkins Herald and for years postmaster of Botkins, died at his home from the effects of pneumonia. He was 55 years old and left a widow and two children.



A. E. BLAKELY.

OHIO MEN FOR BETTER ROADS.

Columbus—At Washington while advocating an internal revenue tax of 10 per cent on liquors and cigars for the building of good roads throughout the country, Jesse Taylor, secretary of the Good Roads federation, aroused the delegates in the first federal aid convention to a high pitch at the opening session.

"With such a tax in force and devoted to this purpose we could, in 25 years, have the greatest system of public highways in the world," declared the speaker.

Senator Pomerene said: "The amount of money the government expends to construct a battleship would build and pave with the best of brick 666 miles of public highways. I prefer voting to spend $10,000,000 for better highways to expending the same amount for an engine of war. In the construction of main thoroughfares the cost should be distributed so that the township, county and municipality should bear a great proportion thereof."

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS' FESTIVAL.

Columbus—The Knights of Pythias' committee on reception for the Ohio Pythian festival to be held in Columbus, Jan. 24, met at the office of Col. George B. Donavin, its chairman, and selected the chairmen of sub-committees.

The chairman of the general committee on arrangements, J. M. Izer, is receiving replies daily from the letters of invitation sent out in all of the supreme lodge officers and the Knights of Pythias lodges in Ohio, accepting, and the indications are that practically all of the supreme lodge officers and large representations from nearly all of the Knights of Pythias lodges of the state will attend the festival.

HAGELGANS INDICTED.

Circleville—The Pickaway county grand jury returned an indictment for murder in the first degree against Henry Hagelgans for the alleged murder of his sister, Fannie, on her farm near Orient three years ago, but did not return indictments against Edward and David McKinley, who were arrested for alleged complicity in the crime.

Edward McKinley set fire to the bed clothing in his cell. Officers say it was an attempt at suicide.

TWO MINERS CRUSHED.

Steubenville—Louis Milanese, 35, and Joseph Saniuro, 28, miners at Dunglen Mines, were killed by a fall of slate.

TAX COLLECTOR INDICTED.

Lancaster—William McClenaghan, former personal tax collector under ex-County Treasurer Thomas J. Barr, is charged with the embezzlement of $3000 by an indictment, containing nine counts, returned by the Fairfield county grand jury. McClenaghan was arrested and later released on $2500 bond.

BUCKEYE BUILDERS ELECT.

Springfield — Choosing Cincinnati for the 1913 meeting, the Ohio Builders' exchange closed its meeting with the election of C. A. Schuster, Springfield, president, and E. A. Roberts, Cleveland, secretary-treasurer.

Canton—Joseph Dehn, one of the contractors building a storm sewer under the Pennsylvania railroad, was instantly killed when struck by a train. Henry, a brother, was killed when the sewer was being tunneled.

Newark—The city of Newark is preparing to abandon the infiltration system, which was installed on recommendation of engineers of the state board of health, and will substitute mechanical or chemical process of purifying the city water.

Springfield—A big event of the present week in Springfield was the Ohio state conference of pastors and Sunday school superintendents. One thousand delegates were present. The Ohio Y. M. C. A. conference will meet in Springfield March 15, 16 and 17.

ARBOR DAY SET BY GOVERNOR

Thumb-Nail Sketches of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention.

OHIO CARES FOR HER BLIND

Lobbyists Are Registering—Chairmen of Committees—What Prompts Firebugs—Cost of College Courses.

Columbus.—In a special proclamation Governor Harmon has designated Friday, April 5, to be observed as Arbor day. The statute requires that at least two hours be devoted to the subject in the schools on that day. The proclamation, in part, says:

"Appreciation of the great value of the forest in our social and domestic economy, as well as its commercial value, has led to widespread interest therein among our people. Its restoration is now one of the great projects of the day and the future. In this work the youth of our state will bear a large part and the Arbor day lesson can do much to awaken intelligent and active interest.

"To that may also be added that a broader love of nature is developed by broader knowledge of two of its most wonderful members, the tree and the bird. Arbor day promotes the useful and the beautiful.

"Therefore, let all of our people who can, in home, school and public place, enter into the observance of the day named with planting and appropriate exercises of song and story."

First Lobbyists Registered.

Four lobbyists—a labor representative and three suffragists—have registered under the new rule of the constitutional convention that requires identification of lobbyists.

W. J. Winans of Galion, representing the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, was first to register. He also represents, according to his written statement, "union labor and the people of the state." Winans has represented the railroad men in the legislative lobby for 12 years.

Mrs. Ethel Ridgely Vorce, representing the Woman Suffrage party of Cleveland, Miss Elizabeth Hauser of Girard, representing the Ohio Equal Suffrage association, and Miss Edith Weld Peck of Cincinnati, who says that she represents herself, were the next three to register.

Ohio Leads in Helping the Blind.

Charles F. F. Campbell, secretary of the Ohio commission for the blind, gave the principal address at the annual meeting of the Cleveland Society for Promoting the Interests of the Blind.

"Industrial efficiency of the blind is the aim of modern efforts," said Mr. Campbell. "We want to help the blind to help themselves. To this end the state commission has undertaken a new work. We will buy raw materials and sell them to blind workmen. We will then market the product for them.

"Ohio leads all other states in its work for the blind," said Mr. Campbell.

Appeals to State Pride.

State Labor Commissioner Fred Lange is sending out statistical blanks to manufacturers with the request that they be filled out and returned as early as possible. "I hope that the manufacturers will comply with this request," said Commissioner Lange, "It would be a patriotic act for them to co-operate fully with the department. We wish to get all the data possible for our industries so that Ohio can show up to an advantage in the industrial world."

Peach Crop Damaged.

Peaches may have been severely damaged by the recent excessive cold, says State Orchardist N. E. Shaw, but his helpers have been too busy with institute and other work to make thorough observations. He says that 16 degrees below zero is usually fatal to the buds, but takes consolation from the fact that only 10 below was reported in some of the best peach-growing regions.

College Men As Delegates.

Portage and Greene have the honor to send college presidents as delegates in the persons, respectively, of George H. Colton, executive head of Hiram college, and S. D. Fess, head of Antioch institution of learning. Franklin county sends a college professor in George W. Knight, who has a far reaching reputation as an authority on constitutional law, and Athens boasts of sending another college man of distinction in Henry W. Elson.

Like Buckeye System.

Universities of a number of states of the middle West will adopt the system of accounting in force at the Ohio State university, installed a year ago by the state auditor's department.

Doings in Oil.

During the first week of the new year in the southeastern Ohio oil field 34 wells were completed, of which 22 were dry, and the 12 producers had an aggregate daily production of 315 barrels of oil.

Oldest and Youngest Delegates.

Judge Dennis Dwyer of Dayton, 81, is the patriarch of the constitutional convention, and called the body to order at the opening meeting. William Halenkamp of Cincinnati, who represents the labor constituency of Hamilton county, is the youngest, being now in his twenty-seventh year.

Marysville—By a vote of 20 to 9, the senior class of the Marysville high school has decided to wear caps and gowns during the commencement exercises next June.

CHAIRMEN OF COMMITTEES.

Agriculture—Miller of Crawford.
Arrangement and Phraseology — Colton.
Banks and Banking—Beatty of Wood.
Claims Against the Convention—Cassidy.
Corporations Other Than Municipal—Hoskins.
County and Township Organization—Okey.

Miscellaneous Subjects—Harter of Stark.
Municipal Government—Harris of Hamilton.
Printing and Publication of Proceedings—Watson.
Public Works—Norris.
Rules—Bigelow.
Schedule—Dwyer.
Short Ballot—Fackler.
Submission and Address to the People—Bigelow.
Taxation—Doty.

Motives of Fire Bugs.

Devoted to the motives of arson convicts is a division of the annual report of State Fire Marshal Zuber to Governor Harmon. There were 85 convictions in 1911, which is 13 more than were secured in any previous year. The loss of $6,952,320 in 1910 was reduced to $5,400,000 in 1911.

Of the 85 convicted, 14 were attempting to defraud insurance companies, 26 were actuated by malice or revenge, three were trying to conceal crimes, 11 were insane or fire fiends, while mischief was responsible for 31 fires.

Mr. Zuber reports that the new fire inspection law is a success and has resulted in the demolition of a large number of fire traps in the principal cities.

Expenses of Students.

A cost of living canvass conducted by the Ohio State University Lantern, shows that the average expense of a student at Ohio's largest educational institution for one year is from $320 to $450. The report shows that the first year is usually the least expensive and the senior year to be the one during which the student spends most.

The students have turned in slips which give itemized accounts, and in most instances candy, tobacco and social expenses are very low. The information gained will be used in sending out information to prospective students, so that some idea may be gained as to the exact expenses of attending school during the different years.

Could Write a Constitution by Themselves.

Among the nine members from Hamilton county there is to be found a remarkable diversity of vocations, financial and social standing, age and experience. The county can claim not only, probably, the richest man in the convention, George W. Harris, but also the youngest. It has two former judges, four able lawyers, a minister (Herbert S. Bigelow), a stair builder, a printing press foreman and a beer wagon driver.

Grange Trophy Awarded.

Springfield. — At the conclusion of the state corn show it was announced that the Ohio grange trophy cup had been awarded to Fayette County Grange No. 368. All the corn of the Fayette exhibit was grown by Elba A. Carson of East Monroe. The industrial exhibit given by Springfield manufacturers will be held over another week, and will be shown in connection with the Springfield poultry show.

Gas Men's Convention.

The executive committee of the Ohio Natural Gas association met to arrange a program for the annual meeting of the association, which will be held Feb. 6 and 7. The association is only a year old. O. P. Gothlin, chairman of the state public utilities commission, has promised to attend the convention and speak on the public utilities law and the natural gas companies.

Loan Law Constitutional.

In a decision covering two cases, Judge Frank Rathmell of the common pleas court, has declared the constitutionality of the act passed by the last legislature compelling salary loan agents to secure a license from the secretary of state.

Changed Its Name.

To signify the fact that they are specializing on the breeding of Percheron horses, the Ohio Horse Breeders' association changed its name to the Ohio Percheron Horse Breeders' association.

Civil Service Examinations.

Civil service examinations for the departmental service in Washington will be held as follows:

Canton, March 29, Jan. 23, March 13, April 10; Cincinnati, April 5, Jan. 23, April 23, March 3, April 10; Columbus, Jan. 23, March 13, March 27, April 10; Dayton, Jan. 23, March 13, March 16, April 10; Lima, Jan. 23, March 11, March 13, April 10; Marietta, Jan. 23, March 13, April 10; Portsmouth, March 11, March 13, April 10; Steubenville, Jan. 23, March 13, April 10.

Delegate Thomas B. Price of Perry stands six feet, five inches in his stocking feet, and is the Goliath of the delegates. To Cuyahoga county goes the honor of having in the convention the smallest delegate, W. C. Davis, who is somewhere around five feet. Delegate Price is stern, Mr. Davis always is genial.

Bellefontaine—When engaged in a snowball battle Dwight Moore, 16 years old, of Degraff, was knocked down by a passing carriage and internally hurt. Several ribs were crushed.

THREE DISTINCT VITICULTURAL REGIONS IN UNITED STATES

American Native-Grape Section Comprises All That Part of Country Lying East of Rocky Mountains—Fan and Hudson Horizontal Systems of Training are Illustrated.

FIG. 1

(By GEORGE C. HUSMANN, Pomologist, United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are three distinct viticultural regions in the United States which segregate themselves by the grape species grown in them.

The Vinifera region, in which Vinifera varieties are almost exclusively grown, is located almost entirely west of the Rocky mountains, so much of it being in California that those not conversant with grape varieties erroneously call them California grapes. With few exceptions either the spur, stool, or short pruning system is used for the stockier growing varieties, and the long or cane pruning system is usually used for the longer growing varieties, but either system is often modified to suit individual varieties. Thus the spurs are sometimes left longer in the spur system, and either spurs and canes left longer or spurs cut on the laterals in the cane system.

Stakes only are used to give the vines the necessary support; this method allows the vineyard to be cultivated crosswise as well as lengthwise. Vines trained on trellises are comparatively rare in California.

The Muscadine region of the South Atlantic and Gulf states includes the entire southeastern coastal plain extending from the Potomac to Florida, reaching well up into the Blue Ridge mountains and along the Gulf coast to the Rio Grande river, spreading to the north along the Mississippi river into the great central plains to southeast Missouri and the Tennessee river.

The third or American native grape region is the one in which improved varieties of the more northern native grape species and hybrids of them and the Vinifera species are grown. This region comprises all that part of the United States which lies east of the Rocky mountains. Of late years a few plantings have also been made in parts of Oregon and Washington, but the industry is most extensive in the states west of the Hudson river and north of the Ohio river that border on the Great Lakes and in the more centrally located states of the Mississippi valley. In this district the high-renewal, horizontal-arm spur, horizontal block, fan, Hudson horizontal, four-cane Kniffin, umbrella or two-cane Kniffin, Munson, overhead Caywood, and Chittenden systems are used, the localities in which they originated or are most common being stated in the description of the various systems.

In the fan system the vine growth, which is trained to an upright trellis, is annually renewed to within a short distance from the ground. The vines are cut back usually to four canes and as many spurs each year, the canes are spread out and tied to the trellis, giving the vine the shape of a fan. Figure 1, A and C, shows an unpruned vine in the third and fourth years. Figure 2, B, shows the same vine pruned the fourth year for this system.

The advantages claimed by the advocates of this system are (1) that most of the old wood is dispensed with each year, (2) that the vines can be easily laid down and covered in winter when needful in the extreme northern sections, and (3) that if after pruning the canes are tied and spread fan shaped on the trellis, as they should be, the young upright-growing shoots fasten themselves by their tendrils and need practically no tying.

The Hudson horizontal system, extensively practiced, as its name implies, along the Hudson river, uses an ordinary two-wire trellis. A strong stake reaching to the top wire of the trellis is driven behind each vine. Four perpendicular slats which do not touch the ground are fastened to the trellis, two on each side of the vine and 12 to 15 inches apart. Woven-wire fence could be substituted for the slats. The vine is annually renewed back to the trunk, which is about a foot high, and a single cane and spur are left at each pruning, the cane long enough so that when tied it reaches to the top of the stake. About six bearing shoots left to grow on each side of this cane are fastened horizontally to the slats. The clusters hang free from the shoots. When the shoots become too long they should be summer pruned. From the spur left on the trunk the cane is grown erect and tied to the stake, to become the fruiting cane to be left the next year. Figure 2, A, shows a vine at the end of the third year pruned according to this system. Figure 2 C and B, shows the same vine before and after pruning a year later.

The advocates of this system claim for it a more uniform distribution of the young shoots and say that the fruit hangs well supported and protected.

SUBSTANTIAL BRACE FOR POSTS

An excellent plan for making a substantial brace post is given below. In the illustration (B) and (C) are two posts about five feet six inches apart. (A) is a rail say 3x3 let into each post about one inch. The anchor cable (D) consists of double No. 8 wire which goes round (C) and is kept in position by two notches (G). It also goes round (B) and then to the anchor (F). A twitch stick (E) serves to twist the cable as required to keep the post square. Holes are bored in both posts for the wires.

Water the Poultry.

Hens, when laying or commencing to lay, are thirsty creatures. It is one of nature's legitimate calls and we must supply it freely if we expect the eggs to come in plenty. Note, too, how the crushed shells are grabbed the first thing by the laying hen while the rooster or the lazy hen passes them in scorn. This is another indicator of nature's need, and five or ten cents' worth of crushed shells should be purchased at once to dole out as consumed.

Lime for Sour Soils.

For a soured soil, a liberal application of lime is the only thing that will remedy the trouble. This comes in many forms, but the cheapest and most beneficial is ordinary ground limestone. The cost of ground limestone is about 60 cents a ton at the pit.

Farm Life.

There is no occupation in the world that is better, more elevating and more enjoyable than living on a farm and farming.

Wurzel for Green Feed.

For the hens in winter I have tried sugar beets, cabbage, mangel wurzel, says a writer in an exchange. The latter is the richer, but you get far less of them on the same ground. Cabbage is altogether too costly and hard to keep and handle. I feed many tons of wurzels a year. They keep till May. I simply throw them on the floor of the pens, the hens do the rest.

Selecting Ducks for Breeders.

Pick out the young ducks and drakes that grow and develop the fastest, and that attain good size, for next season's breeders. Some ducks will be heavier at eight weeks than others at ten, and are therefore more profitable.

Checking Up the Returns.

While you have plenty of time during the winter, keep a close watch of every cow in the dairy barn and see if the income from her dairy products will pay for her keep and leave you a reasonable profit on your time and labor.

IOWA WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Shooting Pains, Spinal Weakness, Dizziness, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

MEAN TRICK PLAYED BY FATE

Chances Are That Statesman Had a Hard Time Explaining Matters to His Wife.

The story is that it happened about like this.

A representative from Indiana came on to Washington when congress started up, and engaged comfortable living quarters before his wife arrived. She reached there some time later on a Saturday night. The next morning she said:

"Now, Ralph, we'll go to church, of course. Which church have you been attending?"

"Wh-er-uh, which one, you say?" repeated the congressman. "Why, there's a mighty nice little church down here just a couple of blocks. It's such an easy walk that I've been going there rather than to some of the more fashionable churches."

"All right, if you feel at home there, that's where we'll go," said the congressman's wife. "We haven't much time, anyhow."

So they put on their things and went to the little church down the street.

When they got inside they made a startling discovery.

They were the only white people in the church.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Awful Suspicion.

Freddie had been sick for some time, and when his father came into the room to see how he was the youngster surprised him by his questions.

"Why do you ask if I owe the doctor anything?" inquired his father.

"Because," replied Freddie, "the medicine he's been giving me lately is something fierce, and I think he's taking it out on me."—Judge.

THEY ARE COMING

Belief is growing even in Washington that no matter how many obstructions are placed in the path of the initiative, referendum and recall, those features of government are destined to win out.

Being demanded by the people, the initiative, referendum and recall are not far distant for most states. If one party does not grant these reforms, the other party will. Politicians of any party who persist in standing in the way of the initiative, referendum and recall will ultimately be swept out of power, in the opinion of many.

Even Wall street sees the truth. In a weekly market letter issued by the New York Stock Exchange firm of Warren W. Erwin & Co. and published in this paper, occurs the following:

As we have said before, the initiative, referendum and recall movement is likely to sweep the country. This movement will do more to smash bosses, stop graft, destroy bad trusts and disturb illegitimate business than will all of the anti-trust laws passed or to be passed. Already we have seen some of its effects in the greatly increased taxes of the far western railroads and the sagging prices of the stocks of these roads. During the first five months of the present fiscal year the taxes of the Union Pacific road increased over $700,000 and of the Southern Pacific over $200,000.

Yet even with these heavy increases it is doubtful whether the railroads are paying anywhere near in proportion to what they should. They have long enjoyed a most generous immunity from the common burdens. But at last the people are waking up and are demanding a real square deal.

GOV. HARMON'S "EQUALITY."

On his recent visit to Chicago, Gov. Harmon of Ohio declared that the Creator treats us all about the same, that people who have an excess of favors in one way have a deficiency in regard to something else. For instance, one man who is blessed with a lot of money may have no children, while another man, who has no money at all, may be blessed with a big family. In this way the Creator evens things up, according to Governor Harmon, and nobody has a right to complain. A very comfortable philosophy, and doubtless attractive to the interests toward which Governor Harmon looks for a Presidential nomination. Queer, isn't it? how your comfortable plutocrat always falls back on the Creator, instead of taking a straight look at facts and conditions that largely grew out of man-made laws. Remember how Taft put the problem of unemployment squarely up to the Lord and left it there? Remember how "Divine-Right" Baer wanted the Creator to settle the Pennsylvania coal strike? And now Harmon. These pious platitudes make more atheism than arguments ever did.—Chicago Public.

PROTECTING AMERICAN LABOR.

Whenever the steel trust has asked for a high tariff-tax it has based its plea on the benevolent excuse that its first wish was to "protect the American workingman." Always, when the Republicans fixed a high tariff tax on steel their orators and leaders shouted that it was done to "protect the American workingmen."

Louis D. Brandeis, citing figures from the Federal Bureau of Statistics says "Under the guise of Protecting American workingmen J. P. Morgan and the owners of the steel trust have subjected the laborer to grossly excessive toil, and deprived him of his liberty. In England steel laborers work only 55 hours a week, while in this country they average 72 hours a week. About a third work more than 72 hours, and a fourth work twelve hours a day and seven days a week, with an occasional 24 hour day when the shift is made. To work men this way not only makes them 'old at forty' but necessarily degenerates the race, mentally, morally and physically."

Every republican who will ask for votes next summer will base his request on the plea that he wants to "protect the American workingman."

ANDREW CARNEGIE

Victor Murdock, the Kansas Insurgent, has been rather quiet lately. He was aroused, however, when Andrew Carnegie, at the Stanley steel trust hearing, dodged every important question, and sought to amuse the committee with jokes and stories. Says Murdock:

"Carnegie has offended the national sense of justice, and no act would meet with so general popular applause as one that would follow a motion to take the Laird of Skibo by the scruff of the neck and land him squarely before the bar of Congress. It is not always easy to define humor, but the American people are pretty certain that paying interest on three times the actual value of the Carnegie properties is not highly amusing. The jester should be made to laugh out of the other corner of his mouth. What we need is fewer libraries and more justice."

The Philadelphia North American says of Carnegie: "Whenever men in the coming years see Carnegie's sculptured name they will say 'He preached peace abroad, after having helped to make hell at home.'"

SUCCESS INSTEAD OF FAILURE

Operation of the bank deposits guaranty law in Nebraska has failed to result in panics, business chaos and bank failures, as its opponents predicted. There was no bank failures in Nebraska last year. What the law did accomplish, on the other hand was more and better business for the banks. The money on deposit in the [illegible] state banks was increased last year over the year before by $2,209,674.35. The reserve on hand is 27 per cent, or three per cent more than a year ago. The law accomplished an increase in the banks' opportunities for profit because of increased deposits. Then it made the banks more immune from invasion upon the legal reserve, due to the fact that the depositors knew their money was absolutely safe and weren't so anxious to draw it out as heretofore. Last but not least, no depositor ran the risk of losing a penny of his savings.

Every one should attend the Charity Ball at City Hall Monday evening January 29. Everyone who can not attend should buy a ticket, the price is 50 cents and every penny goes to help those who are unfortunate.

Appropriate.

A couple of Washington men were discussing the reported plan of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson to ask President Taft to transfer Dr. Wiley and his bureau of chemistry to some other department on the ground that they do not properly fall within the scope of crop raising and insect investigating. "Wilson wants to put him in the department of commerce and labor," remarked one. "Perhaps he does belong there." "Not at all," rejoined the other. "Wiley ought to be transferred to the department of the interior." "I don't see how he could fit in there." "You don't? Why, man, Dr. Wiley knows more about the United States' interior and the stuff that is fed to it than any man in the country. He ought to be made secretary."

Had Her Lesson.

A Baltimore lawyer had an office boy who was given to telling in other offices what happened in that of his chief. The lawyer found it necessary to discharge him, but thinking to keep him from a similar fault in the future he counseled the boy wisely on his departure. "Willie, you must never hear anything that is said in the office," he said. "Do what you are told to do, but turn a deaf ear to conversation that does not include you." A happy inspiration! He would see that the stenographer learned the same lesson in passing, so turning to her, he said: "Miss Brown, did you hear what I said to Willie?" "No, sir," she returned promptly.

Lovers Please Note.

The Cree Indian girl is sought in marriage, not for love, but because she is strong and useful. The young brave who wishes to take her for his squaw is often faint hearted, and frequently sends, by a disinterested person, or secretly leaves in her tent, a gaudy silk handkerchief, purchased from the Hudson Bay Company. When his intentions are thus declared he goes, shy and awkward, to the father, and asks for the hand of his daughter. Should the parent refuse consent to the union the undaunted wooer seeks a bride elsewhere. He never sulks or mopes; he never feels that his heart will break, but calmly selects and makes proposals for another maiden. Women are plentiful, and perseverance is sure to end in success.—Wide World Magazine.

Mrs. A. D. Tabor, of Cridur, Mo., had been troubled with sick headache for about five years, when she began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. She has taken two bottles of them and they have cured her. Sick headache is caused by a disordered stomach for which these tablets are especially intended. Try them, get well and stay well. Sold by all dealers.

FREEING THE SLAVE

OLD JOE DIDN'T TAKE IT IN THE ORTHODOX MANNER.

Instead of Weeping and Begging to Stay, He Gave Out Yell, Ran Away and Never Was Heard of Again.

All present had heard, ever so many times, those good old stories of how the slave of ante-bellum times, when told that he was free—"Yes, free, Scipio"—had thrown himself, sobbing, at his master's feet, and begged, with tears in his eyes, that he be not sent away—that he be allowed to serve the family in any capacity until the end of his days. Therefore all present looked wise and resigned when the southerner launched on his story.

"Down at our old home in the south," he said, "there was an old negro called Joe who had been on the place as far back as any of us could remember. In fact, so long had he been there that he had grown to be just like a member of the family. We children included him in all our games and treated him exactly as we would any other playmate, while his long years of service had earned him every sort of special consideration from the grown folks.

"So meritorious was Joe that my father decided one day to make him a free man. He went about the necessary formalities quietly, and, when all was ready, resolved to give the thing a dramatic setting.

"So he called the family together, likewise his slaves, and when they were all there, grouped impressively about him, he summoned Joe.

"The faithful old slave appeared.

"'Joe,' said my father solemnly, 'you have served us long and well. We have a great affection for you.'

"We all beamed approval. Joe's face grew puzzled.

"'I feel that we should show that affection in some substantial way,' continued my father. Then, after a short pause, he said:

"'Joe, you are a free man.'

"Joe did not seem to understand. He looked at my father and then at the rest of us in a bewildered way.

"'Joe, I give you your freedom. You are no longer a slave. I am no longer your master,' said my father.

"The slave's face began to clear.

"'Free?' he queried.

"'Yes,' said my father.

"For one moment Joe stood there. Then—"

In his turn, the southerner made a dramatic pause, even as his father had done before him. His auditors were listening, bored but polite.

"Then," he continued, "that negro gave one ungodly yell, swung his cap about his head, and without so much as saying 'goodby' dashed out of the house as fast as his legs could carry him. We never so much as heard of him again."

Insurance and Hymen.

Grasse, a German authority on race biology and life insurance, in a recent number of the Journal for Life Insurance Examiners, is of the opinion that life insurance may be made to play an important part in the prevention of the union in marriage of sickly or otherwise unsuitable individuals. He holds that the public should be educated to expect that every prospective bridegroom and bride be insured before marriage; if insurance were denied to either one it should be necessary to prove to the parents of the bride or bridegroom, as the case might be, that the grounds for the refusal of insurance were not equally strong grounds against entering into the married state. Grasse says if this custom should become universal life insurance would become a great factor in the preservation of the strength and health of the race. Evidently Germany is doing some good thinking in other lines than in merely developing the commerce of the nation, and has a most practical way of presenting the case in insurance as well as in other lines. "The proper study of mankind is man."

Poor Sophia's Case.

Dr. Ronald H. Curtis, the well-known zoologist, said in a recent lecture in Charleston:

"I take no stock in all these yarns about the disinterested affection of animals. An animal's affection is parasitic—your dog loves you because you feed it. Analyze these yarns about animal affection, and they turn out like Sophia's case.

"There was a rich old maid who had an ill-natured cur named Sophia. The old maid died, leaving her fortune to her nephew, who had lived with her. I met the nephew one day, and ventured to offer him my sincere sympathy. He said:

"'Yes, it's sad. And the morning after my aunt's decease the dog, Sophia, also died.'

"'Grief, I suppose?' said I.

"'No,' said he; 'prussic acid.'"

Railway Clerk's Specialty.

Among the voluntary helpers in the work of compiling the Oxford English dictionary, the most learned authority on words and phrases of the Elizabethan period, according to Dr. R. A. Miors' principal of London university, was a railway clerk.

Practical Philosophy.

On Second Thought.

"You know," said the Chinese philosopher, "that our nation really invented gunpowder." "Yes," replied the court official; "and when I see the trouble we are having I can't help thinking it was rather foolish of us."

NO HANDCUFFS IN FRANCE

Some Ingenious Methods by Which the Police There Keep Prisoners From Escaping.

Scarcely a day passes without a picture appearing in the French press of a prisoner being led off to the station by a policeman and the description, "The Apache being taken away handcuffed by the agents." As a matter of fact handcuffs are altogether out of date in France and are never used.

Instead of the bracelets every policeman carries a "cabriolet," which is a very rough and massively made article resembling a huge watch chain some ten inches long with a stout wooden crossbar at either end. An expert can slip this over the wrist of an offender in a twinkling and with both the crossbars in his hand has only to give it a twist to inflict the most excruciating pain and compel instant and lamblike submission.

Another common method of preventing escape is to make the prisoner place both his hands in his side trouser pockets and then pass a string round his wrists and round his waist and bid him march. He can walk at a very smart pace, but any attempt to run out of a shambling trot immediately brings him down, nose in the pavement.

If no string is handy all the brace buttons of the trousers are cut off and the culprit is made again to put his hands in his pockets. As in the former case, he can only walk, since so soon as he frees his hands his nether garments fall about his legs and he is "entrave" in the latest fashion.

Few of these devices are apparent to the casual passerby, who often wonders at the passive docility with which some villainous looking individual under arrest follows his captor to the station. Sometimes on a country road one may meet a couple of gendarmes on foot or on horseback, leading a prisoner between them.

This is in obedience to a quaint regulation whereby prisoners are never sent by train from place to place, as there are no funds set apart for railway fares. Consequently four or five times as much is spent in food, drink and lodging for the escort as would be for the ticket; but the regulations are observed. In such cases the police often use the "poucettes," though strictly speaking this instrument is not legal.

It is a sort of loose thumbscrew which is fixed so as to keep the two thumbs comfortably together so long as the man does not struggle, but a twist of the string held by one of the police is enough to destroy any wish to escape.—London Standard.

Japanese Custom.

A common complaint made by tourists in Japan is that they are obliged to pay for everything far higher prices than the natives are charged; or, in other words, that because they are foreigners, they are fleeced. But a glance at the social conditions by which the people have been educated would reveal the curious fact that throughout Japan's long period of isolation it was an accepted principle that the rich must live for the sake of the poor, and prices have always been based upon the purchaser's rank in society or upon his presumed ability to pay. This understanding remains largely in force today, being fully recognized and acted upon by all favored classes throughout the empire. The occidental, coming from lands where the reverse practically holds good—the poor living for the sake of the rich—naturally complaints of being robbed, as from his point of view he really is; but it is not because he is a foreigner, but because, being a tourist, he is presumably wealthy, and must, therefore, conform to the custom of the country which permits the poor to levy a tax upon the rich without thereby incurring the slightest imputation of dishonesty.—Arthur May Knapp, in December Atlantic.

George Junior Republic.

The George Junior Republic is a community established in 1895, near Freeville, New York, by W. R. George as a method of reform in the treatment of dependant and delinquent children. The organization is similar to that of a miniature republic. It has a constitution based upon that of the United States, and the government of the community is carried on in the same way. At first the founder was president with other adults holding the most important offices, but from 1898 all offices have been held by citizens. Each citizen may work for the founder or for other citizens who contract for labor. All purchases are made with the republic's aluminum coin, later redeemed by United States currency. School is held and farming, carpentry, printing, care of the establishment, dressmaking, domestic service and cookery are the other activities followed. The entrance age is from twelve to eighteen.

Futile Worry.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at a recent dinner in New York, said of success:

"Success depends a good deal on the recognition of values. The successful man knows what is important and what is unimportant. He doesn't waste time over trifles. That, he knows, would be as silly as the Tarrytown girl's course.

"A Tarrytown girl, after reading a letter from her fiance, said pettishly:

"'I do wish Joe would learn to write more clearly. I can't tell from this postscript whether he is sending me 10,000 or 100,000 kisses.'"

If your children are subject to attacks of croup, watch for the first symptom, hoarseness. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the child becomes hoarse and the attack may be warded off. For sale by all dealers.

All Painesville Coughing
Death from a gun-shot wound less to be feared than Death from pneumonia.

A great number of our city's men, women and children have colds and coughs today. The air seems to be fairly laden with these throat and lung troubles. There is great danger of contracting pneumonia or consumption from them. Nearly every case has its beginning in a cold or cough, and many people die as a result. Beware!

A sudden chill, stupefying fever, sore throat, hoarseness, running nose, racking cough, rattling and wheezing in chest, painful breathing, signify that your cold borders on pneumonia.

There are many remedies offered for colds, but there is one certain, reliable article that we know of—Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It is best for soothing and subduing the inflamed, sore, bronchial tubes and lungs. It wards off pneumonia. It checks cough at once. Get a bottle now. Don't wait to see if your cold or cough wears away of itself, as pneumonia may come over night. Test it first by sending a postal for a free sample. Address A. C. Meyer & Co., Baltimore, Md. But, to have no delay, get a regular bottle of the remedy (price, 25 cents) from your druggist today. This is the best advice we can give to avoid pneumonia. (ADV.)

MENTOR

We still have "weather" here in Mentor township, though it has been rather more civilized this past week, not having gone below ten degrees so far as we have been able to learn. The devilish cold of last week and the week before, has left its mark however, rather more of our people being sick and under the doctor's care than usual. The bottom of the coal bins are getting in sight also, and anxiety lest we yet freeze to death, is mixed with that other and annual anxiety, lest the fruit all be killed! It may be remembered by all of the housewives of this region, that sometime during the winter there comes a wail from somewhere, that "all the fruit is killed," and from that time on until berries begin to ripen, the hungry family is held up about eating the canned fruit—and mid-summer with its bountiful supply, finds us with fully half the cupboard full on hand, and some always left over from "last year" also. Now it is being reported that not only is all the fruit killed, but even the fruit trees! Some of the Mentor women have "struck" and are declaring they are going to go ahead and eat up every speck they have on hand—that they don't care anyway—they are sick and tired of that old cry of "fruit all killed!" They say they don't believe a word of it—and anyway, one can always buy oranges and dried apples, and one would really like to have the cans all empty for once, so as to be able to begin again, and not be everlastingly eating "old stuff."

Snow is slipping off the roofs today, and eaves are making a desperate effort to drip a little. The sun too appears to be wearing a heavy gray veil, as though afraid to have mortals look again upon his face.

Mr. Hicks of St. Louis, declares we may look for snow in April of this year, together with "blizzards," tornadoes, etc., all during summer, and advises every one to invest in his Almanac so as to be posted, and know just when to run into their cellars.

The ice men are still drawing the abominable stuff, which looks more and more cold, and thicker every day.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Camp are spending the winter in Cleveland, having been drawn there partly by business interests, and partly by the notion it would be nice to get rid of shoveling snow and coal most of the time for several months.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Morley and daughter, Harriet, spent a portion of last week with friends in Columbus, where they visited the State Asylum for the blind, and saw our two Mentor boys at work at basket-making. We refer to Kenneth and Del McCree who while not exactly blind, are having trouble with their eyes, and are there to go along with their schooling, and at the same time learn other useful things.

Mrs. Dr. Lowe has been quite sick with tonsilitis, but is somewhat better now, so that they are expecting to leave this week for Florida.

Mrs. H. N. Musson has been having a visit from her youngest sister, Mrs. Nettie Cullings Ennis of New York state, who leaves today for her home.

Mrs. James Moran, nee Miss Emma Cleveland, has been quite sick, but is much better at date.

The same cannot be said of Mrs. Luella Kerr however, who is in a very critical condition, but very little hopes being entertained now for recovery.

Dr. Dye continues to improve very slowly, but so slowly that it is doubtful if he ever returns to his work in the church. The pulpit in the Methodist church here has been supplied by a lay-worker from Cleveland, but the officers begin to think that some steps will have to be taken before long towards getting a regular preacher here. There seems to be a general wish for Rev. John Keck who has already served some eight years here, but unfortunately he is already engaged and his people will not give him up (sensible people)!

Mrs. A. D. Carleton has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks, as has also her sister Miss Louise Upham, both of whom are getting about some now.

Mrs. Susan Talbot is spending some of the winter months at the Center with her daughter, Mrs. Eddy.

Two well packed barrels of clothing have just been sent from here to the Cleveland Deaconess Home for distribution among the poor of the city, and another will be sent before long. Any person having things to spare, whether bedding or anything on the face of the earth else—can be sure of its being put to work for them right away; if they send it to Miss Sarah Armstrong, the housekeeper at the Frank Murray house next the Methodist church. Miss Armstrong is the very efficient president of the Ladies Aid and one who attends to things.

To walk on the street car track, because of drifted sidewalks, and horrid roads, has so become the habit of school children and other folks, that several are becoming quite expert in the matter of balancing, and only need a pole or some such thing, in order to walk a rope and thereby entertain the crowd.

The township meeting of the Sunday school Association which was held in the M. E. church Sunday was not very well attended, no one coming up from the Plains and but two from the Disciple church. Supt. Gile was as usual the presiding officer, and a good meeting was enjoyed by all present, and the coffee was fine.

On Feb. 2d the last of our course of entertainment will be given in the Village Hall, and will consist of a concert by the "Melody Club" which comes to us very well recommended, the tickets for which are only twenty-five cents.

Robert Case is again able to be in his store, and Ed Lynch also is getting about some, both gentlemen having been quite ill recently.

Sleighing parties are all the rage just now, and much fear has been expressed lest the "beautiful" melt off before everybody has had enough of it. However, as more is lazily falling today, there seems to be no end right away.

Mr. Sidney Justus celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday last week, and is quite hale and hearty for one of his years. Mr. Justus lives in his own house, having the family of a nephew with him, and his son and his family just within call.

The old friends of Mr. Henry Moore, will be very sorry to learn that he is lying in a hospital in Los Angeles, in a very critical condition; having just had an operation for tumor. Mr. Moore is considerably over seventy, his family have little hope for any permanent relief.

The lecture by Prof. Hershey given in the Methodist church last week was not as well attended as it certainly would have been but for the weather. All who held season tickets and attended, enjoyed same very much, and wish it might be repeated under more favorable circumstances.

The new Postal Savings Bank here has not been as well patronized as was expected. Most of the workers in the Knitting Mill live in other places and deposit their surplus monies in other banks, while the rest of Mentor folks have to eat theirs up fast as it comes in, groceries and meat still continuing to climb. The Postal will be sure to grow in favor however, as it has in other countries wherever it has been installed.

Mr. Maurice Rosenthall has recently been East on business, having occasion to visit Washington while away, but probably not on matters congressional.

The next Miscellany Club is booked for the pleasant and hospitable home of Mrs. George Blish at the Center on Wednesday of this week.

Mr. Ed Baker is still in the hospital in Cleveland, but is getting on so well is expected home in a short time now.

Mrs. Charles Rexford and children have been down here for a few days with Mrs. Eliza Rexford, Mrs. Frank Smith and others of their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dickey of Willoughby were here with Mrs. Blish (the sister of Mr. Dickey) and other relatives last week, before leaving these benighted parts for Florida, where they will doubtless spend the rest of the winter.

Miss Edna Carriagor was married a few days ago to a Chicago newspaper man, and has gone there to live. Miss Edna has been with her mother, Mrs. Frank Presley for some time, since coming up from the south.

Every one should attend the Charity Ball at City Hall Monday evening January 29. Everyone who can not attend should buy a ticket, the price is 50 cents and every penny goes to help those who are unfortunate.

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold. Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit. For sale by all dealers.

AFTER A WITCHCAT

FAMILY LIES IN WAIT WITH SOLID GOLD BULLET.

"Hex" Has Caused Various Kinds of Woe in Tumbling Run Valley and Can't Be Killed With Ordinary Ammunition.

At Tumbling Run valley, near Pottsville, Pa., a family is lying in wait for a witchcat with a gun loaded with a solid gold bullet, and has also put a "witchcat-eating cat" on the trail of the "hex," or witchcat. This witchcat appeared at the home of Howell Thomas, some weeks ago. It was always seen at four o'clock in the morning prowling around the barnyard, and it is said to have grown until it was four feet long. It is averred that the hens began crowing like roosters and the pigs barking like dogs, and this first evidence that something was wrong was followed by horses, cattle, poultry and even people pining away and dying.

The climax came when Howell Thomas himself died. Two daughters were left—one a spinster, the other married. The former charged the latter with having put the "hex witchcat" on the property, and at the funeral the two had a grievous clash, for the unmarried sister tried to expel from the house the married "witch-sender."

The Thomases had been shooting at the "hex" and though their aim ordinarily was good, they seemingly could not hit the strange cat. After her father's death, Miss Thomas held a conference with an unknown witch doctor and announced that it had been revealed that the reason the bullets had not been effective was because they were lead. She followed directions and molded a solid gold bullet out of a five-dollar gold piece. But when the magic bullet was in the gun ready for use, the cat failed to reappear. Miss Thomas and the neighbors have lain in wait for the "hex," but all in vain. Some declare its absence due to the fact that too many people have been wearing crucifixes and talismans to protect themselves. The affair became so mysterious that the Pottsville Republican editorially asked a complete investigation.

The latest turn to the mysterious case, however, is the most interesting of all. A black cat owned by a Schuylkill Haven man has been found by the "hex" doctors to be a "hexahemeron cat." This cat is said to have been born on the 6th day of the sixth month in 1906, and to have been one of a litter of six kittens. It was blind only six days after being born, whereas all ordinary cats are blind nine days. The word hexahemeron is taken from two Greek words, "hex" and "hemera," and means a completion in six parts. It is usually used in referring to the six days' labor of Creation, as described in the first chapter of Genesis. While there are only five books in Moses in the authorized Bible, the hex doctors declare they have a sixth book of Moses. In this book the witch of Endor ascribes full power to the hexahemeron cat in warding off evil spells.

It was declared that the "hex cat" had beyond doubt an engagement with the evil one, whereby it had imparted to it an imp, or spirit. The Schuylkill Haven cat has never eaten anything but toads, frogs, lizards and serpents, and the hex doctors agreed that its presence will restore the Thomas homestead to a normal condition.

Her Occupation.

The junior member of the old law firm of Goldsmith, Colston, Hoadley & Johnson having used the phrase "a shining ornament of the Cincinnati bar" in referring to some other lawyer, Murat Halstead seized upon the phrase and thereafter invariably referred to Mr. Johnson as "the brass ornament of the Cincinnati bar." At an evening gathering Mr. Halstead saw a handsome woman. He begged to be presented, and was—to Mrs. Johnson. It did not occur to him who the lady might be. He was curious about her. "Johnson, Johnson?" he repeated; "I have never had the pleasure of meeting you before, Mrs. Johnson. Do you live in Ohio?" "Oh, yes," replied the lady, brimming over with smiles; "I live in Cincinnati." "Indeed!" said Mr. Halstead, quite astonished; "may I inquire of what family of Johnsons you are?" The smiles were more than merry this time. "Mr. Halstead," she replied, "for fifteen years I have been trying to polish up the brass ornament of the Cincinnati bar!"

A Deduction.

"Look at that fellow Gassaway!" said Hicks. "By George, if ever any man was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, he's the one!"

"Think so?" said Dubkins. "Now I should have said, looking at Gassaway's mouth, that it must have been a soup-ladle he was born with."—Harper's Weekly.

The Main Reality.

Critic—How the public flock to that play! And yet there is nothing real in it.

Manager—Oh, yes, there is. There's real money in it.

Slight Accusation.

"Jobbs drinks like a fish."

"That isn't against him. Fishes drink nothing but water."

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

INDIAN GIRLS — PAST AND PRESENT

"A YOUTHFUL NURSE"
MODERN INDIAN GIRLS — BASKET MAKERS
A PRESENT-DAY INDIAN GIRL
AN INDIAN GIRL AT HOME

AN INDIAN MOTHER AND HER BABY
"MEMBERS OF THE RICHEST OF SAVAGE TRIBES"
INDIAN GIRL LEARNING LAUNDRY WORK AT CARLISLE SCHOOL

THE Indian girl is progressing in accordance with the example set by her white sisters. Indeed, it is a question whether the Indian girls are not, in many respects, advancing more rapidly than their prototypes among the palefaces. However, it must not be inferred that the present-day trend of culture and education and progress among the Indian girls is a parallel as to aims and purposes with that which prevails among her fair complexioned cousins. Quite the contrary, as a matter of fact. For instance, it may be cited that, generally speaking, the Indian girls of the present give far less thought to fashions in dress than do feminine members of the white race. Similarly they are not exercised over suffrage and they do not place such stress on the [illegible].

But, on the contrary, the twentieth century Indian girls are devoting their energies to a mastery of cookery and sewing and the other essentials of successful home-making to which, in the estimation of some old-fashioned folks, the white girls of the period are giving all too little attention. At the same time, many of the red-skin belles are not content to ignore the social accomplishments which are supposed to enhance the attractiveness of modern young women. Accordingly at the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa., and other large institutions of this kind we find the daughters of the forest crowding the classes in music, painting, drawing, dancing, modern languages, etc., and even behold these descendants of the savages developing marked dramatic ability in amateur theatrical entertainments of various kinds.

Every person is forced to admit of the wisdom and benefits of the "white man's education" for some Indians. The remarkable life stories of some of the self-made Indians who have after acquiring the white man's book learning, adopted the white man's mode of life, amply attest the success of the transformation in individual cases. There is, however, and perhaps always will be a difference of opinion as to the wisdom of attempting to fix the Anglo-Saxon standards for the entire rising generation of America's native tribes. Oddly enough there seems to be more widespread belief in such a policy for the Indian girls than for the young men of the tepees.

We say oddly because when new conditions have confronted an uncivilized or semi-civilized people it has usually been the men who have accustomed themselves to the new order of things more readily than the women. In the case of most Indian clans, however, the women have proven more amenable to the exactions of the new life wherein seems to lie the only salvation of the entire Indian life. Various reasons have been advanced in explanation of this, one of the most plausible being that it has not been as difficult for the Indian girl to forego such pleasures as she enjoyed in her old life as it has been for the young brave to forsake the excitement of the chase and the carefree nomadic life and to settle down in a fixed habitation with the irksome monotony of the white man's life. Also it is impossible to overlook the influence exerted by the example of the considerable number of Indian women who have married white settlers in Oklahoma and other parts of the west.

Even at the outset of her career in the conventional environment of the age the Indian girl has many advantages over her brother who completes his education at the same time. It not infrequently happens that a young man of Indian blood graduates with honors from some Indian school only to find no opportunities awaiting him commensurate with his ability. Small wonder that in some instances the young men revert to the ideals and mode of life of their forefathers. The Indian girl, on the other hand, can be sure that when she finishes a school course that includes domestic economy there is a place awaiting her. She will never have any difficulty in obtaining a well paid position in domestic service, for the instructors at our Indian schools have [illegible] accept from responsible families eager to secure competent Indian girls as household helpers. Some of the applicants even suggest the possibility of adopting a young Indian girl if one be found to fulfil expectations.

Or, if the Indian girl of the present day, upon completing her education, elect to try for a livelihood in some one of the artistic pursuits she seems to have advantages over her brother fully as marked as under the circumstances above mentioned. The Indian brave, in his native state, does not show aptitude for any form of artistic handicraft unless it be the fashioning of bows and arrows. But the Indian women have traditional skill in bead work, in feather work and in leather work and the Indian women of the southwest have for countless generations excelled in pottery manufacture, in rug weaving and in basket manufacture. When an Indian girl is enabled to use such talents in accordance with the knowledge of modern art ideals which a school education gives her it goes without saying that she has ready to hand a very agreeable and very remunerative means of livelihood.

School teaching is another vocation which opens to the educated Indian girls a future that is virtually closed to the redskins of the sterner sex. There are in the United States a large and constantly increasing number of Indian schools,—that is primary grade schools for the education of the younger Indian children on the reservations,—and it is coming about that almost all of the teachers in these schools are Indian young women who have qualified for the work at Carlisle or other schools and by courses in normal schools. Indeed the success of great numbers of these young Indian women school teachers in earning their livelihood by brain work while so many of the Indian young men of the period must depend upon manual labor for their earnings emphasizes as does nothing else the change that has come about in the status of Indian women. It is, under such circumstances, a complete reversal of conditions over those that obtained in the long ago when the Indian women were compelled to do all of the hard labor, whereas the men were responsible only for the lighter tasks—or, mayhap, devoted themselves exclusively to warfare and the chase.

There is little doubt that one explanation of the success which so many twentieth century Indian girls are making in various fields of endeavor is found in the heritage of good health which has come to them from generations of healthful ancestors, and the influence of their own early training and out-door life. Particularly would this explanation account for the splendid constitutions possessed by so many Indian girls and which have stood them in good stead in many exacting vocations, for instance, in nursing. Great numbers of Indian girls have qualified as trained nurses and the services of most of them are in constant demand at $100 a month.

The Indian baby, strapped to a board or securely packed in an elongated basket woven for the purpose, can neither kick nor squirm and this proves an advantage which is far-reaching in its effect in later life. Similarly is there no danger that the child will attempt to walk at an earlier age than is desirable. From earliest childhood the average Indian girl has been subjected to that rigorous outdoor life which results in making them almost perfect physically. For instance, there may be cited the method followed in giving an Indian child a bath—a weekly event. The mother visits some convenient pool or stream and the young member of the household, after being loosened from her odd cradle, is placed in shallow water to kick and splash to her heart's content. In due course the dripping youngster is lifted from the water and, instead of being tenderly dried with soft linen, is simply hung to the bough of some convenient tree, by means of a cloth tied around the waist, and there dries in the air and the sunshine while the mother stands by looking with approving eyes upon the progress of this heroic hardening process.

In the old days the Indian girls accepted at tender age the traditional lot of Indian women—that of pack horse, and it was nothing unusual in the average Indian camp to see wee girls toiling along with bundles of wood, etc., almost as large as themselves. This condition yet obtains to a considerable extent, although it is not so universal as formerly. The capacity of the Indian girls for hard work, however, finds daily exemplification in every walk of life which they have entered. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that whatever influence civilization may exert upon the young woman in whose veins courses Indian blood she never seems to lose that love of ornaments and bright colors which characterizes all children of the wilderness and which the Indian girl will let crop out in her latter-day costumes, even though they be fashioned in accordance with the most conventional modes.

Brought Them Together

One Subject for Which Body of Women Readily Abandons Other Topics of Conversation.

Elizabeth Jordan, who has just finished a play, the second act of which is laid in a beauty parlor, was talking the other day about women, beauty parlors, and conversation.

"There are a good many things that a good many women are interested in," she said. "But there is just one universally appealing topic.

"There is one subject of conversation that will draw every woman's attention. She'll forget everything else in the world to discuss it.

"It is the problem of how to lose weight.

"To illustrate my conviction, I'll tell you a story. This actually happened:

"One day last winter I was at a dinner where there were fifteen or twenty other women guests. When we went to the drawing room after dinner, leaving the men to their cigars, it happened that all the women but myself and one other got into one corner of the room, and I and one fellow-guest were left alone. I've forgotten why, but that's the way it was.

"We were talking of a subject in which we were both interested, and we were having a beautiful time. But it occurred to the hostess that one or both of us might feel neglected. So she called out, from the other side of the room:

"'Why, Miss Jordan, what are you and Mrs. Blank talking about all by yourselves?'

"'Mrs. Blank is telling me how she lost ten pounds,' I replied.

"Well, you ought to have seen the center rush! Every woman in the room made a wild dash for us. The eyes of every woman were all alight with eagerness. And from every woman's throat burst the one impassioned word: 'How?'"

Madame Merri's Advice and Suggestions

Shower for a Bridegroom.

This affair certainly was something entirely new to me and I think will be so to most of the department readers. It all came about in this way: There was to be a wedding and the bride was a much entertained lady. One night the men who were to be in the bridal party said they thought a bridegroom was a much neglected individual, etc. The result was his receiving the following invitation, a copy of which was sent to about twenty of his most intimate friends:

"A 'shower' will be given at the home of Mr. J. F. Black in honor of Mr. C. G. White on Tuesday night. Please bring an article suitable for him in the new life he is about to undertake."

The men entered into the spirit of the thing and the result was amusing in the extreme, so those say who were fortunate to get a detailed description. There was not a girl in evidence, though the best man's sister arranged for the refreshments, flowers and place cards. Here were some of the articles contributed, all done up in tissue paper tied with ribbons:

A box of collar buttons, razor strop, silk hose, suspenders, garters, shaving brush, a tack hammer, bath slippers, cup and saucer. Many of the gifts were accompanied with rhymes, which were read aloud as each parcel was opened.

The ushers and best men planned the shower, and it is said from henceforth the pre-nuptial entertainments will not be confined to the bride, at least in this town, for everyone declared that the bridegrooms-of-the future would be as much feted as the brides.

It is an idea that may be carried out at stag parties and add lots of fun.

A Farewell Good-Luck Party.

This is the description of a merry party given by a neighborhood crowd of young people in honor of two of their set who were going away for a year's absence. The invitations were decorated with good luck symbols, like horseshoes, four-leaved clovers, wishbones, etc. When all had arrived the hostess passed halves of gilt cardboard horseshoes, each cut at a different angle; when a perfect horseshoe was made by a couple they were partners to hunt new pennies which were hidden throughout the lower part of the house. This was a good starter and the couple who brought back the most coppers in their little silk bags received a box of candy decorated with a huge gilded horseshoe. Next, cards were passed with the words "Good Luck" at the top, and a prize was given to the one making the most words in twenty minutes. The refreshments consisted of ice cream frozen in the shape of four-leaved clovers, the cakes were horseshoe-shaped and the place cards ornamented with gilded wishbones. Each guest took home a bright new penny for a good luck pocket piece.

The table centerpiece was a low brass bowl filled with forget-me-nots and maiden hair fern, surrounded by a large gold horseshoe cut out of cardboard. The going away guests were presented with little stickpins in the shape of wishbones with tiny pearls.

Bachelor Stag Dinner.

Whenever a bachelor entertains he is usually indebted to some obliging feminine friend who plans the affair for him and then disappears.

Here is the way a couple of girls carried out the decorations and menu for ten men, the meal being served at the home of the host's sister:

The table centerpiece was bachelor's buttons, golden well flowers and wild oats, surrounded by a circle of dainty dolls dressed as ballet girls in pale pink, blue, yellow and white, green and lavender. There were ten of them and ribbons radiated from each to the place cards which marked each plate and which were tied to corncob pipes. On the cards were pen and ink sketches of a man in front of a fireplace smoking, with girls' faces indistinctly appearing through the smoky haze. The candles were red, in brass holders, and an image of Cupid was suspended from the overhead light so that it just poised over the flowers. He was equipped with a quiver well filled with gilt arrows. The following menu was served:

Consomme.
Lobster Newburg
Broiled Mushrooms
Marinade of Lamb Chops Broiled.
Mashed Potatoes
Buttered String Beans.
Currant Jelly
Orange and Celery Salad.
Ices in Meringues
Cafe Noir

MADAME MERRI.

Scarfs are shown in every material—chiffon and lace, velvet, satin and fur.

Handkerchief Cap

For sweeping and dusting caps men's handkerchiefs with fancy printed borders are used. A casing is sewed about the handkerchief and a draw-string run in, which draws the handkerchief up into a cap. The points are tacked up against the crown. It is very easy to unfasten the draw-string and flatten the handkerchief when time comes for laundering the cap.

IN VOGUE

Panels and covered buttons are very effective on the skirts of the season's street dresses.

Fur is used more extensively than ever to trim dresses intended to wear without a wrap.

The newest pendants and necklaces are quite long and many show a lacy effect that is very pretty.

The latest jabot is accordion plaited and hangs straight and full. These are particularly good in black and white combinations.

The Russian laces are again seen in the gowns launched in Paris and are used in bands and short tunics, very frequently extending in the bodice in double bib effect.

Fur bandings and fringe serve as the most approved finish for all sorts of material, and nowhere are these garnitures more strikingly expressed than on the gowns modeled on simple lines, but of elegant fabric, with little else in the way of contrast.

Rococo Flowers.

The rococo flower, when it came in, had in it an element of surprise from which we have hardly recovered, in spite of our familiarity with this form of ornament.

Whenever one sees these fascinating little bits of trimming they seem to crop up with a light air of unexpectedness and to win and deserve always the approval of the eye.

On heavy winter millinery they have a singular coquetry and grace.

Tucked in a velvet corsage they are equally quaint.

Dangling from a satin or chiffon sash or a fragile fichu or any airy scarf they look as if some amiable breeze had delicately blown them thither.

Their metier is of course the adorning of evening dress and they fulfill it in a wholly admirable spirit, their crowning glory being their poise among the soft coils of a girl's pretty hair.

THE HOME LIFE OF THE SETTLER

WESTERN CANADA AFFORDS ALL THE COMFORTS AND MANY OF THE LUXURIES.

A young lady of Wisconsin secured a certificate at the Milwaukee office of the Canadian Government, and on presenting this to the ticket agent of the railway at the Canadian boundary line she secured a ticket at a reduced rate which carried her to Edmonton, Alberta, from which point, about forty miles, she had friends. This was a couple of years ago, and the young lady is now married to one of the promising young farmers of the district.

In writing of her trip to the Milwaukee representatives of the Canadian Government she says: "I enjoyed my trip up here very much, and expect to go out to our homestead in the Pembina district next spring." To the housewife the information that she has "put up twelve quarts of raspberries" is important, as they "picked them themselves," and they might have picked ten times the quantity if they had required them, for there is no country where wild fruit grows in such abundance. The letter goes on to say, and this is interesting from a woman's standpoint, "the country is very beautiful." Speaking of the friends with whom she went up to live, she says: "They certainly have a beautiful farm and house"—they had been there about four years, also going from Wisconsin—"they have about twenty acres of oats and barley, five acres alfalfa, three acres potatoes and I don't know how many of vegetables. I think they have about forty acres under cultivation altogether. They are now draining a slough which they will afterwards plow and put into fall wheat. They also have a large herd of cattle, and Mrs. C. has about 100 chickens. They make on an average of 30 pounds of butter every week. I never saw such grand cream."

Now these people are enjoying life in Alberta; they have a splendid climate, excellent prospects, and are happy that they are part and parcel in the working out of the upbuilding of a new country, that will take its place amongst the progressive countries of the century. Numbers of letters that express satisfaction as extreme as the one quoted appear in literature sent out by the Canadian Government and which may be had on application to any of its agents.

GIVE AND TAKE.

"Rockefeller must be a great believer in reciprocity."

"Why so?"

"Why, whenever he gives away a million or so he advances the price of oil."

An Every-Day Creed.

I desire to radiate health, cheerfulness, sincerity, calm courage and good will. I wish to live without hate, whim, jealousy, envy or fear. I wish to be simple, honest, natural, frank, clean in mind and clean in body, unaffected, ready to say "I do not know" if so it be, to meet all men on an absolute equality, to face any obstacle and meet every difficulty unafraid and unabashed. I wish others to live their lives, too, up to their highest, fullest and best. To that end I pray that I may never meddle, dictate, interfere, give advice that is not wanted, nor assist when my services are not needed. If I can help people I'll do it by giving them a chance to help themselves; and if I can uplift or inspire let it be by example. That is to say, I desire to be radiant—to radiate life.—Elbert Hubbard.

SURPRISED DOCTOR.
Illustrating the Effect of Food.

The remarkable adaptability of Grape-Nuts food to stomachs so disordered that they will reject everything else, is illustrated by the case of a woman in Racine, Wis.

"Two years ago," she says, "I was attacked by a stomach trouble so serious that for a long time I could not take much of any sort of food. Even the various kinds prescribed by the doctor produced most acute pain.

"We then got some Grape-Nuts food, and you can imagine my surprise and delight when I found that I could eat it with a relish and without the slightest distress.

"When the doctor heard of it he told me to take several small portions each day, because he feared I would grow tired of it as I had of all other food.

"But to his surprise, (and that of everybody else), I did not tire of Grape-Nuts, and became better day by day, till, after some weeks, my stomach entirely recovered and I was able to eat anything my appetite craved.

"My nerves, which had become so weakened that I feared I would become insane, were also restored by the Grape-Nuts food in connection with Postum which has become our table beverage. I appreciate most gratefully and thankfully the good that your food preparations have done me, and shall be glad to answer any letters inquiring as to my experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

CHAPTER I.

Dan Blair.

The fact that much he said, because of his unconscionable slang, was incomprehensible did not take from the charm of his conversation as far as the duchess of Breakwater was concerned. The brightness of his expression, his quick, clear look upon them, his beautiful young smile, his not too frequent laugh, his "new gayness," as the duchess called his spirits, his supernal youth, his difference, credited him with what nine-tenths of the human race lack—charm.

His tone was not too crudely western; neither did he suggest the ultra east, with which they were familiar. American women went down well enough with them, but American men were unpopular, and when the visitor arrived, Lady Galorey did not even announce him to the party gathered for "the first shoot."

The others were in the armory when the ninth gun, a young chap, six feet of him, blond as the wheat, cleanly set up and very good to look at, came in with Lily, Duchess of Breakwater. Lady Galorey, his hostess, greeted them.

"Oh, here you are, are you? Lord Mersey, Sir John Fairthrope." She mumbled the rest of the names of her companions as though she did not want them understood, then waved toward the young chap, calling him Mr. Dan Blair, and he, as she hesitated, added:

"From Blairtown, Montana."

"And give him a gun, will you, Gordon?" Lady Galorey spoke to her husband.

"I discovered Mr. Blair, Edie," the duchess announced, "and he didn't even know there was a shoot on for today. Fancy!"

"I guess," Dan Blair said pleasantly, "I'll take a gun out of this bunch," and he chose one at random from several indicated to him by the gamekeeper. "I get my best luck when I go it blind. Right! Thanks. That's so, Lady Galorey, I didn't know there was to be any shooting until the duchess let it out."

To himself he thought with good-natured amusement, 'Afraid I'll spoil their game record, maybe!' and went out along with them, following the insular nobleman like a ray of sun, smiling on the pretty woman who had discovered him in the grounds where he had been poking about by himself.

"Where, in heaven's name, did you 'corral'—word of his own—the dear boy, Edith? How did he get to Osdene Park, or in fact anywhere, just as he is, fresh from Eden?"

"Thought I'd let him take you by surprise, dearest. Where'd you find Dan?"

"Down by the garden house, feeding the rabbits, on his knees like a little boy, his hands full of lettuces. I'd just come a cropper myself on the mare. Slin fell, I'm sorry to say, Edie, and hacked her knees quite a lot. One of those disguised ditches, you know. I was coming along leading her when I ran on your friend."

The young duchess was slender as a willow, very brunette, with a beautiful, discontented face.

"I'm going to show Dan Blair off," Lady Galorey responded, "going to give the debutantes a chance."

Placidly nodding, the duchess lit a cigarette and began quoting from Dan Blair's conversation: "I fancy he won't let them 'worry him;' he's too 'busy!'"

"You mean that you're going to keep him occupied?"

The duchess didn't notice this.

"Is he such a catch?"

Neither of the women had walked out with the guns. The duchess had a bad foot, and Lady Galorey never went anywhere she could help with her husband. She now drew her chair up to the table in the morning room, to which they had both gone after the departure of the guns, and regarded with satisfaction a quantity of stationery and the red leather desk appointments.

"Sit down and smoke if you like, Lily; I'm going to fill out some lists."

"No, thanks, I'm going up to my rooms and get Parkins to 'massoy' this beastly foot of mine. I must have fallen on it. But tell me first, is Mr. Blair a catch?"

Lady Galorey had opened an address book and looked up from it to reply:

"Something like ten million pounds."

"Heavens! Disgusting!"

"The richest young men 'west of some river or other.' At any rate he told me last night that it was 'clean money.' I dare say the river is re[illegible], but that fact seemed to give him satisfaction."

The duchess was leaning on the table at Lady Galorey's side.

"Dan's father took Gordon all over the west that time he went to the states for a big hunt in the Rockies. He got to know Mr. Blair awfully well and liked him. The old gentleman bought a little property about that time that turned out to be a gold mine."

With persistency the duchess said: "How d'you know it is 'clean money,' Edith? Not that it makes a rap of difference," she laughed prettily, "but how do you know that he is rich to this horrible extent?"

Lady Galorey put down her address book impatiently. "Does he look like an impostor?"

The other returned: "Even the archangel fell, my dear Edith!"

"Well," returned her friend, "this one is too young to have fallen far," and she shut up her list in desperation.

The duchess sat down on the edge of the lounge and raised her expressive eyes to Lady Galorey, who once more looked at her sarcastically, and went on:

"Gordon liked the old gentleman; he was extraordinarily generous—quite a type. They called the town after him—Blairtown; that is where the son 'hails from.' He was a little lad when Gordon was out and Mr. Blair promised that Dan should come over here and see us one day, and this," she tapped the table with her pen, "seems to be the day, for he came down upon us in this breezy way without even sending a wire, 'just turned up' last night. Gordon's mad about him. His father has been dead a year, and he is just twenty-two."

"Good heavens!" murmured the duchess. Lady Galorey opened her address book again.

"Gordon's got him terribly on his mind, my dear, he has forbidden any gambling or any bridge as long as the boy is with us."

Her companion rose and thrust her hands into the pocket of her tweed coat. She laughed softly, then went over to the long window where without, across the pane, the early winter mists were flying, chased by a furtive sun.

"Gordon said that the boy's father treated him like a king, and that while the boy is here he is going to look out for him."

Over her shoulder the other threw out coldly:

"[illegible] in a den of thieves. I didn't know. Gordon's honor was so fine. As for me, I don't gamble, you know."

Lady Galorey had decided that Lily's insistent remaining gave her a chance to fill her fountain pen. She was therefore, carefully squirting in the ink, and she flushed at her friend's last words.

Lady Galorey herself was the best bridge player in London, and cards were her passion. She did not remind the lady in the window that there were other games besides bridge, but kept both her tongue and her temper.

After a little silence in which the women followed each her own thoughts, the duchess murmured:

"I'll toddle upstairs, Edie—let you write. Where did you say we were going to meet the guns for food?"

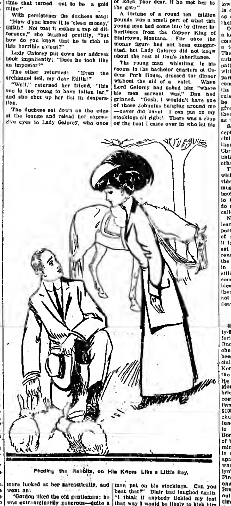
"At the edge of the White Pastures. There'll be a cart and a motor going, whichever you like, around two."

"Right," her grace nodded; "I'll be on time, dearest."

And Lady Galorey with a relieved sigh heard the door close behind the duchess. Wiping her fountain pen delicately with a bit of chamois, she murmured: "Well, Dan Blair is out of Eden, poor dear, if he met her by the gate."

A fortune of a round ten million pounds was a small part of what this young man had come into by direct inheritance from the Copper King of Blairtown, Montana. For once the money figure had not been exaggerated, but Lady Galorey did not know about the rest of Dan's inheritance.

The young man whistling in his rooms in the bachelor quarters of Osdene Park House, dressed for dinner without the aid of a valet. When Lord Galorey had asked him "where his men servant was," Dan had grinned. "Gosh, I wouldn't have one of those Johnnies hanging around me—never did have! I can put on my stockings all right! There was a chap on the boat I came over in who let his man put on his stockings. Can you beat that?" Blair had laughed again. "I think if anybody tickled my feet that way I would be likely to kick him in the eye."



Feeding the Rabbits, on His Knees Like a Little Boy.

Dressing in his room he whistled under his breath a song from a newly-popular comic opera; and he intoned with a clear young voice a line of the words:

"Should-you-go-to-Mandalay."

Out through his high window, if he had looked, he would have seen the misty sweep of the park under the faint moonrise and the shadows that the leaves made in the veiled light, but he did not look out. He was dressing for dinner without a valet and giving a great deal of care to his toilet, for the first time he was to dine in the house of a nobleman and in the presence of a duchess, not that it meant a great deal to him—he thought it was "fanny."

In Dan Blair's twenty-two years of utterly happy days his one grief had been the death of his father. As soon as the old man had died Dan had gone off into the Rockies with his guides and not "shown up" for months. When he came back to Blairtown as he expressed it, "he packed his grip and beat it while his shoes were good," for the one place he could remember his father had suggested for him to go.

Blairtown was very much impressed when the heir came in from the Rockies with "a big kill" and the orphan's case did not seem especially disturbed. But no one in the town knew how the boy's heart ached for the old man. When Dan was six years old his father had literally picked him up by the nape of the neck and thrown him into the water like a pup and watched him swim. At night he sent the boy off with a gun to rough camp. Then he took Dan down in the mines with the men. His education had been won in Blairtown, at a school called public, but which in reality was nothing more than a pioneer district school.

On Sundays Dan dressed up and went with his father to church twice a day and in the week days his father took him to the prayer meetings, and at sixteen Dan went to college in California. He had just completed his course when old Blair died. Then he inherited fifty million dollars.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Have Grave Garments Ready

In an account of the death, at the age of one hundred and four, of Lucy Hickey at Gloucester there appeared the interesting item that she was buried in a shroud which she had made for herself many years ago. "This may look strange to most people," said a resident of the East side, "but not to the old-fashioned Jews. I am sure that if you go through any of the tenement houses in this part of the city you will find in the majority of homes the shrouds of all men and women who are married. It is an old custom to have the grave garments ready, and with some of the people it is considered a shame not to be properly provided in case of death. The garments are usually of fine texture and—invariably 'hand sewed.'"

Vanilla Bean in England.

Society women are interested in the horticultural activities of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, who is cultivating in her garden several vanilla bean vines. The vine is delicate and fragrant and has a commercial value. It is a terrestrial parasite and grows on almost any kind of tree, lighting up the ruddest and most attractive bark with its dainty festoons of leaves and tendrils. The beans form early, and even the least experienced amateur can raise the useful vanilla plant.—London Mail.

The Value of Life's Puzzles

MUCH of life's daily story is made up of facing questions more or less perplexing. Now and then comes a call for a decision that plainly will largely shape one's future. Almost every moment raises a minor problem, and later years may show that the matter was by no means so trifling as it seemed.

The process does not affect all alike. All are passing judgment on an endless series of points. But those without a serious purpose are hardly aware of this. They are used to following the line of least resistance in consequence they decide so lightly as to be unconscious of having used their wills at all.

On the other hand, for those with a keen sense of duty the burden often comes to seem very heavy. There is a temptation to seek to escape it. There is a longing at times for some authority that shall point out the right path after the manner of a guide-board without demanding any effort on the part of the traveler. One may become weary of being reminded that the Bible is a book of principles, not rules, and fancies what [illegible] might be if it were possible to turn to a given page for any emergency, and there read a definite, precise direction as to the right course.

Some persons take refuge in accepting a human authority, either one claiming such power or one that they themselves enthrone. Some earnest Christians have resorted to ways not unlike kinds of divination known to other ages.

The kind of guidance sometimes wished could doubtless have been provided. It has not been, and wisely, it must be believed. Scholars may find books that will give the right answers to their problems, but true teachers do not encourage the use of such miscalled helps.

Not only is getting the answer, but learning the way to it, is of vital importance in training. If reason is one of man's noblest endowments to use it for worthy ends is one of his greatest glories. With the added light of revelation, with the illumination of the spirit, with God's special leading in dark places, too questions that still demand thought and study become one of the most valuable and blessed elements of life. To shun them would be to experience a loss not to be made good.—Christian Endeavor World.

Endowing City Churches.

[illegible] ty-five years that the church was suffering at the expense of the colleges. Once great fortunes went to the church. In recent years they have been going to the universities and social foundations. Perhaps John S. Kennedy is responsible for the turn of the tide toward the churches again. He left large sums for church work. Morris K. Jesup left $100,000 to the brick Presbyterian church. Now comes the good news that Mrs. William Van Rensselaer Smith has given $100,000 to the First Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, as an endowment fund to help the church do its work in the future, amid changed conditions. It stands close to the Church of the Pilgrims, where Doctor Storrs ministered so long, in a region which is rapidly becoming a community of apartments and hotels where once it was the residential section of Brooklyn's solid citizens. The pastor of the First church, Dr. L. Mason Clarke, is one of the most virile preachers in Brooklyn, thoroughly prophetic in his outlook, determined to meet the new times with their new needs.—The Congregationalist.

One on Ingersoll.

The great agnostic, Robert G. Ingersoll, it is said, was one morning seated in a Washington city hotel, looking out of the great window, when a United States senator, coming in, said: "Mr. Ingersoll, I saw a sad thing a moment ago. I saw a man struggling across the crowded street on crutches, and I saw another man strike the crutches away from him." And Ingersoll rose with fingers twitching and eyes flashing and said: "I should like to see the man! I would punish him." The United States senator put his hand on his shoulder and said: "That is what you have been trying to do for years, striking away the crutches of people, the support of people in sorrow, the support of people in temptation."—Christian Herald.

Would You?

Has Jesus Christ really the first place in your heart? Would you do what the early Christians had to do in thousands of instances, sacrifice goods, husbands, wife, children, rather than deny Christ? Do you love Christ well enough to give him your best, your son or daughter for mission work? God's peace, God's rest, God's love, God's power, never fills a heart until Jesus is enthroned there.—H. C. Macgregor.

Doing Good.

We make our friendships easy by doing good, whether we are appreciated or not, by loving others, whether they reciprocate or not, by determining what we would have others do to us, and then doing that whether they return it in kind, or not; by doing our dues instead of demanding them; by living the open heart to the world.—Rev. I. A. [illegible], Baptist, Denver.

Christian Socialism.

Out of the modern industrial spirit will come a mightier movement than even the Puritan movement.—Rev. H. C. Swearingen, Presbyterian, St. Paul.

DISFIGURED WITH CRUSTS

"Some time ago I was taken with eczema from the top of my head to my waist. It began with scales on my body. I suffered untold itching and burning, and could not sleep. I was greatly disfigured with scales and crusts. My ears looked as if they had been most cut off with a razor, and my neck was perfectly raw. I suffered untold agony and pain. I tried two doctors who said I had eczema in its fullest stage, and that it could not be cured. I then tried other remedies to no avail. At last, I tried a set of the genuine Cuticura Remedies, which cured me of eczema when all else had failed, therefore I cannot praise them too highly.

"I suffered with eczema about ten months, but am now entirely cured, and I believe Cuticura Remedies are the best skin cure there is." (Signed) Miss Mattie J. Shaffer, R. F. D. 1, Box 8, Dancy, Miss., Oct. 27, 1910.

"I had suffered from eczema about four years when boils began to break out on different parts of my body. It started with a fine red rash. My back was affected first, when it also spread over my face. The itching was almost unbearable at times. I tried different soaps and salves, but nothing seemed to help me until I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One box of them cured me entirely. I recommended them to my sister for her baby who was troubled with tooth eczema, and they completely cured her baby." (Signed) Mrs. F. L. Marberger, Dreibersville, Pa., Sept. 6, 1910.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind, and cool in judgment.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. [illegible] many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. ## FACTS ABOUT SUICIDE

SAXONY LEADS IN NUMBER AND IRELAND IS LAST.

Self-Murder Far More Prevalent Among Men Than Among Women—Former Seem to Prefer Hanging and Latter Drowning.

Modern conditions in all countries are such that the subject of suicide must occasionally come under discussion in every community of any size. Not that suicide is of modern origin, for history shows that it occurred in very ancient times, but those who have made a study of the subject maintain, and probably with reason, that the highly organized conditions of modern society and the social abnormalities and nerve disturbances incident thereto, promote and strengthen the suicidal tendency. This may be mere theory, but statistics do show that it is more prevalent in some countries than in others. Statistics covering a term of years show that during the entire period of observation Ireland had the fewest annual number of suicides, seventeen to the million of inhabitants, and Saxony, the largest number, 332 to the million. Denmark showed 251 per annum to the million inhabitants; Switzerland, 238, France 180, Belgium 100, England and Wales 78. The Swiss people are commonly supposed to be happy and comparatively free from care, and it seems strange that the average suicide rate should be several hundred per cent. greater in Switzerland than in Ireland.

On another point statistics are more conclusive, for they show that in all countries the proportion of suicides is three or four men to one woman, and that this proportion continues from year to year. The fair inference would seem to be either that men are more subject to the suicidal tendency than women or else that they yield to it more readily. Either supposition opens a field for biological and metaphysical speculation. Another curious fact disclosed by the statistics is that suicide is much more common among Protestant than amongst Roman Catholic communities, while Jews have a smaller suicide rate than Roman Catholics. It is also demonstrated that self-murder, as suicide is styled by Christian ethics and law, is more common among the educated than the illiterate classes, and more prevalent in city than in rural districts. These facts might be accounted for on the theory that educated people are more sensitive to misfortune than the illiterate, and the nervous strain of city life greater than that of country life. The suicide rate is higher in certain occupations and professions than in others. It is high among soldiers and doctors.

As to the modes of suicide they are found in very but slightly in different countries. Hanging is the most common among males, then drowning, firearms, knife cuts and poison, in the order named. With women a different order prevails, viz., first drowning, then poison, hanging and knife cuts and firearms.

Too Deep for Men.

The fact is that women are uncomfortable if they are not fashionably dressed, relates Katherine F. Gerould in Atlantic. No man understands the subtle and complex significance of the phrase "nothing to wear"—witness the distressed but utterly puzzled expression that overspreads a man's face at the words. He knows that his wife or his sister looks charming in "the blue one," or "the lace one," or "the one with the jet." She has looked charming in it often enough for him at last to identify it—and that, unless he is an exception to his sex, is very often. He is cheerfully getting into his evening coat for the fiftieth time. No wonder he does not realize that some frock which, the first time it was worn, made for triumph, should, the tenth time, make for humiliation. But the most strong-minded woman—the women who will, if necessary go to the opera on a gala night in a coat and skirt—at heart exonerates the woman who so foolishly, for the reason mentioned, stops at home.

Strong Man Story.

"You may talk about Gotch being a strong man," said a gentleman from Butte, Mont., who is visiting in the city, "but I met a fellow in Minneapolis who had the prize strong man champion of the world story.

"It came out in a discussion of the Gotch-Hackenschmidt wrestling bout. One man made the assertion that Gotch was about as strong a man as there is in the country or the world. The Norwegian was quiet for a moment, then interposed:

"'Ay got bruder in woods, ho han better man than Gotch.'

"'Better than Gotch? How do you make that out?'

"'Well, my brudder he drive log team. One day team he balk and my bruddor he got so mad he tak' one log 'bout ten foot long and three foot thick in one hand, and he tak' nodder log 'bout ten foot long and three foot think in udder hand and he smash dem together until all is left is sawdust.'"

Judging Character.

"That man Mehitabel married has a lot of foresight," said Farmer Corntossel.

"He looked kind of worried an' scared at the weddin'," replied his wife.

"That's what makes me think he has foresight."

Oh, So Greedy!

Housekeeper—"I've nothing hot for you, but I can give you a little something cold." Tramp—"All right, mum; make it a little cold cash, if you will."

Or the Trousers.

A thorn in the bush is worth two in the sofa cushion.—Judge.

Music and Manners.

Tsu Kung, a pupil of Confucius, said, "In any country it is only necessary to hear its music in order to know if its manners and customs are good or bad."

SLANG BY NO MEANS NEW

Familiar Phrase "Get the Hook" Has Come Down to Present Times From Long Ago.

"We are accustomed to having accepted ideas about the freshness and originality of our slang held up to the scorn and mockery of the initiated," said a member of a group of amateur archeologists and antiquarians which meets regularly in one of the New York clubs.

"How often we have seized upon some newly coined phrase, some apparently unique product from the great popular language mint, and advanced it as a genuine invention of the day, only to discover that it was known to generations past in almost identical form and is truly an old coin restamped.

"Everybody is familiar with the phrase 'get the hook.' It has been established in current speech as a slang expression of peculiar vigor and terseness. Almost anyone could tell you that it originated in the amateur nights at popular vaudeville theaters where aspirants for fame are given a chance to try their powers upon an audience, and that it refers to the implement with which the stage manager brings about the actor's forcible exit when the audience can stand no more. Cat calls and jeers failing to extinguish the ardor of the performer, there is a demand for 'the hook' and the unhappy artist is dragged into the wings, willy nilly.

"From this application the phrase has come into general use for all occasions when one is bored or wearied of anything or anybody.

"Now on the face of it this looks like a truly modern bit of slang. It can be traced, apparently, to a modern custom and a modern method of entertainment. You would say, off hand, that 'the hook' is a genuine Americanism if ever there was one.

"Not at all. It is at least 19 centuries old, possibly older than that.

"Among the most interesting discoveries in the ruins of Pompeii, destroyed 78 A. D., are the inscriptions scratched upon the walls by idlers and street arabs, 'graffiti,' they are called.

"One of them reads as follows:

"'Puteolanis feliciter, omnibus Nucherinis felicia, et uncu(m) Pompeianis (et) Pitecusanis.'

"Which means, 'Hurrah for the Puteolaneans; good luck to all Nucerians; the hook for the Pompeiians and Pithecusans.'"

Kindness to Animals.

"A little color from the Potrero"—so a genial friend informs the San Francisco Chronicle.

"Far out on the very edge of town is a little school house, the first and second grades of which are commanded by a pretty little normal school graduate.

"Her pupils are all sons and daughters of the warmer sort of impulsive foreigners and have all reached a state of adoration for their queen and vie with each other in ways to please her.

"One day she had dwelt especially upon loving and caring for dumb animals. The next day little Pietro remained in his seat when his schoolmates dropped out to play.

"Teacher was busy at her desk and did not notice him until she felt a little fist tugging at her sleeve.

"'Why, Pietro!' she exclaimed, 'what is the trouble?'

"'Nothin', teacher. I just wanted to tell you how I was good to dumb animals yesterday,' he promptly replied.

"'Why, isn't that nice! Pietro, just what did you do?'

"Pietro drew himself up to his full three feet and proudly asserted:

"'I kissed the cat.'"

Cochineal Scarlet.

It is the opinion of Leon Diguet, who has been studying the state of the cochineal industry in Mexico for some time, that before many years have passed cochineal scarlet will have become a thing of history only, like the Tyrian purple of antiquity. I wonder how many people are aware of the method of manufacture of this well known dye. It is made from the dried female of the cochineal insects (Coccus cacti). They are gathered by brushing the branches of the nopal cactus, on which the insects feed as soon as they begin to lay their eggs. They are then desiccated in ovens or filled with boiling water. It has been estimated that one pound of cochineal contains no fewer than 70,000 distinct insects. The color is brought out and fixed by chloride of tin. Only a few plantations of the nopal cactus now remain, hence the fear that the dye will soon become a thing of the past, at any rate unless some other substance is found on which to feed the insects.

Calendar Reform in China.

From Peking it is announced that the Chinese government is about to drop the troublesome moon from its calendar and follow the practice of western nations in using only the sun. The present Chinese year began on January 30 and is the year 49 of the seventy-sixth cycle, a cycle consisting of 60 years and the first year of the first cycle occurring B. C. 2637. But owing to the use of the moon the number of days in the year varies considerably. Ordinarily there are 12 lunations or months, but once in 30 lunations a thirteenth lunation is added to the year, as a result of which the year can be as short as 354 days or as long as 384 days. The months are more regular than our own, alternating between 29 and 30 days. The Chinese year completely fails to keep the seasons within proper bounds.

HIS PHENOMENAL GIRL

SHE UNDOUBTEDLY WAS ONE OF THE SMARTEST EVER.

But Somehow the Father Failed Miserably in His Attempt to Convince the Man With the Square Jaw About Her.

A man with a Muttandjeff face and watery blue eyes boarded a car the other morning along with a tall man with a wide jaw and square-toed shoes.

"Well, sir," said the man with the Muttandjeff face as soon as they were seated, "that little girl of mine is certainly the greatest—"

"For my part," interrupted the firm-jawed man, "I think about half the members of congress could be arrested for taking money under false pretenses. They don't do a lick of work—just show up often enough to draw their pay. It's an outrage."

The man with the comic-picture countenance looked puzzled.

"I guess you didn't quite understand me," he said after a brief pause. "I was going to tell you a funny thing that little girl of mine said this—"

"Blamed if there ain't another tree that was blown over in the last big storm," remarked the strong-faced passenger calmly.

"Er-yes," replied the man with the watery blue eyes. "Well, this little girl of mine is the brightest—"

"One thing about that recent tariff session of congress," cut in the other man, "that pleased me is the fact that business kept going right ahead just as if nothing out of the ordinary was happening. They can muss around with the tariff all they've a mind to down at Washington, but people seem to be going right ahead turning out finished products and disposing of them at the old stand."

"Well, when she came down to the breakfast table this morning," pursued the parent of the phenomenal young one, "she looked at the buckwheat cakes on the table and—"

"Say, now you're talking," said the square-jawed man. "A lot of people quit eating buckwheat cakes when the warm weather comes along, but I eat 'em well into the summer. I'm crazy about buckwheat cakes. What kind do you have at your house—the old-fashioned buckwheat or the new-fangled self-raising kind?"

"Wh-uh-er, I don't know what kind my wife usually buys. Anyhow, as soon as my little girl saw the buckwheat cakes she—"

"Pretty hard to get anything as good as the old-fashioned things. Same way with maple sirup. The kind they have in the groceries may be on the level and all that, but give me the sort my uncle used to bring in to us from his farm when I was a kid. It'd be as thick as crude oil and with a flavor that was absolutely the best ever."

"That so?" weakly inquired the father of the extraordinary little girl.

"Well, she looked at those cakes solemnly for a minute, and then she looked first at her mother and then at me, and then she pointed at the cakes, and—"

"Speaking of pointing, I had a pointer dog die on me a week before last that I wouldn't have taken $200 for. Just got him last fall, and he was as good a dog to take hunting as I ever saw. Just broke me all up when I found him dead."

"But see here," said the man with the weak eyes, "I wasn't saying anything about—"

"Well, here's where I get off," said the larger man. "Glad to've seen you. Take care of yourself." And he hurried to the front end of the car to alight.

"Any man," he growled, as he walked across the street, "who thinks he can bore me all the way downtown with tales of the scintillating brilliance of his offspring when I want to look over my morning paper has got to run up from behind when I'm not looking and bind and gag me, and even then, he'd find me pretty hard to handle."

They Were "Ulys" and "Mrs. G."

Mrs. Grant had no secretary to attend to her correspondence, the great bulk of which was referred to the office for action. She used to receive an enormous number of appeals for help, for charities, for assistance, in aid of almost every cause that could be imagined. Being a warm-hearted, sympathetic woman, some of these appeals made a strong impression upon her. I can remember several instances when Mrs. Grant requested her husband to give this person or that a position that was asked for, or to accede to some other request of like nature. She always called the president "Ulys," and excepting upon the most formal occasions, he always addressed her as Mrs. G. Both the president and his wife were plain people, simple in their tastes to an extent that would cause surprise today, when everything has so changed throughout the social fabric of the entire nation.—W. H. Cook in "Memories of the White House."

Plain Evidence.

"I bought some wine the other day, and I astonished the clerk who waited on me by telling him I noticed he was a spiritualist."

"What made you observe that?"

"Because, when he prepared the bottle for me, I noticed he was engaged in spirit wrapping."—Baltimore American.

Back to the Scrap Pile.

"I understand that car of Juggernaut has been put out of business in India." "Yes," replied the chauffeur. "As soon as the people found it wasn't a 1912 model, the people wouldn't stand for it."

Primitive Medicines.

Some of the early medical practitioners were very limited in the choice of remedies. Victor Hugo's family physician used only ammonia and camphor in different combinations.

Bright Chinese Schoolboys.

China's advanced modern spirit permeates the schools. There is hardly a schoolboy at Chengtu, for instance, who is not acquainted with the outlines of the history of the French revolution, and they have all followed the progress of nationalist ideals in Turkey, Persia, India and Egypt. A patriotic British teacher at Chengtu was pointing out with pride to his geography class the many red colored possessions of Great Britain, when he was stopped by shouts of "You stole them" from his class. In the propaganda of the revolutionary party, too, a poster depicting the swallowing of Egypt by Great Britain has played a prominent part.

Costs of Ships.

In 1889 the Augusta Victoria cost about $1,000,000. The Deutschland of the Hamburg-American line, cost $6,750,000, and the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria nearly $3,500,000. The Mauretania and Lusitania cannot have cost much less than $12,000,000 each and the two giant vessels which are now being built for the White Star line between Southampton and New York will probably cost nearly as much. The tonnage of the Deutschland, completed in 1900, is 16,502 tons; the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, finished in 1906, 24,581 tons; the Mauretania and Lusitania, built in 1906 and 1905, respectively, 32,500 tons each, with a horsepower of 70,000. Compared to these passenger ships the most powerful German and English dreadnaughts cost $10,000,000 each; of France, $16,000,000; of the United States, $8,000,000.

This Happened in Boston.

Rabbi Wise, when he visited Boston for the first time, was undecided at what hotel to stop. As he wandered up Summer street from the South station he determined to inquire for a good hotel. So he accosted a fine appearing man, who was coming toward him, confident that from such a citizen he would be sure to get the very best advice as to his choice of a stopping place. "What would be a good place to stop at?" he inquired of the stranger. "Just before you reach the 'at,'" was the disconcerting reply.—Cosmopolitan.

Berlin's Wild Parrots.

In addition to sparrows, pigeons and other birds usually seen in a great city, Berlin has now a colony of wild parrots. Since the early months of the year a small group of common gray parrots have been observed in the streets of the extreme northern quarter of the town, where there is still a good deal of unbuilt land and garden vegetation, and have been a constant source of interest to observant nature lovers. The little strangers, to the number of 12 or 16, who are supposed to have escaped from the cages of some bird fancier, have successfully foraged for themselves all through the summer months, and, if they succeed in overcoming the rigors of the approaching winter and reach the brooding season next spring there seems some possibility that Berlin will in a year or two have a regular population of wild parrots in its streets.—London Evening Standard.

PROGRESSING

THE LAKE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY HOLDS ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

New Directors Elected and Steps Taken to Promote the Fair—New Road from Mentor Ave. to Johnnycake Ridge to be Opened Soon.

The annual meeting of the Lake County Agricultural Society held at the court house last Saturday, was well attended, all parts of the county being represented. F. H. Murray was elected chairman, and George A. Bates secretary. Minutes of the organization meeting held February 4, 1911, were read and approved. A short discussion took place with reference to the time for fixing dates of fairs. E. P. Brown of Concord, made a motion which was seconded and carried that the custom of other agricultural societies be followed in fixing the dates of annual fairs and that the board of directors as soon as convenient fix the date for the ensuing year.

A motion was made and carried that all who have become members of the society since its organization by paying into the treasury one dollar, and all new members receive a dollar's worth of admission tickets for the first fair of the society upon presentation of their membership certificates to the treasurer at fair time. At 11:30 the meeting adjourned until 12:30 P. M. At 1:30 the meeting was called to order by the president.

At the afternoon meeting the society proceeded to elect directors for the full and unexpired terms where vacancies existed. The result of the election was as follows:

H. V. Shulters, Mentor, three years; W. E. Thompson, Kirtland, three years; A. M. Thompson, Perry, three years; E. D. Rust, Concord, three years; E. J. Dickey, Willoughby, three years; D. A. Wagner, Painesville, two years; C. C. Markell, Kirtland, one year.

Immediately after the annual meeting the board of directors organized by electing for the ensuing year F. H. Murray, president; E. J. Dickey, vice-president; E. C. Smart, treasurer; and George A. Bates, secretary.

R. S. Belknap, treasurer for the past year, had notified the board that on account of his other duties it would be impossible for him to serve as treasurer for the coming year. On account of some former members retiring from the board, and in order to fill out vacancies in various committees, the president made the following appointments for the ensuing year: Building committe, C. A. Hine, E. J. Dickey, T. B. West, G. L. Ostrander, Col. Parker, D. A. Wager. Water Committee—Taylor Baisra, George Potts, E. D. Rust. Road—A. M. Thompson, M. G. Wood, Talor Baster. Ground Plan—Geo. Potts, G. L. Ostrander, E. D. Rust. Fence—W. E. Thompson, F. E. Steward, C. C. Markell.

Committee on premium list and advertising, G. L. Ostrander, H. V. Shulters and A. M. Thompson.

The board expects to hold a meeting soon to select dates for the coming fair, receive reports of the various committees, etc.

The petition for the new county road adjoining the fair ground from Mentor avenue to Johnnycake ridge, will be circulated at once, and it is expected the road will be opened and ready for use of the public early in the spring.

When this county was voted dry we were told by the enthusiastic prohibitionist that poverty would be greatly diminished if not abolished. As there is more poverty, hard times, and demands for charity in Painesville this year than ever before, the dry argument is knocked into a cocked hat. Probably there are other and more serious causes of poverty.

Calendars for 1912 show that Thursday will be a favorite day for holidays in the coming year. Decoration Day, May 30; Independence day, July 4, and Thanksgiving day, Nov. 28, all will fall upon Thursday. New Year's day and Labor day, Sept. 2, will fall upon Monday. Christmas day, Dec. 25, and Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, will come upon Wednesday. March, June, September, and December will each have five Sundays. Spring will begin on March 21, Friday, so that if signs are to be considered, we will have some bad weather.

[illegible] were missed by 74, with "attacked," "disappoint" and "lose" following next in order, and not far behind. It reads like a story of topsy-turvydom, but is regarded as a fair test of the spelling capacity of young midwestern citizens.

The question of having a High school at Fairport is now being agitated. They have a fine building, lots of children and an able corps of teachers, why not a High school?

F. W. Rust of Concord, well known here in Painesville, is a candidate for county commissioner, and he is sure to make the contest in this part of the county a lively one. Mr. Rust has been a member of the Painesville township board of education, also road supervisor, for a number of years, in which positions he has always had the full confidence of the people. There is no question but what he is well qualified for the position of county commissioner.

FRANK G. HOLLAND DEAD

Popular District Deputy K. O. T. M. Passes Away After Short Illness.

Word came from Toledo last week that Frank Holland was dangerously sick, but his many friends here in Painesville were not prepared to hear the sad news of his death. It was a great shock to all who had known him, and especially so to those who had seen him when he was here at home a few weeks ago, in full possession of perfect health and showing in every act his usual happy disposition.

Few young men have ever lived in this city who became so well known, and who in one way and another have taken a more active part in the many affairs connected with the social life here.

He was born in London, England, 36 years ago. He came to this country 17 years ago, he was then a young man of 19 years of age. He secured employment at Perry, but later and for many years after was employed by leading merchants of this city whose full confidence he possessed. He seemed to have the natural faculty of winning and holding the friendship of his associates. He was gifted in many ways, as a writer and as an amateur actor he might be classed as a genius of no mean attainments. He was for many years an active member of the band, being popular and well liked by all the members of that organization.

Mr. Holland died in Toledo at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. His wife was with him when he passed away. The remains arrived here at 6:23 Monday night over the Lake Shore from Toledo and were accompanied by an escort of the Uniformed Rank of the K. O. T. M. of Toledo. Here members of the Citizens' band and members of the societies to which the deceased belonged met the remains and conducted them to the home on Richmond street.

The deceased is survived by a most devoted wife and three children, two of the children by a former marriage. His first wife died about six years ago. Mr. Holland's father and mother are still living in London, England. His brother, Arthur Holland died in Akron about two years ago of pneumonia.

The funeral services were held on Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. at the St. James church, and were in charge of the Maccabees, with the Elks and Odd Fellows assisting at the grave. The members of the Citizens' band attended in a body. The large attendance at the funeral, the evidences of sorrow, showed very plainly that Mr. Holland had in life won the love and kindly regard of all his associates.

CHARITY BALL

GREAT SUCCESS AND GOOD SUM OF MONEY REALIZED

Mr. Saslow's Efforts Meet With Hearty Response by Large Attendance.

As a social affair the Charity Ball held at City Hall Monday night was a grand success, over two hundred people attended and to all the occasion was a most enjoyable one.

Mr. M. Sasiow of the Up-to-Date store reported Wednesday morning that there was $124.55 already on hand and that this amount would undoubtedly be augmented by returns from those who had tickets for sale and who had not reported.

The Painesville Charities committee will hold a meeting Wednesday afternoon when the proceeds of the ball will be turned over to them to be used as occasion may seem best.

REV. JOHN E. CROWDER

Will Conduct an Evangelistic Campaign Soon to Open Here.

Rev. John E. Crowder of Madison, Wis. is to conduct a gospel mission in Painesville of from two to three weeks, beginning February 21, and Prof. Harry Maxwell of Greencastle, Ind., is to be musical director and soloist. Dr. Crowder is already known to those who heard him at the Methodist [illegible] in November. Mr. Maxwell is one of the foremost singing evangelists in this country. The Methodist, Congregational, Baptist and Church of Christ will all unite in an effort to make this evangelistic campaign of great benefit to Painesville and vicinity.

A special music committee under the chairmanship of Prof. F. H. Kendell will organize a special choir for the mission.

DEPARTED

James F. Mathews, Well Known and Respected Citizen Dies at the Age of 70.

The stores of Painesville were closed on Monday between the hours of 9 and 10 a. m. The old soldiers gathered around the grave of a departed comrade. There were many other evidences of sorrow—a congenial, kind, Christian man, had departed to the Great Beyond.

James Fitch Mathews, one of Painesville's oldest and best known merchants, passed away at his home on Washington street on Friday morning after an illness of five weeks.

Mr. Mathews was born in Painesville seventy years ago and with the exception of several years spent in Iowa and Illinois, has been a resident of this city. For the past twenty years he has been in the dry goods business, first on State street, and then on Main street. The deceased was a life-long member of the Congregational church.

A widow and two daughters, Mrs. Charles Brown of Newport, Ky., and Mrs. Edward Kikstadt of Cleveland, survive. The funeral services were held from his late residence on Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

For Mud Roads.

A correspondent in the Adrian (Mich.) Telegram, is opposed to the Good Roads movement and puts his argument into the following:

Editor Telegram: I have read these articles of youre for some time about the roads and I went to say I am for mud roads first and last. I can remember when my parents and their parents were alive and what was good enough for them is good enough for me. Its hard work to make our money and we went to keep it. Also then it makes me sick to see these city chaps and young smart alicks tearing round in their automobiles as though they owned the earth the men with their hats off and the women with their heads all tied up all for style. My farm is bought and paid for and by hard work. Are their fancy automobiles paid for with their extra tires and their clinches you answer that. You city men always are trying to get the best of it buying low and selling high and the automobilist is the worst. Give me the old mud scow and I can get to town I don't care what the weather is. For my part I hope there will be no improvements this year nor the next nor the next after that and I can tell you we will get about just as well as ever when the weather is bad while your high price sillinders and roadsters are where they ought to be under the shed. The price of all this fixing up the roads is not the point. We don't need it. Let nature take her course and say, what did you city fellows do about God's time? You went and changed it so our country and Hillsdale don't have the same time and what is the result? Don't we have more railroad accidents now than we used to have? You answer that in your timely talks and don't dodge. Mud roads help to keep the children at home. When they are a little sticky they can't drive so well and when the roads dry up it is time to begin the spring chores. My son George got this 40 horse power sillinder in his head not long ago and that and the girl idea kept his mind pretty busy but I put my foot down. Where would we be in winter with hard roads and the boys running round the country all the time? If we had less bridges over every little creek and more fords they would not get along so fast with their 40 horse power sillinders.

Yours truly,
Mud Roads.

TREASURER'S REPORT

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY HAS EXPENDED NEARLY $29000.00 FOR LAND

Sale of Land Amounting to Over $6000.00 and Cash on Hand Puts Society in Good Shape.

We publish below the report of treasurer R. S. Belknap, made to the Lake County Agricultural Society at their meeting in Painesville last Saturday.

In this report no mention is made of $12000.00 received from sale of bonds and which was paid out for the McCormick place before Mr. Belknap became treasurer. Mention should be made of $49.05 received from rent and membership fees, which was handed to Mr. Belknap just after his report had been written.

Mortgage Note due the society June 1st, 1912, $2140 with interest.

Respectfully submitted,
R. S. BELKNAP, Treas.

It will be seen from the above report that $966.86 was paid out for the Nickel Plate switch, but this sum will be returned by the railroad to the society in payments of 10 per cent of total amount every six months. Adding this sum to the cash on hand and the amount due on note with interest, shows that there will be about $14000.00 available for buildings and other improvements.

The amount paid for land after deducting the amount sold is about $22544.00 which to many may seem to be a big sum to pay for the land alone, but when the value of the land and the chances for increase in value are considered the society undoubtedly acted wisely in making the purchase. The building of the new road from Mentor avenue to Johnnycake Ridge will greatly augment the value of Fair grounds and other land near by.

A COMMUNICATION.

Editor Herald:

There is but one honest, fair way in which the present Constitutional Convention can handle the question of taxation, and that is the fair way: Put the burden of direct tax upon all property alike.

All property should be assessed at its true value, which is the right way; any other way is the wrong way.

Double taxation is not right, no more than half taxation would be right. If two men are equal—half owners in a house and lot, each man pays an equal half part of the tax, and he should. To make one man pay all would be wrong. If a house and lot valued at $2000 is mortgaged for $1000, then it follows, that two persons own that house—the person who holds the title and the person who holds the mortgage. Each should pay half, neither one pay all. Any other way is the wrong way.

To exempt a man from paying taxes because he has his property in money is one of the greatest wrongs ever permitted under government. This one act of exemption is the very source from which springs the sinister, slimy, creeping serpent known as Special Privilege, which permitted in any government will grow and wind itself about our institutions until it rules or ruins.

But listen to the men who hold money, mortgages, bonds, and other evidences of debt! Listen to them all tell the same story:—"Exempt our money and interest will be low. Men can borrow to build their homes." "The state, county, and city can borrow at low rates for needed improvements." These and other nicely worded statements to lead people to believe that it is going to be a good thing for the people generally. Why, on the very face of these propositions it is a special privilege for which they are asking and nothing else. If to exempt money, mortgages, bonds, etc., from taxation is a good thing for the people generally, these special privilege fellows would not be asking for it.

Are not the great lessons of the past worth anything? Has Mr. Bryan's war on Special Privilege for sixteen years been all in vain? Can't some one in the Constitutional Convention stand up and tell these special privilege fellows something? Tell them to their faces that by their own confessions they are liars and perjurors, and even worse than that; claiming to be men, they would shift the burdens of taxation from their own shoulders to the shoulders of others, the weak as well as the strong. Tell them that the whole scheme of exemption from taxation is a childish game and an insult to men authorized to make a constitution for a state in the year 1912.

Are we a lot of fools here in Ohio? Has not our public school system been worth anything to us? Must Ohio with its boasted civilization exist another hundred years before we learn that under government there should be "Equal rights to all and special privilege to none?"

I submit these statements for publication, and will subscribe—

JUSTICE.

MAKES ORCHARDS PAY.

It is not infrequent for orchards with proper care to give returns of from $300 to $400 per acre profit. One horticulturist says that he saved $700 in one season as the result of information received at an Agricultural Extension school. Such returns are dependent upon general culture in part, but more largely upon proper spraying. Spraying is absolutely essential to the production of high quality fruit in any considerable quantity. Rightly applied spraying will bring big returns for the money invested; on the other hand spraying is easily the source of considerable loss if the application of the various sprays is not thoroughly understood. The Agricultural School to be held in Painesville the week beginning February 5, 1912, will put us right on these important problems.

Other important problems such as maintaining and increasing of soil fertility and the increasing of crop returns by better methods of culture and better selection of seed will be thoroughly discussed at this school by competent instructors from the Agricultural School at Columbus. Horticulture, Farm Crops and Soil Fertility are to receive equal time on the program. It is a question of availing yourself of information that will help you obtain better crops, better returns and better homes.

The Home Makers' Course for women is one of the most important features of this school. This course will be held at the same time as the men's course, but in a separate hall. It is to be conducted by regularly employed instructors of the Domestic Science School at Columbus. The program includes such subjects as Breakfast Suggestions, Preparation of Meals and Vegetables, Food for the Sick, Food for Children, Furnishing and Decorating the Home, Prevention of Disease, Household Management, etc. While this school will be very helpful for younger women, at the same time there will be much that will be equally helpful to the older women. Open to all interested. Season tickets, 50c; Single admission 15c. Ask for programs, they can be obtained of the local committee or at the office of the Lake County Y. M. C. A., Painesville.

A sight-seeing visitor recently went aboard a tramp steamer in the harbor. Noting that the deck hands were Chinese, she approached one of them and said: "You speak no English?" The Chinaman looked bored and said nothing. The woman continued: "Me go your country soon. Me learn speak Chinese, teach little Chinese boy and girl. You savvy missionary?"

The Chinaman looked at her a minute and answered: "Madam if you are not more successful in mastering our language than you appear to have been with your own, I fear your attempt to enlighten our race will prove anything but satisfactory. Good afternoon."

The Chinaman sought the other side of the ship and the woman sought oblivion. She had been addressing a Yale graduate who was working his passage back to China.—San Francisco Argonaut.

WICKLIFFE

There was quite an excitement on Euclid avenue, this town, when the stork arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parkin last Thursday about 7 o'clock, leaving a baby boy weighing seven pounds. Mr. Parkin felt so delighted he could not go to work the next day. This being their first child, the clever bird was welcomed by all.

Mr. T. E. Rice, tinner and plumber of this place, laid in a large string of water pipe on the Coulby farm last week.

Mr. E. M. Jones finished putting up his ice last Wednesday noon.

Mr. Frank White took a friend out speeding Saturday afternoon.

Mr. F. F. Price, landscape gardener who has been at the Coulby farm, expects to go to Cleveland to do some landscape work.

Mr. Mart White and son, Howard were hauling a load of wood from their south farm and the wagon upset in a snowdrift. Fortunately no one was hurt.

Miss Annie Southam was at home last Sunday for a short visit.

Miss Mildred Beach visited her parents last Saturday and Sunday. She is going to high school at Chardon.

Mr. Frank White and daughter Leto, went shopping last Thursday.

Miss Caroline Morris is visiting Mrs. John Culp of Kirtland.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Claymon spent Sunday afternoon in Willoughby.

Mrs. Southam was on the sick list last week but is better now.

Mr. Wm. Morris spent Sunday afternoon with his son, Charles, of Willoughby.

It is reported that Ivan Wortman, while coming from work Monday morning stepped and fell on the ice and broke two of his ribs.

More than likely the men who have been working at the large well on the Coulby farm will resume their work as soon as the weather will permit, as the sheet piling and air chambers are there ready for business.

Mr. Thomas Southam is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Littlejohn of Painesville.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sherman took supper with Mr. and Mrs. Mark Ferguson last Saturday evening.

Mrs. Frank White has been ill with a severe cold but is much better.

Mr. and Mrs. Coulby of Cleveland were out to their farm at Wickliffe in their auto Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. G. E. Scatterday of Cleveland

Miss Iola Heit and friends spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heit.

Miss Nellie Heath of Kirtland visited her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson Saturday and Sunday.

The Provo family entertained several friends from the City Sunday.

It is reported that business is picking up at the Cleveland Crane Engineering Co.

PERRY

Last week the young people of Perry had a chance to satisfy the skating fever. Whole meadows were ice covered and looked like great rinks created for the occasion. Last Wednesday evening the P. H. S. pupils and their friends held a skating party on Wilson's pond in Lane. There were fifty-two in the party and the evening will be remembered for a long time.

The rhetoricals of the Philomatheon society of P. H. S. will be held one week from Friday afternoon. One of the features of the program is the debate, George Hoyt vs. Wallace Golding.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Haskell and son of Painesville spent Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Manchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen of Perry were the guests of relatives in Conneaut for the past week.

Mr. Archie Merriman is spending the week in Bristol, on business.

Mrs. Sivells has not been in Perry for several days past. She went to Painesville last week and has not returned.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bickta of Cleveland spent Sunday with their parents in Perry.

Miss Jessie Tenney is visiting friends in Leroy.

The banquet given by the I. O. O. F. lodge for the members and their friends last Friday evening was a success. The guests could choose their own amusements; dancing on the first floor and card playing upstairs, while those that preferred walked about chatting with their friends. Supper was served during all the evening, whenever the guests chose to partake.

Not only the young people of Perry high school have been enjoying the skating at Lane, but even the pupils from Miss Kilcawley's room have held skating parties there. Mrs. G. N. Sweet invited Bertha Merriman, Josephine and Catherine Hamley, Stuart Sweet, Clement Shook and Hal Black to a skating and dinner party at her home. The older crowd couldn't possibly have enjoyed their evening of skating more than did these children.

Mr. Smith, the evangelist who was conducting the special services under the auspices of the Men's Bible Class but who was forced to quit his work in Perry on account of illness is expected to return Sunday, or at the very latest a week from Wednesday.

STRONG MEN OF THE PAST

Present Day Athletes Certainly Have No Superiority Over Their Predecessors.

It would seem that the Romans, who conquered 36 nations, recognized the secret of success in things military when they called their armies exercitus, bodies of drilled or exercised men.

During the middle ages it was the custom of princes, and even of wealthy burghers, to keep runners who followed their carriages afoot while the horses were going at full gallop. Fast runners were in great demand, and if parents wanted to qualify their children for a position of that sort they began to train them from the earliest childhood, making them undergo a singular operation, namely, the removal of the spleen, which was supposed to have an influence upon the vigor of the lungs.

From the town of Puebla, in Mexico, a sandy road leads across the hills to the Valley of Amozoc. Early in the morning that road is crowded with Indian peddlers and hucksters, who carry heavy baskets on their backs. They frequently come from a distance of 10 or 12 miles, but make the whole trip at a sharp trot and without a single stop. Their children trot at their sides, carrying small bundles or bags, and thus learn their trade so gradually that they hardly feel the hardships of it.

It seems curious that a small, short-legged dog can as a general thing outrun the tallest man. This has not always been the case. An ostrich proves that two legs can do as fast as four. Want of exercise in man probably accounts for the whole difference.

Lifting weights has always been a favorite exercise for the lungs. There is a story of a Grecian Samson, the athlete Milo of Crotona, who day after day carried a calf around the arena and gained in strength as the calf gained in weight until finally he could carry a steer. We may well doubt whether the steer was quite full grown. There is, however, a case on record, apparently well authenticated, to the effect that one Winship of Boston practiced with dumb-bells and ingots of pig iron until he was able to lift (though only for a moment) the weight of the heaviest steer in Texas.

Smallest Republic.

The smallest republic in the world, without exception, is that of Tavolara, a little island situated about a dozen kilometers (seven and a half miles) from Sardinia. It is a little more than a mile in length, and has a population of 55. The sovereignty of the island was accorded in 1836 by Charles Albert to the Bartoleoni family. Up to 1881 Paul I reigned peaceably over his little island kingdom, but at his death the islanders proclaimed a republic. By the constitution of the republic the president is elected for ten years, and women exercise the franchise.

Always Lead Their Sheep.

Much has been made of the fact that the shepherds of Palestine lead their sheep. This custom has arisen, of course, through the absence of roads and the scanty nature of the pasturage found on the mountain sides. It would be impossible to drive the flocks from place to place unless dogs were employed, and there are no sheep dogs in eastern countries. Hence the shepherd goes on in front, the sheep following behind, a shepherd boy as a rule bringing up the rear. This is the shepherd's principal duty, to guide his sheep and find pasture for them.

What Shall It Profit?

Following is from a sketch of the late Joseph Pulitzer, in Harper's Weekly, by one who knew him:

"He began life with the physical equipment of an athlete, but during his first 40 years he neglected all care of physical needs in his tremendous absorption in seeking success."

To paraphrase a Bible saying: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own"—health?

Wonderful African City.

In many ways is Kano a wonderful place to find in central Africa. This native city has great enfolding walls 13 miles in circumference, pierced by 13 deep gateways, with platform and guardhouses and massive doors heavily clamped with iron. Its written records date back nearly 800 years.

Suburban Gossip.

"That gentleman farmer cannot be getting on so well."

"Why not?"

"I notice he is doing his own sowing."

Took His Word for It.

"Wait a moment," said the budding novelist. "I'll show you the proofs of my novel."

But the other hastened away.

"No, no," he said. "I don't need proofs. Your word is enough."—Liverpool Mercury.

The Present One.

"What is the dance of present events?"

"It seems to be something of a Turkey trot of the powers on the Persian carpet."

The Rub.

"Why instead of asking aid, don't you help yourself? Many prominent men who succeeded did it by self-help."

"Yes, only it was self-helping to somebody else's money."

A Color Query.

"So many of these college fellows who apply for a position are well up in literature, but they are such green [illegible]"

"[illegible] can they be green if they are [illegible]"

SAYS SYSTEM OF LABOR IS CRUEL

FEDERAL EMPLOYE INVESTIGATES BIG STEEL MANUFACTURING PLANTS IN U. S.

LIKENS WORKMEN TO GALLEYS

Declares One-fifth of the 173,000 Employes of All Blast Furnaces, Steel Works and Rolling Mills Labor 12 Hours a Day.

Washington, D. C.—Following a sweeping investigation covering almost every great steel manufacturing plant in the United States, the department of commerce and labor, in a report now ready for the senate, accuses practically every corporation of maintaining a system of labor as cruel, relentless and unnecessary as the galleys of ancient time.

Makes Direct Statement.

Making the direct statement that these corporations have instituted a policy of eliminating the skilled artisan and putting in his place the lowest form of unskilled workmen, who is paid 14 cents an hour, the report states that the men are forced to remain on duty without relief as long as 24 hours at a stretch and that in some plants 18-hour tricks are the rule rather than the exception.

One-fifth of the 173,000 employes of all blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills work 84 hours, or 12 hours a day for seven days, a week. Many of them go to their homes "only to eat and sleep."

In May, 1910, the period covered by the investigation, it was found that 50,000 furnace and steel mill employes worked regularly seven days a week, and that 34,000 worked 84 hours or more a week.

Many Unskilled Workmen.

"Added significance attaches to the condition of labor here described," says the report, "when we consider that the general tendency for years past has been toward a shorter working day.

"Years ago the ten-hour day become almost a standard, since that time further reductions have brought the working day to nine and in many cases to eight hours, and this reduction has been accompanied by a part holiday on Saturday. It is therefore in striking contrast to this general tendency in other industries to find in a great basic industry such as that part of the iron and steel industry covered in this report, that approximately only 14 per cent of the 173,000 employes worked less than 60 hours a week, and almost 43 per cent worked 72 hours or over a week.

"Another striking characteristic of the labor conditions in the iron and steel industry is the large proportion of unskilled workmen in the labor force.

"Not far from one-half of the 91,463 employes in the productive iron and steel occupations included within this investigation were of the class of unskilled workmen. In the blast furnace department more than two-thirds of the 24,732 employes in productive occupations were unskilled laborers."

FOUR DIE AS FLAMES RAGE

Three Others Seriously Injured When Fire Breaks Out in House in Mining Town.

Sharon, Pa.—Four people were burned to death and three others are in a serious condition as the result of a fire in the residence of C. C. Hale at Claytonia, a little mining town 20 miles southeast of here. The dead:

Earl Miles, 20.
Mrs. Earl Miles, 19.
Mrs. James Hale, 28.
Scott Hale, 17.
The injured:
David Hale, 32.
C. C. Hale, 60.
Miss Sadie Hale, 20; burned about head when rescuing her brother, James Hale, who escaped with slight burns.

MOB LYNCHES FIVE GENERALS

Infuriated Supporters of Ecuador Administration Defy Soldiers and Take Rebels From Penitentiary.

Guayaquil, Ecuador.—A mob of several hundred infuriated supporters of the administration forced their way through a triple guard of soldiers into the Quito penitentiary, seized Generals Manuel Serrano, Eloy Alfaro, Flavio, Ulpiano Paez and Medardo Alfaro and lynched all of them in the court yard. The five generals, together with General Montero, who was beheaded by a mob recently, were the leaders of the revolution which broke out after the death of President Estrada and which culminated in the capture of all six officers.

Disgraced Banker Kills Self.

Windsor Locks, Conn.—The treachery of the most respected man in this community has brought disaster upon this little town of mill workers, farm hands and small tradespeople. Wall street was his undoing. When the inevitable came after 10 years and Alfred W. Converse, veteran of the Civil war, postmaster, politician and big frog in the little puddle, saw shame and disaster imminent, he killed himself. For 30 years he had been treasurer of the Windsor Locks Savings bank.

Fire Destroys Sanitarium.

South Norwalk, Conn.—A fierce fire destroyed Kensett, the large private sanitarium of Dr. Edward Everett Smith in South Wilton, the 80 occupants, all of whom were more or less helpless, having thrilling escapes. With the temperature near zero and with most of the inmates scantily clad they made their escape into the woods to the complete demoralization of the community. It was at first feared that several had lost their lives in the conflagration, but nearly all have been found.

BIG TUNNEL IS FINISHED

TASK OF BORING UNDER HUDSON RIVER ACCOMPLISHED.

Great Waterworks Scheme for Which New York City Will Spend $160,000,000 Before Work Ceases.

New York City.—The forging of the greatest link in the greatest chain of its kind in the world's history was completed at noon on January 30 when a blast of dynamite, fired 1,100 feet under the surface of the Hudson river at Storm King, N. Y., concluded the digging of a tunnel through which in years to come will pour millions of gallons of water from the Catskill mountains for consumption by the city of New York, more than a hundred miles distant.

Mayor Gaynor and members of the board of water supply were present to officially celebrate the event and, as soon as the debris of the blast was cleared away, they walked through the 3,000 feet length of the tunnel from shore to shore.

The successful completion of the under-the-river tunnel marks the final definite assurance of the practicability of the colossal waterworks scheme for which New York City will spend $160,000,000 before the work ceases on it. The constructing of the great Ashokan dam and reservoir, with an area greater than Manhattan Island itself, the building of the 150 miles of serpent-like aqueduct, with its half-dozen sub-reservoirs, and the laying of miles upon miles of tributary piping under the city itself are problems to tax the ingenuity and resources of the greatest of engineers and constructors, but none of these tasks was as baffling or doubtful of consummation as the boring under the Hudson.

The city had great difficulty in finding a suitable location for crossing under the river, as it was necessary to find a solid stratum of rock without a break through which the tunnel could be carried. The tunnel is 18 feet wide in diameter and cylindrical. The diameter will be reduced to 14 feet when the concrete lining is in place.

The danger of a serious water famine in New York was foreseen by investigators many years ago. The present system is barely able to meet the demands now made upon it, but the new system will be able to supply an entire city of 10,000,000, which it is estimated New York will have by 1980. Also the general plan of it is such that its capacity can be doubled by construction of additional dams in the Catskills that would require less than a year's work to build.

CLARENCE DARROW INDICTED

Lawyer for Confessed Dynamiters Accused of Bribery in Connection With McNamara Case.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Clarence Darrow, noted lawyer and author, for years the chief mainstay of organized labor in the United States in the courts, was arrested on charges of bribery growing out of the McNamara case, the county grand jury having returned two indictments against him, one for the bribery of George N. Lockwood and another for bribing juror Robert Bain.

Darrow was in Judge Conrey's court when the indictments were reported. The warrants were read to him there and bail bond of $20,000 was provided for him.

Each one of two indictments returned against Darrow contains two counts. The first is under section 92 of the penal code which provides that it is an offense to offer or give a bribe to any person who may be authorized by law to hear or determine any question or controversy with intent to influence his vote, opinion or decision. A conviction under this section of the code is punishable by imprisonment in the state's prison for not less than one or more than ten years.

The second is under section 95 of the penal code, which provides that it is an offense to corruptly attempt to influence a juror or any person summoned or drawn as a juror. A conviction under this section is punishable by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment in the state's prison for not more than five years.

TAFT DEFENDS ADMINISTRATION

Defies Critics to Point to Single Thing Which Party Needs Fear in His Four Years' Record.

Cleveland, O.—President William Howard Taft, speaking at the ninth annual McKinley day banquet of the Tippecanoe club in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, challenged a contest on the record of his administration and defied his critics to point to a single thing which the party needs fear in the political record of his four years' administration. The president discussed the record of his administration in detail, dividing it into three divisions—legislative enactment, conduct of foreign affairs and purely executive action. Under the first head the president discussed the tariff, defending the Payne law, as one that, while not being a full compliance with the promise of revision downward, has substantial revisions, and does not deserve the anathema and abuse to which it was subjected.

"The bill as a whole," he said, "contained many most useful provisions, and it is quite remarkable how many notable and useful legislative changes in the policy of the government are to be traced to it."

House Passes Steel Revision Bill.

Washington, D. C.—After wrangling all day over the steel revision bill the house passed the measure by a vote of 210 to 109 with no amendment save an insignificant change of phraseology.

The passage of the steel bill was marked with wranglings and filibustering. Every political quibble known was thrown in the way of the bill by the regular Republicans, but 21 insurgent Republicans and one Socialist, Victor Berger, voting with the Democrats.

Claims Cure for Drunkenness.

New York City.—Mrs. John Vance Cheney, president of the Woman's International League of Right Thinking and Right Living, announced on her return from Europe that she had been experimenting with a cure for drunkenness and that of 15 men and ten women whom she had treated in London not one reverted to their alcoholic habits. "An Englishman discovered this remarkable cure," she said, "and he has successfully cured 3,700 humans, if you can call them humans."

UNCLE SAM WILL FORBID PROJECT

HEARS PLAN IS AFOOT TO ESTABLISH JAP COLONY ALONG MAGDALENA BAY.

PLACE IS STRATEGIC CENTER

Naval Base Absolutely Essential to United States for Expedition Intended to Move Either North or South.

Washington, D. C.—Official information has been received at the state department that a plan is now afoot to establish a colony of 20,000 Japanese on a vast tract of land for which negotiations will be completed this week along Magdalena Bay in lower California. The state department has notified the projectors of this most remarkable scheme, some of whom are said to be Americans, that if it is able to establish the fact, that an agreement of any sort exists between the government of Mexico in whose territory the tract is located and Japan, the United States will forbid the establishment of a colony on the ground that it is in violation of the Monroe doctrine.

In any event, should it not be established that such an agreement exists, the state department will insist that preponderant ownership of the land upon which the colony will be located shall be in the hands of citizens of the United States. If such ownership does not rest with Americans the colony will be forbidden as being a violation of the Monroe doctrine. Following immediately upon the recent testimony of Maj. Gen. William H. Carter before the house committee on military affairs, that 35,000 well trained Japanese soldiers are now in Hawaii; upon the announcement that 14,000 United States troops are to be stationed permanently in these islands and upon the establishment of a Japanese steamship line from San Francisco down the coast to South America, the news of this proposed colony of 20,000 Japanese at Magdalena Bay is regarded in official circles in Washington as being of the utmost significance.

It was pointed out that Magdalena Bay, as a strategic center, commands all of lower California. It is a naval base absolutely essential to an expedition intended to move either north or south. It is the drill and target grounds for the United States Pacific fleet. A high official of state department admitted that an agent of the syndicate which desires to establish the Japanese colony at Magdalena Bay and which ostensibly has headquarters in San Francisco called upon him within the past few days. While this agent did not lay bare all the plans of the syndicate he was not permitted to remain long in doubt as to the attitude of the United States.

SAVES HER BROTHER'S NECK

Woman Says She Killed Customs Inspector With Bread Knife When He Insulted Her.

New York City.—Mrs. Theresa Martin brought the trial of her brother, James McDermott, to an abrupt and dramatic climax in Judge Foster's court by declaring it was she, and not McDermott, who stabbed to death Charles Muldoon, a customs inspector, in a Lenox avenue cafe on March 17 of last year.

Mrs. Martin had admitted that she was in the room when the crime was committed but refused to tell who struck the blow in a severe cross examination that lasted more than an hour. When she left the stand her counsel asked Judge Foster, if the district attorney's stipulation of immunity from prosecution of what his client was to tell still held good. The judge replied that it did, unless perjury was proven. Mrs. Martin was then recalled.

"Who drove the knife into Muldoon?" was the first question of the defense. "Did you?"

"Yes, I did," she replied.

Mrs. Martin testified that Muldoon insulted her while they were drinking in the Lenox cafe. She went home, brought back a bread knife, having told Muldoon he would never insult her again, and killed him.

Wage Scale Is Deferred.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The entire matter of a wage scale for bituminous coal miners, to go into effect April 1, was referred to a subcommittee by the joint conference of miners and operators of Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

The subcommittee consists of two operators and two miners from each of the four states.

Pending a report from the subcommittee, both the joint conference and the United Mine Workers convention adjourned their sessions.

Shoots Wife and Baby.

Collinsville, Conn.—Brooding over the taunts of friends who made a jest of the fact that his young wife had left him a few weeks after their marriage, John M. Kenfinck went to the home of his father-in-law, Arthur Johnson, and shot his 18-year-old wife and his month-old baby, whom he had never seen and then set fire to the house which was completely destroyed. Mrs. Kenfinck, who was Miss Lillian M. Johnson, is in a very serious condition. The baby was wounded. Kenfinck was arrested.

Says Americans Are Generous.

London, Eng.—Rev. R. J. Campbell, pastor of the famous "City Temple" of London, has just returned home after a 20,000 mile tour, which included America.

"The Americans are a very generous people and treated me well," said the minister. "I met practically none of that 'American brag and bluster' you hear so much about. Nine years ago over there I used to keep running across much anti-British feeling. This time, however, there wasn't a whiff of it."

TAFT ASKS FOR FUNDS

WANTS MONEY TO HELP THE STARVING IN CHINA.

President, as Head of the Red Cross Society, Makes Personal Plea to American People.

Washington, D. C.—The appeal issued through ordinary channels having failed to elicit a response in any way commensurate with the situation, President Taft has personally and as president of the American Red Cross sent out an appeal for funds to relieve the famine-stricken people of China. Mr. Taft's plea follows:

"As president of the American Red Cross, it becomes my imperative duty to call to the attention of the people of the United States the conditions of awful destitution which now exist in certain provinces of China. Recurrent inundations by the Yangtse and other rivers have destroyed crops and prevented the cultivation of the lands. Millions of human beings are now facing starvation. An agent of the American Red Cross, who has recently traveled throughout the famine district, reports conditions of starvation of the most terrible and appalling character.

"Until peace is restored in China and the functions of efficient government are established, these conditions must continue, save as relieved by the charitable efforts of other countries.

"The central China famine relief committee has created a strong and efficient organization with agencies established throughout the affected districts. This body, which comprises in its membership Rt. Rev. Bishop F. R. Graves, chairman, Rev. E. C. Lobenstine, secretary, and 20 or more of the leading American, European and Chinese merchants and missionaries in Shanghai, will render assistance as means may be available. Able-bodied natives will be employed in preparing dykes, canals and roads and thus be enabled to support themselves until new crops can be harvested.

"In the name of humanity the Red Cross calls once more upon the American people to come to the relief of a sister nation with that prompt generosity which has never failed in time of great emergencies.

"Contributions should be sent to state Red Cross board treasurers or to the treasurer of the American National Red Cross, room 341, War Department, Washington, D. C. WILLIAM H. TAFT."

DUKE LIKES UNITED STATES

Will Recommend to King and Queen of England That They Pay Visit to This Country.

New York City.—So favorably impressed with his visit to New York and Washington that he will recommend to king and queen of England and other members of the royal family who come to Canada that they visit the United States, his royal highness, the Duke of Connaught, with the duchess and their daughter, the Princess Patricia boarded their special car at the Grand Central station January 28 and were soon whirling homeward through a snowstorm after a thoroughly enjoyable and decidedly busy four days visit to the United States.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT.

ROBBERS HELP THEMSELVES

Lock Officers of Bank in Vault and Walk Away With All the Money That Is in Sight.

Vancouver, B. C.—Two unmasked robbers entered a bank here at noon and helped themselves to all money that was in sight. They then escaped.

The robbers, for their raid, chose the Hill Crest branch of the Royal Bank of Canada. Shortly after 11 o'clock they appeared at the institution, the first man to enter pointing a revolver at Manager A. A. Steaves. The second man covered Ledgerkeeper Harrison and Teller Richmond. He, the first to speak, said only: "Put your hands up—high."

Richmond and Harrison were some distance from the thief and Richmond, instead of complying at once with the command, backed out of his little cage quickly and threw the keys into a small box inside, at the same time slamming the cage door. Equipped with a spring lock, the door fastened as soon as it shut—and the keys were inside the cage.

While this maneuver by Teller Richmond hindered the robbers, it did not baffle them. One of them hunted for a poker, found one, shoved it through the cage until he hooked the key ring and triumphantly drew forth the keys. Then he entered the apartment and scooped up all the cash.

Meanwhile Manager Steaves and his staff had been driven into one of the big vaults and locked within it.

Mob Kills Rebel General.

Guayaquil, Ecuador.—General Pedro Montero, who in November last was proclaimed president by the troops stationed in Guayaquil, was murdered by an angry mob, his body dragged into the streets and burned, after being beheaded. General Montero, who was at one time the most popular hero in Guayaquil, with other rebel leaders, was captured on January 22, and Montero was brought before a court martial and sentenced to 16 years' imprisonment in a penitentiary.

Crosses Lake and Back in Auto.

Sandusky, O.—Just for the honor of being the first to negotiate such a trip, only possible at a time like the present with the ice from 18 to 22 inches thick, John P. Caughney of Catawba, a small town on the northern Ohio shore, drove to Leamington, Ontario, over the frozen surface of Lake Erie and back again, a distance all told of about 150 miles, in an automobile. He was accompanied by his wife and four neighbors, John Darr, John West, Louis Dewitt and Capt. Lewis Smith.

Get Right With God

Address delivered at Keswick Convention by Rev. E. S. Webster, on Psalm 139

THE teaching of this psalm is that all our secret thoughts are spread before the Lord like an open book, and there is not a page hidden from him. Are you glad it is so, or does the knowledge of God's penetrating eye fill you with discomfort and alarm?

The psalmist was not afraid of God's knowledge of him. He opens this psalm by dwelling upon it; he closes by returning to the same truth, and inviting God to make special search and inspection of all his inmost being. David was not afraid of this scrutiny, because his whole heart was set upon being right with God.

The supreme importance, the absolute necessity, of being right with God.—We find this beautifully illustrated in 1 Sam. 4:5. "And when the ark of the covenant of the Lord came into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again." There was tremendous enthusiasm in the shout. The honor of the people was touched. They had suffered a defeat, their patriotism was fired, they were fighting for their homes and their fatherland, and their religious feelings were deeply stirred. When they saw the ark come into their midst they made certain that God was with them.

The ark was full of sacred memories. It had wrought wondrous victories. Before it the water of Jordan had failed, and the walls of Jericho had fallen down. So they made sure that God was with them, and they shouted with such a shout that the hearts of their enemies were filled with dismay.

What came of it all? Nothing but disaster! The Philistines triumphed. The ark was captured, and the reason was not far to seek—Hophni and Phinehas were with the ark.

How could there be victory to the open field when in the courts of the Lord's house there was open sin? The people were not right with God, and so the ark could not save them. They were not anxious, they were not prepared to get right with God. They were not anxious to find God's solution of their trouble, for him to show them what was wrong.

They thought they would force the hand of God. They said: "If we get the ark into our midst, God is sure to fight for us and to give us the victory." They thought they would compel God to give them the victory, although they had not humbled themselves to give him the glory.

But they were mistaken. God is a holy God. He will not allow his holiness to suffer one single taint of dishonor. So he allowed the ark to be captured rather than support the people who were harboring sin and hiding iniquity in their hearts. Because they were not willing to be right with God, the ark could not help them.

The ark would soon have overcome the Philistines, if Hophni and Phinehas and the elders of Israel had been overcome by it themselves. God's arm is not shortened; but if you have come hoping to steal a blessing without mounting the steep path of personal repentance of deep conviction of sin, of whole-hearted surrender to God, then you are absolutely mistaken.

Probably some of the people said: "Oh yes, the day of the ark is over;" and some say now that the day of the old-fashioned Gospel is over. It is not so. The cross never loses its power, but you can neutralize the grace of God if you are not willing to get right with him.

If you will cast yourself upon him, expecting him to save, to cleanse, and to keep—so thoroughly expecting him that if you fail it will be a matter, not only of shame, but of surprise, because your eyes are on Jesus, he has undertaken and you are trusting—if you get into that attitude of faith, then the healing and the cleansing come, and the keeping is maintained, and the heart is purified. Then there is nothing "common" or unclean about your life: it is all sanctified, and you are right with God. God knows all about you, and loves you in spirit of all he knows.—London Christian.

Walking With God.

A little child gave a most exquisite explanation of walking with God. She went home from Sabbath school, and the mother said: "Tell me what you learned at school." And she said: "Don't you know, mother, we have been hearing about a man who used to go for walks with God. His name was Enoch. And, mother, one day they went for an extra long walk, and they walked on and on, until God said to Enoch: 'You are a long way from home; you had better just come in and stay,' and he went." That was true. Each had become so familiar with God that he just went in and stayed.—Religious Telescope.

At the End, What?

We are going to be through this life before very long. The longest life is short when it is over; any time is short when it is done. The gates of time will swing to behind you before long. They will swing to behind some of us soon, but behind all of us before long. And then the important thing will not be what appointments we had, or what rank, or anything of that sort—not what men thought of us, but what he thought of us, and whether we were built into his kingdom.

And if, at the end of it all, we emerge from life's work and discipline, crowned souls, at home or anywhere in God's universe, life will be a success.—Prof. B. P. Bowne.

SUPREME JUDGE CREW IS DEAD

Served Two Terms on the Supreme Bench of His Native State.

HAD NOTABLE PUBLIC CAREER

After Only Two Hours Illness Acute Indigestion Takes Off One of Ohio's Prominent Jurists of Recent Retirement.

Marietta.—Acute indigestion caused the sudden death of Judge Wm. B. Crew, former member of the supreme court of Ohio. He was ill about two hours and expired after two physicians had done everything possible to save his life.

Judge Crew had a notable career. He received a part of his education at the state university. He studied law at the Union Law school and two years after his graduation was elected prosecuting attorney of Morgan county.

He was elected a member of the Ohio general assembly in 1889 and served on the common pleas bench from 1819 to 1902, when he was promoted to the supreme bench to succeed Judge M. J. Williams, who died in office. He was elected to succeed himself in November, 1902, and retired from that court by expiration of his term last February.

TWO HUNDRED ENDANGERED.

Emergency Shaft Saved Many Lives When Fire Broke Out in Mine.

Byesville.—Electric wiring was responsible for several thousands dollars damage and endangered the lives of 200 men employed at the Little Cage Mine of the National Coal company. The men escaped through an emergency shaft and the Byesville fire department extinguished the fire.

FIND SILVER IN COAL.

Don't Get Excited—It Is the Suggestion That a Miner Lost His Sack.

Bellefontaine.—A pile of silver that had been reduced from dollars to a jingling mass of 100 per cent pure ore was shoveled from the coal bin of F. Hamilton, finding its way into the stove. It is believed that some miner lost his sack of silver and that it finally found its way to the coal bin and then to the stove, where it melted.

FORMER SHERIFF KILLED.

Canal Dover—Frank Kraner, 60, former sheriff of Fairfield county, was instantly killed by a train. His body, which was badly mangled, was thrown to the side of the track.

The buggy in which Mr. Kraner was riding, en route to his home at Pickerington, was demolished and his horse killed.

LUMBERMEN ELECT OFFICERS.

Dayton.—At the convention of the Ohio Retail Lumbermen's association, O. H. Bachtel of Canton was reelected president and F. D. Torrence of Xenia secretary-treasurer. The choice of next year's convention city was left to a committee.

ATE THEIR TORMENTOR.

Woodstock.—Mrs. George Lincoln mourns the death of her pet monkey, Jocko. Jocko spent much of his time teasing and annoying the hogs on the farm. The porkers, becoming tired of the monkey's actions, just ate him up.

LUMBER DEALERS MEET.

Dayton.—The thirtieth annual convention of the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber dealers opened here for a three-days' session. The convention attracted 1000 visitors, including dealers and supply men.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED.

Zanesville.—Mrs. Mary Mettingly was fatally burned while preparing dinner. Gas which had accumulated in the oven of the range exploded.

SUNDAY MARRIED MONDAY.

Canton.—George, the 19-year-old son of Rev. Billy Sunday, the evangelist, eloped Monday with Miss Harriet Mason of Waterloo, Ia. They were married in Indianapolis.

WINS HARMON CORN MEDAL.

H. C. Hoyt, of Huron County, Carries Off All the Honors in the Contest at the State University.

Norwalk.—H. C. Hoyt, of this city, a senior student at the college of agriculture, Ohio State university, won the gold medal offered by Governor Harmon for the sweepstakes corn exhibited by the grain show held at Columbus, January 11 and 12, by the students of agriculture. This corn, which is shown in the above illustration, consisted of five ears of Reid's Yellow Dent, a variety representative of that grown in Mr. Hoyt's home county. Besides the gold medal, Mr. Hoyt won a $25 disc harrow given by a leading farm implement firm. Over 70 exhibitors took part in the show, there being between 200 and 200 samples of grain shown. Other prize winners were: C. C. Engle, best single ear of corn; C. A. Garhart, best oats; C. M. Fritz, best barley; H. W. Jones, best wheat. Prof. F. A. Welton of the Ohio experiment station judged the exhibits.

MASONIC TEMPLE BURNED.

Largest Business Building in Portsmouth Lies in Ruins—Losses Aggregate $70,000.

Portsmouth.—A fire which broke out in the basement of the Bragdon Dry Goods Company's store in the Masonic temple is believed to have caused a loss of more than $70,000. The entire building of six stories was gutted.

On the first floor besides the Bragdon dry goods store is the Hall Brothers' clothing store. The stock of each concern was ruined by fire, smoke and water. Above the two stores were many office buildings occupied by lawyers, doctors and insurance agents. The Masonic rooms were on the top floor. It is impossible to estimate at this hour the individual losses.

For a time it was feared that the flames would spread and take in adjoining structures.

The temple, which stands in the heart of the uptown district, is one of the finest buildings in the city. It was erected at a cost of $80,000.

The cause of the fire has not been determined. The firemen had a hard fight with the flames.

SAYS McKINLEY CONFESSED.

Columbus.—New developments in the Fanny Hagelgans murder mystery at Orient came thick and fast and as a result the Pickaway county grand jury probably will be convened immediately to return an indictment against Edward McKinley, who, with his brother David, was left unaccused by the grand jury at its first session, when Henry Hagelgans, brother of the murdered woman, was indicted for the crime.

The developments are in the form of a statement made to Sheriff Bell of Pickaway county by John Morgan, colored.

McKinley and Morgan occupied cells close together and Morgan says that McKinley confessed his guilt to him.

BANKS GET STATE FUNDS.

Columbus.—The state board of deposits approved the applications of 24 banks that bid last March for a part of the state funds. Money coming into the treasury has swelled the surplus until the department will now give out money at rates of interest as low as 3.25 per cent. Forty banks asking for $1,400,000, bid at that rate, and at present each will receive from 35 to 50 per cent of the amount they sought.

POSTMASTER NOMINATED.

Washington.—President Taft sent to the senate the nomination of Russell C. Heddleston to be postmaster at East Liverpool, O. If confirmed, he will be the youngest first-class postmaster in Ohio.

DEPOSITED 1400 PENNIES.

Newark.—One depositor at the postal savings bank offered 1400 pennies for deposit, the biggest deposit of pennies alone received at this branch.

Cincinnati.—Inspectors of the state public utilities commission began an investigation of the natural gas explosion which wrecked the tenement house at 2150 McLean avenue and resulted in the death of two women and the injury of a number of others.

Marietta.—O. C. Kackley, a veterinary surgeon, was seriously injured by jumping through a second-story window in making his escape from a burning residence.

Bellefontaine.—The senate has confirmed the appointment of Leigh Zerbee, son of F. J. Zerbee of this city, as a lieutenant in the coast artillery.

Portsmouth.—James M. Justice, aged 100 years and 6 months, the oldest citizen of Portsmouth, died after a short illness.

LAWYERS DIFFER ABOUT RULING

Some Say Supreme Court Has Abolished the Bureau of Vital Statistics.

WILL ASK HOGAN FOR OPINION

Physicians Continue to Send in Reports in Spite of the Ruling of the Supreme Court in the Boone Case Recently.

Columbus.—Attorney General Hogan is to be asked to decide whether the state board of vital statistics is wiped out by the decision of the Ohio supreme court in the famous Boone case.

There is difference of opinion as to the effect of the decision.

About 80 per cent of the physicians of the state are sending in birth reports notwithstanding the ruling that they do not have to do so.

May Hinder Road Work.

Difficulty in selling road district bonds is foreseen by Attorney General Hogan. He brought this out in an opinion to City Solicitor Custer Snyder of Lorain in construing certain portions of the Smith 1 per cent act. Mr. Hogan points out that assessments to meet bond issue in special road districts are not exempted by the terms of the Smith law.

The road bonds are issued by the county commissioners in cases in which there are petitions from property holders for improvement of the highway. The bonds are not issued by vote of the people, while the Smith law specifically says that interest and sinking fund charges of bonds, issued on authority of a vote of the people, alone are exempted from the limitations of the Smith act.

Hogan and DeWeese, Rhymesters.

Attorney General Hogan and Hamilton G. DeWeese, state inspector of building and loan associations, have been carrying on correspondence in rhyme.

It started when DeWeese sent Hogan a check for $100, which Hogan had held that DeWeese had drawn illegally when in the state fire marshal's office. At the time, however, J. M. Sheets, then attorney general said he had a perfect right to it.

"From the Republicans I receive my pay, and the Democrats, they take it away," lamented DeWeese, in a letter accompanying the check.

"For the wrong may seem right for a day, but the right will prevail all way," answered Hogan when he acknowledged receipt.

January Toll in the Mines.

According to reports submitted to Chief Mine Inspector George B. Harrison, 11 fatalities have occurred in the coal mines of the state thus far this month. There were 15 fatalities during January, 1910. In December there were six.

January is the worst month in the year for mine fatalities, according to Mr. Harrison. Unusual activity on the part of the workmen has a tendency to make them careless in observing the laws relative to the use of props. Freezing and thawing of the ground also is a contributory cause for the increased number of accidents, it is said. The majority of the accidents are due to falls of slate.

Appropriation Ordinance May Be Emergency.

A semi-annual appropriation ordinance may be considered an emergency measure and, if passed by a three-fourths vote of council, need not be held up 60 days before going into effect. This is held in a ruling given by Attorney General Hogan to Solicitor Tossell of Norwalk. The ruling is an interpretation of the new Crosser initiative and referendum law.

Oldest Suffraget in Ohio.

Mrs. Eliza Cramer Quinby, 78, the oldest suffraget in Ohio and one of the largest taxpayers in Clermont county, has registered as a lobbyist and will work for a suffrage plank in the new constitution. Mrs. Quinby comes from Edenton, O. She is the mother of Miss Anna Quinby, an officer of the Woman's Taxpayers' league of Columbus. Mrs. Ivor Hughes of Columbus has also registered as a member of the suffrage lobby.

Will Visit Ohio Alumni.

President Richard C. Maclaurin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in pursuance of his policy of keeping in close touch with the alumni of that institution, is on a two weeks' Western trip. He will visit Pittsburg, Akron, Cincinnati, Chicago, Minneapolis, Detroit, Buffalo and other cities.

By decision of the supreme court, affirming the Stark county courts, the estate of Mrs. Ida McKinley, widow of President William McKinley, goes to her sister, Mrs. Mary Barber, and not to the brothers and sisters of the president and their children.

In a decision covering two cases, Judge Frank Rathmell of the common pleas court, has declared the constitutionality of the act passed by the last legislature compelling salary loan agents to secure a license from the secretary of state.

Like Buckeye System.

Universities of a number of states of the middle West will adopt the system of accounting in force at the Ohio State university, installed a year ago by the state auditor's department.

Will Build Long Sidewalk.

New sidewalks, 10 feet wide, will be placed in position to permit the construction of a parkway around the campus of Ohio State university. The walk will be 14 feet inside the curb.

ELI D. SHAW

Carroll County's Farmer-Banker delegate to the Constitutional Convention is Mr. Eli D. Shaw, of Minerva.

O. S. U. WINTER SCHOOL

In Variety of Students This Year, Classes Exceeds All Others.

A girl in short dresses, followed by gray-bearded farmers, ruddy-faced youths and a group of professional looking men, their arms filled with text books, pads and pencils, filed quietly into a lecture room in chemistry hall at Ohio State university.

It was the farmers' school assembled to learn something about the science side of farming.

Recruited from all over Ohio, the farmers' school this year typifies the deep interest being taken in agricultural advancement by all classes of people. Its membership is made up of farmers, their wives, sons and daughters, while lawyers, business men, a minister and a former state official also are enrolled.

May and December.

Miss Bertha Kuller, 16, in short dresses, is the youngest member of the class. She comes from New Richmond.

"I am a farmer's daughter," she explained, "and want to prepare myself for a two-year course in the agricultural department. You see, I think a farmer's daughter ought to know something of the scientific side of farming."

Grown gray and grizzled in 40 years' tilling of the soil, Capt. George W. Eager, 61, of Idaho, O., proudly took his seat in the front row as the dean of the class.

"I'm not ashamed to attend school with these youngsters," he said, surveying the class with a smile. "There are things that 40 years of experience and reading have not taught me. I want to learn all I can about it. This is one of the greatest opportunities the farmers of Ohio ever had. Every farmer ought to send his son."

John W. Zeller, former state school commissioner, is one of the students. Rev. W. C. F. Lippert, a Presbyterian minister of New Plymouth is another.

The course lasts eight weeks. The total enrollment is 242, with 19 additional students specializing in the dairy course. It is nearly twice as large as last year's class.

Religions in Classes.

The Methodists are in a majority among the students at the Ohio State university, the annual report of President Thompson showing that there are 1000 of that denomination enrolled.

The Presbyterians come next with 555, and the Congregationalists third with 176. Thirty-two religious denominations are represented. One hundred and fifty-seven students did not give their religious affiliation.

There are five who believe in Mormonism, two in Seventh Day Adventism, one in Confucius, one in Shinto. Four are Dunkards and one is a Swedenborgian. There are 172 Catholics, 151 Baptists, 150 Episcopalians, 172 Lutherans and 77 United Brethrens.

The occupation statistics show that the children of farmers have a big lead, with 750. The merchants come next, numbering 166. The ministers have 60 children who are students.

Will Come to Columbus.

At a meeting called by the president, Walter H. Martin, of the Ohio State Association of Real Estate Exchanges, held in Columbus, delegates were present representing more than 400 members.

Among other resolutions passed was one to the effect that in the opinion of the delegates assembled, the constitutional convention should be memorialized by the constituent members of the association to incorporate into the proposed constitution a section giving to the general assembly the power to classify subjects for taxation.

A resolution was also passed to hold the third annual state meeting in Columbus on Saturday, Feb. 17.

Engineers Elect Officers.

The Ohio Engineering society elected the following officers to serve the ensuing year: President, John Laylin, Norwalk; vice president, L. A. Fauver, Lorain; secretary-treasurer, C. J. Knisely, New Philadelphia.

Greenberg J. Marriott, one of the oldest practicing attorneys of Columbus and father of Frank M. Marriott, Delaware delegate to the constitutional convention, died of uraemic poisoning after an illness of less than 24 hours.

Statistics compiled by State School Commissioner Frank W. Miller show that there are less pupils attending public schools in Ohio now than there were a year ago. Only 1,246,223 pupils are enrolled now as against 1,220,397 in 1911.

During the first week of the new year in the southeastern Ohio oil field 24 wells were completed, of which 22 were dry, and the 12 producers had an aggregate daily production of 318 barrels of oil.

ILLINI COACH IS DISPUTED BY PLAYER

Otto Seiler, Who Takes Exceptions to Views Expressed by Coach Huff.

Otto E. Seiler, Illinois' famous drop kicker, recently came out in the "Illinois Magazine" in strong opposition to the views of Coach George Huff regarding summer baseball. Seiler, speaking from the athlete's viewpoint, is absolutely opposed to the professional idea. He says:

"With due respect to George Huff, I do not believe the failure of the universities to enforce the present rule constitutes any argument that the rule should be changed so that men will henceforth be protected by a law or regulation in doing what has been a violation of the rule. The real question is, 'shall we have professional or amateur athletics at our universities?' Let the authorities make examples of the men who violate rules. I believe amateur athletics belong within college competition, and should stay there."

PLAYER SOLD FOR $5 BILL

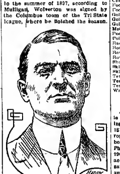
New Manager of New York Highlanders Brought Low Price During Close Race at Columbus.

Harry Wolverton, recently chosen to manage the New York Highlanders in 1912, was once sold for $5 by John F. Mulligan, now inspector of the waterworks plant at Muskogee, Okla. If newspaper reports are correct, it cost Frank R. Farrell many times $5 to secure his own manager's release from the Pacific Coast league. In the summer of 1897, according to Mulligan, Wolverton was signed by the Columbus team of the Tri State league, where he finished the season.



At that time the semi-professionals had a strong league in Columbus and there was a hard race on for the championship.

Mulligan was captain of one of the teams. After considerable trouble over a small salary Harry Wolverton signed a contract with Mulligan to finish the season with him. Wolverton was only a medium class player at that time, but was quick to learn. As the semi-pro season drew to its close it developed into a fight for the pennant between the Eclipse team and the Bryce nine, while the Easterns, captained by Mulligan, were counted out of the race.

Bob Quinn, manager of the Eclipse team, wanted Wolverton to patch up his team for the championship race and offered Mulligan $5 for him for the rest of the season. The contract was accepted and Wolverton went to play with the Eclipse team, which later, however, lost the pennant.

Wolverton was born in Mount Vernon, Ohio. He went to the majors in 1899, joining the Chicago Nationals, and later was transferred to Philadelphia. He jumped to Washington when the war with the American league was in progress, but later returned to Philadelphia and was traded to Boston. He was sold to the Williamsport team of the Tristate league, where as manager he produced two pennant-winning teams, and then went to Oakland in the Pacific Coast league.

New Field for Wisconsin.

Plans have been completed by the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin to give the badgers one of the finest athletic fields in the country. A site was chosen in a meadow to the west of the agricultural college, and all future athletic fields will be built there.

It is planned to raise funds, partly by private subscription for the erection of a new stadium, which will excel any similar structure in the United States.

The action means that Camp Randall, the badgers' historic athletic ground, will be discarded. It will be used as an athletic field for the girl students at the university as soon as the football and baseball fields are moved. The plan also embraces the construction of a new gymnasium.

Britt to "Come Back."

Jimmy Britt may get back in the game after all, especially if he hearkens to the call sent by his erstwhile partner, Hugh McIntosh, who has gone back to Australia after he and Britt put the pugilistic promotion business on a broader scale in London. McIntosh wants his old coworker to go to Sydney and get busy. He wants the Pacific coast idol to engage in three bouts in the Rushcutters' Bay arena in February and March.

Kid Gleason as Wit.

A story is told on Kid Gleason, who is to assist Jimmy Callahan in managing and buffering the White Sox in 1912, that shows his brilliant wit in repartee. Gleason had caught a bad bounder in the face one day of the Phillie training trip in the south in 1907. Several stitches in the Kid's anatomy were necessary in order to save his face. The next day, to the surprise of the natives, Gleason appeared to take his regular place in practice. A minor league umpire asked the injured baseball man whether he was going to work that day, expressing surprise that Gleason should appear on the field.

"Why not?" asked Gleason.

"I thought that ugly smash would keep you out at least for a few days," replied the official.

"Huh, you don't suppose I top 'em all with my face, do you?" retorted Gleason as he took his place on the field.

GOSSIP AMONG SPORTS

Zbyszko's block system isn't working this season. Yousiff Mahmout is the real big one in the road.

McFarland may sack in fighting class, but he is one of our best little artists at copping the coin.

Back to the little isle for Alec Monroe, just as it was "back to the mines" for one Jack Monroe of ancient pug history.

Ray Hoboer, who caught for Fremont last season, is favored to manage the Grand Island team of the Nebraska State league next year.

Joseph M. Cummings, formerly editor of The Sporting News, has been made secretary of the Texas league and assistant to the president.

Average attendance at the nine games the Phillies played in Cuba was 3,000, according to reports of the players who got a look at the books.

Joe Kelley says he likes Toronto well enough to stay and that the fans of the Canadian city can dismiss the idea that he may accept a job in the majors.

The recovery of Hugh Jennings will reclaim for baseball one of its most unique and able exponents. Jennings was too good a man for an accident to "get."

Dayton has booked five major league teams for exhibitions in the spring—Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Cleveland, Boston Americans and New York Americans.

George Mullin went to Detroit to ask for his release, but after a little heart to heart talk with President Navin decided to forget it. He will pitch for the Tigers in 1912.

Though Norman Elberfeld has been sold to Chattanooga it is said the deal is not to be closed until Elberfeld himself determines if his bad legs will permit him to play next season.

Winona and LaCrosse, mentioned as possible members of the new circuit of Iowa towns, have declined to consider proposals. They will stick to the Minny league—or what remains of it.

May Be Plans of Famous Ship.

Great interest has been aroused in Australia by the discovery of some old ships' plans, believed to be those of the barque Endeavor in which Captain Cook discovered Australia, which are now in the possession of the Australasian Pioneers' club. The plans have apparently been in Sydney for a long time. They belonged to Mr. Cummings, a blacksmith, who received them and other charts and diagrams from a Mr. Korff, a naval contractor, said to be descended from a shipwright who sailed with Captain Cook.

GRAND TO LIVE

And the Last Laugh Is Always the Best

"Six months ago I would have laughed at the idea that there could be anything better for a table beverage than coffee," writes an Ohio woman, "now I laugh to know there is.

"Since childhood I drank coffee freely as did the other members of the family. The result was a puny, sickly girl; and as I grew into womanhood I did not gain in health, but was afflicted with heart trouble, a weak and disordered stomach, wrecked nerves and a general breaking down till last winter, at the age of 38, I seemed to be on the verge of consumption.

"My friends greeted me with 'How bad you look! What a terrible color!' and this was not very comforting.

"The doctors and patent medicines did me absolutely no good. I was thoroughly discouraged.

"Then I gave up coffee and commenced Postum. At first I didn't like it, but after a few trials and following the directions exactly, it was grand. It was refreshing and satisfying. In a couple of weeks I noticed a great change.

"I became stronger, my brain grew clearer, I was not troubled with forgetfulness as in coffee times, my power of endurance was more than doubled.

"The heart trouble and indigestion disappeared and my nerves became steady and strong.

"I began to take an interest in things about me. Housework and homemaking became a pleasure. My friends have marveled at the change and when they enquire what brought it about I answer 'Postum, and nothing else in the world.'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ROOSEVELT AND THE REFERENDUM.

Theodore Roosevelt has again given public expression to an opinion on the power of the courts to block legislation and on the referendum as a remedy. The opinion is noteworthy only because it happens to be expressed by a prominent public man not altogether without influence. The same expression if made by one not possessing these attributes would be considered worthy of no further comment than advice to get more information on his subject before endeavoring to influence others.

He says that the power usurped by the courts is an advantage, "provided that the power is exercised with the greatest wisdom and self-restraint." This reminds one of Mark Twain's remark that the best possible form of government is an absolute monarchy, provided we could have an archangel for the absolute monarch, but not otherwise. The trouble is that we cannot get the archangel, but it is no more difficult to get such a ruler than to find a human judge who can always be depended upon to exercise power "with the greatest wisdom and self-restraint." It is this difficulty which makes popular government, although far from being infallible, the best and safest that can be devised.

Mr Roosevelt does, however, endorse a limited form of the referendum, and apparently attaches no string to his endorsement. He would subject to the referendum any judicial decision declaring an act of the legislature to be void. If the popular vote upholds the legislature, then it is to be the judicial decision which becomes void. He recommends to the coming constitutional convention in New York that it incorporate such a provision in the new constitution. He does not suggest how a referendum of that kind should be invoked, perhaps he does not realize how important that detail is. But in principle, at least, he has taken a position fully abreast of where the Populists of Kansas stood in 1897. In that year these pioneers of progress came within a few votes of getting an Initiative and Referendum measure through the Kansas legislature containing a provision to the effect that if any measure approved by the people should be declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, it should then be again submitted to the people and if again approved should become a law, "anything in the constitution to the contrary notwithstanding." Apparently Mr. Roosevelt would apply only to acts of the legislature the principle which the Kansas Populists would have applied to acts of the people. His education in democracy is far from complete.

There is nothing that he says or can say in favor of his extremely moderate proposition which would not apply with the same force to the Initiative and Referendum complete. Consistency would seem to require that he give these measures his full endorsement, but consistency which at times requires some moral courage has not hitherto been one of Roosevelt's noteworthy characteristics.

LA FOLLETTE AND THE RECALL.

Nothing in the Wisconsin senator's speech attracted so much attention as the dramatic declaration, in answer to a direct question, that he favored the application of the recall to the judiciary, even to the United States Supreme court itself. The impression that he might not include the federal tribunals in the scope of this measure had been general. Yet in his recent Western speeches the senator had insisted upon no limitations, and, after one of his addresses in Ohio, we called attention to Mr. La Follette's extreme position, showing that it was not in harmony with the progressive republican platform adopted at Chicago.

There is still an impression, fostered somewhat by the senator's New York speech, that the recall he would provide for the United States supreme court would be subjected to certain restrictions. He is quoted as saying that he would have a long time between the lodging of the petition of recall against the judges and the putting of the question to the vote of the people." Just what [illegible] of it, however, has not been made clear. In his speech at North Baltimore, Ohio, on January 1, the senator became definite enough on this point merely to say that he "would extend considerable more time between the filing of the petition and the balloting for the recall of a judge than for a coroner." That would not necessarily mean a very long delay for the judiciary, inasmuch as a coroner cannot be considered an indispensable official. Nor does it appear that the senator would discriminate between judges according to their judicial rank. That is to say, nowhere does he explain whether there should be more time for popular reflection upon the recall to the chief justice of the supreme court of the United States than upon the recall of a judge of the police court.

It is doing the senator an injustice to assume that he would so far favor the United States supreme court that the recall, in its case, would be too long delayed and too much hedged in by restrictions to be effective. And to be effective, the recall must be workable. To be effective, the recall must be permitted to work before the people have lost interest in the case to which their attention has been drawn.

To apply the recall to the federal courts would require, first of all, such important changes in the constitution of the United States that it would be just as well to recast the entire instrument. Mr La Follette is described by his admirers as a constructive statesman, and perhaps he has a program for a constitutional convention which will be announced at the appropriate time.

Mr Bryan has never advocated the recall for the federal judiciary. The recall is a "state issue," he declares. Mr. Bryan is a conservative compared with the radical from Wisconsin. For the most advanced radicalism of the day outside of the socialist brethren, one must go to the republican party.—Springfield Republican.

CHARITY.

Every good act is charity. The smile you give your brother as you pass on the roadway of life, the cheerful word you give to some poor, disheartened wayfarer, struggling along under his heavy load of care and sorrow, the cup of cold water you hand the thirsty tramp who stops at your garden gate to rest a moment from the sun's blazing heat, the good advice you give another when he is wavering at the moment of temptation—all is charity, just as much as any other kind. You may not be able to endow a free library, your means may not permit your erecting a great hospital, but there are none of us so poor but what we can give some one a cheery word, an encouraging pat on the back, or friendly good counsel as we pass along together down the great roadway of life, over which we shall never return. You may not leave much property behind you, but the angels won't ask how much. They will be satisfied to know you left the kindly memories of good deeds behind.

The Pittsburg Press is conducting a postal card preference vote on presidential candidates and the results are somewhat surprising. They show Roosevelt so far ahead of Taft that the latter can hardly be considered in the running and the vote for Mr. Bryan exceeds that for all the other possibilities combined. It is evident the Bryan name is still one to conjure with.

Mr Watterson, with his "court of gentlemen" and his archaic notions about raising money in presidential canvasses from "my friend" the plutocrat, is a picturesque survival from a former generation. The most curious aspect of the case is his assumption that there are any "gentlemen" left in politics outside Kentucky.

Without Limitations.

Our country is the world; our countrymen are mankind.—William Lloyd Garrison.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, and paves the way for the more serious diseases that so often follow. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures, and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

JEALOUS OF THE NEW CAMEL

Elephant in Jardin des Plantes Punished His Former Admirers for Their Fickleness.

At the Jardin des Plantes in Paris there occurred recently an incident that showed that animals are subject to feelings very like those which occasionally ruffle the bosoms of men.

A large elephant, formerly the center of attraction, found itself supplanted in public favor by a new arrival—a young camel. The camel was the latest acquisition, and very naturally engaged the attention of visitors.

The elephant for a long time showed signs of dissatisfaction, and at last its jealousy reached a point where it must find expression. When the usual crowd gathered about the camel, the elephant prepared for action. It filled its trunk with water, and with deliberate aim discharged the water all over the people who stood looking at the baby camel.

This method of throwing cold water upon the admirers of a rival brought a laugh even from its victims.

In certain parts of India railroad engineers have many difficulties to encounter, some of them more amusing to read than to experience. The following is one such difficulty:

A freight train was lumbering along when a big elephant came out of the woods and undertook to butt the engine off the track. The engineer did not like to charge the beast, for fear of an upset, and several times reversed the engine, in the vain hope that the elephant would take that as a sign of surrender and retire.

Finally the elephant backed into the engine, and setting its forefeet firmly between the rails, endeavored to push the train backward with its hind quarters.

The engineer promptly put on all steam, toppled the elephant over a small embankment, and before it could recover its senses, the train passed on.

There was a cat that chose a peculiar spot for a bed. Comfort was the cat's object, and the chosen spot did not seem to be calculated to afford it. The cat was found fast asleep in a large shipbuilding yard, lying on what seemed to be a very muddy path.

It was found, however, that the spot chosen by the cat for its couch was the point at which a hot steam pipe passed under the road, so that the mud was baked into a warm, dry clay.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Pipe.

A pipe with a history is to be offered for sale in London. It was once the property of Sir Walter Raleigh and is not unlike the letter "Y" in shape and for centuries now has had its home in an ancient inlaid box dated "Anno 1527." It is constructed in four pieces of wood, rudely carved with dogs' heads and with the faces of red Indians.

On the bowl there is a cap about as large as the bowl itself, and attached to the stem is a string of beads made of the same wood as the pipe. In this stem a powerful whistle has been cut, and the suggestion is that Sir Walter Raleigh used it to summon his servants.

The Archaeological Society exhibited it at the Guildhall in the '50s of the last century, the inscription accompanying it bearing these words: "The original pipe of the above celebrated 'Historian of the World,' and who first introduced 'tobacco and potatoes' into England. Tradition (corroborated by a parchment in the possession of the owner) states that this pipe was used by Sir Walter Raleigh on the scaffold just previous to his execution and handed to one of his relatives as a memento of him."—London Telegraph.

Gold Revealed by Dream.

Wye Mills, a small village in Talbot county, Md., is excited over the realization of a dream of buried treasure. Some gold has been found and with it directions for digging for more. The dream came to Rachel Stanebury, a colored woman, at her home in Philadelphia, and was followed, she declares, by a visitation from her dead uncle, John Scott, who urged her to act upon the hint.

She and her uncle, Emery Stanebury, went to the spot described in the dream, near their old home at Wye Mills, and began digging. Three feet under the surface they found a box containing three gold tokens of irregular shape, each about the size of a silver quarter. In the box was a paper, falling to pieces from age, in which was written: "More money buried here deeper down. Dig fast and get it."

Stanebury and his wife are doing their best to "dig fast" and want help, but the negroes of the neighborhood are superstitious and will not approach the place.

Getting in Touch.

Congressman William F. Murray of Massachusetts related an amusing incident which took place during his newspaper days. Assigned to cover a case out of town, Mr. Murray called his office up on the telephone late at night and asked for the city editor. This gentleman, who was a trifle absentminded, picked up the receiver and said: "Well, Murray, how near are you to a telephone?"

Realistic.

ASK YOURSELF THESE

TEST OF "WHAT'S THE USE" FOR THE SELF-SATISFIED.

Here Are a Few Pertinent Suggestions for Daily Living That Will Help to Make You and Your Friends Happier.

That old cry of "cui bono" is supposed to be the hallmark of the pessimist, but many a self-satisfied one would do well to put the test of "What's the use" to her daily living.

What's the use of stinting so hard for a rainy day that you get no fun out of the passing sunny ones? This was the motto of the late Edwin Abbey, and the woman who prides herself on her thrift and reviles the spendthrift habits of her friend will do well to ponder it.

What's the use of a charitable purse and an uncharitable tongue? Kind words are infinitely more than coronets—or donations on a subscription list.

What's the use of playing the amiable role in society and a snapdragon in the family circle? Walls have ears, also neighbors have tongues and the real you is not unknown.

What's the use of posing as a pedant with a dime novel taste? Mentality does not need labeling, and you'll never convince the person with brains that you prefer Darwin to the Duchess.

What's the use of being a cat to your best girl friend because of a man? The girl will get even and the man sees through you.

What's the use of ruining your health to gratify your ambition? The quicker a woman learns the unhappiness of life when half ill the bigger chance she stands of success.

What's the use of spending money on skin specialists and digestive tablets while dallying with the things you shouldn't eat?

What's the use of playing young when the years have you in their grip? Age is not so unlovely that the aging should treat it as a disgrace. Far better a charming old woman than a pitiable mimicry of youth.

What's the use of getting down on your luck? There is nothing like a smile to boost you out of the mire.

What's the use of kicking? It doesn't make life any sweeter to think yourself a victim—nor does it increase your popularity.

What's the use of cultivating automobile tastes on a walking income? There's joy and health in a good walk if you once fight the speed craze.

What's the use of striving for the big puddle when you would be so much happier in the small one. Learning one's limitations saves heartache.

What's the use of reading reams on the thinning process with a taste for candy and potatoes fully gratified? Equally, what's the use of a fortune in stays and uncurbed appetite and laziness?

What's the use of slipshod work? This is an age that demands our best; if we give counterfeit we pay a counterfeiter's penalty.

What's the use of sham of any kind? One need not be brutally rude to be sincere. It is the untrained taste that prefers ormolu to the gold nugget.

Johnny Defines a Good Boy.

A distinguished visitor was making a short address to the Sunday school. "I am glad to see so many nice boys and girls assembled here today," he began. "You are the kind of boys I like. You know there are several kinds of boys. There are boys that are always punctual at school, always have their faces and hands washed, always know their lessons and never play hookey. We call they good boys. "Then there are the boys that like to torture cats and rob birds' nests and bully boys that are smaller than themselves and steal apples from the grocery stands and smoke cigarettes and all that sort of thing. These we call bad boys. Yes, there are several kinds of boys. Now perhaps you can tell me what kind of boys go to heaven?"

Up went Johnny's hand like a flash.

"Well, my little man, said the visitor, smiling complacently and nodding his head at Johnny, "what kind of boys go to heaven?"

"Dead ones!" shouted Johnny at the top of his voice.

Ruskin as a Grocer.

Ruskin was once a grocer. In 1873 he opened a shop in Paddington street, Notting Hill, in order, as he announced, "to supply the poor with pure tea in packets as small as they chose to buy, without making a profit on the subdivision, large orders being, of course, equally acceptable from anybody who cares to promote honest dealing." The shop did not attract. Ruskin complained in Fors Clavigera that "the poor only like to buy their tea where it is brilliantly lighted and eloquently ticketed, and as I resolutely refuse to compete with my neighboring tradesmen either in gas or rhetoric, the patient subdivision of my parcels passes little recognized as an advantage by my uncalculating public." The shop soon closed down and the grocery trade lost the most distinguished representative it is ever likely to possess.—London Chronicle.

Observing the Proprieties.

"Everybody starts in to say something when I begin to play," protested the distinguished musician.

"Yes," replied Mrs. Cumrox, "people are so stupid. Just because I call it a piano recital everybody seems to feel called upon to recite."

Beginning of Christian Era.

In the year 381 of our era Theodosius the Great issued an edict abolishing paganism and idolatry throughout the Roman empire.

Writing on Finance.

An editor never feels more important than when he is writing an able review of general financial conditions and trying to make it sound as if he had absolute mastery of the subject.—Columbus Journal.

London the Greatest Market.

London is the world's greatest market for tea and ivory, said Mr. J. G. Broodbank of the Port Authority, at the Society of Arts a few days ago. Each year 120,000 tons of tea and the product of 20,000 elephants reached London. Forty million sheep's fleeces pass through the dock annually. In one warehouse 100,000,000 cigars are stored, and in another 2,500,000 gallons of rum.

Youth Had Much to Learn.

An English gentleman once fell from his horse and injured his thumb. The pain increasing, he was obliged to send for a surgeon. One day the doctor was unable to visit the patient, and therefore sent his son instead. "Have you visited the Englishman?" said his father in the evening. "Yes," replied the young man, "and I have drawn out a thorn which I ascertained to be the chief cause of his agony." "Fool!" exclaimed the father. "I trusted you had more sense; now there is an end to the job."

For a sprain you will find Chamberlain's Liniment excellent. It allays the pain, removes the soreness, and soon restores the parts to a healthy condition. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

MENTOR

The weather still continues to be the chief topic of conversation and our Mentor folks are still walking in the road, or along the track, the village sidewalks being one great glare of ice. Today we are having our second attempt at a January thaw, it having rained all last night, but still the snow-banks are apparently just as high as ever, and ice is everywhere, so that walking is very dangerous.

Mr. W. S. Ackley has returned to his home in Geneva, where he will spend the rest of the winter with his youngest daughter, Mrs. Martha Mead Fitzsimmons and her family.

Mrs. Harry King spent Friday in the city, as did also Mr. Frost, A. D. Carleton, and several others of our Mentor folks.

Mrs. Henry Sandberg is enjoying a visit from her mother's sister, Mrs. Mary Dille, of Greeley, Colo.

The County Y. M. C. A. president spoke in our Methodist church Sunday on the "Problem of the Rural Church" and gave a most interesting address full of information. Mr. Ryall is fast becoming a great favorite with our people, and is doing a great deal towards working up an interest in Y. M. C. A. ambitions and desires.

Mrs. Susan Talbot has been for some time at the Center with her daughter, Mrs. Eddy, but has finally rented her Plains home for the present, and gone to California, to spend some time with another daughter and her family. As Mrs. Talbot has been in rather poor health for some months it is doubtful if she ever returns to Northern Ohio again.

News from Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hart still declare they are enjoying every day to its full limit, having two of our Mentor folks for neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson D. Smith, who are wintering in Los Angeles, with their big touring car, and are taking in all the sights of that part of the state. A letter recently from Mrs. Hart says it was so warm down in San Diego that they had all decided to return to Los Angeles for the rest of the winter, taking their side trips from there.

On the contrary, our friends in Florida are complaining of weather rather colder down there than they were expecting.

Mrs. L. A. Avery of Elgin, Ill., has been visiting at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Smith recently.

Dr. Dye still continues to improve slowly, sits up all the time, reads some and can talk more plainly. The physicians think over-work and no vacation ever was the cause of the nervous break-down, and that only a complete rest will do any good. Miss Tilden, a niece of Dr. Dye, from the southern part of the state, is spending some time here.

Miss Luella Kerr is in a very low condition, her aunt Mrs. Smith from Massillon, is again here to help what she can for a few days.

The Exhibition Car sent out by the Ohio Experimental Station for Agriculture, was visited by a number of interested people here, our schools at the Center being closed for that purpose.

Mrs. Alvah Hart has been having a visit from her sister, Mrs. Jennie Fohas, of Ada, Ohio, this past week or so.

Mrs. Mary Conkling, wife of Dave Conkling, died a few days ago quite suddenly, at the age of fifty-four years.

The Mentor jurymen for this term of court that convenes today are: Col. Parker, Jack Northcote and W. B. Moore.

Mrs. Warren Reaford has been having a short visit from her brother and his wife, Mr. Kilburn Way and Mrs. Way, from the County Seat.

The Miscellany Club was held on Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Blish. There was a large attendance and the greatest number of visitors ever seen at any one meeting. So far as we have been able to get the list, there were the following, all being from Mentor except Mrs. Dille of Colorado: Mrs. James Glasier, Miss Abby Gilbert, Mrs. Lillian Hodge Parmelee, Mrs. Clark Bradway, Mrs. Anna Warren Shumaker, Miss Louise Upham, Mrs. Lawrence Dickey, Miss Phoebe Froeman, Mrs. Mary Dille, Mrs. Eddy, Miss Betty Spindle and Miss Ruth Bradway. Very interesting papers were read as usual. "Customs and Amusements of Modern Mexico" was the title of the paper read by Mrs. Ida Upham Carleton; "Education and Schools in Mexico," was treated of by Miss Elgie Heyford herself an excellent teacher; Mrs. Henry Sandberg read a selection, and a most excellent paper was read by Mrs. Payson Carroll on "Mexican Antiquities." Music was provided by the new "Victor" owned by Mrs. Ed Sawyer since Christmas time, and enjoyed very much by all.

Mrs. Melvin Blodgett, aged seventy years, the widow of one of our G. A. R. boys, died at the home of her daughter on the morning of the 20th, and the funeral was held from the Disciple church Tuesday afternoon.

The trustees of the Mentor Village Library have decided that current magazines must not be kept by any one person longer than a week, and the librarian, Miss Frances Cleveland, has begun to enforce that rule since other libraries are doing the same. Anything inside of three months is considered "current."

Mrs. Adam Carver of Laroin, has recently been spending a short time down here with her sister, Mrs. Ben Warren.

Mrs. Alonzo Ritter has been very sick part of this last week, so that Dr. Ingersoll was hurriedly called to her side in the middle of the night, but she is rather more comfortable today.

Dr. and Mrs. Lowe left on Wednesday for Eustis, Florida, where they spent last winter and where the doctor bought a village building lot, intending some day to build a cottage, as the south seems to agree with him.

Mr. Charles Hammond who has been the freight agent at the Lake Shore depot for so many years and who has been having trouble for some time with his heart (but never could be persuaded to give up work) was taken suddenly worse in the night Friday, and passed away early Saturday morning. The funeral services are being held at his home on Hart street this afternoon, and we understand that Rev. John Kock of Cleveland has been called down to have charge.

The terrible icy walks make it almost impossible to get about with any degree of safety, and few people not in sleighs or buggies are to be seen upon our streets.

In the last week's corn exhibition held at Salem, Ohio, Mr. N. C. Frost of Mentor took first prize in the "Utility Class" which is considered a very great honor for this part of the state. Mr. Frost had four hundred and two-sevenths bushels of shelled corn on a piece of five acres! This would be about 135 bushel of corn on the ear, to an acre! We recollect having heard Mr. Frost say that on his "test plot" up here at "Echo Hill Farm" he had raised at the rate of 175 bushel of ear corn to the acre! Surely that is some corn and we do not wonder there is a wave of enthusiasm spreading over the entire country, when by care and study, one can produce such results. Some great man once declared that any person who could make two blades of grass to grow where but one had grown before, was a public benefactor!

Mr. Harry King feels pretty good over the Poultry Show just closing in Cleveland. Mr. King took first prize on a pen of Minorcas, and summing up his "ribbons" we find he has ten. Of these five are first prizes, one is second, three are third, and one is fourth. He has two "specials" one of which is a four piece silver tea-service of beautiful design. At the New York State Poultry Exhibition recently held in Buffalo, he took the ribbons on eight entries, which was first rate. Mr. King is a specialist on Black Minorcas, both single and "rose" combs, and his home "Pepperage Place" is fast getting to look quite like a "Hen Paradise."

Degrees of Opinion.

Let us not say to ourselves that the best truth always lies in moderation, in the decent average. At the time of the Spanish inquisition the opinion of good sense and of the just medium was certainly that people ought not to burn too large a number of heretics; extreme and unreasonable opinion demanded that they should burn none at all.—Maeterlinck.

Knew His Wife.

It is recorded of an old English farmer that, in giving instructions for his will, he directed a legacy of one hundred pounds be given to his widow. Being informed that some distinction was usually made in case the widow married again, he doubled the sum; and when told that this was quite contrary to custom, he said, with heartfelt sympathy for his possible successor, "Aye, but him as gets her'll deserve it."

PICTURES OF OLD FRANCE

La Valliere's Brilliant Youth and the Contrasting Scene of a Few Years Later.

The festivities and intrigues of Fontainebleau and Versailles may seem a far cry from this old Chateau of Blois, but, standing this afternoon in the rooms that had echoed to the light footsteps of Louise de La Valliere in the days of her youth and innocence, distance and the centuries between that day and this seem to fall away, and we picture to ourselves the court of honor and salle de reception as they appeared on the night of the arrival of the court at Blois. The fast-fading light lent a semblance of reality to the scene, as the torches and candles used in those early days could not have brilliantly lighted the vast hall. We see the chairs placed in a half-circle for the accommodation of the royal guests, the king's not an inch higher than that of Mazarin or of the queen, Anne of Austria. The astute Italian prime minister is seated, his body bent, his face pallid, the hand of death is already laid heavily upon him; but his mind is as keen and alert as in youth, his eyes as penetrating. The courtiers are grouped around Mazarin, the real king.

Gaston, the indolent father of an energetic and courageous daughter, is talking to him, and chroniclers of the day tell us that the duke of Orleans was an admirable raconteur. The Grande Mademoiselle, now over thirty and in the full flower of a beauty which, according to Petitot's miniature and her own rose-colored descriptions, was not inconsiderable, is in another group at one side of the hall, with her half-sisters and the other young girls of the house, among them Louise de La Valliere, whom Madame de Sevigne likened later to a modest violet hiding beneath the leaves; but not so successfully concealed as to evade the eyes of royalty.

In strong contrast to this scene is another and later picture in a far different setting, in the dim, religious light of a convent, where a woman still young and in the full maturity of her beauty is taking the veil, which is held for her, the former royal favorite, by Queen Maria Teresa, the neglected wife of Louis.—Lippincott's Magazine.

An Elopement Fifty Years Ago.

Married in La Crosse fifty years ago, the culmination of a pioneer day romance of the sort that is read about in fiction, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Dougherty celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home at Rodeo, N. M.

But one witness of the marriage is alive, and he James W. Young of La Crosse, told the story of the wedding, which follows:

"William Dougherty was born in Vermilion county, Ind., and so was his wife, whose maiden name was Mary Catherine Hiler. It seems that at the time of the wedding the girl's parents objected to the young man's attentions, which made it necessary for several other young fellows and myself to help the prospective bridegroom out of the difficulty.

"We got a skiff and rowed up the river to the girl's house, where we quietly got her out of the house and into the boat. We then rowed down through French Slough and up to the north side where Mr. Dougherty was waiting for us. We soon had Justice of the Peace Winston on the scene and the necessary ceremony was performed."—La Crosse correspondence St. Paul Despatch.

The Man They Admired.

Several senate clerks and stenographers were gossipping in the Capitol building the other day, telling reminiscences of statesmen past and present, when Senator Cummins of Iowa passed them. "Ah, there's the best of all of them," one remarked. "Right you are," asserted another. "Foraker was great, but, in some respects, this man even surpasses him." "I doubt if this old building ever forgets his memory," sighed a third. "Wonderful in debate!" was the fourth man's contribution. "No man was ever his equal in the hullaballoo of a hot fight on the floor." A stranger had listened to the praises, following Senator Cummins with his eyes as long as he could. "Who is he?" he asked eagerly. "Some famous orator? The country's leading statesman, perhaps? A political genius?" "Genius nothing!" granted one of the stenographers. "Why that man's the slowest talker of the senate and the easiest to take in shorthand!"

Method in Madness.

Pat Sullivan was a soldier and a good fellow; but in the opinion of officers and men alike he was certainly suffering from some brain affliction, and when on duty or at drill he would suddenly break from the ranks and run after an imaginary bit of paper, visible to no one but himself, shouting as he did so:

"There it goes! There's the paper!"

This at length became so frequent an occurrence that, on the matter being brought before the medical authorities, he was declared to be suffering from a slight attack of insanity, and in consequence he was given his discharge. When leaving, however, he gave evident proof that there was some method in his madness, for as he quitted the service for ever he cried, flourishing his discharge-paper:

"Faith, boys, sure I've got the piece of paper I've been running after this long time!"

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man.

CHAPTER I.—Continued.

On the day of the shoot at Osdene, Dan dropped sixty birds. He tried very hard not to be too pleased. "Gosh," he thought to himself, "those birds fell as though they were trained all right and the other sports were mad, I could see it." He then fell to whistling softly the air he had heard Lady Galorey play the night before from the new success at the Gaiety, and finished it as his toilet completed itself. He took up a gardenia from his dressing table and fastened it in his coat, stopping on the stairs on the way down to look over into the hall where the men in their black clothes and the women in their shining dresses waited before going into the dining-room. The lights fell on white arms and necks, on jewels and on fine proud heads. Dan Blair had been in San Francisco and in New York, on short journeys, however, which his father, the year before, had directed him to take, but he had never seen a "show" like this.

He came slowly down the broad stairway of the Osdene Park House, the last guest. In the corner, where, behind her, a piece of fourteenth century tapestry cut a green and pink square against the rich black oak paneling, the Duchess of Breakwater sat waiting. She wore a dress of golden tulle which was simply a sheath to her slender body, and from her neck hung a long rope of diamonds caught at the end by a small black fan; there was a wreath of diamonds like shining water drops linked together in her hair. She was the grandest lady at Osdene and renowned in more than one sense of the word. As Dan saw her smile at him and rise, he thought:

"She is none too sorry that I made that record, but I hope to heaven she won't say anything to me about it."

And the duchess did not speak of it. Telling him that he was to take her in to dinner, she laid first her fan on his arm and then her hand. And Dan, one of those fortunate creatures who are born men of the world when they get into it, gave her his arm with much grace, and as he leaned down toward her he thought to himself:

"Well, it's lucky for me I have my head on tight; a few more of those goo-goo eyes of hers and it would be as well for me to light out for the woods."

Dan liked best at Osdene Park his chin-chins with Gordon Galorey. The young man was unfalteringly frank in his choice of companions. When the duchess looked about for him to ride with her, walk with her, to find the secluded corners, to talk, to play with him, she was likely to discover Dan had gone off with Lord Galorey, and to come upon them later, sitting enveloped in smoke, a stand of drinks by their side.

To Galorey, who had no heir or child, the boy's presence proved the happiest thing that had come to him for a long time. He talked a great deal to Dan about the old man. Galorey was poor, and the fact of a fortune of ten million pounds possessed by this one boy was continually before his mind like an obsession. It was like looking down into a gold mine. Galorey tried often to broach the subject of money, but Dan kept off. At length Galorey asked boldly:

"What are you going to do with it?" On this occasion they were walking over from the lower park back to the house, a couple of terriers at their heels.

"Do with what?" Blair asked innocently. He was looking at the trees. He was comparing their grayish green trunks and their foliage with the California redwoods. A little taken aback Lord Galorey laughed.

"Why, that colossal fortune of yours."

And Blair answered unhesitatingly: "Oh, spend it on some girl sooner or later."

Galorey fairly staggered. Then he took it humorously.

"My dear chap, I never saw a sweeter, bigger man than your father. If he had been my father, I dare say I might have pulled off a different yard of hemp, but I must confess that I think he has left you too much money."

"Well, there are a lot of fellows who are ready to look after it for me," Blair answered coolly. Before his companion could reddin, he continued: "You see, dad took care of me for twenty-one years all right, and whenever I am up a stump, why, all I have to do is to remember the things he did."

For the first time since his arrival at Osdene Dan's tone was serious. Interested as he was in the older man, Dan's inclination was to evade the discussion of serious subjects. With Blair's slang his conversation was almost incomprehensible.

"Dad didn't gas much," the boy said, "but I could draw a map of some of the things he did say. He used to say he made his money out of the earth."

The two were walking side by side across the rich velvet of the immemorial English turf. The extreme softness of the autumn day, its shifting lights, its mellow envelope, the beauty of the park—the age, the stability, the harmony, served to touch the young fellow's spirits. At any rate there was a ring in him, an equilibrium that surprised Galorey.

"'Most things,' dad said to me, 'go back to the earth.'" He struck the English turf with his stick. "Dad said a fellow had better buy those things that stay above the ground." Dan smiled frankly at his companion. "Curious thing to say, wasn't it?" he reflected. "I remembered it and I got to wondering after I saw him buried 'what are the things that stay above the ground?' The old man never gave me another talk like that."

After a few seconds Galorey put in: "But, my dear chap, you did give me a shock up there just now when you said you were going to spend 'all your money on some girl.'"

The Duchess of Breakwater Appeared.

The millionaire took a chestnut from his pocket. He held it high above his head and the little dog that had been yelping at his heels fixed his eyes on it. Blair poised it, then threw it as far as he could. It sped through the air and the terrier ran like mad across the park.

"I like girls awfully, Gordon, and when I find the right one, why, then I'm going to feel what a bully thing it is to be rich."

Lord Galorey groaned aloud.

"My dear chap!" he exclaimed.

The spell of the day, the fragrant beauty of the time and place and hour were clearly upon Dan Blair. Lord Galorey was sympathetic to him. The terrier came tearing back with the chestnut held between his thick jaws. Dan bent down to take the nut from the dog and wrestled with him gently.

"Swell little grip he's got. Nice old pup! Let it go now!" And he threw the nut far again, and as the terrier ran once more Blair thrust his hands down in his pockets and began softly to whistle the tune of Mandalay.

He said slowly, going back to his subject: "It must be great to feel that a fellow can give her jewels like the Duchess of Breakwater's, ropes of 'em"—he nodded toward the house—"and a fine old place like this one and motors and yachts and all kinds of stuff."

His eyes rested on the suave lines of the Elizabethan house, with its softened gables and its banked terraces. Possibly his vivid imagination pictured "some nice girl" there waiting as they should come up, to meet him.

"I have always thought it would be bully to find a poor girl—pretty as a [illegible] of course—one who [illegible] ever had much and just cover her with things. Hey, there!" he cried to the terrier, who had come running back, "bring it to me."

They had come up to the terrace by this, and Dan's confidence, fresh as a [illegible] of water from a rock, had ceased. His face was placid. He didn't realize what he had said.

From out of one of the long windows, dressed in a sable coat, her small head tied up in a motor scarf, the Duchess of Breakwater appeared. She greeted them severely, and Lord Galorey heard her say under her breath to Dan:

"You promised to be back to drive with me before dinner, Dan. Did you forget?"

And as Galorey left the boy to make his peace, the first smile of amusement broke over his face. He felt that the duchess had between her and her capture of Dan Blair's heart the elusive picture of some "nice girl"—not much perhaps, but it might be very hard to tear away the picture of the ideal that was ever before the blue eyes of this man who had a fortune to spend on her!

CHAPTER II.

The Duchess Approves.

His attentions to the Duchess of Breakwater had not been so conspicuous or so absorbing as to prevent the eager mothers—who, true to her word, Lady Galorey had invited down—from laying siege to Dan Blair. Lady Galorey asked him:

"Don't you want to marry any one of these beauties, Dan?" And Blair, with his beautiful smile and what Lily called his inspired candor, answered:

"Not on your life, Lady Galorey!"

And she agreed: "I think myself you are too young."

"No," Dan refuted, "you are wrong there. I shall marry as fast as I can."

His hostess was surprised.

"Why, I thought you wanted your fling."

And Dan, from his chair, in which, with a book, he had been sitting when Lady Galorey found him, answered cheerfully:

"Oh, I don't like being alone. I want to go about with some one. I should like a fling all right, but I want to fling with somebody as I go."

The lady of the house was not a philosopher nor an analyst. She had certain affairs of her own and was engrossed in them and lived in them. As far as Lady Galorey was concerned the rest of the world might go and hang itself as long as it didn't do it at her gate-post. But Blair couldn't leave any one indifferent to him very long, not unless one could be indifferent to a blaze of sunlight; one must either draw the blinds down or bask in its brightness.

She laughed. "You're perfectly delicious! You mean to say you want to be married at once and let your wife fling around with you?"

"Just that."

"How sweet of you, Dan! And you won't marry one of these girls here?"

"Don't fill the bill, Lady Galorey."

"Oh, you have a sweetheart at home, then?"

"All off!" he assured her blithely, and rose, tall and straight and slender.

The Duchess of Breakwater had come in, indeed she never failed to when there was any question of finding Blair.

Dan stood straightly before the two women of an old race, and the American didn't suggest any line of noble ancestors whatsoever. His features were rather commonplace, his muscles were possibly not the perfect classic specimens that were those muscles whose strata and sinew had been made from the same stock for generations. He was, nevertheless, very good to look on. Any woman would have thought so, and he bent his blond head as he looked at the Duchess of Breakwater with something like benevolence, something of his father's kindness in his clear blue eyes. Neither of the noble ladies vaguely understood him. His hostess thought him "a good sort," not half bad, a splendid catch, and the other woman, only a few years his senior, was in love with him. The duchess had married at eighteen, tired of her bargain at twenty, and found herself a widow at twenty-five. She held a telegram in her hand.

"We've got the box for Mandalay tonight at the Gaiety, and let's motor in."

Building Up McGill University

McGill university in Montreal has recently been given by Sir William C. McDonald a tract of 30 acres of what is described as perhaps the most valuable land in the city. This tract, which is now valued at well over $1,000,000, is intended to be used as a college campus, with dormitories to be eventually built along its sides. The total of Sir William McDonald's gifts to McGill is now between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. McGill has hitherto been especially well equipped for turning out lawyers and engineers, but a new era is evidently now opening out before it in which it will be enabled by broadening its teaching in the humanities to become a strong and well rounded university in all branches—in fact, one of the notable educational institutions of North America.

If Judas were alive he would be prime minister.

Woman

Her Home, Her Interests.

A Towel Shower.

A towel shower for a recent bride was both practical and acceptable. There were 12 intimate friends, so they each contributed the price of a towel and the hostess purchased one dozen of the same pattern with the large papier-mache letters and cotton for marking.

On the afternoon for the "shower" all came with their thimbles and each girl embroidered a letter on a towel, so when refreshments were served 12 beautiful pieces of linen were placed before the bride.

Just a word as to the wearing qualities of these papier-mache letters, concerning which there seems to be a divided opinion. Personally, I have found them most satisfactory, having used a tablecloth and napkins for nine years that are marked in this manner. If they are closely and carefully worked they will outwear the original material and that is all that is necessary.

The refreshments consisted of lobster salad, hot cheese sandwiches, coffee, olives and salted nuts. A relative, who knew of the shower, sent two guest towels, a pair of bath towels and six wash cloths.

Shut-in Day Amusements.

As soon as a child, girl or boy, is able to handle round-pointed scissors provide a pair, with quantities of colored pictures to cut out. Then, if there is no handy man available, get the nearest carpenter to make a screen or the frame for one; tack cheap paper cambric on the back. Cover the youngster from top to toe with an apron, spread a sheet on the floor, give him a bottle, or better, still, a tube of library paste, (they dearly love to squeeze it), and you happily may go your way rejoicing, knowing that several hours will elapse ere the charm of cutting and the joy of pasting will have been lost.

When the screen is full take it out and replace with a fresh piece of cambric. This amusement gives the child ample scope to exercise its originality, and the enjoyment of not being assisted is keenly appreciated by the little soul. If a box of water color paints is added to the outfit, so much the better. And, by the way, those colors are made harmless for these embryo artists, so if the brush should find its way into the little mouth no serious consequences follow.

A Utility Shower.

A dozen girls planned this shower for a recent bride. It was rather unusual and very enjoyable. The hostess asked them all to meet at her house informally at 2 o'clock, asking the bride elect to be there at three. In this way she had time to explain her scheme which was as follows: She has materials to make these articles: a dust cap, three holders, a broom bag, ironing holder, laundry bag, a kitchen apron, clothespin bag, roller towel, several dusters of cheese cloth and a half dozen dish cloths. The entire cost was divided among the 12 and the materials wrapped in tissue paper and hidden throughout the rooms.

Upon the arrival of the honored guest they chatted awhile and then the hostess announced that a little fairy had confided to her that there were packages of value secretly hidden. Soft tones of the piano the same as for "Magic music." When all the packages had been discovered the girls all set to work upon which ever article they selected. They pronounced this a "utility" shower and it certainly was practical, for the guest of honor said her mind was so in the clouds that the articles presented had never been thought of. Delicious tea was brewed by the hostess, accompanied by thin bread and butter sandwiches filled with orange marmalade, bon-bons, and small cakes. The guests assisted in serving. The hostess was a bride of six months, so she knew from experience what a new housekeeper would need.

Persian Veiling.

Parisian women are searching for Persian veils, the more elaborate and the older the better. No inclination to use them as face coverings has manifested itself, the ladies are merely tired of Russian embroideries.

IN VOGUE

Fruit trimming for hats for early fall include tiny white apples, white raspberries and white peaches.

Rhinestone trimmings are by far the most showy and effective as well as beautiful trimming of the season.

Single ornaments of passementerie are attached to linen collars in some cases in place of ordinary ties or bows.

White, cream and fancy serges, comprising black hairline stripes on white grounds, are great favorites of the moment.

The new changeable taffetas come in double width and are most advantageous for cutting. Many exquisite combinations for blouses can be had—a popular one being gold and the new hydrangea blue.

A great favorite is the new material called velour de laine—a mixed suiting, almost like camel's hair. It is particularly effective in a white diagonal stripe and there are variations in tan, light blue and gray.

Dark Tailored Suits.

The tailor suit is without doubt the necessity of the moment, and although these are now to be seen in dark shades, a redeeming touch of color generally relieves the somber effect which they give, while it lies with the milliner to add the crowning of brightness and chic to the toilette.

The pin striped velveteens are frequently to be seen in tailor costumes, but velveteen may be considered rather an expensive material for coats and skirts, as it rubs so easily that it soon assumes a woe-begone appearance—and, surely, nothing looks half so shabby as a worn and tumbled velveteen. For the woman who has many costumes, of course, a frock of this kind is a delightful addition to her wardrobe, although the fact that cheap, ready-made coats and skirts are to be obtained in this material will rather prevent it becoming adopted by those in quest of novelty.

The sooner farmers, ranchmen, horticulturists, and nurserymen learn that the great majority of birds of prey are their friends and deserve protection and that four or five species only are injurious, the sooner will depredations by noxious rodents and insects diminish. In the more thickly settled sections of the country, except at rare intervals, the goshawk, [illegible] great horned owl [illegible] infrequent that years may pass without an individual being seen. Two species that need to be kept in check are the sharp-shinned and Cooper hawks, small and medium sized species which feed almost entirely on wild birds and poultry. The illustration will materially assist those interested in identifying these birds.

The important fact to bear in mind is that all hawks and owls feed largely on noxious rodents and the larger insects, such as grasshoppers, crickets, and May beetles, and, from their size and voracious appetites, are important factors in reducing the numbers of such pests and keeping them under control.

Ravens, crows, and jays also do effective work in destroying pests. Occasionally, however, in localities where they have increased out of proportion to the available food supply, they become troublesome by killing small chickens and destroying eggs and nestlings of wild birds.

It is demonstrable that so long as a useful species is kept within bounds and is not allowed to increase beyond its natural food supply, just so long will it fulfill its natural mission and be of true economic value. If, however, the staple of food supply temporarily fails, then in the effort to maintain life the animal is likely to become obnoxious and may have to be controlled.

Apple Wood.

Apple wood has commercial value for making tool handles. It must be sound and well seasoned, however, to command a market. In cutting down useless trees this should be borne in mind and the trunks and main branches seasoned in good shape. Large tool makers are glad to know where good apple wood can be found.

STRONG STUMP-PULLING DEVICE

Realizing the importance of a cheap and effective method of removing stumps with so many farmers who are not able to buy or obtain a modern expensive outfit, I thought I would send you an illustration of a plan (while old) which I have seen used with great success, writes O. F. Holmes, Luray, Va., in Progressive Farmer, and which has the treble merit of being effective, cheap and not patented.

The outfit consists of two screw jacks—those I saw used had 1½-foot lift working in cast iron pedestals—a stout log chain, a stout beam 8 feet long and about as heavy as two men would want to carry, and two pieces of plank for the jacks to stand on. Place the beam across the largest and stoutest root of the stump, one jack on each side and as near the stump as the roots will allow, and resting on a piece of plank. The chain is passed around the beam and the root. One man at each jack will raise almost any stump to the full lift of the screw which, in most cases, is sufficient; if not, place a stud under each end of the beam; let down the jacks and place blocks under them; give the stump another lift.

Two men can pull from twenty to fifty stumps a day, and the outfit will not cost over $15 to $20, while the jacks are useful for many other purposes, and can frequently be hired from some party who possesses them. Or, if you cannot borrow them, have a neighbor or two join in the purchase of the outfit, which will make it cheap to each in case you have to buy.

BARRELS COST IMMENSE SUM

Statistics Show an Increase of $1,569,688 Last Year in Value of Product Over Previous Year.

The farmer with his potatoes and his apples, the miller with his flour and meal, the hardware man with his nails, the cement manufacturer, and the many other users of the faithful slack barrel, that combination of staves, hoops, and heading, which is not intended to hold water or something stronger in fluid form, used forest products last year having the enormous value of $15,800,252.

The average man would little suspect that the humble barrel plays so important a part in the expense accounts of the American farmer and manufacturer, yet figures compiled by the census in co-operation with the United States forest service develop this interesting truth. Moreover, statistics taken directly from reports from 950 cooperage mills in all parts of the United States show an increase of $1,569,688, or 11 per cent. in the value of last year's product over that of the previous year.

Milk and Butter.

Shipping milk seemed to pay better than making butter, so father and sons sold the cows which were not big milkers and bought Holsteins, getting a registered bull. They now have mostly full-bred Holstein cows and heifers, of which they are justly proud.

Run-Down Farm.

Many a young farmer with small capital would probably do better to go east and buy a run down farm with substantial building and fencing on it rather than pay two or three times as much for raw land in the bitter climate of Canada.

Shelter for the Mares.

There is no more pitiable sight than a mare and foal standing in the open with their coats turned the wrong way and shivering with cold.

THE TESLA STEAM TURBINE

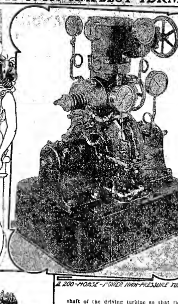
THE ROTARY HEAT MOTOR REDUCED TO ITS SIMPLEST TERMS

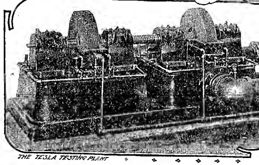
NIKOLA TESLA, whose reputation must, naturally, stand upon the contributions he made in electrical engineering when the art was yet in its comparative infancy, is by training and choice a mechanical engineer, with a strong leaning [illegible], which is covered by the term "steam engineering." For several years he has devoted much of his time to improvements in thermodynamic conversion and the result of his theories and practical experiments is to be found in an entirely new form of prime movers now in operation in a large plant in New York.

The basic principle which determined Tesla's investigations was the well known fact that when a fluid, steam, gas or water, is used as a vehicle of energy, the highest possible economy can be obtained only when the changes in velocity and directions of the movement of the fluid are made as gradual and easy as possible. In the present forms of turbines in which the energy is transmitted by pressure, re-action or impact, as in the De Laval, Parsons, and Curtiss types, more or less sudden changes both of speed and direction are involved, with consequent shocks, vibrations and destructive eddies. Furthermore the introduction of pistons, blades, buckets, and intercepting devices of this general class into the path of the fluid involves much delicate and difficult mechanical construction which adds greatly to the cost both of production and maintenance.

The theoretically perfect turbine would be one in which the fluid was so controlled from the inlet to the exhaust that its energy was delivered to the driving shaft with the least possible losses due to the mechanical means employed. The mechanically perfect turbine would be one which combined simplicity and cheapness of construction, durability, ease and rapidity of repairs, and a small ratio of weight and space occupied to the power delivered on the shaft. Mr. Tesla maintains that in the turbine which forms the subject of this article he has carried the steam and gas motor a long step forward toward the maximum attainable efficiency, both theoretical and mechanical. That these claims are well founded is shown by the fact that in the plant where Mr. Tesla carried out his experiments, he is securing an output of 200 H.P. from a single-stage steam turbine with atmospheric exhaust, weighing less than 2 pounds per H.P. which is contained within a space measuring 2 feet by 3 feet, by 2 feet in height and which accomplishes these results with a thermal fall of only 130 B.T.U., that is about one-third of the total drop available. Furthermore, considered from the mechanical standpoint, the turbine is astonishingly simple and economical in construction, and by the very nature of its construction should prove to possess such a durability and freedom from wear and breakdown as to place it in these respects far in advance of any type of steam or gas motor of the present day.



A 200-HORSE-POWER HIGH-PRESSURE TURBINE



THE TESLA TESTING PLANT

Briefly stated, Tesla's steam motor consists of a set of flat steel disks mounted on a shaft and rotating within a casing, the steam entering with high velocity at the periphery of the disks, flowing between them in free spiral paths and finally escaping through exhaust ports at their center. Instead of developing the energy of the steam by pressure, reaction, or impact on a series of blades or vanes, Tesla depends upon the fluid properties of adhesion and viscosity—the attraction of the steam to the faces of the disks and the resistance of its particles to molecular separation combining in transmitting the velocity energy of the motive fluid to the plates and the shaft.

By reference to the accompanying photographs it will be seen that the turbine has a rotor which in the present case consists of 25 flat steel disks, one one thirty-second of an inch in thickness, of hardened and carefully tempered steel. The rotor as assembled is 3½ inches wide on the face, by 18 inches in diameter and when the turbine is running at its maximum working velocity, the material is never under a tensile stress exceeding 50,000 lbs. per square inch. The rotor is mounted in a casing which is provided with two inlet nozzles for use in running direct and for reversing. Openings are cut out at the central portion of the disks and these communicate directly with exhaust ports formed in the side of the casing.

In operation, the steam or gas as the case may be, is directed on the periphery of the disks through the nozzles (which may be diverging, straight or converging) where more or less of its expansive energy is converted into velocity energy. When the machine is at rest the radial and tangential forces due to the pressure and velocity of the steam cause it to travel in a rather short curved path toward the central exhaust opening, but as the disks commence to rotate and their speed increases, the steam travels in spiral paths the length of which increases until in the case of the present turbine, the particles of the fluid complete a number of turns around the shaft before reaching the exhaust, covering in the meantime a lineal path some 12 to 16 feet in length. During its progress from inlet to exhaust, the velocity and pressure of the steam are reduced until it leaves the exhaust at 1 or 2 pounds gage pressure.

The resistance to the passage of the steam or gas between adjoining plates is approximately proportionate to the square of the relative speed, which is at maximum toward the center of the disks and is equal to the tangential velocity of the steam. Hence the resistance to radial escape is very great, being furthermore enhanced by the centrifugal force acting outwardly. One of the most desirable elements in a perfected turbine is that of reversibility and we are all familiar with the many and frequently cumbersome means which have been employed to secure this end. It will be seen that this turbine is admirably adapted for reversing since its effect can be secured by merely closing the right hand valve and opening that on the left.

It is evident that the principles of this turbine are equally applicable, by slight modifications of design, for its use as a pump and we present a photograph of a demonstration model which is in operation in Mr. Tesla's office. This little pump driven by an electric motor of 1-12 H.P. delivers 40 gallons per minute against a head of 9 feet. The discharge pipe leads up to a horizontal tube provided with a wire mesh for screening the water and checking the eddies. The water falls through a slot in the bottom of this tube and after passing below a baffle plate flows in a steady stream about ¾ inch thick 18 inches in width, to a trough from which it returns to the pump. Pumps of this character show an efficiency favorably comparing with that of centrifugal pumps and they have the advantage that great heads are obtainable economically in a single stage. The runner is mounted in a two-part volute casing and except for the fact that the place of the buckets, vanes, etc., of the ordinary centrifugal pumps is taken by a set of disks, the construction is generally similar to that of pumps of the standard kind.

In conclusion it should be noted that although the experimental plant develops 200 H.P. with 125 pounds at the supply pipe and free exhaust, it could show an output of 300 H.P. with the full pressure of the supply circuit. Furthermore Mr. Tesla states that if it were compounded and the exhaust were led to a low pressure unit, carrying about three times the number of disks contained in the high pressure element, with connection to a condenser affording 28½ to 29 inches of vacuum the results obtained in the present high-pressure machine indicate that the compound unit would give an output of 600 H.P. without great increase of dimensions. This estimate is very conservative.

The testing plant consists of two identical turbines, shown in the illustration, connected by a carefully calibrated tension spring, the machine to the left being the driving element, the other the brake. In the brake element the steam is delivered to the blades in a direction opposite to that of the rotation of the disks. Fastened to the shaft of the brake turbine is a hollow pulley provided with two diametrically opposite narrow slots and an incandescent lamp placed inside close to the rim. As the pulley rotates two flashes of light pass out of the same and by means of reflecting mirrors and lenses, they are carried around the plant and fall upon two rotating glass mirrors placed back to back on the shaft of the driving turbine so that the center line of the silver coatings coincides with the axis of the shaft. The mirrors are so set that when there is no tension on the spring, the light beams produce a luminous spot stationary at the zero of the scale. But as soon as load is put on, the beam is deflected through an angle which indicates directly the tension. The scale and spring are so proportioned and adjusted that the horse power can be read directly from the deflections noted. The indications of this device are very accurate and have shown that when the turbine is running at 9,000 revolutions under an inlet pressure of 125 lbs. to the square inch, and with free exhaust, 200 brake H.P. are developed. The consumption under these conditions of maximum of output is 38 lbs. of saturated steam per H.P. per hour—a very high efficiency when we consider that the heat-drop, measured by thermometers, is only 130 B.T.U. and that the energy transformation is effected in one stage. Since three times the number of heat units are available in a modern plant with superheat and high vacuum the above means a consumption of less than 12 lbs. per H.P. hour in such turbines adapted to take up the full drop. Under certain conditions, however, very high thermal efficiencies have been obtained which demonstrate that in large machines based on this principle, in which a very small slip can be secured, the steam consumption will be much lower and should, Mr. Tesla states, approximate the theoretical minimum thus resulting in nearly frictionless turbine transmitting almost the entire expansive energy of the steam to the shaft.

The Hounded Deer

"It doesn't make any difference now," said a hunter of long experience in the woods in an after supper talk at an Adirondack campfire, "inasmuch as the deer hound is no longer permitted to be a part of the hunt, but it is a fact that one long cherished belief of deer hunters is simply a backwoods fable. That belief is that a deer pursued by hounds when it is taken to a stream will invariably go down with the current instead of upstream, its instinct teaching it that if it goes up its scent will pass down with the water and the dogs will be enabled to follow it just as they did on dry land.

"I long ago satisfied myself that water doesn't carry the scent of a deer with it, but that on the contrary it destroys the scent.

"If the water is deep enough for the deer to swim it suits the fleeing animal best. If it is not the deer trots or lopes along through it. It does not bound as on land, for it must drink, and must drink as it goes. In the hounding days the hunter who believed that the deer always went downstream and acted in accordance with that belief might recover the trail and he might not, while the hunter who knows better than to take stock in that belief would not be a great while in getting his dogs on the scent again.

"Of course I am speaking of deer that took to the mountain stream and not those that found a pond or lake more convenient, it being the nature of deer to seek water if possible when the dogs are on their tracks. In none of the streams where deer sought to throw the dogs off the scent could a person go many rods up or down without coming to some obstruction in the course of the deer which the animal would have to get over.

"The hunter who knew would in the first place satisfy himself that the deer hadn't gone straight across the water, and would then go in one direction along the stream until he came to the first log or rock or other channel obstruction. If the deer had gone that way the obstruction in its path would be wet on top from the water that dropped from the deer as it climbed over it. If it was dry the hunter would know instantly that the quarry had not passed in that direction and the discovery of the spot where the deer had left the stream would be only a matter of time.

"But the deer doesn't have to take to water any more to elude the hounds, and it can make no difference now to old time believers in that fable how many score of deer they have lost through that belief. Maybe there wouldn't have been so many deer in the woods today if more of the hunters contemporary with deer hounding had known better."

WHO REALLY ARE THE POOR?

Question Puzzles Teacher in Mission School After Incident in the Sewing Class.

"This was our children's sewing class afternoon," said a teacher of a mission school in New York city, "and the cold snap drove a larger attendance to our doors than we have had before. It is very cheerful in our mission hall, and the little ones appreciate the pleasant warmth of our two big stoves. The children were well started on their work, and the place was filled with sociable chatter, when a sudden blast of cold air made us all turn toward the door with a shiver. Holding the door open and gazing in timidly stood two of the most forlorn little girls I have seen in a long time. I took it all in in a glance, as I went forward smiling in order to assure them of their welcome, and drew them in, closing the door upon the biting air. Soon they were sitting side by side, each making an attempt to sew a flannel petticoat.

"In my first free moment I searched through our wardrobe of second-hand things and selected a few garments which looked to be the proper sizes for the two, and took these over to where they sat. As I drew near I heard the younger sister say to the older, 'Do you think they will let us keep these petticoats for ourselves?'

"The older shook her head wisely. 'No, I don't guess so,' she replied. 'I guess we'll have to give them to the poor.'

"That is why I am wondering now who 'the poor' are."

His Habit.

"I know a man who can get up an attachment for anybody, if he's asked to."

"What sort of a man is he? A lunatic?"

"No; he's a sheriff."

ENDED THE SPELLING LESSON

Bobby's Education, Under Aunt's Tutelage, Afterward Proceeded Under Different Lines.

Miss Thompson, whose form nature has endowed with all-too-ample curves, was giving her little nephew a lesson in spelling the other day. He had spelt b-e, be, and h-e, he, and now she was trying to get him to tell her what m-e, spelt.

"Listen, Bobby," she said earnestly. Then closing her lips she pronounced the sound of a long m, and opening them, the sound of a long e. "What does that spell?"

Bobby looked at her and shook his head. Again she tried, and this time, while pronouncing the sounds, she vigorously tapped her own rotund chest with her plump forefinger.

"Mmum, ee. What letters am I saying and what do they spell?" she asked, still vigorously tapping her chest.

"I don't know what the letters are," replied Bobby, watching the plump forefinger, "but I guess they spell Fat."

WHY WAIT?

Grace—I just refused to marry Jack. He said he would not be in a position to marry for a year.

Maud—Well, what of that?

Grace—Why, I know a man who is in a position to marry any time.

BABY'S HAIR ALL CAME OUT

"When my first baby was six months old he broke out on his head with little bumps. They would dry up and leave a scale. Then it would break out again and it spread all over his head. All the hair came out and his head was scaly all over. Then his face broke out all over in red bumps and it kept spreading until it was on his hands and arms. I bought several boxes of ointment, gave him blood medicine, and had two doctors to treat him, but he got worse all the time. He had it about six months when a friend told me about Cuticura. I sent and got a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three days after using them he began to improve. He began to take long naps and to stop scratching his head. After taking two bottles of Resolvent, two boxes of Ointment and three cakes of Soap he was sound and well, and never had any breaking out of any kind. His hair came out in little curls all over his head. I don't think anything else would have cured him except Cuticura.

"I have bought Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap several times since to use for cuts and sores and have never known them to fail to cure what I put them on. Cuticura Soap is the best that I have ever used for toilet purposes." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Harmon, R. F. D. 2, Atoka, Tenn., Sept. 10, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Cremation Among the Franks.

An interesting archaeological discovery was made lately near Brecht (Belgium), where the remains of what was evidently a Frankish cemetery have been found. The main interest in the discovery lies in the fact that clear traces are to be seen in the cemetery of cremated remains, as well as of bodies buried in the ordinary way, whereas hitherto it has always been believed that cremation was not practiced amongst the Franks.

THESE SIX LETTERS
From New England Women
Prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Does Restore the Health of Ailing Women.

Boston, Mass.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from hemorrhages (sometimes lasting for weeks), and could get nothing to check them. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound (tablet form) on Tuesday, and the following Saturday morning the hemorrhages stopped. I have taken them regularly ever since and am steadily gaining.

"I certainly think that every one who is troubled as I was should give your Compound Tablets a faithful trial, and they will find relief."—Mrs. George Juby, 802 Fifth Street, South Boston, Mass.

Letter from Mrs. Julia King, Phœnix, R.I.

Phœnix, R.I.—"I worked steady in the mill from the time I was 12 years old until I had been married a year, and I think that caused my bad feelings. I had soreness in my side near my left hip that went around to my back, and sometimes I would have to lie in bed for two or three days. I was not able to do my housework.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me wonderfully in every way. You may use my letter for the good of others. I am only too glad to do anything within my power to recommend your medicine."—Mrs. Julia King, Box 282, Phœnix, R.I.

Letter from Mrs. Etta Donovan, Willimantic, Conn.

Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk up stairs without stopping on the way. I was all run down in every way.

"I tried three doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said it was no use for me to take anything as nothing would restore me to health again. So I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do, and by taking seven bottles of the Compound and other treatment you advised, I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. Etta Donovan, 762 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn.

Letter from Mrs. Winfield Dana, Augusta, Me.

Augusta, Me.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured the backache, headache, and the bad pain I had in my right side, and I am perfectly well."—Mrs. Winfield Dana, R.F.D. No. 2, Augusta, Me.

Letter from Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Newport, Vt.

Newport, Vt.—"I thank you for the great benefit Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I took eight bottles and it did wonders for me, as I was a nervous wreck when I began taking it. I shall always speak a good word for it to my friends."—Mrs. John A. Thompson, Box 3, Newport Center, Vermont.

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlehem, N.H.

Bethlehem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month.

"This last Spring my mother got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and already I feel like another girl. I am regular and do not have the pains that I did, and do not have to go to bed. I will tell all my friends what the Compound is doing for me."—Miss Gracie B. Dodds, Box 133, Bethlehem, N.H.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Notice is hereby given that on the 15th day of January, 1912, Hannah M. Bates was duly appointed and qualified as Administratrix of the Estate of Ira Bates, deceased, late of LeRoy, Lake County, Ohio.

CLARK H. NYE
Probate Judge.

Soothing Occupation.

"Who's that man who just kicked the chair over and threw a pack of cards into the fireplace?" inquired one waiter. "Oh," replied the other, "he's the gentleman who tries to rest his nerves by playing solitaire."

NORTH MADISON

SPEEDY CLEARANCE SALE

OF ALL WINTER MERCHANDISE

Commencing Saturday, Feb. 3rd, and Continuing Until Saturday, Feb. 17th

The word "clean-up" or "special" or any other cooked up excuse would not make this sale any greater. The story in a nut-shell is that we are going to strike the knife of reduction deep into every dollar's worth of merchandise in our store. We are going to effect a quick and immediate clearance of all our Women's and Misses' Cloaks and Suits, Sweaters, Skirts, and all Our Men's and Boys' Clothing, etc.

In fact, here is an opportunity of years to buy a meritorious sum of merchandise for less than we paid for them ourselves.

Words won't make this sale any more important. We are simply determined to crowd our store with shrewd shoppers by putting a big selling, money saving, price inducement on every dollar's worth of winter goods in the store.

Room for new spring goods is worth money to us now. We are willing to pay you more to help us accomplish our purpose. There is no room in this space to mention any items. We only recommend that you come here early and quickly; walk through the store and see with your eyes what type cannot tell. We assure you a saving of from 33 to 60 per cent on all your winter garments.

YOUR ONLY OPPORTUNITY.

We give and Redeem Eagle Stamps.

THE UP-TO-DATE
PAINESVILLE'S LEADING DEPARTMENT STORE.

Eagle Stamps with all purchases.

Never Drink Water.

In Lower California a large number of the smaller desert mammals never drink water, according to American scientists who have recently visited the peninsula. They live and thrive on dry seeds and scraps of vegetation in places where the heat and aridity are excessive without ever touching their lips to water, and it has even been found impossible to teach some of them to take water in captivity.

Old Truth Reaffirmed.

A Massachusetts widow wrote a Kansas editor to find her a big-hearted, big-bodied, whole-souled westerner for a husband. He printed the letter, and replies are pouring in by the bushel. Soon there will be printed an account of a wedding concluding with the frank admission that it pays to advertise.—Charlotte (N. C.) Observer.

Gate Between Two Rooms.

It proved a blessing in one house. It is fastened in the doorway, between the nursery and "mother's room." There are times when the mother likes to watch the children without being right among them. Often sewing or writing may be done more easily with the gate between the mother and the little ones.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Novels and Serious Books.

Do the public libraries cater exclusively to the novel-reader? Statistics prepared under the supervision of the Budget Exhibit committee prove otherwise. Out of a collection of 1,556,852 volumes, the public libraries contain only 380,287 novels, as against 1,023,834 books for the student and serious reader.—New York World.

Truth About "Midnight Oil."

People talk about the midnight oil as if it had some virtue attached to it. In truth, four times out of five, the midnight oil is mere over-work, or means that you have neglected some duty to which you should have attended before the sun went below the horizon.—Edward Everett Hale.

Fitted for the Business.

"My son John," proudly remarked Mrs. McAllister to some one who had inquired about the family, "he's runnin' the drug store now. He's been doing it for a year or more. You know he was to college an' studied palmistry so's to fit himself for the business."

Advantage of Cheerfulness.

There are those who sneer at the cheerful philosopher and call him a cheerful idiot, but the cheerful idiot seldom goes adrift in his mind. Those who constantly travel the dark side of melancholy street are the ones who forget their real names and what they are here for.

Keep Plants Free From Dust.

Dust is an enemy to plant life. Plants breathe through their leaves; therefore it is necessary to keep them free from dust. At least once a week, and oftener if the room is very warm or dusty, the plants should be put in the bathtub on their side and gently sprinkled with a bath spray.

The Average Man's Life.

Uncle Pennywise says: "What a drab life the average man leads. I never went to a masked ball, or a polo tournament, or a house party. Never ate a truffle or uttered an epigram. I never even tasted Burgundy, although half my favorite characters in fiction have wallowed in it."

The Only Authorities.

One preacher declares that childless wives ought to be shipped out of the country. Then who would write for the newspapers, telling mothers how to take care of their babies?—Toledo Blade.

Electric Bells Protect Orchards.

So familiar have electric bells become to most of us that even their sound at unexpected times or in unusual places rarely startles us. Not so with birds, to which the sudden ringing of a bell on a tree or a post means something far more uncanny than any scarecrow flapping in the wind. Knowing this, the head master of an Austrian school has patented an electric scarecrow system in which a clock makes the connections at irregular intervals to electric bells scattered over the orchard.

Ready With Suggestion.

A superintendent of a city Sunday school endeavored to give the summer meetings added attractiveness. Upon a certain warm Sunday lemonade was served. At the close of the service the superintendent announced that slips of paper would be passed round and the pupils allowed to make suggestions as to methods of making the meetings still more attractive. One youngster wrote: "Put more sugar in the lemonade."

Here's Champion Nature Faker.

Some one was telling Sam about the longevity of the mud turtle. "Yes," said Sam, "I know all about that, for once I found a venerable old fellow in a meadow, who was so old that he could scarcely wiggle his tail, and on his back was carved (tolerably plain, considering all things), these words: 'Paradise, Year 1, Adam.'"

Friendly Confidences.

"What did my ma say to you when you came in?" inquired Johnny of his friend who had come to tea. "She said she was very pleased to see me." "I'm glad," said Johnny in a relieved tone. "Cos she said this morning she hoped you wouldn't come."—Stray Stories.

Only Men Can Adapt Himself.

While men in all parts of the world make their homes in exceptionally hot or cold places and move from one to the other without any apparent physical discomfort, it is found that animals or plants which would flourish in one could not survive in the other.

How It Worked.

"How did that assembled car of yours work, Slithers?" asked Slidad. "Oh, like a good many other assemblies—when we got out on the road with it there'd always be some kind of a deadlock, and we couldn't pass anything," said Slithers.—Harper's Weekly.

Practice Will Make Perfect.

Practice thyself even in the things which thou despairest of accomplishing. For even the left hand, which is ineffectual for all other things for want of practice, holds the bridle more vigorously than the right hand; for it has been practiced in this.—Marcus Aurelius.

Would Have Preferred Cheese.

Rain in Washington ate up over $2,000 worth in bills, but we are of the opinion that if they had been given an option in the matter they would have preferred to have had it in cheese.

Relative Prominence.

"That distinguished guest made quite an impression in your community during his brief visit." "Yes," replied Farmer Corntossel; "there were moments when he seemed nigh as important as the chairman of the reception committee."

The Loved and Lost.

A bachelor shouldn't feel sad as he sits and thinks of the beautiful girl that was. So many more bachelors have no girl that was!—Lippincott's Magazine.

Lost for Good.

Redd—"Did you hear about my neighbor losing control of his motor car?" Greene—"No, I didn't." Redd—"Well, he did. The sheriff's got it now!"

Selfish Interest.

"You seem to be developing a great interest in conservation." "I am," replied Mr. Cumrox. "If they keep cutting down the trees, there won't be any woods for me to take to when mother and the girls get up these rounds of social gayety."

Temperament No Defense.

Woman wants divorce from her husband because she caught him painting a widow's roof. Being an ordinary roof painter, he cannot plead artistic temperament as an excuse.

Earliest Expressions of Thought.

History, as it lies at the root of all science, is also the first distinct product of man's spiritual nature; his earliest expression of what may be called thought.—Carlyle.

She Will Change Then.

Mrs. Crawford—Although my daughter is such a big girl, she's still afraid of the dark. Mrs. Crabshaw—Don't worry about that, my dear. She'll soon be in love.—Judge.

Natural Curiosity.

On the hills of Abbeville, S. C., was picked up a piece of quartz about the size of a thimble. It contains a small bead that shifts about and appears to be a drop of water.

Think Shark Can Smell Death.

There is an old superstition among sailors, which is still believed in, that when a shark persistently follows a vessel it is a sign that some person on board is going to die. The alleged reason is that the great fish can scent death.

The mintage of wisdom is to know that rest is rust, and that real life is in love, laughter and work.—Elbert Hubbard.

Aristocratic Dairy Farmers.

Dairy farming is popular as a genuine source of income to the British aristocracy.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

School days for the farmer.

—o—

V. J. Hungerford was in from Leroy Tuesday.

—o—

Mott & Bosworth have sold their dray business to S. A. Dale.

—o—

Hiram college students seem to think that no education is a big joy ride.

—o—

Miss Ethyl Winchester of N. Madison is the guest of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Truitson.

—o—

One of the first signs of spring. W. M. Werner received a shipment of two tons of garden seed Friday of last week.

—o—

When a fellow knows he is in wrong he usually tries to get out of it by doing more talking than the other fellow.

—o—

The Wadsworth Company now have over forty men employed and the indications are that this year will be one of the best the company has ever had.

—o—

After the Democrats have been progressive for more than 15 years some of the Republican insurgents are trying to make us believe they "saw it first."

—o—

Mrs. G. B. Allen of Geneva, Ed Perry and wife of Montville, and K. O. Perry wife and son of Cleveland, were recent visitors at A. Perry's on Marion avenue.

—o—

J. P. Curtiss of Willoughby was attending the farmers school this week. Mr. Curtiss is a candidate for member of the next legislature on the Socialist ticket.

—o—

Marshall Pierson has resigned his position with Austin's Pharmacy and commenced to work in the chemical department of the Diamond Alkali company on Monday.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Gaskell of McMichen, W. Va., were in Painesville last Saturday. They attended the funeral of the late George A. Gaskell of Ashtabula on Sunday.

—o—

The 2.30 eastbound limited on the C. P. & E. railroad struck a team belonging to E. S. Surko last Saturday at Wickliffe and killed one of the animals. No one was injured in the collision.

—o—

It is said that the Hebrew population of New York city is 908,400, half the total number of Hebrews in the United States. The entire world population of the Hebrews is estimated to be 10,180,000.

—o—

There are a number of good candidates out in the open ready to take the sheriff's office, among them is Mr. O. L. Phelps, one of the good reliable citizens of Madison. He is well qualified for the office.

—o—

The Salvation Army at Ashtabula refused to accept money earned by a Sunday performance of a moving picture show. The captain of that local company will probably be court marshaled when the General hears of such an unusual circumstance.

—o—

O. E. Stevenson, commonly known as "Jim" is from all outward appearances the same "Jim," now that he is out for re-nomination as county commissioner that he is at other times of the year. Being a candidate don't make any difference with him.

—o—

Mr. E. M. Orcutt of Perry is a candidate for county treasurer, the only candidate so far from Perry. Mr. Orcutt has lived in Perry the greater part of his life, he is a successful business man who has the respect and good will of his neighbors and business associates.

—o—

It will be a good day for Painesville and vicinity if a big supply of natural gas is discovered near here. There are many indications that the Jefferson Oil and Gas Co. will find out whether there is any amount of gas under the surface of Concord before leaving the territory.

The St Mary's Dramatic club will present the beautiful southern drama "Down in Dixie" at the high school auditorium, Lincoln's Birthday, Feb 12. The club will have an excellent opportunity of displaying their ability in this play as it is one of the heaviest they have yet presented.

A bulletin of the university of Wisconsin says that alcohol is not, as popularly believed, a stimulant. Its action is declared to be similar to that of chloroform and ether. "The apparent stimulation is really due to paralysis of the highest function of the brain—namely, the power to hold oneself in check."

Judge A. G. Reynolds will be toastmaster at the annual banquet of Geauga county Republicans to be held in Memorial hall, Chardon, on the evening of February 22. Judge Wanamaker of Akron, and John D. Fackler of Cleveland, two of the most prominent progressive leaders in the state are to speak.

C. F. Echternach of Grant street was home a couple of days this week after an extended trip on the road. Mr. Echternach is a successful grower of peaches, he is also an optimist and does not believe that the recent cold weather has killed the peach trees. He added 600 young peach trees to his orchard last year and expects to set out as many more this coming season.

"How can you expect women to develop sufficient ability to be trusted with the reins of government, when so large a percentage of them think of nothing but dress?"

"I can't see why the development shouldn't be brought about. Consider the percentage of men who think of nothing but baseball."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Fairport Congregational Sunday school has received the gift of a large oak bookcase and 200 volumes of books. These books are all popular ones for young people. Any of these books can be used by the people of Fairport for two weeks after which they can have the loan of the book renewed or get another. Books can be procured at the Sunday school hour, 10:45 sun time. Miss Dunbar, assistant librarian at Lake Erie college will have charge of the library.

Democratic politics in the Nineteenth district is beginning to warm up on account of the presidential fight. L. O. Koplin of Akron and E. E. France of Kent are to be anti-Harmon or socalled "Progressive" candidates for national delegates, and Judge O. R. Rockwell and S. O. Rogers of Akron the Harmon candidates. It happens, however, that all of these have been connected more or less with the Garber faction in state politics, whose leader is fighting Harmon.

It is a very easy matter for the county auditor to earn his salary. Every time that he catches a would-be tax dodger and succeeds in adding $125000.00 to the tax duplicate he earns the nice little sum of $1250.00 for the honest taxpayers of the county. The indications now are that W. Albert Davis is working for the interest of Lake county. It is not good form to "gush" over the honest official, but here's hoping that the county or state official who has no favorites, who treats all alike in the application of the law, may live long and receive his reward.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Wheeler of Trumbull, and Warren Patch of Youngstown, visited their mother, Mrs. Mary A. Patch of Newell street last Thursday, that day being the eighty-sixth birthday of Mrs. Patch. Other relatives visited her during the past week, and in addition to receiving the personal congratulations of relatives and friends she received over one hundred letters, cards and other tokens of remembrance. Many of these messages came from former neighbors in the Mahoning valley and from Richmond Ashtabula county; others came from California, W. Virginia and Florida.

In pioneer days a settler near the present town of Albany, Mo., bought for his wife the first cook stove ever seen in that part of the State.

It was an object of great curiosity, and the woman's next door neighbor—who lived ten miles away—came to see how it would work.

Without comment she saw the dinner cooked; she ate the meal with judgment held in reserve, and then remarked, with a shake of the head:

"Well, Sarah, it cooks all right, and the victuals taste good, but I don't believe it will ever be a success."—Youth's Companion.

A farmer wanted to buy a saw, the price was $1.65. The farmer said he could buy in Chicago for $1.35. The merchant said he would duplicate the Chicago price and the farmer agreed to buy it that way. "Now," said the merchant "give me 2 cents for stamp envelope and paper, 5 cents for money order, 25 cents for freight, and $1.36 for saw." The farmer was game and handed over the $1.68 and started to take saw. "Hold on," said the merchant, "I live in Chicago, it takes two weeks to get a saw here from Chicago. Drive over to the freight office in two weeks and I'll try to have the saw there for you. If it is not there telephone me at Chicago."

THE MIDDLE-MAN

Why His Profits Seem Large To Some People.

A nicely dressed lady walked into a local meat market, engaged the head meat cutter in conversation for twenty minutes, asking prices and finding fault with provision laid out for her inspection. At last she ordered one-half pound of sliced dried beef. She requested that the amount be charged and beef delivered. The charge was 19 cents. This to many seems like an "awful" price for one-half of a pound of dried beef.

Now let us consider what the proprietor of market must take into consideration in coming to a correct solution of the questions of profits:

1st—His time.
2nd—Capital invested.
3rd—Cost of beef.
4th—Taxes and insurance.
5th—Money paid to help.
6th—Cost of keeping delivery team.
7th—Incidental expenses.
8th—Loss of use of money by credit system.
9th—Loss by poor accounts.

Considering what the middle man gives for his money (if he gets it) the wonder is that he can make both ends meet.

The man who pays cash and buys in large quantities don't help out a great deal because this buyer asks and usually receives a low price with small margin of profit.

SURPRISE PARTY

Many Painesville Young People Make Merry at Hospitable Home on the Headlands.

Wednesday evening, Jan. 31st, was the occasion of a very pleasant surprise party at the home of Mrs Homer J. Gault at the Headlands, where the following young folks from Painesville arrived at about nine o'clock with a couple of bob-sleds, four horse teams, and horns and bells and everything that goes to make up a happy sleigh-ride party.

Gussie Ferron, Mary Davidson, Jennie Ryder, Margaret Dockery, Mary Cleary, Catharine Kennedy, Mary Ferron, Margaret Ferron, Nora Ferron, Julia Larsey, Bessie White, Frances White, Bessie Naylor, Alma Baine, Margaret Baine, Eva Flanigan, Alice Fitzgerald, Zelpha Rafferty, John Lynch, Owen Ferron, Thomas McCabe, Thomas Mulqueeny, Henry O'Leary, Ralph O'Leary, Harold Brown, Frank Stack, Mike Sehlan, Roy Flanigan, Francis Miltner.

The men furnished all the music, and the ladies the well-filled baskets of "goodies." Owen P. Ferron spent lots of his time "reading the Delineator," and the rest of us played "Whirl the pie tin" etc. We say those twelve men did some fine singing which we much enjoyed. The thirty guests and the hostess alike enjoyed a delightful evening.

ACCIDENTS

CAUSE DEATH OF TWO LAKE COUNTY MEN.

William Braden, Well Known in Painesville, Dies After Fall on Cement Floor

William Braden, aged 65 years, and well known, having been deliveryman for J. Haughton and later filling the same position for Webster & Son, died at 7 o'clock Sunday evening. The particulars leading up to his death are as follows:

While turning a sleigh around on a concrete floor in the barn of Capt. L. S. Cummings on St. Clair street on Saturday afternoon, he slipped on the floor, and falling, struck his head on the concrete. For a moment he was dazed and after remarking to William Hell, a companion that he felt dizzy, he went into a stall to harness a horse. A few moments later he was found in an unconscious condition and was at once removed to his home on S. St. Clair street. The man remained in an unconscious condition until the end came.

The deceased is survived by a wife and two children.

The funeral services were held at residence on Wednesday afternoon.

C. C. Rand, a resident of North Madison, well known in Painesville, was found dead in the road Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock. He was on his way home from Madison village and it is supposed that Mr Rand slipped and struck his head on the ice. Mr Rand was about 70 years old, and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral was held at his late residence, Monday, at 1:30 p. m.

FAIR ATTENDANCE

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL BRINGS MANY FARMERS TOGETHER

Ladies Also Receive Suggestions Through Medium of Home Makers Course Which Is Attractive Feature of Work of School

The cold weather is not keeping the farmers and the farmer's wives and daughters away from the Agricultural Extension school being held here this week. Many Painesville city people are also taking advantage of the good work being done.

Able instructors are giving lectures every day upon various topics of special interest and in many cases of great value to farmers. The home makers' course is proving to be all that was claimed for it. The ladies who are in attendance are very enthusiastic regarding the work that is being given. Many of the women who have a just claim to the title of good housekeepers, say that this school has been worth every bit of the effort they have made to attend. Some of them have come in from some distance out in the country.

Letter From Washington.

Mica, Washington
Feb. 1, 1912.

Editor Lake County Herald:

Will tell you a little of our winter and something of the country. The winter has been unusually cold with deep snow. Just at present the snow is nearly gone and such mud I never saw.

I am fifteen miles from Spokane, Washington, and five minutes walk from "The Inland Empire Car Line," with cars running often during the day. On this line are many fine tressel work bridges, one which measures one thousand five hundred feet long, and is one hundred and fifty feet from ravine below, one fairly holds their breath while riding over this bridge.

I never know the direction I am going on this Line, as the road winds in and out among the hills and mountains.

Mica mountain is in fine view at the east and at times is very beautiful, especially at sunset.

North of us are mountains galore. Near the top of one stands a huge rock like a sentinel guarding the surrounding country.

Fruit and vegetables are raised in great abundance and are far superior to those grown in Ohio. Wenatchee is of course the wonderful fruit section of Washington.

Last evening a surprise was given an aged gentleman and wife in our section, who are going this month to Alberta, Canada. Thirty-nine of the friends were present and a pleasant time was enjoyed.

DEATH OF SIDNEY JUSTUS

Aged and Respected Citizen of Mentor Passed Away Tuesday Morning.

Sidney Justus of Mentor, aged [illegible] years, died suddenly Tuesday at 3 o'clock a. m.

Mr. Justus was born in Chardon in 1828, and came to Mentor sixteen years later where he has resided continuously for 70 years, about 55 years of which time his home was on Mentor avenue where he died.

The deceased was a man of more than the ordinary in physical and mental activity, and was highly respected by all who knew him. He was for years one of the leading fruit growers of the county and was well informed and successful in bee culture. He was for over 50 years a member of the Mentor Disciple church. His wife died about three years ago. The only surviving member of the family is a son, C. E. Justus, well known in Mentor and vicinity.

The funeral will be held this afternoon, Thursday, at 1:30 p. m. from the late residence.

SUBURBAN DAY

Merchants of Cleveland After Village Trade.

"The fourth day of the week, commonly called Wednesday, will be known as Suburban day in Cleveland if plans of the retail merchants' board and other similar organizations are put into effect. The first such day is to be on March 6, and thereafter once a week special attractions are to be devised to get as many customers as possible to come to Cleveland and spend their money."—Sunday Plain Dealer.

Painesville people will please notice the last few words—"come to Cleveland and spend their money." Certainly everything will be arranged very nicely for everyone to "come to Cleveland and spend their money." Nice indeed for Cleveland.

The question for Painesville people to consider is, wouldn't it be a very good thing for Painesville if everyone would come to Painesville to spend their money. Think of the churches we could build, the fairs we could promote, the hospitals we could support, the pavements we could lay, the parks we could make beautiful, the poor we could clothe and the good in a hundred ways we could do—if every one would come to Painesville and spend their money.

In Colorado.

The Denver News has just finished a poll of its readers and it describes the result in this way: Woodrow Wilson, 3,473; William J. Bryan, 2,388; Champ Clark, 1,714; Judson Harmon 436; Thomas R. Marshall, 303; Governor Joseph W. Folk, 214; O. W. Underwood, 191; Mayor William J. Gaynor, 22; Mayor R. W. Speer, 12; William R. Hearst, 11; Governor John A. Dix, 10; Levina C. Mattison, of Colorado, 1; John W. Kern, 1. Total, 9,387.

The leading conservative candidate Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio, is not popular among Colorado democrats. He only polled 432 votes, or less than 5 per cent of the total poll.

Every town in the state of Colorado large enough to be worthy of the name of town participated in this remarkable contest, and ten states, including Colorado, were represented by votes, although the contest was limited to Colorado. There were about 400 of the outside votes from Wyoming, North and South Dakota, western Kansas, Nebraska, Arizona, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas. Every vote that came in on the News ballot, printed every day in the News for one week, with the name and address of the voter attached, was counted.

The most remarkable feature, perhaps, of the contest just ended is the strength which William J. Bryan, hero of three battles for the presidency as leader of the democratic ticket, has shown. The war horse of democracy pressed Wilson hard. Another amazing fact is shown in the vote for Harmon. Although Colorado is known for progressive tendencies, and the fights against monopolistic government here have been and are fierce and Titanic, yet few would have believed that Harmon was so weak as this test vote would indicate. If the ratio remained the same, Harmon would lose Colorado in a heavy republican landslide.

April 5 Arbor Day.

Governor Judson Harmon has proclaimed Friday, April 5, as Arbor day. He requests that all the people who can, in schools, homes and public places observe the day.

For a sprain you will find Chamberlain's Liniment excellent. It allays the pain, removes the soreness, and soon restores the parts to a healthy condition. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

VERY COURTEOUS TO CROOKS

New York Policemen Respect Their Feelings, but Do Not Let Them Linger.

Our polite policemen do not give visiting crooks the bum's rush any more, says the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star. On the other hand, courtesy and consideration enter into their dealings with the under world. Even a confidence man has feelings, you understand. But the effect seems to be about the same. The other night Second Police Commissioner Dougherty was standing on a corner, watching Broadway go by. A tall, well-dressed man, swinging one of the shepherd's crook canes that Fifth avenue affects nowadays, wearing a comical checkered cap and an air of intense ennui, sauntered along the pavement. "'Lo, Billy," said Mr. Dougherty.

The tall, well-dressed man swung quickly on his heel. He was surprised, but perfectly calm. As he tapped his leg with his cane and talked to the commish, he smiled easily. They might have been a pair of friends met casually. The quality of the 1911 crop of kittens might have been under discussion. "Just got in from Chicago half an hour ago," said the man addressed as Billy. "Didn't expect to run across you quite so soon."

"Have a cigar, Billy," said Commissioner Dougherty. "Too bad you're starting west again tonight, isn't it? I would have been delighted to talk with you a bit about old times."

Billy looked at Dougherty with a question in his eye. "On the level, commissioner," said he, "I haven't done a thing. I'd like to stay in town long enough to get a polish. I've been in Chicago too long."

"Your polish," said Commissioner Dougherty, "costs New York too much money. Mr. Adams will see you to your train."

A detective in the background came up at the Dougherty nod. He shook hands with Billy cordially upon introduction. Dougherty allowed that the western operator would take the first train back to the pee-rairies. The three men smiled in appreciation of the tiny little jest. Then Billy and the detective started to stroll toward the Grand Central station.

"So long, commissioner," said the crook.

"Bye-bye, Billy," said the commissioner.

A Suggestion.

The restaurant manager stood behind the cashier's desk, wearing his stock-in-trade smile for each customer.

An old gentleman came up. "I notice," said he, fumbling with his wallet, "that you advertise to make your own pies."

"Yes, sir," answered the manager proudly, "we do."

"Will you permit me to offer a suggestion?"

"Certainly, sir, certainly. We should be most happy to have you."

"Well, then, let some one else make 'em."—Exchange.

Looking for Trouble.

Some persons are always looking for trouble, and certainly the penny prophets are terribly pessimistic as to the prospects of 1912. The "Random" writer of the Observer tries to cheer us up. "If one must look for trouble surely it should be in the year after this—the year of the unlucky 13." If you really want to look for trouble at once you will add the figures 1912 together and find they are 13.—London Chronicle.

Rossetti and Publicity.

Rossetti had a good notion of advertising, though he refrained from buying a lion for his back garden menagerie and escaped the fate of the young Norfolk squire. He wanted to buy a young elephant. "I mean him," said Gabriel, "to clean the windows, and then when passersby see the elephant cleaning the windows they will say, 'Who lives in that house?' And people will tell them, 'Oh, that's a painter called Rossetti.' And they will say, 'I think I should like to buy some of that man's pictures,' and so they will ring and come in and buy."

Ancient Sculpture Found.

Some large bas-reliefs dating from the stone age have been discovered at Laussel in the French province of Dordogne. They are sculptured on the rock of a shallow grotto and represent animals only. It is thought that the primitive sculptors probably refrained from introducing the human figure into art by a taboo similar to the present Mohammedan prohibition of such representation. The animals shown in the reliefs are reindeer, oxen, bisons and a huge horse.

His Recommendation.

Hairdresser—Ah, that is a wax, sir. You need never worry about that coming off your mustache with the damp weather. I've had one lot on mine for a month—believe me, sir, one month—including a bath!—Punch.

Some Luck.

"Been hunting?"

"Yes."

"Any luck?"

"Some. Found a man who would cash a check when the game warden told me what the fine was."

Slight Exaggeration.

"Money? Bah!" exclaimed Mr. Carnegie. "Anybody can make money." Some of the men who have passed the age of forty-five years will find it difficult to refrain from regarding this as a slight exaggeration.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Lost His Job Then.

Settlement Worker—And your husband hasn't earned a single cent in 22 years?

Poor Woman—No, mum. He lost his vote while he was in jail.

TRAGIC CLIMAX TO A ROMANCE

DEATH, SELF SOUGHT, CLAIMS LIVES OF COUPLE WHO ELOPED AND THEN MARRIED.

LEAVE NO FAREWELL LETTER

Bodies of Frederick Noble and Louise Suydam Noble Are Found Clasped in Each Other's Arms in Apartment.

New York City.—Death, self sought, put the final tragic climax to the romance of Frederick William Noble and Louise White Suydam Noble. Clasped in each other's arms they were found lifeless from gas asphyxiation in their pretty apartment at 62 West 12th street. There was no possibility of accident. Their street clothes had been laid carefully away. Every room had been put to rights; one door had been bolted and the other barricaded, so that no one might enter until the deadly fumes had done their work. They left no farewell message, no written explanation. But in the minds of the few persons who knew them—especially the girl—lately, their motive was entirely clear.

They were not happy together. They never really loved each other. The young wife never loved any man except Walter Lispenard Suydam, the millionaire husband from whom she ran away on September 6, last. Fred Noble, the son of a Brooklyn plumber, knew this; knew that she married him only to set herself as right as might be before the world. He married her only to give her what standing a wedding ring might impart. With the excitement of the elopement over with, the newspaper notoriety come to an end, the final divorce papers granted and the marriage—only three weeks ago—a settled thing, the life of the runaways became a humdrum, monotonous affair. There was no newness for one to find in the other. There were no friends save two or three to give them new interests. They had only each other and their interest in each other had been nearly played out, clandestinely, before it should have begun, when the girl was another man's wife.

The end of the romance of Fred Noble and Louise Suydam thus came in less than five months after its beginning. On September 6 they ran away from the adjoining summer homes of their families at Blue Point, L. I. A week later they were found dwelling in the Regina apartments here. In another week divorce papers were served upon them. The divorce was granted and made final on January 8. In the interim all their friends, even most of the newspaper men who used to visit them socially after the first "story" was over, had dropped away. The young couple were married January 10.

DIE AS ICE BRIDGE GOES OUT

Buckeye Youth, Man and Wife Float Down the Niagara Gorge to Their Death.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Three people—a man and a woman and a youth—went to their deaths when the ice bridge which every winter spans the lower gorge between the American falls and the upper steel arch bridge broke from its moorings and floated down the river. The youth was Burrell Hecock of Cleveland, O. The couple is supposed to be Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Stanton of Toronto.

Hecock lost his life in a futile effort to assist the man in an attempt to save his wife. He might have followed his chum, Ignatius Roth, also of Cleveland, to safety before the bridge disintegrated, but he was then assisting the man with the woman and before he realized it the bridge had broken into pieces and Hecock found himself on a small floe of ice, floating down the river.

BRITISH KING AND QUEEN HOME

Their Majesties Are Given Great Naval Welcome After Their Three Months' Absence From England.

London, Eng.—A great naval welcome was accorded King George and his consort, Queen Mary, when they returned to English waters, after being absent over three months, during which time they were crowned Emperor and Empress of India at the durbar on December 12.

Their majesties landed at Portsmouth February 5. The passage through Spithead of the royal yacht Medina and the reception by the first division of the home fleet took place in the morning. Thousands of pounds of powder were exploded in the royal salutes that were fired by the two sections of the fleet.

Children Incinerated in Beds.

Phillipsburg, N. J.—Three children, two boys and a little girl seven, were burned to death when a fire broke out early in the morning in the home of Charles Ciccorelli, owner of a moving picture show at Alpha, N. Y. The blaze started from an overheated stove and developed so rapidly that the little ones, who were sleeping in a rear room on the second floor, were incinerated in their beds. Five residents of Alpha were injured in attempting to rescue the children.

Wireless Saves Thirty-four.

Norfolk, Va.—The British steamer Consolo, cotton laden from Galveston for Hamburg, flame-swept in a long, futile race for port, sank 40 miles south of Cape Henry. Her crew of 34 men, refugees on the British steamer Castle Eden, were landed at Newport News. It was another triumph for intercommunication among ocean craft, for the Castle Eden, headed from Savannah for Danish ports, picked up the wireless call for help from the imperiled crew on the Consolo and gave assistance.

URGES FRIENDS TO WORK

STATEMENT AUTHORIZED BY LA FOLLETTE IS ISSUED.

Managers Believe That a Few Weeks' Rest Will Restore Health of Senator From Wisconsin.

Washington, D. C.—After one of the longest and hardest fights in the history of American politics, Senator La Follette authorized a statement which is regarded by even his friends as an admission that he can no longer continue to the lead in the progressive cause or make the fight for the presidency that he has planned. Through the day the senator had under consideration an unqualified withdrawal. He is under no illusions as to his physical condition. But his managers, unwilling to permit him to withdraw till the last hope has ebbed, persuaded him to modify the statement and it was issued as follows:

"Senator La Follette finds it necessary to take a few weeks' rest. This may prevent his making speeches in the states which are to hold early primaries and his friends in those states will make such campaign for him as in their judgment will best serve the progressive principles which his candidacy represents. In any state where his friends find it impossible because of his present inability to fill speaking engagements, to secure the election of delegates for him, they will best serve the progressive cause by instructing delegates where they find it possible to do so, for the thorough going and definite principles which he has advocated and aided in embodying in progressive statutes proposed in constructive measures which he has introduced in the United States senate and in the addresses which he has already made in this campaign.

"Senator La Follette was urged to become a candidate by the most active progressive Republicans of the country because they believed that he, better than any other man by the whole course of his political career, represented those principles. He would never have consented to stand as a candidate excepting in good faith. Though he finds his plans interfered with by his temporary indisposition, in fulfillment of the implied pledge which his candidacy made to those who have always believed in the sincerity and constancy of his purposes, his name will be presented to the national Republican convention and delegates will make an aggressive contest for his nomination and for a strong platform. To this end the progressive Republican campaign committee will devote its best efforts. Whatever time Senator La Follette can devote to the campaign after taking a needed rest for a few weeks will be given subject to such demands as his official duties make upon him.

"W. L. HOUSER."

EXCAVATING CITY OF NAZARETH

Site Uncovered Upon Which It Is Declared Stood Carpenter Workshop of Joseph.

London, England.—Excavations at Nazareth have uncovered the site upon which it is declared by competent archeologists stood the carpenter workshop of Joseph, husband of Mary, mother of Jesus. The Franciscan monks on whose property the discovery was made have bought up all the adjoining buildings and intend to erect a magnificent temple to mark the spot. It is also believed that the spot where Christ's transfiguration took place has been found. It is an imposing rough hewn rock resembling an ancient altar.

HISTORIC MANSION DESTROYED

"Betsy" Patterson's Birthplace, Filled With Many Relics, Is Burned to the Ground.

Sykesville, Md.—The old, historic mansion at Springfield, the birthplace of "Betsy" Patterson and later the home of former Gov. Frank Brown, was burned to the ground and practically all its contents destroyed. Filled with relics, the mansion was a show place for lovers of Maryland history. To every visitor was pointed out the window from which "Betsy" Patterson jumped to mount her horse to ride to Baltimore and meet Jerome Bonaparte, whom she was later to marry.

Grandmother at Age of 33.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—When the stork visited Mr. and Mrs. Fred Colburn of Miners Mills and left a little son, Mrs. John H. Mohr of the same town became a grandmother at the age of 33 years.

Mrs. Mohr was married when only 17 years old. The first born was a girl and she was married about a year ago to Fred Colburn.

Mrs. Mohr boasts that she is the youngest grandmother in the state.

Murders Traveler on Train.

Moose Jaw, Sask.—An old man suddenly became insane on the eastbound express near Swift Current and emptied his revolver among the passengers, killing John G. Kluedt of Garrison, N. D.

The maniac, whose name has not been learned, committed suicide.

Kluedt, a wealthy land speculator, was returning home from Medicine Hat with his brother, Gustav A. Kluedt. He was asleep when the first shot from the lunatic's revolver struck him in the back of the head.

Make Arrest in Sicily.

Erie, Pa.—Tini Diovambattista Arecchi, whose body was found lying in the snow near the Perry Iron works at the foot of Wayne street in Erie on the morning of February 7, 1911, was killed by the brother of the girl he is alleged to have wronged and deserted in Italy, is the information given by the police.

Joseph Asposito, alias Joe Como, of Flamara, Regio, Calabria, Sicily, was arrested by detectives of the Italian government. Asposito will be tried in Sicily.

INDICTS 32 IN THE DYNAMITE CASE

FEDERAL GRAND JURY WHICH INVESTIGATED THE BOMB OUTRAGES MAKES REPORT.

NAMES ORDERED SUPPRESSED

Summonses Are Being Prepared for the Arrest of 40 or 50 Labor Leaders Scattered Throughout 18 States.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The federal grand jury which has been investigating the McNamara bomb outrages, returned 32 indictments before Judge Anderson. Summonses are being prepared for the arrest of 40 or 50 labor leaders scattered throughout 18 states.

Clerks Get Busy.

The courtroom was packed when Herbert M. Glossbrenner, foreman of the grand jury, lugged the indictments in from jury room. The names of those indicted were ordered suppressed. The number of indictments does not indicate the number of men indicted as many are charged with the same offense in blanket indictments.

It is known that the history of the McNamara's has been traced from the time they exploded their first bomb and practically every person connected with them in transporting dynamite who paid them for their crimes or had knowledge of their operations has been indicted. March 12 was set as arraignment day and clerks began the work of making certified copies of the indictment and preparing summonses. An effort will be made to arrest every man named at the same hour and nearly every defendant is now known to be under surveillance in different parts of the country. Many of the indictments center around the activities of Ortie McManigal, confessed dynamiter.

Many Are Implicated.

Implicated by the evidence which the government has spent months in examining are believed to be many men active in the iron workers local unions in various cities who, although well known among members of their own craft, are not widely known to the country. The list of men who will be obliged to stand trial here, however, is thought to include several prominent officials or ex-officials of the iron workers who are widely known in labor union circles. The names of the party of labor leaders who went to Boston with McManigal in March, 1909, and showed him how to place the deadly alarm clock arrangement where it would destroy an opera house, were told to the grand jury and all are said on good authority to have been indicted. The same party is accused of taking McManigal to Springfield, Mass., where they dynamited a municipal building. A Chicago man, hitherto unnamed, has been indicted. Other Chicagoans are involved in charges growing out of the gathering and handling of the McNamara defense fund. Men who carried dynamite and had part in explosions from Boston to Los Angeles have been named.

Keeps Names Secret.

The charges are chiefly based on two violations of the federal statutes. One is the statute prohibiting the transportation of dynamite on passenger trains or the shipment of explosives not so labeled. The penalty on conviction is not more than 18 months' imprisonment and $2,000 for each offense.

The other charge is that of conspiracy to do an act in violation of the this clause carries a five year prison term as punishment.

Milwaukee, Chicago, New York, Boston, Cleveland, Peoria, San Francisco, Kansas City, Omaha, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Buffalo, Detroit, Philadelphia, Indianapolis and St. Louis are among the cities in which arrests are expected.

MAKES CHARGES AGAINST TRUST

Uncle Sam Accuses Steel Corporation With Destroying Papers and Documents.

Washington, D. C.—Judge Gray in the United States court of the third circuit has issued an injunction restraining the defendants in the government's anti-trust suit against the United States Steel Corporation from destroying books and papers desired by the government. The injunction was issued on a petition of the department of justice, which alleges that several thousand papers and documents, which were used in the government's criminal prosecution of the "wire pool" last fall, have been destroyed. Among these were letters of the American Steel & Wire Co. and of the United States Steel Export Products Co. and of other subsidiary companies. It is charged that the letters have been destroyed to prevent the government proving its case.

Car Leaps Back, Five Die.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—While running at a high rate of speed an electric car on the Scott Haven division of the West Penn railways jumped the track near Coultersville, Pa., 20 miles from Pittsburgh, and went over a 200-foot embankment. The dead are:

Luke Donnelly, 20, miner, Greenock.

Charles Smith, 35, miner, Greenock.

William McClean, 21, miner, Greenock, Pa.

John Southern, miner, Greenock, Pa.; John Donnelly, miner, Greenock, Pa., brother of Luke Donnelly.

Escaping Gas Fatal to Five.

Philadelphia.—Gas escaping from a broken street main killed five persons and overcame three others living at 23d and Carlton streets, this city. The dead who were found in one house are:

Mrs. Sophia Drazel, 28, and her children, Rosie, two years; Stephen, three years, and Joseph, five years, and John Wichick, a boarder.

Mrs. Drazel's husband, who is employed in a steam bakery, left home at 3 a. m., without noticing the escaping gas.

WRITES ABOUT SUFFRAGE

ROOSEVELT DISCUSSES ISSUE IN EDITORIAL IN THE OUTLOOK.

Colonel Says That "He Has Never Been Able to Take a Very Heated Interest in the Question."

New York City.—Theodore Roosevelt discussed "Women's Rights and the Duties of Both Men and Women," in an editorial in the current issue of The Outlook. He says in part:

"I believe in woman's rights. I believe even more earnestly in the performance of duty by both men and women. I heartily believe in equality of rights as between man and woman, but also in full and emphatic recognition of the fact that normally there cannot be identity of function. Indeed, there must normally be complete dissimilarity of function between them, and the effort to ignore this potent fact is silly. I believe in woman's suffrage wherever the women want it. Where they do not want it, the suffrage should not be forced upon them. I think that it would be well to let the women themselves, and only the women, vote at a special election as to whether they do or do not wish the vote as a permanent possession. This is peculiarly a case for the referendum to those most directly affected. I should be entirely content to abide the decision, either way, for, though I do not think that the damage prophesied from women's voting would come, nor has come where it has been tried, I also think that very much less effect would be produced, one way or the other, than the enthusiasts believe.

"In other words, I do not regard the movement as anything like as important as either its extreme friends or extreme opponents think. It is so much less important than many other reforms that I have never been able to take a very heated interest in it.

"The point which I wish to emphasize is that the supreme importance and high position of the woman of the type of Julia Ward Howe cannot be materially increased by the possession of the ballot. I am glad that the good, wise, and brave mother should have the ballot. I am especially glad if its possession will add to the high dignity of her position in the eyes of men. But I cannot conceive of any man's now failing to hold such a mother as more worthy of respect than any man, or than any other woman."

SUBMARINE SINKS WITH 11 MEN

Craft Is Rammed by Gunboat and Goes Down With All Her Crew, Hope of Rescue Being Given Up.

Portsmouth, England.—The total loss of the British submarine A 3, with the whole of her crew, after collision with the gunboat Hazard, adds another to the long list of similar accidents which have in recent years thrown the British navy and nation into mourning.

Hope of saving the crew of the submarine comprising Lieutenant Orland in command, Lieutenant Ernest Falcon, two other officers and seven men was abandoned when the semi-official reports of those in charge of the Hazard were made to the navy department.

The A 3 sank off the eastern end of the Isle of Wight and went down like a stone immediately after being struck by the Hazard. The A 3 had gone out of harbor to execute a series of diving and torpedo maneuvors.

FOUR ARE STABBED TO DEATH

Bodies of Husband, Wife, Woman and Unidentified Man Are Found by Police in Tenement.

Lawrence, Mass.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Favine, Mrs. Annie Denis and an unidentified man were found by the police in the rear room of a tenement house on Valley street. The victims met their deaths by stabbing and the disordered room gave evidence of a desperate struggle.

The greatest mystery surrounds the crime. The occupants of the tenement heard the noise of a struggle.

MURDERS THREE, THEN SELF

Young Man Kills Father, Cuts Throats of Brother and Sister and Takes Own Life.

Appleton, Wis.—William Maihland, aged 21, of Binghamton, after shooting and killing his father, Louis Maihland, 66, cut the throats of his brother John, 8, and his sister Dora, 16. He then slashed his own throat, dying shortly after. Maihland ran away from home last October, but was brought back last week by his father to do the house work. This work he disliked and the triple murder and suicide resulted.

Noted Military Man Dies.

Detroit, Mich.—General Luther S. Trowbridge, one of Michigan's best known military and political characters, died here at the age of 75. He won his chief fame at Gettysburg, being made a brigadier general for gallantry in that battle. At his death he was appraiser of the port of Detroit. General Trowbridge entered Yale college but was prevented from graduating because of trouble with his eyes. He practiced law until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he went to the front as a major.

Won't Commute Sentence.

Albany, N. Y.—Against the recommendations of District Attorney Whitman and Col. Joseph F. Scott, superintendent of prisons, Governor Dix denied executive clemency to Folke Engel Brandt, who asked for a commutation of his 30-year sentence to state prison. Brandt was committed to Sing Sing five years ago, after pleading guilty to a charge of burglary in the first degree in entering the home of Mortimer L. Schiff, where he had formerly been employed as valet and stealing two stock pins.

MYRON T. HERRICK

According to reports from Washington, Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland, O., has been offered the position of ambassador to France to succeed Robert Bacon.

FEAR FELT FOR FUNDS

THREE BANKING HOUSES CLOSED BY STATE AUTHORITIES.

Gallipolis Depositors in Defunct Howard Bank Await Return of Banker With Anxiety.

Gallipolis.—When 150 depositors of the Farmers' and Merchants' bank, many of whom are working women, sought information regarding the fate of their savings, which are tied up by the closing of the bank, they discovered there is not much, if any, protection for them under the banking laws of Ohio.

Their anxiety was further increased by the closing of two state banks, in which J. S. Howard of Columbus is interested, by the state banking department. Howard owned the private Farmers' and Merchants' bank, the closing of which precipitated action against the State bank of Byesville and the Albany State bank. All three of these institutions are now closed.

Just what the outcome will be cannot be determined until J. S. Howard returns here and an accounting of the finances of the institution is secured.

Fatal Scrap Over Woman at Ironton.

Ironton.—While at work Robert Brown was in receipt of a telephone message from Mrs. C. H. Davis. He went home and found Mr. Davis there with his wife. Brown, after a fight, stabbed Davis repeatedly, one cut severing his jugular vein. Davis then staggered to the sidewalk and died. Brown then surrendered to the city police. Both men are married and each has a child.

Elected the Postmaster.

Berea.—Carl J. Eckert was elected to the office of postmaster. He secured 221 votes. The next highest contestant received 56.

This is subject to the approval of Congressman Paul Howland, who left the choice to the voters after they had petitioned him for the privilege.

The vacancy was caused by the death of Postmaster H. B. Wisner.

Fire Loss Is $2500.

Washington C. H., Feb. 3.—Fire which originated from the furnace nearly destroyed the frame building at Court and North streets, occupied as residence and offices. The household goods of Peter Tracy were destroyed. Office furnishings and fixtures of Drs. L. M. and T. W. McFadden were saved. The loss is $2000.

Traction to be Extended.

St. Marys.—Extension of the Dayton, Covington and Piqua traction line, to connect with the Western Ohio at Fort Loramie, is to be started in the spring.

Fire in a Picture Show.

Mansfield.—There was a small panic in the Alvin motion picture theater when fire in the operator's box destroyed some $500 worth of films.

The theater attendants prevented a jam at the doors and no one was injured. Operator Bush escaped with slight burns.

To the Primrose Bonfire.

Toledo.—Becoming impressed with a sermon of worldliness delivered to them by an evangelist, a number of Perrysburg citizens made a huge bonfire to which they contributed paper-back novels, chewing gum, playing cards, dice and poker chips.

Boy Badly Injured.

Zimmerman.—One eye being forced from the socket, the bones on both jaws broken, his teeth gone and head and body lacerated and bruised comprise the injuries incurred by Alfred Smart, 10, when he fell under a wagon loaded with wheat.

Gas Range Explodes.

Bellefontaine.—Mrs. L. Raubinaugh is reported as probably fatally injured when gas exploded in the oven of her cooking range. Mrs. Raubinaugh was badly burned and bruised.

Fire in a Paint Factory.

Cincinnati.—Fire broke out in the broke out on the third floor in the plant of the Eagle White Lead Co., gutted that building and destroyed the contents. The loss will reach $125,000, most of which was covered by insurance.

Bellefontaine.—Resolutions advocating parcels post, protection for quail and condemning single tax were adopted by the Miami Farmers' institute.

Fostoria.—The farmers' institute adopted resolutions which include declarations for good roads, better country schools, more pay for teachers, initiative and referendum, under restrictions, and the eradication of saloons. The killing of quail was deprecated.

Akron.—A train struck the rig in which they were driving here. Harry Emead, blacksmith, and W. T. Ferguson, a butcher, were thrown for a distance of 50 feet.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

HER PLANE MADE.

Harry—Where do you propose to go next summer?

Helen—I intend to propose to a man who is in a position to take me wherever I want to go.

Reward of Merit.

"Go on, sah! Go on and blow yo' hawn 'bout who yo' is and what yo' dunn!" impatiently said old Brother Bogus. "But lemme specify dat I'se de oo'y extinguished citizen o' dis town dat de president o' de railroad—dis yuh road, right yuh!—paid any 'tention to when he went th'oo in his special kyah last week. Yesseh! I wuz yuh when de train passed—right on dis spot!—and dat 'ar pu'ffy white man gimme a fine see-gyah; flung it to me out'n da' window n' de kyah, en' 't wus lit, too!"—Puck.

He Ought to Get It.

"On what grounds do you seek a divorce from your wife?" asked the lawyer.

"Simply because of a pun," replied the long suffering husband. "You see, she's a sculptress, and it gets on my nerves to hear her remark twenty times a day, 'Will you love me when I mold?'"

After a Fashion.

Church Member—Does your father always practice what he preaches?

Minister's Son—Yessum; before a mirror.—Cornell Widow.

THE CARELESS GROCER

Slandered, and Great Good Came of It.

A careless grocer left the wrong package at a Michigan home one day and thereby brought a great blessing to the household.

"Two years ago I was a sufferer from stomach troubles, so acute that the effort to digest ordinary food gave me great pain, and brought on a condition of such extreme nervousness that I could not be left alone. I thought I should certainly become insane. I was so reduced in flesh that I was little better than a living skeleton. The doctors failed to give me relief and I despaired of recovery.

"One day our groceryman left a package of Grape-Nuts food by mistake, so I tried some for dinner. I was surprised to find that it satisfied my appetite and gave me no distress whatever. The next meal I ate of it again, and to be brief, I have lived for the past year almost exclusively on Grape-Nuts. It has proved to be a most healthful and appetizing food, perfectly adapted to the requirements of my system.

"Grape-Nuts is not only easily digested and assimilated, but I find that since I have been using it I am able to eat anything else my appetite fancies, without trouble from indigestion. The stomach trouble and nervousness have left me, I have regained my plumpness and my views of life are no longer despondent and gloomy.

"Other members of my family, especially my husband, (whose old enemy, the 'heart-burn,' has been vanquished) have also derived great benefit from the use of Grape-Nuts food and we think no morning meal complete without it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

URGES NEEDS OF PUBLIC DOMAIN

Immediate Legislation Is Imperative, Says the President.

ASKS NEW LAWS FOR ALASKA

Rules Governing Acquisition of Arid or Semi-Arid Lands Should Be Modified—Commission on Cost of Living.

Washington, Feb. 2.—A special message on the work of the interior department and other matters was read to Congress today.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

There is no branch of the Federal jurisdiction which calls more imperatively for immediate legislation than that which concerns the public domain, and especially the part of that domain which is in Alaska.

The progress under the reclamation act has made clear the defects of its limitations, which should be remedied. The rules governing the acquisition of homesteads, of land that is not arid or semi-arid, are not well adapted to the perfecting of title to land made arable by government reclamation work.

I concur with the Secretary of the Interior in his recommendation that, after entry is made upon land being reclaimed, actual occupation as a homestead of the same be not required until two years after entry, but that cultivation of the same shall be required, and that the present provision under which the land is to be paid for in ten annual installments shall be so modified as to allow a patent issue for the land at the end of five years' cultivation and three years' occupation, with a reservation of a government lien for the amount of the unpaid purchase money. This leniency to the reclamation homesteader will relieve him from occupation at a time when the condition of the land makes it most burdensome and difficult, and at the end of five years will furnish him with a title upon which he can borrow money and continue the improvement of his holding.

I also concur in the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior that all of our public domain should be classified, and that each class should be disposed of or administered in the manner most appropriate to that particular class.

Leasing of Government Lands.

The chief change, however, which ought to be made and which I have already recommended in previous messages and communications to congress, is that by which government coal land and phosphate and other mineral lands containing non-metalliferous minerals, shall be leased by the government, with restrictions as to size and time, resembling those which now obtain throughout the country between the owners in fee and the lessees who work the mines, and to leases like those which have been most successful in Australia, New Zealand, and Nova Scotia. The showing made by investigations into the successful working of the leasing system leaves no doubt as to its wisdom and practical utility. Requirements as to the working of the mine during the term may be so framed as to prevent any holding of large mining properties merely for speculation, while the royalties may be made sufficiently low, not unduly to increase the cost of the coal mined, and at the same time sufficient to furnish a reasonable income for the use of the public to the community where the mining goes on. In Alaska, there is no reason why a substantial income should not thus be raised for such public works as may be deemed necessary or useful.

Would Build Trunk Line Railroad.

I am not in favor of government ownership where the same certainty and efficiency of service can be had by private enterprise, but I think the conditions presented in Alaska are of such a character as to warrant the government, for the purpose of encouraging the development of that vast and remarkable territory, to build and own a trunk line railroad, which it can lease on terms which may be varied and changed to meet the growing prosperity and development of the territory.

I have already recommended to Congress the establishment of a form of commission government for Alaska. The territory is too extended, its needs are too varied, and its distance from Washington too remote to enable Congress to keep up with its necessities in the matter of legislation of a local character.

The governor of Alaska in his report points out certain laws that ought to be adopted, and emphasizes what I have said as to the immediate need for a government of much wider powers than now exists there, if it can be said to have any government at all.

Lower Colorado River.

There is transmitted herewith a letter from the Secretary of the Interior setting out the work done under joint resolution approved June 25, 1910, authorizing the expenditure of $1,000,000, or so much thereof as might be necessary, to be expended by the President for the purpose of [illegible] Imperial valley and elsewhere along the Colorado river in Arizona. The money was expended and the protective works erected, but the disturbances in Mexico so delayed the work, and the floods in the Colorado river were so extensive that a part of the works have been carried away, and the need for further action and expenditure of money exists.

Water-Power Sites.

In previous communications to Congress I have pointed out two methods by which the water-power sites on non-navigable streams may be controlled as between the state and the national government. It has seemed wise that the control should be concentrated in one government or the other as the active participant in supervising its use by private enterprise.

The Secretary of the Interior has suggested another method by which the water-power site shall be leased directly by the government to those who exercise a public franchise under provisions imposing a rental for the water power to create a fund to be expended by the general government for the improvement of the stream and the benefit of the local community where the power site is, and permitting the state to regulate the rates at which the converted power is sold. The latter method suggested by the Secretary is a more direct method for Federal control, and in view of the probable union and systematic organization and welding together of the power derived from water within a radius of 300 or 400 miles, I think it better that the power of control should remain in the national government than that it should be turned over to the states. Under such a system the Federal government would have such direct supervision of the whole matter that any honest administration could easily prevent the abuses which a monopoly of absolute ownership in private persons or companies would make possible.

For some years past the high and steadily increasing cost of living has been a matter of such grave public concern that I deem it of great public interest that an international conference be proposed at this time for the purpose of preparing plans to be submitted to the various governments, for an international inquiry into the high cost of living, its extent, causes, effects, and possible remedies. I therefore recommend that, to enable the president to invite foreign governments to such a conference, to be held at Washington or elsewhere, the congress provide an appropriation, not to exceed $20,000, to defray the expenses of preparation and of participation by the United States.

Commission on Industrial Relations.

The extraordinary growth of industry in the past two decades and its revolutionary changes have raised new and vital questions as to the relations between employers and wage earners which have become matters of pressing public concern. Industrial relations concern the public for a double reason. We are directly interested in the maintenance of peaceful and stable industrial conditions for the sake of our own comfort and well-being; but society is equally interested, in its effectively civic capacity, in seeing that our institutions are effectively maintaining justice and fair dealing between any classes of citizens whose economic interests may seem to clash.

The magnitude and complexity of modern industrial disputes have put upon some of our statutes and our present mechanism for adjusting such differences—where we can be said to have any mechanism at all—a strain they were never intended to bear and for which they are unsuited. What is urgently needed to day is a re-exami-

Misbranding Imported Goods.

My attention has been called to the injustice which is done in this country by the sale of article in the trade purporting to be made in Ireland, when they are not so made, and it is suggested that the justice of the enactment of a law which, so far as the jurisdiction of the federal government can go, would prevent a continuance of this misrepresentation to the public and fraud upon those who are entitled to use the statement in the sale of their goods. I think it to be greatly in the interest of fair dealing, which ought always to be encouraged by law, for congress to enact a law making it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine or imprisonment, to use the mails or to put into interstate commerce any articles of merchandise which bear upon their face a statement that they have been manufactured in some particular country when the fact is otherwise.

Delicate Criticism.

A woman well known in New York for her exquisite taste as well as knowledge of the decorative and architectural history of the world called on the wife of a multi-millionaire who had recently built and furnished a Fifth avenue mansion at great cost.

"This," said the hostess proudly, as she threw open a heavy door, "is my Louis Quatorze room." The visitor gazed about her for a moment, and then made answer: "What makes you [illegible] so?"

Working in Brass.

The use of hardness testing devices on rolled brass is referred to by the Brass World. Brass is rolled in many different tempers. Usually, when a sample of sheet brass is sent in so that an order to be filled may match it, bending or scratching is resorted to to determine its temper, the result often being only a guess. The hardness testing methods used with steel are beginning to be employed for brass, but the ability to determine the temper of a sample of brass is not yet well recognized.

Saved.

"Dearest," she asked, taking advantage of the fact that it was leap year, "will you be mine?"

For a moment the young man feared that he was up against it. Then, struck by a happy thought, he replied: "You will have to ask mother."

Reply in Kind.

"If you had a leap year proposal from a pretty girl, what would you do?"

"I'd jump at it."

Just About.

"What barbarous instincts those old Romans displayed at their gladiatorial games."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "they were almost as indifferent to human life as a crowd of people watching an aviation contest at a county fair."

Disgusted.

"Jaggs certainly did indulge in some low-down talk."

"You don't say so?"

"Yes—said the thermometer was going one degree below zero."

SUGGESTION FOR SHORT SESSION

BIGELOW WOULD SUBMIT ONLY TEN AMENDMENTS TO PEOPLE OF THE STATE.

HOPE TO FINISH IN MARCH

President of the Constitutional Convention Is in Receipt of Loads of Postal Cards Concerning the License Question.

Columbus.—The Bigelow forces in the constitutional convention will make another effort to shorten the length of the session by cutting down the entire business to the consideration of a limited number of constitutional amendments to be submitted to the people separately.

The Bigelow program is to have the estimate that the convention will convention determine upon submitting no more than ten amendments in all, to a vote of the people, and leaving the present constitution otherwise unchanged. Six of these amendments would be as follows: Initiative and referendum, good roads, judicial reform, liquor traffic, method of amending the constitution and home rule for cities.

The Bigelow plan would then go further and provide that each of the remaining standing committees report out one proposal. If more than four of these should receive favorable consideration by the convention, the program would be to have an understanding to the effect that of the proposals so reported out, only the four receiving the highest vote would be submitted to the people, making, with the six specifically mentioned, ten in all.

Should this plan be adopted, it is estimated that the convention will adjourn in March.

At this point President Bigelow has an unique and interesting suggestion. He would use the money saved by shortening the session in a campaign of education on the amendments to be submitted, and would print hundreds of thousands of pamphlets setting out clearly to the people the reasons underlying the convention's action on every amendment.

Harmon Inspects Sites of Woman's Reformatory.

At Marion, within the space of three hours Governor Harmon viewed three widely separated rural sites for the proposed Woman's State reformatory, ate country sausage at the Marion club and made a brief address.

The governor was accompanied by Secretary of State Graves, State Auditor Fullington, Senator Shaler of Paulding and H. H. Shirer, secretary of the state board of charities. After a hurried inspection of the Monette, Crissinger and Uhler farm sites the governor and party were motored to the Marion club, where they were greeted by city officials and prominent citizens.

R. R. Is Sued For Taxes.

In a suit filed in common pleas court by Attorney General Hogan against the Nypano Railroad company, Mr. Hogan seeks to add $34,500 to the state's treasury.

The petition alleges that the company is indebted to the state for that amount as taxes on its subscribed, issued and outstanding capital stock and as penalty for non-payment.

Rabies Officially Reported.

There were two deaths from rabies in Columbus last year, according to the report of the city board of health, forwarded to the health department at Washington. The report shows that 26 persons were bitten and 24 were saved by the Pasteur treatment.

Record Time in Court.

Three minutes to secure a jury in a second degree murder case, not a single objection offered by counsel to testimony, arguments of counsel or to the charge of the court, and a verdict returned for manslaughter is a new record established in a local court.

Earman Succeeds Dr. Frost.

Dr. Frank H. Frost was refused reelection as secretary of the state board of pharmacy and Charles T. Earman of Chillicothe, a drug inspector in Dairy and Food Commissioner Strode's department, was chosen to succeed him.

Furniture Dealers' State Meeting.

Arrangements were made by the Columbus Retail Furniture Dealers association to attend the state convention of furniture dealers at Dayton Feb 13, 14 and 15. They will go in a special traction car. Election of officers resulted: President, W. Arthur Cerillo; vice president, Arthur Shannon; secretary, C. M. Voorhees; treasurer, W. F. Garrett.

Akron's Armory.

If reports received by Attorney General Hogan are to be credited the municipal, initiative and referendum law will cause a real hardship to the people of Akron, who have arranged for the erection of a new armory building only to be balked at the last minute by a referendum petition which holds the whole matter in abeyance until next November.

Attorney General Hogan holds there is no remedy unless the city solicitor can find technical defects in the petition.

Contract Labor Ended.

The state board of administration ordered the Columbus Bolt company and the E. B. Lanman company to vacate all shops and property occupied by them at the penitentiary on or before April 15. The convict labor contracts of both companies have been annulled.

The board also ordered stamp shop No. 1 of the Lanman company and bolt shops Nos. 2, 3 and 4 of the bolt works to close down at once because of the dangerous condition of the buildings.

J. MILTON EARNHART

Prominent among the farmers who are busy in framing a new fundamental law for the Buckeye state is Hon. J. Milton Earnhart of Lebanon.

Will Consider Market Proposition.

The Franklin County Farmers' union, at a meeting to be held at Briggsdale, will take up as a special subject for discussion the proposition to establish a producers' exclusive market in Columbus, where farmers may bring their produce and sell in large quantities direct to retailers. Now the commission men are said to have control of this class of trade and the farmer producer must either deal with them or retail their products themselves, to which most of them object, as taking too much of their time.

The proposition to establish such a market was first made by city officials and the farmers were in hope that the project would be carried out. It seems to have been allowed to die and the farmers will memorialize the city council, urging that the market be established.

Chain of Strange Fatalities.

Strange is the remarkable list of fatalities that has followed the principals in the suit of Kitty A. Reifel against Bridget Welsh.

Six years ago Coheena Murphy, niece of Mrs. Welsh, who made her home with Mrs. Reifel, committed suicide. She deeded her real estate to Mrs. Reifel in trust, but in her will left it to Mrs. Welsh. Mrs. Reifel did not so understand the proceeding and denied the right of anyone to have her transfer the property. Suit was brought to compel her to do so.

Since that time Mrs. Welsh lost her husband, John Welsh, who was killed by an auto. Mrs. Reifel lost her brother and her husband, and now another brother.

New Ohio Postmasters.

In confirming eight Ohio postmastership appointments, the senate disposed of the East Liverpool fight. R. C. Heddleston was made postmaster in succession to Mayor James Surles.

Other Ohio appointees confirmed were: Nellie Sheridan, Somerset; William A. Morrison, Struthers; Alexander Y. Henderson, Maynard; John G. Maule, Greenspring; Philip Ziegler, Strasburg; Joseph W. Bryson, Glouster, and George H. Lewis, Bluffton.

Nestor Honored.

For temporary chairman of the next constitutional convention—to be held some decades from 1912—Judge Dennis Dwyer of Montgomery county. This suggestion was made by Delegate Stamm, and caused the convention to cheer Judge Dwyer heartily. The remark was incidental to the adoption of a motion congratulating Judge Dwyer on attainment of his eighty-second milestone.

Election Postponed.

Final reorganization of the First regiment at Cincinnati has again been delayed, and an order which was to have gone out calling for the election of a new colonel on February 9 was held up by Governor Harmon, pending a conference with former Colonel A. E. R. Stephens.

It is no secret that Governor Harmon is displeased over published reports.

Ohio Will Be There.

F. A. Albright, head of the weights and measures department of the state dairy and food commission, was selected by Governor Harmon to represent Ohio in the seventh annual conference of weights and measures, which is to be held in Washington February 15 and 16.

Governor Will Attend Meeting.

Governor Harmon has given his promise to be present at the Lincoln day testimonial to be held under the auspices of the Lincoln-Ohio Industrial School for Colored Youth. The governor will make an address on "Abraham Lincoln."

Knotty Point.

After years of controversy the state tax commission took the first steps toward the final clearing up of the dispute as to whether underlying corporations, whose property is operated by active concerns, must pay the Willis tax on the capital stock issued and outstanding.

Test suits were filed against the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio railroad, which is operated by the B. and O., and call for the payment of $30,000 Willis tax and $4,500 penalty.

Will Not Pay For Autos.

Fancy bills for the use of automobiles by constables, marshals and chiefs of police, in the pursuit of criminals, as allowed by magistrates, will not go with the state, and State Auditor Fullington, in accordance with an opinion rendered to him by Attorney General Hogan, will cut such charges out of cost bills presented to the state to pay.

Saturday was Governor Harmon's birthday. He was 66, but he said he feels like 46.

Madame Merri's Advice and Suggestions

A Variety of Queries.

Will you please answer these questions for me? I will appreciate it very much.

Is it customary for a young man to meet a girl's parents the first time he calls on her?

How is the best way to treat a man that has gotten too familiar with a girl?

How must a girl act to make boys like her?

I am twenty-one and weigh 110 pounds. Do you think I'm the right weight for my age? W. W. W.

It is customary and polite for a man to meet the parents of a girl on the occasion of his first call. If a girl has permitted a man to be familiar it is her duty to stop it and tell him why. If he does not respond to her request and behave himself as a gentleman should she must cut his acquaintance entirely. The only safe rule is "hands off" and then there are no heart aches or regrets.

An amiable, thoughtful girl is more than apt to have friends among both girls and boys. Your weight depends largely upon your height. I would rather be too slender than too stout. I should judge you are just about right.

From "Two Country Girls."

I wonder if you couldn't help us, as you have helped others. We are country girls and not acquainted with social life in the city.

We have invitations to an "At Home." We would like to know what is expected of us to do, and what is an "At Home," and the object?

Do we remove our wraps? Is it a dress affair? And do they serve refreshments? We do not want to appear ignorant.

I can and will help you most gladly. An "At Home" is not at all formidable and you will have no trouble. If you go, arrive between the hours mentioned, remove your heavy outside wrap retaining hat, fur neckpiece, muff and gloves. Street suits with pretty waists or one piece gowns are worn. Light refreshments are served. Cards are left on the tray, which is placed conveniently, or handed to the servant at the door, who has a tray for the purpose. At very formal affairs a butler takes the card and announces your name as you enter the drawing room. You speak to your hostess and guests you may happen to know, then partake of refreshments and depart with or without saying adieu to the hostess and receiving party.

Reply to "Anxious."

Kindly publish in your valuable column if it is the girl's place to recognize a young man she has not met, who lives in the next house, if she has to meet him on the street every day.

Will you also tell me where the napkin and fruit spoon are to be placed on the table?

It is always the place of the woman to show the first signs of recognition and I think it would be only polite for you to introduce yourself to the boy as his next door neighbor and speak when you meet him on the street. Then it would be his place to call upon you after that.

Napkins are placed a bit to the left of the plate, and the fruit spoon may be placed across the top of the plate or at the right hand side, with the cereal spoon.

Plans for a Party.

We are planning on giving a party for about eight couples of young people, and would like to have you tell us some new way to entertain them. We do not wish to play cards or dance.

Thanking you in advance for your kindness. "CHUMS."

As long as you do not play cards or dance I do not see much left besides guessing contests, music or charades. Perhaps some of the schemes outlined in today's department may help you, as they are for the special occasions that this month brings.

MADAME MERRI.

Fairy Jewelry.

Exquisite in design.

The gems look airy.

They seem to have no support.

They are lacy and supple in effect.

Jewels need not be wholly expensive.

Some semi-precious ones are lovely set this way.

It's the thin dainty silver or platinum setting which does the work.

Evening Gowns

A GRACEFUL evening gown of black velours over an underdress of lace is shown on the extreme left. The quaintly draped corsage is of white net embroidered in jet and diamonds. The swathed turban of purple and gold tissue, with a purple aigrette, is finished with a dull gold ornament. The party frock shown in the center is of primrose charmeuse, edged with skunk. The tunic and corsage are of lace outlined with gold thread and finished with a waistband of gold tissue. A tiny cluster of gold roses gives an effective finish to the skirt. On the right is seen another dainty little dress composed of white satin, with deep bands of pearl embroidery. The draped tunic and corsage, of white ninon, is also embroidered in pearls, the extremely low cut corsage is caught in front with a large pearl ornament.

IN VOGUE

Belts are used on some of the wraps, some of which are of leather in black, matching or contrasting shades.

Very new is a frock of white satin with a tunic of finely tucked ninon held by a broad band of satin with flowerettes.

An attractive boudoir cap is in the shape of an empire drummer cap, much like the cocked hats children fold from newspapers.

Chiffon taffetas are confidently offered as the ultra-fashionable silk fabrics for the coming season. Glace chiffon taffetas are in the ultra style.

A pretty and fashionable way to wear the hair is to part it in the middle and draw it loosely over the ears, gathering into a simple knot at the back.

Seal and Velvet.

Some of the most beautiful of the seal coats this year are trimmed with velvet, and not always black at that, for dull greens and emeralds, all of the browns, the rich, deep reds, and, where a very real dash is liked, several of the blues, are introduced with real telling effect. It goes almost without saying that coats of this type are much more dressy than those of all fur, although not necessarily any less appropriate for day as well as evening wear. The fabrics, naturally, permit of more variety in the matter of draping, etc., although as a matter of fact, the pelts themselves skilfully treated as they are nowadays, are hardly less pliable than many materials.

Laborers' Wages Fixed.

The president of the Prussian government district of Frankfurt has fixed the wages of ordinary day laborers in the city of Frankfurt and suburbs as follows: Male adults, 72.3 cents; female adults, 60 cents; youthful males, 48 cents; youthful females, 33.3 cents.

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Now's the Time —not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 60 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

Both Wrong.

A ludicrous story is told of an Edinburgh bailie, whose studies in natural history seems to have been limited. The following case came before him one day:

A man who kept a ferret having to go into the country, left the cage with the ferret in charge of a neighbor till he should return. The neighbor incautiously opened the cage door, and the ferret escaped. The owner was very angry, and brought a claim against him for damages.

The following was the decision of the learned bailie: "Nae doot," he said to the neighbor; "nae doot ye was wrang to open the cage door; but," he added, turning to the owner, "ye was wrang, too. What for did ye no clip the brute's wings?"

Felt Rather Fat.

"Mamma, I had the nicest dream," said little Mary, aged six, just after waking in the morning.

"What was it?" mamma asked.

"Why, I dreamt I was a young lady," the child explained.

"That felt pretty good, didn't it?" the mother remarked.

"Yes," was the reply. "But I felt rather fat."

CULBERSON WANTS TO KNOW.

The Republican campaign fund in 1908 amounted to $1,665,518.27. The Democratic fund was $620,644.27. The Republicans had more than a million in excess of the Democrats.

The number who contributed to the Republican fund was 12,230, and to the Democratic fund, 74,000. In other words the number of contributors to the Democratic fund was six times greater and their contributions aggregated a million dollars less. The contributors to the Republican fund, as a rule, were interested in legislation, the money coming from such men as J. Pierpont Morgan, Charles P. Taft, Andrew Carnegie, Charles M. Schwab, John Jacob Astor and the heads of the various woolen mills which desired the passage of the Taft Aldrich bill, together with donations from the Wall street banks, railroad magnates and individuals representing the tariff trusts.

The contributors to the Democratic fund were not personally interested in legislation.

The contributions of individuals to the Republican fund ranged from $110,000 downward, while contributions to the Democratic fund ranged from $5,000 downward.

These were some of the facts laid before the United States senate by Charles A. Culberson of Texas in demanding an investigation into campaign expenditures of 1904 and 1908.

Mr. Culberson, who is one of the most reliable friends of the people in the upper body, because he is never found voting for special privilege in any form, referred to the fact that George B. Cortelyou in the 1904 campaign, had held the position of chairman of the Republican national committee while he was secretary of commerce and labor and intimated that Mr. Cortelyou had taken advantage of the secrets of corporations whose affairs might be investigated under the federal law, to "hold them up" for campaign funds.

"It has been estimated," he said, "that the enormous and unconscionable sum of $11,000,000 was raised and probably expended that year by the committee of which he was chairman. The very size and audacity of this fund, if approximately correct, smacks of extortion, profligacy and corruption. Who contributed and where did it come from?"

Mr. Culberson went into detail regarding the charge that the late E. H. Harriman, on behalf of the big railroads of the country, had raised a fund of $260,000, of which he himself had contributed $50,000, in support of the Republican ticket in 1904. He declared there should be no inquiry to answer these questions.

As the investigation Mr. Culberson desires would show Republican politics in 1904 and 1908 to have been largely business transactions in which tariff trusts, railroads and banks contributed certain sums of money to obtain or prevent special legislation and as the senate is still Republican in complexion, the probability is that Mr. Culberson's resolution will be chloroformed.

FALLACY OF PROTECTION.

Whenever an American trust wants the tariff rate raised it bases its plea on the argument that American manufacturers cannot compete with the cheap labor of Europe.

In eleven months of last year the exports of iron and steel products, together with agricultural implements and freight and passenger cars amounted to nearly $270,000,000—an increase of about $64,000,000 over the corresponding period of 1910.

These materials are exported from this country to all parts of the world, in the face of the competition of England, Belgium, Germany and France. The Steel Trust's foreign competitors had the advantage of that "cheap labor" which the trusts and their Republican friends fear so greatly whenever a proposal is made to lower the tariff, yet the trust's trade in foreign markets is constantly on the increase.

How much longer will the people allow themselves to be fooled by trust "logic"?

Victor Berger, the Socialist congressman, doesn't accomplish much, but he manages to get his name in the Congressional Record pretty regularly.

It is proposed in England to subsidize wheat growing, not by a tariff, but by paying the farmers out of the treasury whatever may be needed to guaranty a minimum price per bushel. How long would our high protection last under this system? Its strongest hold lies in the fact that nobody knows what it costs the country.

Oregon will try for the first time at the coming primaries there, April 19, not only to instruct delegates to the national conventions but also to send delegates who sympathize with their instructions. The delegates will be chosen, as in some other States, at the direct primaries which give the instructions, but, not as in any other State, they will have their traveling expenses paid. So that the chosen delegate of the voters may go, be he never so poor in purse, without dependence upon politicians or corporations.

In a tariff campaign next autumn, one can already see certain deadly effects. The old argument that high duties are necessary to protect American labor will suffer the torments of the damned from the facts as to the employment of foreign labor in Massachusetts textile industries of Pennsylvania. The Lawrence strike has ruthlessly paraded before the American people the fact that a large proportion of the mill operatives, many of whom work for $4, $5 and $6 a week, cannot even speak the English language. In the steel mills of Pennsylvania the same condition prevails. Is this the "American labor" the country has been asked to protect all these years? On the contrary, it is the "pauper labor of Europe" transported into our own mills by the manufacturers who pleaded so hard to be protected against it. Can the protectionists live through another campaign?—Springfield Republican.

The primary rule of taxation is, "Tax things you don't want, not those you do want." This rule is recognized to some extent in most cities in the tax on dogs. As a consequence any increase in their number is checked and the cities are in no danger of being overrun with dogs. Does it not follow that a tax on buildings, machinery and other things which we do want, will tend to decrease their number and quality? A tax on buildings and building material makes them more expensive to build and hold. "Abolish all taxes on personal property, buildings and occupations." But, what, then, shall be taxed? Common Cause says, "Tax land values." This is no new theory. The doctrine was preached in France more than two hundred years ago. It was made popular in our day through the untiring efforts of an American, Henry George. But the idea is no longer a mere doctrine. We should no longer try to evade it on the ground that it is theoretical. Far from that, it has demonstrated its practicability. Many localities are now prospering under it as they never prospered before.

"Mr. Chairman," shouted one of the delegates to the convention, "I move that the nominating speeches be limited to one minute each!" "Second the motion!" yelled a dozen others. A storm of protest arose, but the chairman put the motion. It was lost by a vote of 47 to 46. "I merely wished to find out, Mr. Chairman," explained the delegate who had made the motion, "how many ambitious orators there are in this convention. There are 47."

FRANCE MAY EXPEL WITCHES

Government Is After Workers of Magic Who Fatten on Credulity of the Peasants.

M. Cruppi, as minister of justice, is hard at work attempting to crush the practice of sorcery in France. This seems a curious necessity in the twentieth century, but it is a very real necessity for all that. French people, like all Latins, are very superstitious, and although most people in the towns laugh at the thought readers and the rest of the tribe even while they go to consult them, the wise woman, the witch and workers of magic, black and white, exist in the country and practice their arts with impunity, to their own satisfaction and occasionally to that of their victims.

A case in a village in Normandy may be recalled, a short while ago, where an old woman died of fright because she had been "bewitched." She had refused to give or sell the witch some eggs because she wanted them herself. The witch made signs at her and told her she was stricken dumb. The old woman proved conclusively till the witch went away that she was not dumb just yet at all events, but that evening she scalded her tongue badly with her soup, it swelled a little, and she could not speak distinctly. This frightened her so (she was a woman of 80 and illiterate) that she took to her bed, had a stroke of paralysis and died a few days afterward.

At Morlaix last week a worker of white magic killed a girl of 18 as surely as though he had shot her through the head. She suffered from bronchitis. To cure her the "wizard" ordered her to go barefoot to the cemetery, collect some earth from a newly-made grave, strip herself completely, and after finding a spider to walk home with the grave earth in one hand and the spider in the other. She was then to bury them outside her garden gate and to cut her finger nails and toe nails with a pair of rusty scissors before she re-entered the house. The girl followed the prescription carefully, and, being ill before she followed it, she not unnaturally caught another cold and died.—Paris Letter to the London Express.

Hard to Realize.

The variety of ways in which a given number of articles may be placed has often created much surprise. A mathematician once set himself to the task of calculating the number of different ways in which the fifty-two cards of a pack could be distributed among four players thirteen to each, taking every possible combination. It would be useless to present the answer here in a long row of figures, for no one can realize what such a numerical array really means, but the following illustration can be readily grasped.

If the entire population of the earth, say one thousand millions of persons, were to deal the cards continually day and night for one hundred millions of years, at the rate of a deal by each person a minute, they would not have exhausted the one hundred thousandth part of the number of essentially different ways in which it is possible that the cards can be so distributed.

Spare the Doves.

The turtle doves are great feeders on the seeds of weeds, and do much to protect growing crops from harm through the ravages of those weeds on the seeds of which they feed. The government biological survey, in conducting its investigation to determine the economic value of these birds found in the stomachs of three turtle doves 23,100 hawkweed seeds, with the seeds of several other kinds of weeds which have caused the farmer inconveniences and expense during a larger portion of the crop growing season. These birds are much more effective as a weed exterminating force than an army of men with hoes and weeders, because the best that man can do is to keep the weeds in checks to a certain extent, while the seed devoured by the bird is destroyed and prevented from taking root. It is estimated that the natural increase of these birds, if they were allowed to multiply without interruption, would save the American farmer at least $500,000,000 a year.

The Perverse Husband.

John Collier, the secretary of New York's Board of Moving Picture Censors, said the other day:

"It's no good getting up objections to picture plays. We never pass them. In fact, we turn them down so invariably that it seems to me the composers of such plays are animated by a spirit of perversity. They remind me of old Uncle Jethro Husk.

"Uncle Jethro sat fishing on the bank of a tiny rivulet, when a stranger stopped beside him and said:

"'Is it possible that there are any fish in such a small stream as that?'

"'No, there ain't none,' Uncle Jethro grunted.

"'But you're fishing?'

"'Yep,' said Uncle Jeth.

"'What, then, is your object?'

"'My object,' said Uncle Jeth, 'is to show my wife I ain't got no time to sift the ashes.'"

Afraid of His Past.

"Where are you going to locate your law office—in Winterville?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"I sang tenor solo with our college glee club in Winterville and I'm afraid they haven't forgotten me."

Affronted Sympathies.

"Most of the deer has left this part of the country." "Yes," replied Farmer Corntossel. "You know a deer is a tender-hearted kind of an animal and I s'pose the critters couldn't stand it to hang around an' see the way them hunters shot one another up."

Coming Celebration.

A little girl in Sabetha, Kan., is to be baptized next Sunday, and she is proudly telling her friends that she is to be "advertised."

New Englander on Suffrage.

While in Richmond recently for the performance of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," Kate Douglas Wiggin was asked how she stood on the question of votes for women. Replying with a laugh that she didn't stand at all, she told about a New England farmer's wife who had no very romantic ideas about the opposite sex. She was hurrying from church to sink, from sink to shed, and back to the kitchen stove when asked if she approved of woman's suffrage, and if she wished to vote. "No, I certainly do not," she exclaimed with a vigorous movement of the churn dasher; "I say if there is any one little thing that the men folks can do alone, for goodness sake let 'em do it."

Use of Cocoanut.

Purchase the raw nut rather than the desiccated cocoanut. It is easily put through the food cutter, and, if the finest knife is used, it gives a more easily digested article for cakes or candies than the dried product. If more is ground than can be used, mix sugar with it and dry; it will keep indefinitely.—Good Housekeeping.

Not at Home.

ORDINANCE NO. 862.

To provide for the issue of bonds of the City of Painesville in the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1500) to purchase certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Whereas the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, heretofore by proper legislation (Res. No. 200 passed Dec. 26, 1911) has provided for the purchase of certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Now, therefore, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PAINESVILLE, STATE OF OHIO, two-thirds of the members elected thereto concurring,

Section 1. That it is necessary to issue and to sell bonds of the City of Painesville in the amount of One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1500) as hereinafter set forth, to purchase certain real estate for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Sec. 2. That under the authority of Section 3939 of the General Code of the State of Ohio, authorizing the issue of bonds by Municipal corporations, bonds of the City of Painesville, Ohio, be issued to the amount of One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1500) to pay for certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Sec. 3. That said bonds shall be designated Evergreen Cemetery Bonds, shall be of the denomination of Five Hundred Dollars each, shall be numbered 586, 587, 588, shall be dated April 1, 1912, and shall mature as follows: No. 586 on April 1, 1916; No. 587 on April 1, 1917; No. 588 on April 1, 1918. Said bonds shall be payable at the City Treasurer's office in the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, and all bearing interest at the rate of four per cent per annum, ~~payable semi~~ annually at the same place.

Sec. 4. That said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they were issued and a citation of the law and ordinance by which they were authorized. They shall be prepared, issued and delivered under the direction of the Finance Committee of Council and the City Auditor. They shall be signed by the Mayor of said city and by the City Auditor and sealed with the corporate seal of said city. Said bonds shall be recorded in the office of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund and shall bear interest as aforesaid.

Sec. 5. Said bonds shall be first offered at par and accrued interest to the Trustees of the Sinking Fund in their official capacity. If the Sinking Fund Trustees refuse to take any or all said bonds at par and interest, then said bonds not so taken shall be offered at par, and accrued interest to the board of commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the city school district. If said board of commissioners also refuse to take any or all said bonds at par and interest, then such of said bonds as are not taken shall be advertised for public sale and sold in the manner provided by law, but not for less than their par value and accrued interest.

Sec. 6. That the proceeds from the sale of said bonds except the premiums and accrued interest thereon shall be placed in the City Treasury to the credit of the Cemetery Fund and shall be disbursed upon proper vouchers to pay for certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery and for no other purpose. The premiums and accrued interest received from such sale shall be transferred to the Trustees of the Sinking Fund to be applied by them in the manner provided by law.

Sec. 7. This resolution shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

ELBERT F. BLAKELY,

Passed Feb. 5, 1912.
Attest, FRANK KELLY,
Clerk.
Approved Feb. 6, 1912.
WYNNE S. SMITH,
Mayor.

MENTOR

The same old slippery, snowy, blowy, zero weather is still with us, also the same old icy paths, and the same folks walking gingerly along the street car track same as last week and the week before that and the—! The English language is getting too circumscribed to use in expressing one's feelings and so, Mentor folks are trying to talk about something besides weather, or recounting their illnesses; even the customary exchange of favorite "cough medicines" is now tabooed! No one in good society tells how ridiculous Mr. So and So looked when he fell down yesterday and bumped his head, neither do they tell how many times they have fallen, themselves! Indeed, the beastly weather is so getting on the nerves of our folks, that something less important is felt the need of, just to relieve the unnatural strain.

The Miscellany Club is to meet on Wednesday with Miss Ida Merkle.

The Ladies Home and Foreign Missionary societies are to go "en masse" or as near that as possible, to Painesville on Thursday where they will be the guests of the Methodist ladies, and listen to some returned missionary from somewhere.

Miss Nancy Harris was married on Thursday evening at the home of her mother, Mrs. Emma Harris, to Mr. Charles Jackett, and went right to the city where they already had their home furnished and waiting. Mr. Jackett, we understand, is with the East Ohio Gas Co. and is considered a rising business man.

Miss Caryl Boyd of the County Seat, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frost one day last week.

A number of car loads of manufactured ice have been received here, some of it has been drawn to Primrose Hill, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Andrews, who winter in New York City, and the rest is being taken by other parties. On the whole, it is believed that the manufactured stuff is much more wholesome than the natural, being always made of "distilled water" etc., while the natural is used to swim in all summer, etc!

The snow drifts are no lower, and sleighing is splendid!

Mrs. Harry King and small daughter Eleanor spent Saturday in Painesville with Mrs. E. D. Barber and family.

Miss Naomie Billings of Kirtland was a recent guest of her friend Miss T. D. Morley at Chesney Wold.

Rev. Mr. Hye seems to be slowly recovering from his recent paralysis and hopes are entertained that he may yet be able to occupy the pulpit here.

So many of our people are on the sick list that to be perfectly well is to be out of fashion. One must at least have a cold in the head, with a doze decidedly out of commission.

The "luny" who drove across the lake in an automobile one day last week, did not live 'round these parts. We have heard more expressions of disapproval of the feat than of any other fool-hardy thing that has been done since that man went over Niagara Falls in a barrel, some years ago.

Your correspondent wishes to rise and explain that the recent corn exposition mentioned last week, at which Mr. Frost of this place took first prize, was not held in Salem as was supposed, but in Springfield, this state. Of course it matters little where it was but all newspaper folks aim to be perfectly accurate! Everybody knows that!

Mr. James R. Garfield is again down in old Mexico, on business, and is not hatching up any new revolution either. Should his friend "Teddy" be again nominated for the presidency, and be elected, Mr. Garfield may be found to still be in politics.

It is claimed that the ice in Lake Erie is eleven inches thick, clear across to Canada, thicker than ever was known before, and the oldest inhabitant has to confess that he is badly beaten this time. No colder weather can be scared up by the "thinker" of any one here.

We are told that quite a pack of wolves have come across the ice from northern Canada, and are helping themselves quite freely to the pigs, chickens, and other small fry of people living in the outskirts of Buffalo, and other convenient points on "our side." Probably those old fellows have never heard that the "reciprocity" talk, was "no go."

There is still considerable complaint that there are so few houses to rent, and fewer still for sale. We understand there are but two on the market at present, the Will Hopkins place owned by Mrs. Ed Sanborn and the Nel Hale house now the property of A. D. Carleton. Both of these places are desirable, and prices remain high.

The funeral of Mr. Charles Hammond was held from his home on Hart street at 2 p. m. last Monday, the bearers being railroad men of his acquaintance. Mr. Hammond had been in the employ of the Lake Shore for a greater number of years than any one else in this place, and had always given entire satisfaction in his department, being a pleasant man to deal with, and thorough and systematic in his work. It will be very difficult to find so competent a man to take his place. The funeral services were in charge of Rev. John Keck of Cleveland, who was pastor here for some eight years, and a great favorite with many (indeed most) of our people. Mr. Hammond left a wife and little adopted daughter, besides his three grown children, and one only sister.

WICKLIFFE

Mr. Wm. F. Means, a prominent merchant of this place, went to Cleveland on business one day last week.

Mrs. Wm. Wortman went to Cleveland shopping Saturday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morris of Willoughby spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Morris of this town.

Mrs. Wm. Sloat was quite ill with the grippe for a few days, but is much better.

Miss Jessie Stork of Cleveland visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. F. Stork of Wickliffe last week.

Mrs. Frank Sherman went shipping last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. R. H. Painter of Chardon was to Wickliffe on business one day last week.

Mrs. Frank Sherman entertained friends from Cleveland Sunday.

Mrs. John Travers was quite ill, with winter cholera, for about one week. It is reported she is much better.

Mrs. John Dumph went shopping last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. T. E. Rice went to Cleveland on business Monday of this week.

Mr. A. Dumm, driver for Mr. Burk on the Ridge, was down in Wickliffe Saturday afternoon, in front of the post office when his team became frightened and one of the horses jumped in front of the 2 o'clock Limited car, and was instantly killed.

Here is a message of hope and good cheer from Mrs. C. J. Martin, Boone Mill, Va., who is the mother of eighteen children. Mrs. Martin was cured of stomach trouble and constipation by Chamberlain's Tablets after five years of suffering, and now recommends these tablets to the public. Sold by all dealers.

MADISON

Our community was greatly shocked Friday evening to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Cassius Rand, a prominent farmer residing about one and one-half miles from town. Mr. Rand had spent the day in Cleveland and was on his way home from town when he dropped dead in the road, heart failure being the cause of death. Mr. Rand was about seventy years of age, a veteran of the Civil war. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss, two sons, Arthur, of Cleveland, and Fred of Madison, two daughters, Mrs. F. C. Blood and Mrs. M. P. Sherwood, both of Madison. A private funeral was held at his late home at 1:30 Monday, burial at the Middle Ridge cemetery.

Charles Warren was in Painesville Saturday.

Miss Ethel Williams spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents in Mentor.

Mrs. Dora Brotzman and Miss Lura Brotzman visited friends in town Thursday.

The ladies society of the N. Madison M. E. Church gave a chicken pie dinner at the parsonage Thursday. About one hundred partook of the sumptuous meal, for which the North Madison ladies are always noted as serving. The society realized about $25.00.

Mr. Horace Everts died very suddenly Thursday morning, after a long illness. The funeral was held at the home at 2:30 p. m. Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Fuller spent the week-end with friends in N. Madison.

The music furnished by Miss Nye, trombone, and Mrs. F. Leydo, piano, at the Farmers Institute, was greatly appreciated.

Cutler Bollard who has been under the doctor's care the past week, is improving rapidly.

A number of young people from Madison attended basket ball game in Geneva Friday evening.

B. P. St. John and son Raymond of Ashtabula and R. G. St. John of Cleveland, spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. St. John.

Mrs. Lottie Kellogg of Oberlin is visiting friends in town.

About forty people enjoyed the Fortnightly Club banquet, held at the home of Mrs. D. D. Smead, Wednesday evening. A sumptuous four course dinner was served at 6:30 o'clock, after which our honorable president, Mrs. Edna Cutler, gave a short talk on what the Club was endeavoring to do. She then introduced the toastmistress of the evening, Mrs. James P. Smead. Mrs. Lora Rand, Miss Laura Tobey, W. W. Williams and Dr. J. V. Winans responded to call. The male quartette gave several selections. The solos by Mrs. W. Teachout were especially fine. At 10:20 the company dispersed thanking the hostess and her committee for a very enjoyable evening.

Miss Porter of Michigan has been a recent guest of her friend, Mrs. B. J. Allen.

Miss Porter and Mrs. Lottie Kellogg were out of town guests at the Fortnightly Club banquet.

There is no better medicine made for colds than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acts on Nature's plan, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions, aids expectoration; and restores the system to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

MELISSA HAD REVENGE

SHE WAS SCOLDED FOR BEING ARRESTED FOR SPEEDING.

Austere Professor When Absent Minded Wore Wrong Hat and Telephoned From the Police Station for Her Help.

"No, Melissa," the professor rose with deliberation, "I cannot but feel that my duty to you, my wife, constrains me to forbid the repetition of such a vulgar happening. If you cannot indulge in automobiling without incurring the contamination incident to arrest for overspeeding, I shall reluctantly be compelled to dispose of the car."

He drew himself up imposingly, and left the room with a firm tread, but in the hall his agitation showed itself, for he captured and placed on his head the first hat which came to hand. It happened to be a jaunty toque of soft felt that Melissa had carelessly left on the hall table.

Before the professor had gone ten steps, however, his domestic tribulations had left his mind and he was deep in the consideration of a difficult problem. Therefore he did not notice the curious glances and amused stares that began to follow him. As he progressed further and further he acquired a following of street boys and newsies, whose jeers and hoots became louder as their number augmented. Finally his mind, distracted by the noise without, broke from the obstrusities of its problem, and he turned to confront external conditions.

The jeers died away and he faced his followers—then broke out louder than before. As the professor began to expostulate with his tormentors, a crowd gathered, bringing with it a blue-clad policeman, who speedily made his way to the center of the gathering. The professor turned to him with relief and began to explain the situation in somewhat intricate English.

The policeman smiled genially. "Drunk again?" said he. "You come with me. It'll be ten days or $10 for disturbin' the peace."

He took a firm grip on the professor's arm just above the elbow, and marched him off, protesting.

Meanwhile Melissa, her lord and protector departed, had seated herself in an easy chair to read the morning paper. After awhile she tossed it aside. "He can be just horrid when he wants to," she complained. Then a smile crept over her face "and, besides he forgot that it's my auto, not his," she chuckled.

The telephone bell rang and she took up the receiver. "Well?"

A meek and quavering voice came over the wire. "Is—ah—is this Melissa?"

"It is."

"I—er—I—t," then with an agonized rush. "Please hurry down in the car and bail me out! I'm in the—ah—police station!"

Preserve Your Dignity.

The way to ward off old age is not to fear it, not to allow one's self to be oppressed by the dread of advancing years. Use only legitimate preventives and avoid trying experiments with preparations not indorsed by physicians. Do not wear toilettes intended for young girls, they only add years to the appearance. Keep up your interest in the young, but do not envy them. Retire with dignity from the struggle, do not pose as your daughter's rival. Above all, surround your life with sweet, true affections which prevent the heart from growing bitter. Do not lose interest in the growing events of the day; do not fall behind the times, and do not harp on other and better days. To those who come to you for advice be always kind and sympathetic. As you advance in years preserve carefully your personal appearance, for once lost it may not be regained save by strenuous effort. Your costumes should be simple and unpretentious, yet graceful. These rules, carefully and sensibly followed, will keep you young and attractive.

Must Live for Others.

A class which lives only for itself and not for the community of which it is a part is bound to perish. The Nemesis of selfishness is certain.

Only the Belief of Snobs.

The idea that trade is vulgar is one of the silliest ideas that ever came into the brain of man.

The GIRL from His Town

by Marie Van Vorst

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow who is attracted by his immense fortune.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

Only Lady Galorey hesitated, disappointed.

"Too bad—I had specially arranged for Lady Grandcourt to drive over with Eileen. I thought it would be a ripping chance for her to see Dan."

When at length the duchess had succeeded in getting Dan to herself toward the end of the day in the red room, after tea, she said:

"So you won't marry a London beauty?"

And rather coldly Dan had answered:

"Why, you talk, all of you, as if I had only to ask any girl of them, and she would jump down my throat."

"Don't try it," the duchess answered, "unless you want to have your mouth full!"

Dan did not reply for a second, but he looked at her more seriously, conscious of her grace and her good looks. She was certainly better to look at than the simple girls with their big hands, small wits, long faces and, as the boy expressed it, "utter lack of get-up." The duchess shone out to advantage.

"Why don't you talk to me?" she asked softly. "You know you would rather talk to me than the others."

"Yes," he said frankly. "They make me nervous."

"And I don't?"

"No," he said. "I learn a lot every time we are together."

"Learn?" she repeated, not particularly flattered by this. "What sort of things?"

"Oh, about the whole business," he returned vaguely. "You know what I mean."

"Then," she said with a slight laugh, "you mean to say you talk to me for educational purposes? What a beastly bore!"

Dan did not contradict her. She was by no means Eve to him, nor was he the raw recruit his simplicity might give one to think. He had had his temptations and his way out of them was an easy one, for he was very slow to stir, and back of all was his ideal. The reality and power of this ideal Dan knew best at moments like these. But the Duchess of Breakwater was the most lovely woman—the most dangerous woman that had come his way. He liked her—Dan was well on the way to love.

The two were alone in the big dark room. At their side the small table, from which they had taken their tea together, stood with its empty cups and its silver. Without, the day was cold and windy, and the sunset threw along the panes a red reflection. The light fell on the Duchess of Breakwater, something like a veil—a crimson veil slipped over her face and breast. She leaned toward Dan, and between them there was no more barrier than the western light. He felt his pulses beat and a tide rising within him. She was a delicious emanation, fragrant and near, and as he might have gathered a cluster of flowers, so in the next second he would have taken her in his arms, but from the other room just then Lady Galorey at the piano played a snatch from Mandalay, striking at once into the tune. The sound came suddenly, told them quickly some one was near, and the Duchess of Breakwater involuntarily moved back, and so knocked the small tray, jostled it, and it fell clattering to the floor.

CHAPTER III.

The Blairtown Soloist.

Blairtown had a population of some eight thousand. There was a Presbyterian church to which Dan and his father went regularly, sitting in the bare pew when the winter's storms beat and rattled on the panes or in the summer sunshine when the smell of the pews and the panama fans and the hymn books came strong to them through the heat.

One day there was a missionary sermon and for the first time in its history a girl sang a solo in the First Presbyterian church. Dan Blair heard it, looked up, and it made a mark in his life. A girl in a white dress trimmed with blue gentians, white cotton gloves and golden hair was the soloist. He knew her, that is, he had a nodding acquaintance with her. It was the girl at the drug store who sold soda water, and he had asked her some hundreds of times for a "vanilla or a chocolate," but it wasn't this vulgar memory that made the little boy listen. It was the girl's voice. Standing back of the yellow painted rail, above the minister's pulpit, above the flies, the red pews and the panama fans, she sang, and she sang into Dan Blair's soul. To speak more truly she made him a soul in that moment. She awakened the boy; his collar felt tight, his cheeks grew hot. He felt his new boots, too, hard and heavy. She made him want to cry. These were the physical sensations—the material part of the awakening. The rest went on deeply inside of Dan. She broke his heart; then she healed it. She made him want to cry like a girl, then she wiped his tears.

The little boy settled back and grew more comfortable and listened, and what she sang was:

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral stra—ands."

Before the hymn reached its end he was a calm boy again, and the hymn took up its pictures and became like an illustrated book of travels, and he wanted to see those pea-green peaks of Greenland, to float upon the icebergs to them, and see the dawn break on the polar seas as the explorers do . . . . He should find the north pole some day! Then he wanted to go to an African jungle, where the tiger, "tiger shining bright," should flash his stripes before his eyes! Dan would gather wreaths of coral from the stra—ands and give them to the girl with the yellow hair. When he and his father came out together from the church, Dan chose the street that passed the soda fountain drug store and peeped in. It was dark and cool, and behind the counter the drug clerk mixed the summer drinks, and the drug clerk mixed them from that time ever afterward—for the girl with the yellow hair never showed up in Blairtown again. She went away!

CHAPTER IV.

In the Coral Room.

"Mandalay" had run at the Gaiety the season before and again opened the autumn season. Light and charming, thoroughly musical, it had toured successfully through Europe, but London was its home, and its popularity was chiefly owing to the girl who had starred in it—Letty Lane. Her face was on every postal card, hand bill, cosmetic box and even popular drinks were named for her.

He Liked Her—Dan Was Well on the Way to Love.

The night of the Osdene box party was the reopening of "Mandalay," and the curtain went up after the overture to an outburst of applause. Dan Blair had never crossed the pond before this memorable visit, when he had gone straight out to Osdene Park. London theaters and London itself indeed were unexplored by him. He had seen what there was to be seen of the opera bouffe in his own country, but the brilliant, perfect performance of a company at the London Gaiety he had yet to enjoy.

The opening scene of "Mandalay" is oriental, the burst of music and the tinkling of the silvery temple bells and the effect of an extremely blue sea made Dan "sit up," as he put it. The theatrical picture was so perfect that he lifted his head, pushed his chair back to enjoy. He was thus close to the duchess. With invigorating young enthusiasm the boy drew in his breath and waited to be amused and to hear. The tunes he already knew before the orchestra began to charm his ear.

On landing at Plymouth Dan had been keen to feel that he was really stepping into the world, and at Osdene Park he had been daily, hourly "seeing life." The youngest of the household, his youth nevertheless was not taken into consideration by any of them. No one had treated him like a junior. He had gone neck to neck with their pace as far as he liked, furnished them fresh amusement, and been their diversion. In all his rare unspoiled youth, Blair had been suddenly dropped down in an effete set that had whirled about him, and one by one out of the inner circle had called him to join them; and one by one, with all of them, Dan had whirled!

Lord Galorey had talked to him frankly, as plainly as if Dan had been his own father, and found much of the old man's common sense in his fine blond head. Lady Galorey had come to him in a moment of great anxiety, and no one but her young guest knew how badly she needed help. He had further made it known to the lady that he was not in the marriage market, that she could not have him for any of her girls. And as for the Duchess of Breakwater, well—he had whirled with her until his head swam. He had grown years older at the Park in the few weeks of his visit, but now for the first time, as the music of "Mandalay" struck upon his ears, like a ripple of distant seas, he felt like the boy who had left Blairtown to come abroad. He had spent the most part of the day in London with a man who had come over to see him from America. Dan attended to his business affairs, and the people who knew said that he had a keen head. Mr. Joshua Ruggles, his father's best friend, whom Dan this afternoon had left to go to his room at the Carlton, had put his arm with affection through the boy's.

"Don't look as though it were any too healthy down to the place you're visiting at, Dan. Plumbing all right?"

And the boy, flushing slightly, had said: "Don't you fret, Josh, I'll look after my health, all right."

"There's nothing like mountain air," returned the westerner. "These old fogs stick in my nostrils; feel as though I could smell London clean down to my feet!"

From the corner of the box Dan looked hard at the stage, at the fresh brilliant costumes and the lovely chorus girls.

"Gosh," he thought to himself, "they are the prettiest ever! Dove-gray, eyes of Irish blue, mouths like roses!"

Leaning forward a little toward the duchess he whispered: "There isn't one who isn't a winner. I never struck such a box of dry goods!"

The duchess smiled on Dan with good humor. His naive pleasure was delightful. It was like taking a child to a pantomime. She was wearing his flowers and displaying a jewel that he had found and bought for her, and which she had not hesitated to accept. She watched his eager face and his pleasure unaffected and keen. She could not believe that this young man was master of ten million pounds.

When Letty Lane appeared Blair heard a light rustle like rain through the auditorium, a murmur, and the house rose. There was a well-bred calling from the stalls, a call from the pit, and generous applause—"Letty Lane—Letty Lane!" and as though she were royalty there was a fluttering of handkerchiefs like flags. The young fellow with the others stood in the back of the box, his hands in his pockets, looking at the stage. There wasn't a girl in the chorus as pretty as this prima donna. Letty Lane came on in "Mandalay" in the first act in the dress of a fashionable princess. She was modish and worldly. For the only time in the play she was modern and conventional, and whatever breeding she might have been able to claim, from whatever class she was born, as she stood there in her beautiful gown she was grace itself, and charm. She was distinctly a star, and showed her appreciation of her audience's admiration.

FINE PRE-NORMAN CHURCH

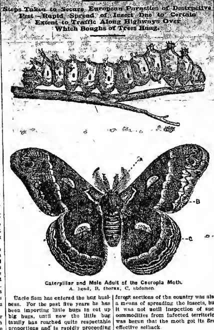
Remarkably Well Preserved Edifice at Worth Was Built Long Before the Conquest.

Many churches in Britain owe their origin to the piety of the Norman invader, but those which antedate this great period of church building are not so numerous. One such pre-Norman edifice is the fine old parish church of Worth, near Three Bridges. A little book, written by Rev. Arthur Bridge, the rector of Worth, tells the history of what is aptly described as one of the most remarkable relics of a bygone age. It seems probable that the church passed with the Manor of Worth under the will of Alfred the Great to his third son, Ethelward. Archaeologists will be lavish of thanks to Mr. Bridge for the interesting and useful little record of his unique church. He tells us that Worth exhibits the earliest example of the purely English cruciform building, and its semi-circular eastern end is of very ancient date. But the whole church, as might be gathered, possess many features which make it of peculiar fascination to the student of the antique. The windows, for instance, have not suffered "restoration," and are well known to all students of architecture here and on the continent.—Dundee Advocate.

GOVERNMENT IMPORTS BUGS TO ERADICATE GYPSY MOTH

Steps Taken to Secure European Parasites of Destructive Pest—Rapid Spread of Insect Due to Certain Extent to Traffic Along Highways Over Which Boughs of Trees Hang.



Caterpillar and Male Adult of the Cecropia Moth. A, head, B, thorax, C, abdomen.

Uncle Sam has entered the bug business. For the past five years he has been importing little bugs to eat up big bugs, until now the little bug family has reached quite respectable proportions and is rapidly proceeding to decimate the family of the big bug. This may sound a bit strange, but it is true.

Since 1905 Uncle Sam has spent more than $5,000,000 in fighting the gypsy moth, the brown tail moth, the common cabbage butterfly, the cotton boll weevil and many other pests which are the bane of the American farmer and forester. Few European countries have spent a cent in fighting these pests, yet the brown tail and gypsy moth are both natives of Europe. They have long inhabited Italy and France without causing serious damage, but since the arrival of the gypsy moth in the United States in 1868 he has done more damage to fruit and forest trees than his predecessors of the old world have done for centuries, and all this damage in spite of 20 years constant warfare against this ravaging insect.

Realizing there must be some way of combating the spread of this destructive moth, the department of agriculture studied the moth on his native heath. It was found the European pest is held in check by certain parasites. In this country there was but 11 parasites of the moth, while in Europe there are about 52 species. To import the remainder of the parasitic family to this country is the task Uncle Sam has undertaken. His attention is directed not only to the parasite of the gypsy moth, but to the parasite of the brown-tail moth, the boll weevil, the alfalfa weevil and the cabbage butterfly.

Since its accidental introduction into this country in 1868, an accident caused by the escape of certain egg clusters from the school of entomology at Harvard, the gypsy moth has cost the national government $6,000,000 in actual cash, that amount having been expended in fighting the pest. This amount does not include the loss of millions of dollars' worth of orchard and forest trees destroyed by the insect's ravages.

The brown-tail moth, which Uncle Sam is also fighting with imported bugs, was brought to this country in 1897 in a shipment of roses to a florist in the city of Summerville, Mass. Shortly after the arrival of the shipment it was noticed the trees and shrubs were being defoliated by an insect new in the region. The attention of the governor was called to the matter and he at once took the question up with the legislature, then in session. Unfortunately the legislature did not realize the seriousness of the pest, and dismissed the problem by passing a law which required property owners to destroy the insects on their premises.

The rapid spread of the gypsy and brown-tail moths is due to a certain extent to traffic along the highways over which the boughs of trees hang. The caterpillars drop from the branches of the trees on the tops of carriages and automobiles and are transported to territories not yet infected, and in this way the distribution of the pest over large areas was carried on. The shipment of lumber and wood to different sections of the country was also a means of spreading the insects, but it was not until inspection of such commodities from infected territories was begun that the moth got its first effective setback.

During the past summer Prof. W. F. Fiske was in Italy and France collecting the natural enemies of the gypsy and brown-tail moths, the cotton boll weevil and the alfalfa weevil, and more than a million of these parasites were sent to the United States during the year.

Not only is this new method of fighting the moths looked upon with interest by entomologists and persons directly affected by the ravages of the insects, but much help is expected to come to those who have suffered from the destruction and ravages caused by the cotton boll weevil.

MANY FAILURES WITH POULTRY

Over-abundance of Advice from all Sources is Assigned as Reason for Many Downfalls.

Why is it that so many persons fail in their first attempt to raise poultry? There is an abundance of advice from all sources. Almost every paper carries it, and every man you meet will give you more than you want—all free.

One reason is that, like every other kind of business, poultry raising requires experience to make it a success. No amount of theory will take the place of actual experience.

Poultry requires the best of attention and lots of hard work. The profit from fowls decreases as the feed and the care is diminished. It requires a certain amount of food to keep a hen alive and active. Any additional food is turned into fat and eggs.

Many persons believe if they start right in poultry raising the business will need no very close attention to keep up its standard. Others believe it is easy work and that they are choosing a "snap" for their business. In other words, the chickens, turkeys and ducks should do the work while the owner spends the money.

Not enough care is used in selecting standard-bred stock. It costs no more to keep a pedigreed fowl with a good laying record than it does to keep an ordinary fowl.

Frozen Meat for Holland.

No chilled or frozen meat is imported into Holland, but the increasing price of domestic meat, particularly this year, is placing it beyond the reach of poor people. Cheaper meat must therefore be sought, and the most available is understood to be refrigerated meat from the western hemisphere. Such an innovation, however, is regarded so gravely that Dutch hygienic societies are considering it, with the general conclusion that it involves serious dangers unless all imports of such meat are submitted to thorough scientific inspection. Suggestions to that end are being made to the government.

COW STALLS AND STANCHIONS

The above illustrates a comfortable cow tie and stall. The floor is concrete or plank. The gutter should be of concrete, but may be of wood. A stanchion of different style may be used—either home-made or of some of the patented type. A good stall will remove the unpleasantness of milking.

CRACKED HANDS ARE HEALED

Woman Suffered for Years. Resinol Worked Immediately.

During the winter many people suffer untold agony from chapped and cracked hands. The manner of washing and drying the hands, the water exposure, blood, and innumerable other things may cause this. To persons suffering in this way, or from any skin eruption, this woman's experience should prove invaluable.

"I highly prize Resinol Soap and Ointment. For years I had suffered with my hands cracking. Had used all kinds of salve, but to no avail, until one day a sample box of Resinol Ointment was sent to our home. Almost discouraged, I had suffered so long with my hands, I opened the package and began reading some of the testimonials. Finally I tried it, and the effect was wonderful. It seemed to take the soreness away, and immediately began to heal, and in a few days (using it every night) my hands were entirely healed. I feel that I cannot get along without Resinol Ointment, and recommend it with pleasure, whenever an opportunity presents itself.

"MRS. MATTIE R. SHORT,
"Somerville, Mass."

Resinol Ointment is the most wonderful skin remedy today. For sores, pimples, every form of eruptive skin disease, irritation and inflammation, eczema, tetter, milk crust, scald head, ringworm, barber's itch, pimples, blackheads, chilblains, cracked lips, chaps, burns and scalds it is an effectual and reliable remedy. It soothes, relieves the pain and heals. Resinol Soap is also very healing and a perfect toilet soap. Your druggist will recommend Resinol Ointment and sell it to you in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, or you can make a free trial of it by writing for sample to Department 59, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

Child's Reasoning.

"I can't tell you anything about my grandpa," said solemn little Eustace, questioned by a happier comrade as to his more recent ancestor, "because I never had any. All my grandparents died before I was born."

"But you had grandparents just the same, dear," interpolated a listening adult. "The fact that they died before you were born doesn't alter the fact that they were your grandparents."

"But if our fathers and mothers had died before we were born they wouldn't have been our fathers and mothers, would they?" the wondering child questioned. "So I don't see how what you say can be true."

On a Main Road

Pottleton drew up at the side of the road and accosted a man sitting on top of a load of hay.

"I say, colonel," said he, "are we on the right road to Claypool Junction?"

"Ya-as," said the farmer.

"How's the road, pretty good?" asked Pottleton.

"Fine," said the farmer. "We've been 20 years wearin' them ruts through."—Harper's Weekly.

FREE HOMES
FOR A
Quarter Million
In the Northwest

Montana, Oregon and Minnesota, combined, can provide homes for a quarter million people and give each man a deed to a 160 or 320 acre farm, under the provisions of Uncle Sam's homestead laws.

Montana won the premium for the best wheat, oats, barley and alfalfa grown in the United States at the New York Land Show, and she has more than twenty million acres of government land within her borders capable of raising rich crops of these products yearly. You can homestead this land.

Central Oregon has been opened to settlement by the completion of the Oregon Trunk Railway. Crops raised on its bench lands won against the world at the last Dry Farming Congress. Seventeen million acres of good farm land await the coming of the homemaker here.

Minnesota, contrary to general opinion, has over twenty million acres of unoccupied farm land. A million acres of it is homestead land. Most of it is logged off and wonderfully fertile.

LINCOLN'S SUMMER COTTAGE

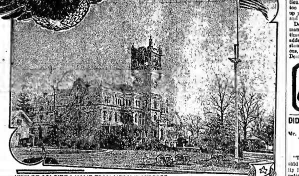
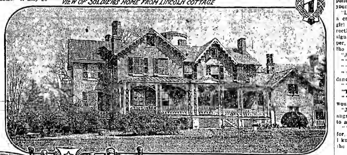
MEMORIAL LINCOLN ROSTRUM AT SOLDIERS HOME GROUNDS

PROBABLY not one in ten thousand of the present-day admirers of Abraham Lincoln are aware that there is yet standing in a perfect state of preservation a modest frame cottage which served as the summer home of the martyr president during his administration. Many readers, no doubt, are unaware that Lincoln had any other home than the White House at Washington during the long period of strain and strife, and yet as a matter of fact had it not been for the rest and relaxation afforded by his sojourns at this modest suburban retreat it is doubtful if Lincoln could have met the exactions of that trying half-decade without paying the penalty of nervous collapse long before the close of the war.



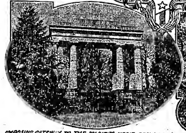
VIEW OF SOLDIERS HOME FROM LINCOLN COTTAGE

The Lincoln summer cottage has a certain added significance when considered in connection with the project which has several times been broached in recent years to provide the President of the United States with a permanent summer home. It may be remembered that only last winter there was talk of attempting to have congress appropriate money for the purchase or erection of a special vacation retreat for the chief magistrate, and then when this scheme fell through various summer resort communities all over the country came forward with offers to donate summer presidential homes, free of expense to the nation, if only they be given assurance that such gift would receive official sanction and designation as the "summer White House."

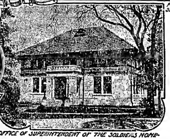


PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S SUMMER HOME

Yet oddly enough all the time that this discussion of the project for a summer White House was in progress the nation was already in possession of a presidential vacation cottage—the very one that was originally provided for President Lincoln and which has since stood ready for occupancy by any chief executive, although none of our later presidents have availed themselves of the privilege. To be sure, this summer cottage is not located in the mountains or at the seashore, but on the contrary is picturesquely situated in the environs of Washington. But then we must remember that not nearly all of our Presidents have subscribed to the theory of Taft that it is necessary to seek a northern clime for the summer solstice. All the early presidents of the nation who were residents of Virginia thought that the Old Dominion afforded all the requisites of a summer resort and so recent a president as Grover Cleveland chose to spend his summers in the suburbs of Washington in cottages which he rented for the purpose.



IMPOSING GATEWAY TO THE SOLDIERS HOME GROUNDS



OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF THE SOLDIERS HOME

But to get back to the subject of the Lincoln summer home it may be explained that this historic cottage stands on what is now the grounds of the National Soldiers' Home in the District of Columbia. This, the only country home officially provided for a president of the United States, was not, however, specially erected for President Lincoln. On the contrary, it was built in 1810 as the country home of George Washington Riggs, one of the first citizens of Washington and the founder of the banking house that has transacted the banking business of practically every president of the nation. The vast estate which surrounded this cosy country home was the tract which now comprises the grounds of the National Soldiers' Home, and the circumstances of its acquisition for the use of the nation were very interesting.

When, upon the conclusion of the Mexican war, Gen. Winfield Scott returned with his victorious army to the United States he brought among other spoils of war the sum of $70,000 in gold which he had exacted as penalty or indemnity from Gen. Santa Ana for the action of the Mexican troops in firing upon a flag of truce. General Scott was soon in a quandary what to do with this money. He offered it to congress, but that body was, for some reason, averse to accepting it. There were good reasons for not attempting to distribute it among the officers and soldiers of the army and General Scott did not want to keep the money himself, although the War Department was quite willing that he should do so. Finally he solved the problem by personally purchasing the Riggs estate and establishing a National Soldiers' Home. Congress accepted the gift and this unique institution has since been maintained by a small tax imposed upon each soldier of the regular army.

It was in 1861 that the Riggs cottage, standing on the crowning site of what had developed into a most beautiful park, was invested with the dignity of a presidential summer home. It was evident, of course, that the progress of the war would prevent President Lincoln from absenting himself from the capital for even a brief vacation, and yet it was equally manifest that his health would suffer unless he had some relief from the tropical heat that besets the city on the Potomac in summer. It was General Scott, himself, who brought to the attention of the president the charms of the beautiful suburban cottage, set on a hill overlooking the city and surrounded by a veritable forest. President Lincoln forthwith fell under the spell of the romantic spot and removed his family from the White House to the newly-discovered retreat.

From this time until his untimely death Lincoln spent each summer at the cottage on the heights. It was his custom to drive into Washington each morning from the cottage and after spending the day at his office in the White House to drive back to the cottage at night, but there were, of course, occasional days when he remained at his suburban retreat and many conferences were held there from time to time that had important bearing upon the fortunes of the Union. The cottage came to be known as "the president's cottage" and is so popularly designated to this day, but in the course of time it was, by Lincoln's own direction, officially christened Anderson cottage, in honor of General Anderson of Fort Sumter. By direction of the Secretary of War, Anderson cottage was set apart for the permanent use of the President of the United States and in later years it was occupied for brief intervals by Presidents Grant, Hayes and Arthur, but none of them were so deeply attached to the modest and comfortable habitation as was the Civil War President.

To present-day visitors the center of interest at the Lincoln cottage is President Lincoln's bedroom, which is on the second floor and is the largest room in the house. Two large front windows open directly over the porch and a splendid view of the City of Washington is afforded. The parade grounds of the Soldiers' Home, the flag pole and the commandant's quarters are directly in front of the cottage, the site being the most impressive and commanding of the entire grounds. The furniture used by Lincoln during his occupancy of the cottage is reverently preserved, but it has been removed from the cottage to a storehouse and is not open to the inspection of visitors.

Immediately beneath the bedroom is the room which was used by President Lincoln as a sitting room. It is about half the size of the enormous bedroom but larger than most of the other rooms in the historic cottage. There are, all told, about twelve rooms in the cottage. Several additions have been made to the house since it was erected more than a century ago, but the residence as it stands today is identical with its appearance when Lincoln was master there. As has been said, the building is a frame structure but the exterior is covered with stucco, such as was so popular with many of the early builders, and this has been kept in a perfect state of repair so that the cottage today bears no evidence of its great age. The cottage is at present occupied by several of the old soldiers, who are spending their declining years in this haven of the veterans of the regular army. Naturally, the old soldiers hold the cottage in the greatest veneration because of its association with Lincoln, and they take manifest pride in showing visitors about and relating anecdotes of the wartime president.

There are many reminders of the immortal Lincoln in this locality. Not far distant is the site of Fort Stevens, where Lincoln was under fire while a spectator in the trenches during a spirited engagement between Federal and Confederate forces. Yet near at hand, in the cemetery connected with the Soldiers' Home, is a handsome Lincoln memorial rostrum, which is the scene of the exercises which are held at this cemetery on each recurring Memorial Day, and at which the President of the United States is often a speaker. It has several times been proposed that the Lincoln cottage be torn down in order to make use of its splendid site for one or another of the buildings which have from time to time been erected to accommodate the increasing membership of the Home's family of old soldiers, but so much sentiment has always been aroused against such action that the scheme has always been abandoned and other sites selected.

A DREAM OF RELIEF

"Isn't that Miss Yawler singing across the way?"

"Yes, I wished she belonged to a grand opera company."

"You surely don't think she can sing?"

"Not at all, but grand opera companies never come to this town."

ALL A BLUFF.

"Who is that intoxicated chap boasting that he can whip his weight in wildcats?"

"That's Meekers."

"Husband of Mrs. Puffinghurst Meekers the suffragette?"

"The same. I suspect he is hanging around here because he is afraid to go home."

SOMEWHAT RATTLED

"When you are presented to the King you will please make a genuflection," said the master of ceremonies.

"Good land!" exclaimed Mrs. Porkingham of the U. S. A., "is that a noise or a gesture?"

Proper Care of the Eyes

Simple Precautions Will Add Many Years to Service Afforded by These Organs.

Among other drawbacks of what we are pleased to term "civilization" is the failing of the eyesight. Perfect eyesight in a man above the age of 40 is almost as rare as a perfect set of teeth.

The eyes, like every other part of the body, depend upon the condition of the entire system. Diet has a special effect upon the eyes. Sugar is particularly harmful. Some of those of this department have reported that the mere abandoning of sugar has been sufficient to affect a great improvement in their eyesight.

Another evil of "civilization" is that we are most of the time looking at things near by. You seldom have a chance to "raise your eyes to the everlasting hills."

Here are some good remarks from an article on eyes and spectacles in the Journal of Osteopathy, by Dr. W. D. Van de Sand:

"Those who are obliged to use their eyes for near work long at a time will find relief in closing their eyes, or looking at distant objects for a few moments from time to time. There are muscles in and about the eyes that are in a condition of contraction constantly while one is reading, writing or doing near work. Closing the eyes for a few moments, or looking at distant objects, allows these muscles to relax and rests them."

Another excellent thing is to bathe the eyes thoroughly in cold water morning and evening, and to massage them thoroughly, also the regions around the eyes, dipping the finger tips in a good oil. In this way great improvement in the eyesight may be effected.

HOUSEWORK IS A HEAVY BURDEN

The woman who "keeps house" has enough to do when she is in good, sound health, but if she is weak, tired all the time, and suffering from morn to night with an aching back, house-work becomes a heavy burden.

Many women who were afflicted in this way say that Doan's Kidney Pills have made life easier for them.

Women are subject to kidney disease. The clothing they wear, the work they do, the worry and strain of bearing and rearing children, the lack of proper exercise—all tend to it.

Backache, bearing-down pains, headache, dizzy spells, faintness, fits of "blues," and other troubles often thought to be peculiar to the sex, are found frequently in kidney disease. When any one of these ills appears, together with a discolored condition of the kidney secretions, with passages too frequent, scanty or burning, just make up your mind that your kidneys are weak, and be quick to help them.

Doan's Kidney Pills have helped a great many weak women through the trying times when kidney disease means so much added misery. They do not disturb the stomach or bowels and contain no poisonous, dangerous nor habit-forming drugs. Doan's are harmless for children too.

When Kidney Troubles Keep You in Misery Day and Night

Every Picture Tells A Story

"I just can't get up!"

The following case is typical of the cures effected by Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is the best evidence.

SAVED HER LIFE.

Made Well After Doctors Gave Up Hope.

Mrs. F. M. Hill, 185 W. 10 St., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "I enjoyed the best of health until the winter of 1905 when I was seized with kidney trouble. I gradually grew worse until I was devoid of all energy and ambition. There was a [illegible] pain through my kidneys, [illegible] a dull, grinding ache across my loins, the whites of my eyes changed color and the eyeballs bulged. My hands puffed and my feet became so swollen I could not wear my shoes. The kidney secretions caused great pain and also annoyance by their too frequent passage. I got so I could not eat, lost weight and was gradually growing weaker and weaker, when my father advised Doan's Kidney Pills. I obtained so much benefit from the very first that I continued and by the end of the first week the backaches and headaches had disappeared. I grew steadily better, and was at last completely cured. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life when I was so sick that I did not care whether I lived or died. The doctors as well as myself had given up hope of my ever getting well. I am so grateful that I cannot recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly."

DIDN'T THINK SHE WAS TIRED

Mr. Jinks' Mean Insinuation When Young Lady Dispossessed Him of His Seat.

"That was adding insult to injury," said Representative Mann, the minority leader of the house, apropos of a political squabble. "It reminds me of young Jinks.

"Late one night young Jinks sat in a crowded trolley car, and, when a girl he knew got aboard and stood directly in front of him, he made no sign. His face hidden by his newspaper, he pretended that he didn't know the girl would like to have his seat.

"After awhile she spoke.

"'Good evening, Mr. Jinks.'

"'Why, good evening.'

"'I've been to the Primrose social dance.'

"'Indeed.'

"Then, after a pause, she added:

"'It's a wonder, Mr. Jinks, you wouldn't offer me your seat!'

"Jinks then got up. He was very angry. He said, as he hooked himself to a strap:

"'I thought you wouldn't want it; for, as you said you'd been to a dance, I knew you must have been sitting all the evening.'"

SURE NOT.

Editor—That expression is too hackneyed.

Reporter—What expression?

Editor (reading copy)—"The jury acted as a body."

Reporter—Gee whiz! You surely don't expect a jury to act as a brain.

PIMPLES COVERED HIS BACK

"My trouble began along in the summer in the hottest weather and took the form of small eruptions and itching and a kind of smarting pain. It took me mostly all over my back and kept getting worse until finally my back was covered with a mass of pimples which would burn and itch at night so that I could hardly stand it. This condition kept getting worse and worse until my back was a solid mass of big sores which would break open and run. My underclothing would be a clot of blood.

"I tried various remedies and salves for nearly three years and I was not getting any benefit. It seemed I was in eternal misery and could not sleep on my back or lean on a chair. I was finally given a set of the Cuticura Remedies and inside of two weeks I could see and feel a great relief. I kept on using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and also the Resolvent, and in about three or four months' time my back was nearly cured and I felt like a new being. Now I am in good health and no sign of any skin diseases and I am fully satisfied that Cuticura Remedies are the best ever made for skin diseases. I would not be without them." (Signed) W. A. Armstrong, Corbin, Kan., May 26, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Hobby of Wealthy Englishman.

The earl of Mount Edgcumbe, who will be entertaining many parties at Mount Edgcumbe during the next few months, would have been able to make a living as an architect if he had been born in a less exalted sphere. He devotes some of his spare moments to evolving fascinating toy palaces, each a study of its kind, perfect in every detail. One he had lighted with electricity. These Aladdin palaces are sometimes passed on to lucky children of his acquaintance.—London Sketch.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS. Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

When people begin to say to a woman, "How young you are looking," it's a sign she is getting old.

Brewer's Rule.

It was common knowledge that at twelve o'clock noon the wealthy brewer called in all the poor men in the neighborhood who warmed themselves over store and factory gratings and made them small presents of food, clothing or money. The brewery gratings alone possessed no occupants.

"We don't care to stand there on account of the fumes," said one unfortunate who had been requested to vacate the trunkmaker's grating. "He won't give to anybody who smells beery."

Useless.

"Why don't you make up your mind to cease permitting your wife to henpeck you?"

"I have made it up half a dozen times, but it doesn't seem to do any good at all. She refuses to concede that I have a mind."

Did They Die in Vain

"He tumbled in his agony of effort as if his hand were numb. The rush of the ice in the stream was overpowering. When he could not tie the rope about the woman he let go. Apparently he had no thought of himself. He raised the woman to her feet, kissed her and clasped her in his arms. The woman made as if to cross herself, then sank to her knees. The man knelt beside her, his arms clasped close about her. So they went to their death. The ice held intact until it struck the great wave. There it was shivered to pieces; there the gallant man and the woman by his side disappeared from view."

He, and the woman by his side, his wife, disappeared from view, but this act of devotion and self-denial will live forever. When "men's inhumanity to man" as revealed to us through divorce court proceedings and in the struggle for gain and power, make us and the coming generations, sick at heart, it will be good to know this story of the man who chose for himself the same fate that surely awaited his helpless wife.

Do you know that more real danger lurks in a common cold than in any other of the minor ailments? The safe way is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a thoroughly reliable preparation, and rid yourself of the cold as quickly as possible. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Hired Girl the Victor.

Mrs. John Martin of Flatbush, N. Y., hurried into the Flatbush police station one day, and asked that a policeman be sent to evict from her home Kate Garrety, a servant. "I have paid her off, but she refuses to leave the house," panted Mrs. Martin. "She is in a terrible rage." A patrolman accompanied Mrs. Martin to the house and told the girl to go away. "Not until them things of mine is dry, if I have to stay here till doomsday," replied Kate. On a clothesline in the rear the patrolman saw a quantity of wearing apparel. Then he understood why Kate refused to go. He sat down on the steps and waited. Four hours later Kate's washing was dry. She took it down, and escorted by a patrolman, departed.

Mouse Breaks Up Woman's Meeting.

The Milwaukee Druggists Ladies' society, newly organized, had a divided meeting the other day in the Hotel Pfister. The president and a handful of members went to the second floor club room, where, according to schedule, they were to hold the meeting. The secretary and treasurer and some forty members assembled in the corner, first floor, club room and wondered why their presiding officer did not arrive. While in this room they had a visitor they neither invited nor welcomed. A mouse rampant appeared. Instead of crossing the room as a mouse usually does, with a gliding, serpentine motion, it went in long jumps. There was consternation for a few seconds until the mouse disappeared in a corner.—Milwaukee Free Press.

A Pertinent Question.

There are great men who cannot spell, and small people who object to them. "Spell 'cat,'" said the teacher to the boy at the tail end of the class. "K-a-t," replied the boy. "Silly," replied the teacher. "Can't you spell cat?" "Well," replied the sensible boy, "what does k-a-t spell?"

Stump Speeches.

Andrew Carnegie was talking about the horrors of war. "Once, at the height of the American civil war," he said, "two men at a railway station saw a carload of wooden legs depart for a military hospital. 'Those wooden legs,' said the first man, 'are a rather eloquent protest against war, aren't they?' 'Yes,' agreed the other; 'they are what you might call stump speeches.'"—Tit Bits.

The Blushing Octopus.

The octopus frequently changes its color, like a marine camaleon. It would appear, from recent studies of the creature, that the colored pigment whereby this change in color is effected is contained in envelopes in its skin, in the tissues of which are muscular fibers actuated by nerves. Should these fibers become relaxed a dark pigment appears. The phenomenon is said to be analogous to blushing.—Harper's Weekly.

Land Without Trees.

Thorshaven, the capital city of the Faroe islands, is said to be absolutely treeless. The claim is made that for some reason, perhaps soil conditions, trees absolutely refuse to grow there.

CORN TEST 1911

Interesting and Valuable Information Given by President of Lake County Corn Improvement Association

Editor Lake County Herald:

There were two corn variety tests made in Lake County the past season; one on the farm of Samuel Hunkin, Kirtland, and one on Mr. Searle farm, Perry. As the plot in Perry was not properly thinned out, nor counted up, it was not as satisfactory as the Kirtland test. On this, the stand was even, and there were thirteen varieties. The results were as follows:

|  | Variety and Owner | Weight at Husking Time 230 Hills | Yield Per Acre 70 lbs. per bu. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | White Cap Dent—Van Deusen | 324 lbs. | 71.5 bu. |
| 2 | Imp. Leaming—Frost | 331 lbs. | 73.1 bu. |
| 3 | Flint—Schuler | 277 lbs. | 61.2 bu. |
| 4 | Clerage—Ex. Station | 312 lbs. | 68.9 bu. |
| 5 | Iowa Gold Mine | 270 lbs. | 59.6 bu. |
| 6 | Flint—Wayne County | 278 lbs. | 61.4 bu. |
| 7 | Bloody Butcher | 282 lbs. | 60.2 bu. |
| 8 | Race Horse—Hardy and Fenner | 282 lbs. | 60.2 bu. |
| 9 | Flint—Kingsley | 245 lbs. | 54.1 bu. |
| 10 | Sheep Tooth—Hunkin | 276 lbs. | 61 bu. |
| 11 | Ill. 90 day—Van Deusen | 275 lbs. | 60.8 bu. |
| 12 | Corn—Reath | 257 lbs. | 56.8 bu. |
| 13 | Never Fail—Heath | 230 lbs. | 50.8 bu. |

Numbers 1, 2, 4, 6, were the only varieties dried and shelled. Figureing on the basis of 70 lbs. per bu. at husking, and 56 lbs. of actual shelled corn after being dried. Of these

No. 1 shelled at the rate of 63¾ bu. per acre, or 11% loss.
No. 2 shelled at the rate of 63 bu. per acre, or 14% loss.
No. 4 shelled at the rate of 52½ bu. per acre, or 10% loss.
No. 6 shelled at the rate of 58 bu. per acre, or 5½% loss.

The Iowa Gold Mine, No. 5 and No. 11 were immature. The others in good sound condition.

Mr. Criswell, who was largely responsible for this test, wanted to make the fight for supremacy a hard one, and not a favorable one, so the plot selected was upon a rather thin soil. No manure nor commercial fertilizer was used and the planting was rather late, May 19th. The corn was cut the 15th of September. A number of the varieties will be discarded, but a test next season will be made with a few of the highest yielders in Kirtland. We trust a thorough test will also be made in Perry township, where the soil is widely different.

DATE FIXED

THE FIRST LAKE COUNTY FAIR WILL BE HELD SEPTEMBER 17, 18, 19, 20.

The Board of Directors Try to Choose Date That Will Not Conflict With Other County Fairs.

The board of directors of the Lake County Agricultural society held a meeting at the residence of the secretary Wednesday evening, Feb. 7. Messrs. F. H. Murrey, E. O. Rust, W. E. Thompson, D. A. Wagar, C. C. Markell, A. M. Thompson, O. L. Ostrander, C. A. Hine, T. B. West, George Potts, Taylor Baxter and M. G. Wood were present.

After the matter was thoroughly considered, September 17, 18, 19 and 20 were unanimously selected as the days for the first fair of the new society. This will clash with Ravenna and Lisbon, but will not be serious on account of the distance.

DIES SUDDENLY

L. P. Gage Prominent Citizen Passed Away Last Thursday Morning.

Few people in Painesville realized that Mr. Gage was an old man. He was always active and in apparent good health. He was however past 78 years of age. His death came after only a few minutes illness, and before medical aid could reach him. He died in his room at the Cowles House at 4:20 a. m. Thursday.

No other man in this city had been more closely identified with Painesville's growth and stability than Mr. Gage. He was at the time of his death owner of the Gage block, the Cowles House and other valuable real estate. He had always been considered a man of keen business sagacity, possessing a pleasant way that won the friendship and respect of his business associates.

Mr. Gage was born in Madison county, New York, November 1st, 1835. He came to Lake county in 1853, at the age of 18 years, and had resided in the county since that time.

The funeral services were held last Saturday afternoon.

The deceased is survived by a wife and five children. The children all reside in Painesville and are as follows: Mrs. Charles E. Booth, and the Misses Katherine, Florence, Evelyn and Helen Gage.

DEATH OF MRS. JEWELL

Mother of Frank Jewell Passed Away Last Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Jewell, aged about 77 years, an old resident of Black Brook road, Newell street, passed away Sunday. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Elvena Snell of Mentor, and Frank Jewell, a son, at whose home she died. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Baptist church in Painesville.

DEATH OF MRS. SNELL

The Passing of Richmond Lady Who Had Many Friends.

Mrs. Frances A. Snell, wife of Andrew Snell of Richmond, passed away on Friday evening at her home, after an illness of about two months. Mrs. Snell was born on the Headlands, May 25, 1847, and was a life-long resident of Lake county.

She was a daughter of the late Capt. Thadeus Byrns, and had always held a high place in Lake county's church and social affairs as a lady of education and refinement. She was most devoted to her home duties and her kindly deeds will be long remembered by all who knew her.

Her husband and two sons, Norman R., of Painesville, and Carlton of Cleveland, survive. The funeral services were held from the residence on Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Special Correspondence

By C. H. Tavenner.

Washington, February.

While 30,000 men, women and children mill workers at Lawrence, Mass., were out of work because of a strike to prevent a cut in their $8, $7 and $5 a week wages, Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, mother of the baby that is heir to $100,000,000, gave a $35,000 dinner to 50 guests at Washington, the nation's capital.

The hostess at this banquet wore diamonds that actually cost more than half a million dollars. In her hair was displayed the famous "Hope" diamond, which cost $180,000, and at her throat another celebrated gem, "Star of the East," which is even larger than the Hope diamond.

The cost per plate at the McLean dinner was $700. One item in the expense was for 4,000 yellow lilies imported from abroad at $2 each.

One of the highest paid mill workers at Lawrence would have to work 84 years to earn the cost of that banquet. The earning of a dozen mill-workers for half a century would not purchase the gems worn by Mrs. McLean. A Lawrence worker would have to labor twenty years to pay for the yellow lilies alone.

The strike of the men, women and children at Lawrence, and the $700 a plate dinner at Washington, is a striking example of conditions existing under a system of excessive protection in the year of our Lord 1912. Neither the Lawrence strike nor the McLean dinner are exceptions. They are but samples of many similar illustrations which could be cited if space permitted. Only recently, Wm. M. Wood, the head of the woolen trust, whose employes are now on a strike at Lawrence, was arrested for knocking down and running over a pedestrian with his automobile. When arraigned in court he was asked how many automobiles he owned, and his reply was that he did not know. Imagine a man so rich that he doesn't know how many autos he has on hand!

Fortunes which make it possible for one woman to wear half a million dollars' worth of diamonds at one time, and which enable a man to own so many automobiles he is unable to keep track of them, necessarily come through the power to place an artificial price on the things which the common people must have in order to live.

It is significant, in this connection, that the tariff, the cost of living, $700 a plate dinners—everything but the workingman's wages—have increased hand in hand, revealing the intimate relationship of one to the other.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

The city council met last Monday evening and adjourned.

—o—

Does it seem possible that in a few months farmers will be talking about planting corn?

—o—

Mrs. A. Abramson and daughter, Marium, returned last Sunday from an extended visit with relatives and friends in New York and Philadelphia.

—o—

The funeral services for little Clara Elias, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Elias, were held from the home of her parents on the Boulevard on Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

—o—

Mrs. John Herr of W. Jackson street, who fell last Monday and broke her right wrist, is doing as well as might be expected, although the injury was a very painful one.

—o—

Mrs. Jack Hackett, who has been spending the winter in Washington, D. C., is expected to return here for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Francis of Newell street. She will visit relatives in Niles, Ohio, while here.

—o—

Cold weather seems to be unfortunate for every one except the men who have coal to sell, and the men who got hit the hardest are the men who own green houses. It costs something to heat a green house covering, say, two acres of ground.

—o—

We often hear of big returns from onion growing in Texas; here is one from Perry, Lake county, Ohio. A farmer in this prosperous township raised 1300 bushels of onions. He sold his crop last week and received $2600. Is any thing the matter with Ohio?

—o—

Mr. Frank Elston, a B. & O. engineer of Youngstown, formerly of Painesville, is now at the Painesville hospital under the care of Dr. York. Mr. Elston has been sick for nearly a year, but his relatives and friends are pleased to note some improvement since he returned here for treatment.

—o—

Mrs. Mary Allen, aged 74 years, of Kirtland, who was so badly burned in an explosion of gasoline three weeks ago passed away at her home Friday morning. It is thought that Mrs. Allen inhaled the flames. Her face and hands were burned terribly. Mrs. Allen was a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church.

—o—

Both Harmon and Taft have carried Ohio by large majorities, and both of these prominent men question the ability of the common people to act wisely in matters of government—plain case can be cited in these two men getting office. Harmon and Taft have the best of the argument.

—o—

The next meeting of the Lake County Horticultural society will be held in the Congregational church parlors, Painesville, Saturday, February 17. This is an all-day meeting with basket dinner. A cordial invitation is extended to all. It is especially desired that the ladies attend these meetings. The speaker of the day will be W. W. Farnsworth, who is one of the most successful fruit growers in the state of Ohio. Mr. Farnsworth will give a demonstration in the packing of apples; also a practical talk on varieties of fruit for commercial planting, orchard practice, etc. Fruit growers are requested to bring apples also any samples of fruit or tree disease.

GOOD WORK

HELP GIVEN TO NEEDY DURING COLD SPELL

Lew Chase Has Distributed Clothing Shoes, Food and Medicine.

Northern Ohio has experienced the coldest winter of many years. It is a question, whether the people of all the Northern states have not had the coldest weather, during past two months, of which there is any record. It has been a bad winter for the sick, the unemployed and the poor generally. From nearly every large city has come reports of suffering and even deaths, through privation have not been unfrequent.

Painesville can not claim to be exempt from poverty and destitution. A number of agencies have been at work relieving the unfortunate, not the last of these has been Lew Chase and his kindly way of doing good where help was most needed. He has clothed 150 people. During Christmas week he worked in unison with the Salvation Army, and 52 baskets of good things were gathered and distributed to the needy.

Mr. Chase's shop on Maiden Lane has been the receiving and distributing point, he has in fact done a great good work. He has been assisted by many people. The work done by him has been done in a quiet way, the aim has always been to do good in a way not to offend the most sensitive.

ORGANIZATION

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN CLUB IS FORMED AT FAIRPORT

Rev. Williams to Lead Movement Among Boys—Educational and Betterment

Rev. Williams believes so thoroughly in organizations for boys that he gathered together twenty-one charter members on Monday evening and organized a Benjamin Franklin club. This boys' club is organized on a broad enough plan to include educational, social and religious work for boys. In fact, it will permit of manual training work, gymnastic and military drill, out-door sports, camping, etc., and because Benjamin Franklin is said to have experimented in electricity, the boys decided to spend a few evenings studying electricity. The object of the society is to help the boys become good citizens. They will make a thorough study of the life of Benjamin Franklin and all the events of early American history.

ABOUT SHINGLES

The Kind Made by Hand Fifty Years Ago.

Editor Herald:

While on a recent visit to the old E. B. Perry homestead in Montville, which was built by the late M. L. Maynard, of Chardon, forty-five years ago, we found that part of the shingle roof put on by him then, was still in service and in fair condition.

These shingles were hand riven and shaved by my father, from white ash timber.

The next year Mr. Maynard put up a large granary for us, using the same kind of shingles. The entire roof of which promises to round out a half century of covering without having been painted or treated in any way.

Death of Mrs. John Austin

Again the angel of death has visited our community and taken from our midst one who will be greatly missed. Mrs. John Austin died at her home on Safford street Friday evening at six o'clock. Mrs. Austin had been in very poor health for a number of years, but was able to be about the most of the time. Thursday evening she was taken alarmingly ill and suffered terribly for twenty-four hours when death came to her release.

She leaves a husband and one daughter, Mrs. Elsa Ketcham of Willoughby, besides a host of friends to mourn her loss. In the death of Mrs. Austin the Baptist church has lost one of its esteemed members. The W. R. C. and W. C. T. U. a loyal worker, as, when health would permit she was always present.

The funeral was held at the home Monday afternoon. Burial was made in the N. Madison cemetery. The friends from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rice and Mrs. Cogley from Ripley, N. Y.; Mrs. Freeman, Mayville, N. Morley and children, of Geneva.

Sun-Worn Curtains.

In cases where a pair of curtains must do for another season and they are too sun-worn in the middle to serve, cut away the sun-worn portions and sew across, then where sewn use a cord or ribbon, and, if neither of these are at hand, make a couple of straps of old linen, and use them to tie the curtains back at the place they are spliced. Old linen bows, well starched, are neat.

Too Much Continuous Performance.

Little Madge contracted appendicitis, and had to be sent to the hospital to have an operation performed. She bore it all very coolly and pluckily. When she became convalescent, the surgeon came to remove the stitches that had been put in the wound. The child's plea of dignity was very much upset, and she demanded, indignantly: "Do you s'pose I come here to be all stitched up and then unpicked again?"

Purse With Money in a Cod.

A housekeeper at Queenstown, Ireland, constabulary barracks while cleaning a codfish about 30 pounds in weight discovered inside the fish a purse containing a number of silver coins of the reign of Queen Victoria. The purse was of leather, steel bound and in good preservation. It also contained some inscribed paper, which was reduced almost to pulp.

In the Barber's Chair.

A big fat man stretched himself out in a barber's chair. The barber, following the usual custom, soaked his face in a 218 degree towel, while he whetted his razor. When he took the towel off the man inquired if he had a fork handy. "I am pretty sure my face is done, but if you have a fork handy you might stick it in and see."—Atchison Globe.

His Chief Proficiency.

Recently a letter of introduction was handed by an actor to a manager which described the presented as an actor of much merit, and concluded: "He plays Macbeth, Richelieu, Hamlet, Shylock, and billiards. He plays billiards best."

CHECK ON DREAD DISEASE

Iowa Professor Has a Plan He Believes Will Control Tuberculosis in Animals.

Dr. Burton R. Rogers, Ames, Ia., who was for a number of years an inspector of meats for the United States government, is trying to induce the federal authorities to adopt a method for discovering tuberculosis in cattle, which, he says, will result in locating all the diseased animals in the country within a year. His plan is to have every man who sends hogs to market to have his name and address on a tag fastened to the hog's ear. Doctor Rogers said:

"Very few hogs live longer than a year. A 200-pound hog is about the weight at which they are shipped to market. All of them are examined by government inspectors, but under the present system of inspection no one knows where a diseased hog comes from.

"Tuberculosis in hogs is not dangerous to those using the meat because it is subjected to heat before being eaten, and a very little heat is sufficient to kill the germs. But while the life of the hog is short, the life of the cow is comparatively long. There is no way of learning if a cow is infected with the disease except by a technical examination.

"It is the custom to have the cattle and the hogs live together as close neighbors, and so when a cow becomes diseased the hogs remain healthy but a short time. Now, the life of a cow is about ten years, and she may have tuberculosis nearly all her life and nobody know anything of it. But a hog that has lived near her for a few months will surely get the disease, and by the scheme I suggest this hog could be made to carry the tale of the sick cattle to the inspectors."

Motoring and the Ear.

A series of symptoms which may have been observed by motorists have now been recognized by Dr. Royet of Montluçon, who describes them as causing "vague pains, limited to the internal ear, without any tendency to spread to the throat, forehead or neck." Another symptom not always present is a curious crackling in the ear, which occurs when the sufferer is swallowing or drinking. Dr. Royet has come to the conclusion that it is a question of neuralgic pain. The continual rush of air in motoring, passing into the external auditory canal, beats on the membrane of the tympanum. This brings on pain, especially in the right ear, which is naturally on the brake side of the car. The pain becomes more acute if the journey is prolonged after the first ache is felt. For the remedy the doctor advises, first of all, rest. In a few days, excepting in serious cases, the trouble will vanish. When the pains are acute a drop of oil containing cocaine will give immediate relief. As measures of prevention, he advises the use of caps with ear flaps.—Dundee Advertiser.

Life of a Microbe.

The microbe is tenacious of life, for, according to a French contemporary, Miguis found the bacillus leposporous placed on a sheet of glass lives for five years. Germs of potato disease sealed in a tube were living after a period of eight years. In 1879 Ball of Prague, after a lapse of 25 years, infected a mouse fatally with some bacilli. Nestler investigated clods of earth stored in a herbarium for over half a century, and found 89,200 living spores to the gram. Some earth wrapped in paper since 1824, and protected from atmospheric germs, showed on examination 19,000 bacteria to the gram. Eighty-seven years is a ripe age, even for a microbe.

The Part of Wisdom.

Everybody in Middle Bay knew that Mrs. Captain Liscomb was talking about making a visit to her married daughter in Cincinnati. She had been talking about it for two years, but age and the natural timidity of a woman unused to travel had postponed the great event from month to month, until the neighbors began to wonder whether it would ever come to pass.

So one morning, when Uncle Billy Evans met Captain Liscomb in Eccles' store, there was a twinkle in his eye as he asked:

"When's Mis' Liscomb going out to Ohio, Daniel?"

"Don't ask me!" returned the captain, a little peevishly. "I don't know nothin' about it. If I tell her to go, she says I want to get rid of her. If I tell her to stay to home, she says I'm mean. I aint saying a single word!"—Youth's Companion.

Locating the Heat.

Smith—How is your new furnace working these cold days?

Jones—It doesn't give as much hot air as the man who sold it to me.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Willing to Compromise.

Isaacs (who has been hit with a golf ball)—I vill have you in the law courts for dis. I vill sue you for five pounds damages!

Golfer—But surely you heard me shout "fore?"

Isaac—Right! I vill take it!—London Opinion.

Assault.

Algy—Why do you think she is a window smashing suffragette?

Chally—She looked vewy viciously at my monocle.

Brief Manual of Training.

A high school freshman wrote to a juvenile publication, earnestly inquiring what he should do to win a coming event in school athletics—the hundred-yard dash.

"Run a little faster than the other fellows," wrote the editor in reply.—Youth's Companion.

17 VALUABLE HORSES DROWN

Great Fissures Are Opened in Pavement and Center of Street Is Forced Upward Three Feet—Policemen Have Close Call.

New York City.—Hundreds of persons were overcome by gas, many of them being carried from their apartments unconscious, 17 valuable horses were drowned and 100 automobiles were demolished as the result of the bursting of a six-foot water main at West 97th street and West End avenue. The blast caused a leak in a three foot gas main and the escaping fumes swept through the entire district.

Miniature Earthquake.

The bursting of the water main was in effect a miniature earthquake. Great fissures were opened in the pavement and the center of 97th street forced upward three feet. The flood of water was first discovered in the basement of the Thedford garage in West 96th street, where 30 horses were stabled. Peter Davey, a stableman, and Policeman Charles Weidig and W. S. Swain doffed their clothes and, with the temperature but little above zero, swam from stall to stall, cutting the horses' halters. The water soon rose almost to the ceiling and when the three men thought of their own safety they found 30 oats boxes piled against the door at the runway. By an almost superhuman effort they dislodged the boxes and pulled some of the horses out with them. Davey fell in a dead faint and was rushed to a hospital.

Valuable Horses Drowned.

The horses destroyed were valued at an average of $700 each. Among them was a big Percheron named Jim, winner of the blue ribbon at the work horse parade last Memorial day and valued at $2,000. Two of the 300 automobiles in the garage were in the repair room below the street floor and a hundred of them were smashed to pieces. All were hurled against the wall by the inrushing water and battered to splinters. An aeroplane which several chauffeurs had just completed was also destroyed. A score of apartment houses and private residences were filled with the escaping gas and reserve policemen inspected every room in the district to make sure that no one had been overcome and left behind.

ENGINEER DIES AT THROTTLE

Pilot of Passenger Train Is Fatally Scalded When Boiler Valve Blows Out Without Warning.

Chicago, Ill.—Fatally scalded in the cab of his engine while the train was passing West 55th street and Central Park avenue, William Welety of Battle Creek, Mich., a Grand Trunk engineer, dropped unconscious and dying at his post. In the coaches that the engine was drawing at a speed of 35 miles an hour, the scores of passengers were not aware of their peril.

Welety expired on the way to the hospital. Welety's injuries resulted from the blowing out of a boiler valve in the engine cab. The explosion occurred without a moment's warning and the engineer was instantly enveloped in a cloud of steam. The fireman groping through the vapor stumbled over Welety's prostrate body and realized that the engine was running with no one at the throttle. He dragged Welety out into the rear of the cab and pulled the emergency brake signal. Then he made his way through the steam to the throttle which he closed and as the train crew set the brakes the train stopped with a jolt.

FORMER OHIOAN SHOT DOWN

Once Chief of Police in Toledo and Findley Is Murdered in His New York Cafe.

New York City.—Patrick Burns, once chief of police in Toledo and Findlay, O., was shot through the heart and instantly killed in his New York cafe. His bartender, Frank Newberger, was beaten into unconsciousness and $40 was stolen from the cash drawer.

According to Newberger the robbery was committed by two men who entered through the side door and ordered drinks from Burns. As the saloonkeeper started toward the bar one of the men placed a pistol at the bartender's head while the other covered his employer. Burns attempted to wrest the pistol from the robber's hands and was shot.

Newspaper Man Is Dead.

New York City.—Louis Pierre Clover, for more than 28 years a well known New York newspaperman, died following an operation for injuries received when he fell through a coal hole. He was born in Springfield, Ill., 47 years ago, was a grand nephew of Abraham Lincoln and a grandson of Ninian Edwards, the first governor of Illinois. Mr. Clover, who had worked on Chicago and Philadelphia newspapers, came to New York 20 years ago and has for many years "covered" the supreme court for the Sun.

Immersed in Ice Cold Water.

Brownsville, Pa.—With the thermometer four degrees below zero 27 men and women converts at a recent revival at Mount Zion African Methodist Episcopal church here, were immersed in the Monongahela river after a hole 30 feet square had been cut in the ice. One convert, a well known negress of the town, chilled at the sight of two negro preachers with icicles in their whiskers coming for her, resisted and had to be ducked. Three thousand persons watched the baptism.

MANCHU DYNASTY QUITS

ABDICATES THRONE AFTER HAVING REIGNED 300 YEARS.

Edict Is Issued Which Recognizes the Republic and Accepts Terms of President Sun Yat Sen.

CHRONOLOGICAL STEPS IN FORMATION OF THE NEWEST REPUBLIC

First shot in the Chinese revolution fired at Wu Chang October 11, 1911.

Revolutionaries proclaim a republic October 14.

Yuen Chi Kai made premier of the empire in order to crush out the anti Manchus November 1.

Dr. Wu Ting Fang appeals to the world in behalf of the Chinese republic November 18.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen elected president of the Republic of China December 29.

Edict announcing abdication of imperial family promulgated February 12, 1912.

Pekin, China.—After three centuries of absolute rule the Manchu dynasty at noon February 12 yielded up its power and abdicated the throne of China in favor of a representative form of government. This was proclaimed in three simultaneous edicts, the first announcing abdication, the second declaring that the throne accepted the republic, while the third approved all the conditions agreed upon by Premier Yuan Shi Kai and the republicans.

The third edict informed the viceroys and provincial governors of the retirement of the throne from political power and instructed them to continue doing their duty and to preserve order throughout the land.

It declared that the step taken by the throne was in order to meet the wishes of the people.

EIGHT PLEDGES TO EMPEROR.

In consideration for abdication, the republicans make the following eight pledges to the emperor.

1.—The emperor shall retain his title and shall be respected as a foreign monarch.

2.—The emperor shall receive an annual grant of 4,000,000 taels until currency is reformed, after which he shall receive $4,000,000 Mexican.

3.—A temporary residence shall be provided in the Forbidden City and later the imperial family shall reside in the summer palace, ten miles outside of Pekin.

4.—The emperor may observe the sacrifices at his ancestral tombs and temples, which will be protected by republican soldiers.

5.—The great tomb of late emperor, Kwang Su, will be completed and funeral ceremony fittingly observed at the republicans expense.

6.—The palace attendants may be retained, but the number of eunuchs cannot be increased.

7.—The emperor's property will be protected by the republic.

8.—The imperial guards will be governed by the army's board, the republic paying their salaries.

Boy Emperor Only Six.

The abdication of the Chinese throne by Pu Yi, aged six, the child emperor, brings to an end the powerful Manchu dynasty which has reigned in China since 1644. The boy ruler has been on the throne since November 14, 1908, when the emperor Kwong Su, his uncle, died. His father, Prince Chun, was appointed regent, and was the chief figure in China for three years. Surrounded by a large number of princes of the imperial clan and Manchu officials with reactionary ideas, the regent was brought face to face with a revolutionary movement in favor of modern reforms. He endeavored to placate both parties, but ended by causing general dissatisfaction which led to his resignation on December 6, 1911. The promise of a constitutional government, made by the dowager empress on her deathbed in 1908, was not fulfilled in any way until May last year. In that month an imperial edict abolished the old grand council.

$500 WINS YOUNG HUSBAND

Wealthy Widow, Aged Eighty, of Ohio Town, Weds Boy, Twenty, in Newport, Ky.

Lebanon, O.—It has just been learned here that Mrs. Rebecca Witham, 70, a wealthy widow of Mason, O., and Frank Crane, 28, were married in Newport, Ky. The marriage came a few weeks after the aged woman offered $500 for a husband, the man to be of acceptable character.

The woman's son, who is 50, and her daughter, 40, are said to be opposed to their stepfather. It is understood they will take legal steps to prevent their mother turning over to her new husband any of her money even the $500 offered for a husband. If Crane has not received it. Mrs. Crane's first husband, a wealthy farmer, died three years ago, since which she has lived with her son, William Witham. Crane's home town is Mason, but he is said not to have been acquainted with Mrs. Crane until seven weeks ago.

Banker's Son Kills Self.

New York City.—Estranged from his family and a victim of incurable illness, Washington Seligman, son of James Seligman, the well known banker, committed suicide by shooting in his apartment at the hotel Gerard. The dead man left no note to any member of his family but he signed the cause of his act in a short note scribbled on envelope and addressed to no one in particular. It read: "I am tired of being sick all my life." According to his family Seligman was 58 years old.

Fed by Force, Now Insane.

London, England.—William Ball, a male sympathizer with the woman suffrage movement who was arrested last December for throwing a stone through the home office window and who tried to starve himself in jail, has been adjudged insane and sent to the Colney Hatch asylum. After Ball had gone several days without food the prison authorities adopted a method which they found successful with the suffragettes, they fed him by force. To this forcibly feeding Ball's insanity is attributed.

TELLS PROPER WAY TO GOVERN NATION

JAMES J. HILL GIVES HIS VIEWS TO STANLEY INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

RAIL BUILDER'S PHILOSOPHY

Says Human Nature Must be Changed Before We Can Have Government Control of Corporations.

Washington, D. C.—For the benefit of the Stanley committee and the public at large, James J. Hill gave his views on the proper way to conduct the government, adding the announcement that only once in his life did he try to be a monopolist and that was when he organized the Northern Securities Co., because he needed $90,000,000 to save his Great Northern from Harriman and did not have that sum of money about him at the time. Mr. Hill's philosophy of government, as he expounded it to the committee when he had concluded his testimony, is as follows:

"Before we can have government control of industries that will eliminate competition we shall have to change human nature, by eliminating the selfish motives which dominate not only human beings but every other form of life.

Can't Eliminate Competition.

"Competition will exist in the world as long as the law of the survival of the fittest endures and that law will last long after our present laws have been wiped off the statute books. If the federal government undertakes to eliminate competition it will be a short step to the time when there will be no federal government, but rule by the mob."

The magnate who had now risen to his feet and was glaring with his deep set black eyes at the chairman continued: "I would lay down the law of right and wrong. I would limit power. I would see that every corporation, however big, put its money out legitimately and did not water its stock and I would not be jealous of any corporation because of its size."

Relieved of Responsibility.

In answer to a question about limiting competition, Hill said: "When we are translated and cease to be material people we may get along without competition. Until that time we must keep our feet on the earth and go back to Adam and Eve. I do not know in all my experience of any overgrown corporation that has been successful. The Standard Oil Co. came the nearest to it."

"But they are successful now, aren't they?" asked Representative Young. They have raised the price of oil."

"They are relieved of responsibility now," snapped Hill.

"The court didn't permit you to form your combination but you are still prosperous, aren't you?" asked Bartlett.

"My case is like that of the wife who was dying. Her minister asked her husband if she was resigned and he replied 'She's got to be.'"

FLAG FLIES 1,000 FEET UP

"Star-Spangled Banner's" Hundredth Anniversary Celebrated at Eagle Rock Park, New Jersey.

Montclair, N. J.—From a lofty staff in Eagle Rock Park near here "Old Glory" was flung to the breeze, 1,000 feet above the sea level, on February 14 to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of the writing of the "Star-Spangled Banner." The flag in clear weather is visible from all parts of New York bay, from Brooklyn Heights and from the tall buildings of Manhattan.

The 360-foot steel staff and the immense flag were paid for by the Essex county lodges of Elks, the lodges of the Order of Eagles provided an eagle of gilded copper plate with a wing spread, of ten feet to surmount the flagpole, and the Masonic bodies of the county provided and dedicated the ornamental base. The entire cost was about $9,000.

ARIZONA FULL FLEDGED STATE

Bill Is Signed by President Taft in Presence of Large Delegation From New Commonwealth.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft signed the bill making Arizona a state on February 14 while a moving picture man turned the crank of his machine producing the first motion pictures ever taken in the White House.

The ceremony took place in the presence of a large delegation of Arizonans.

Taking its name from the day on which its statehood proclamation is signed the new commonwealth will be known as the "Valentine state."

Mother Burns Babe to Death.

Halifax, N. S.—Mrs. Ada McCarren put her five-week-old baby in the stove and burned it to death, according to a confession which the police say she made when arrested on suspicion that she could account for the disappearance of her child, which had been missing ten nine days.

Small bones found in an ash barrel in the house led to the arrest of the woman, who had previously explained the child's disappearance by saying that it had been kidnaped. The police believe she is mentally deranged.

Jailed for Fatal Wreck.

Bangor, Maine.—Herbert O. Dibble, conductor of an excursion train which, on July 28, collided with a regular train on the Bangor & Aroostook railroad at Grindstone, killing nine persons, pleaded guilty to manslaughter here.

He was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail and pay a fine of $500.

Justice Bird said he believed it necessary that servants and agents of public service corporations be made to realize their full duty and responsibility to the public.

LORIMER INQUIRY ENDS

COMMITTEE HAS BEEN IN SESSION 102 DAYS.

Cost of Investigation, So Far as the Government Is Concerned, Estimated at $101,000.

Washington, D. C.—With the termination of the investigation into the election of Senator Lorimer of Illinois, an announcement was made by Attorney Elbridge Hanecy, counsel for Lorimer, that he will shortly file a plea of res adjudica, which means that final decision in the case is as far away as ever. The nature of the plea is that Senator Lorimer's seat was placed in jeopardy once before on the same charge and that the senate decided he was entitled to his toga. The defense will plead also that no additional evidence of material importance was brought out at the second investigation. If the plea is upheld by the senate there will be no second vote on Lorimer's right to his seat.

The investigation which has just ended began on June 20, 1911. The committee has been in session 102 days and has examined 130 witnesses. It is estimated that the cost of the inquiry, so far as the government is concerned, is $101,000.

Three things engaged the attention of the committee on the last day of its inquiry—tests of the ability of J. E. Sheridan, a stenographer employed by the Burns detective agency to take down a conversation heard through a dictagraph, an apology from Milton W. Blumenberg who lost his position when he denounced Sheridan's notes as "manufactured," and Edward Hines' denial of the story told by Miss Seavers, that he had tried to bribe her.

The dictagraph tests of Sheridan's ability were made under conditions approximating these encountered in Toronto when he made notes of a conversation between Charles McGowan, a Hines-Lorimer witness, and two detectives. When the tests were over, Sheridan was placed on the stand and read his notes easily, but there were frequent breaks just as in his report of the conversation in Toronto. At the conclusion of the tests the opinion was just as much divided as before regarding Sheridan's ability to take down a conversation heard through a dictagraph.

PAINTS PICTURE OF SQUALOR

Woman Social Survey Worker Relates Her Experiences Among the Steel Laborers at Homestead.

Washington, D. C.—A graphic picture of the "other side" of the steel industry—a pitiful story of squalor in which she said the immigrant laborer lives and rears his family—was given to the Stanley investigating committee by Miss M. F. Byington, a Pittsburgh social survey worker. She related her experiences among steel laborers of Homestead, Pa., during the winter of 1907-08.

"Down in the shadow of the clanging steel mills, in the smoke and grime of industrial hubbub, the tiny white-faced children pursue their joyless playing in filthy court yards where sunshine seldom penetrates the thick, black smoke that hangs between the walls," she said.

"Old, young, bent, disease-stricken women spend their days in dirty, crowded, half-furnished rooms, windowless and unventilated."

"My investigations have shown," said Miss Byington, "that it is impossible to maintain a normal standard of living on less than $15 a week. At present 65 per cent of the employes of the Homestead plant are day laborers who are paid $10.50 a week."

The family of a steel worker who receives less than $10 a week spent its income on the average as follows:

Rent $1.88, food $4.10, clothing 94 cents, furniture 9 cents, fuel 36 cents, insurance 70 cents, miscellaneous 92 cents.

The expenditure for rent, the witness said, represented two small rooms in an unsanitary court, where the "death rate was double the normal and where comfort was impossible."

FRENCH PULPIT ORATOR IS DEAD

Abbe Loyson Was Formerly a Carmelite Monk, but Renounced Catholicism in 1865.

Paris.—Abbe Loyson, the widely known French pulpit orator, died here. Pere Hyacinthe, whose correct name was Charles Loyson, was formerly a Carmelite monk and renounced Catholicism in 1865. In 1868 he converted the widow of Capt. E. R. Merriam and formerly a Miss Butterfield of Oswego, N. Y., to a modified form of the Catholic faith and in 1872 he married her. He was excommunicated in 1869 and in 1873 was chosen curate at the congregation of Liberal Catholics.

Explosion Fatal to Hermit.

Erie, Pa.—Dr. Louis Hensler, aged 70, was so seriously burned in a gas explosion in his room at 708 French street, that he died a few hours later. Hensler lived a secluded life. To his little circle of patrons he never divulged his past. In his room was a gas stove connected with a rubber hose. The hose came off and the small room was filled with gas. He was blown through the window to the roof of a house adjoining, where he was found by the firemen. No relatives are known.

Paralytic Is Roasted Alive.

Dayton, O.—Helpless from paralysis, John Dunlavy was roasted alive while seated in his invalid's chair when sparks from his pipe dropped on his clothes, setting them on fire. Dunlavy had been left alone by his wife while she attended to her household duties and his plight was not discovered until his son, coming on a visit, beheld his father burning alive when he looked through a window. He broke down a locked door and entered the room just as the charred body of the father fell to the floor.

"Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled"

Sabbath.

In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall guard your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus * * * My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus. Phil. 4: 6, 7; Col. 4: 19.

Monday.

Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay by vows unto the most high, and call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me. Psalm 50: 14, 15.

Tuesday.

Why sayest thou, O Jacob, and speakest, O Israel, my way is hid from the Lord, and my judgment is passed over from my God? Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? There is no searching of his understanding. They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and not faint. Isa. 40: 27-31.

Wednesday.

Thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, fear not; for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name, thou art mine. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. For I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy savior. Isa. 43: 1-3.

Thursday.

We know that to them that love God all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose. He that spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not also with him freely give us all things? * * * Gird yourselves with humility, to serve one another: for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God that he may exalt you in due time; casting all your anxiety upon God, because he careth for you. Rom. 8. 28, 32; 1 Pet. 5: 6-7.

Friday.

Consider the lilies of the field how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. If God doth so clothe the grass of the field, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Be not therefore anxious, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewith shall we be clothed? for your heavenly father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first his kingdom, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Matt. 6: 28-33.

Saturday.

The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower. I will call upon the Lord, who is worthy to be praised; so shall I be saved from mine enemies. Psalm 18. 2, 3.

The Shepherd's Rod.

The tenderness of Jesus Christ is never sentimental. It is always the tenderness of perfect strength, and perfect righteousness. The shepherd has a rod as well as a staff. A story is told of one who talked with a shepherd in the higher Alps. While talking, the shepherd gathered a handful of the best grass and went to a low shelter nearby. "I have a sheep there with a broken leg," he said.

"How did it happen?" queried the traveler. "It did not happen," answered the shepherd. "I broke it intentionally. That sheep was headstrong and unruly. It did not love me, and was always leading the others astray. Now it knows its dependence on me and loves to eat from my hand. When it is well again it will keep nearer to me than any of the sheep."—C. I. Schofield, D. D.

"My Times are in Thy Hand."

Desire only the will of God. Seek him alone, and you surely will find peace; you shall enjoy it in spite of the world. What is it that troubles you? Poverty, neglect, want of success, external or internal troubles? Look upon everything as in the hands of God and as real blessings that he bestows upon his children, of which you receive your portion. Then the world may turn its face from you, but nothing will deprive you of peace."—Fenelon.

Choose Your Friends.

You can be on good terms with a good many people whose fundamental attitude toward life does not match your own. You cannot afford to be on intimate terms with a man who is lacking in reverence, in unimpeachable honesty, in profound respect for womanly purity or in definite serious purpose. These are the four cardinal attitudes: toward God, toward truth, toward women, toward one's self.—Charles Reynolds Brown.

Not Now.

There are multitudes who have added to their many sins the saddening sin of saying "not now" to Christ when the pressure of his claims were lying heavy upon them.—Rev. [illegible] Gilliam, Methodist, Denver.

COST OF GRAIN GROWING IN CENTRAL CANADA

A careful canvass made of a number of men farming in a large way indicates that even with the extreme expense of harvesting the crop, which has been caused by the bad weather and difficulty in threshing, wheat has been produced and put on the market for less than 55 cents a bushel. The average freight rate is not over 13 cents per bushel. This would make the cost of production and freight 68 cents and would leave the farmer an actual margin on his low-grade wheat of 17½ cents and for his high-grade wheat of 19½ cents; and though this is not as large a profit as the farmer has every right to expect, it is a profit not to be despised, and which should leave a very fair amount of money to his credit when all the expenses of the year have been paid, unless the value of low-grade wheat sinks very much below its present level. A matter of importance to the prospective settler is that of the cost of production. The following table has been prepared after careful investigation:

| | |
|---|---|
| Interest on 320 acres, value $30 per acre, 3 years at 6 per cent interest | $1,720.00 |
| Interest on horses, machinery, wagons, ploughs, harrows, etc., to operate 320 acres—say $2,500 for 3 years | 450.00 |
| Getting 320 acres ready for crop first year, doing one's own work, with hired help, about $3.50 per acre | 1,120.00 |
| Getting 320 acres ready for crop, second and third year, about $1.25 per acre per year, or $2.50 per acre 2 years one's own work and hired help | 800.00 |
| Seed per year, wheat, per acre $1.25, 3 years | 1,200.00 |
| Seeding, 320 acres, 25 cents per acre, 3 years | 240.00 |
| Twine, 320 acres, 30 cents per acre, 3 years | 288.00 |
| Harvesting, 320 acres, 30 cents per acre, 3 years | 288.00 |
| Marketing, 320 acres, estimate 20 bushels per acre per year for 3 years, 3 cents per bushel, or 9 cents per bushel for 3 years | 576.00 |
| Threshing 320 acres, estimate 20 bushels per acre per year for 3 years, 6 cents per bushel per year or 18 cents for 3 years | 1,152.00 |
| Total | $7,834.00 |
| Cr. | |
| By wheat crop farm 320 acres for 3 years, average 20 bushels per acre per year for 3 years, or a total of 60 bushels, = 19,200 bushels at 80 cents per bushel | $15,360.00 |
| Balance to credit of farm after 3 years operation, $2,583.00 per year | 7,526.00 |

"To operate 480 acres would cost less in proportion, as the plant required for 320 acres would do for the larger farm, and the interest on plant for the extra 160 acres would be saved."

The figures given may be open to criticism, but they will be found to be reasonably accurate, with a fairness given to the expense column. There are those who profess to do the work at a much less cost than those given.

Turning the Tables.

Having done his best, by every fair and unfair means, during the last election to catch the candidate tripping, the heckler grew offensively personal.

"Is it true that your mother washes—" he began, but before he could add the word "clothes," the wily candidate called out smartly:—

"Of course she does. Why, don't you?"

This raised a loud laugh at the heckler's expense; but, still undaunted, he returned to the attack.

"You can't deny," he said, "that your father was a rag-and-bone man. I bought some clothes of him thirty years ago."

"And I see you're still wearing them!" was the candidate's lightning retort.

There was no more heckling that night.

Lock Jaw Prevented.
Washington, D. C.—Mr. Albert Gawler's son McPherson while playing stepped on a broken bottle which cut through his shoe, gashing his foot severely. His Father was forced to pull out the glass before removing the shoe. # George Washington's Home Town

Each year finds tens of thousands of American citizens making patriotic pilgrimages to the home and tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon on the Potomac river. Almost without exception these tourists "stop over" going or coming at the quaint old town of Alexandria, Va., located about half way between the city of Washington and Mount Vernon. Many of the visitors declare Alexandria almost if not quite as interesting as the far-famed country seat of the Father of His Country. Old Alexandria would be well worthy a visit merely as a fine example of an old colonial town, rich in the architecture of the period, but added to this is the historical significance that it was George Washington's "home town."

Hither he came to attend the balls and other social festivities that brought out all the landed gentry of the old dominion; here he attended church every Sunday when residing at Mount Vernon; and to this place he repaired when business matters connected with his large estate required legal or other adjustment that could not readily be negotiated on the plantation. Alexandria was the meeting place of the Masonic lodge of which George Washington was so prominent a member and here was located a volunteer fire company that boasted our first president as one of its members. In short, from every standpoint Alexandria meant more to George Washington than the scorest town or cross-roads community is apt to do to the present-day American farmer in this era of rural free delivery and railroads and trolleys and automobiles.

In George Washington's time Alexandria—or Belhaven as it was at first known—was [illegible] the middle of the eighteenth century one of the most prominent ports in the United States and seemed to hold out every promise of extensive development in the future. George Washington himself took a hand [illegible] the town developed an extensive foreign trade. The docks were crowded with warehouses filled with corn, tobacco and other products, while in the harbor were always to be found many of the largest ships of the period, loading and discharging a variety of commodities. As the American terminus of a heavy overseas trade, Alexandria became well known in shipping circles in England, and it was thought for a time that the port on the Potomac would overshadow Baltimore. Then came the various influences that combined to bring about the commercial eclipse of the little city so dear to the heart of the nation's liberator. One of the first of these was the establishment only a few miles away of the capital of the nation, which speedily overshadowed Alexandria in various ways. Then came the building of railroads, which diverted much traffic to other channels, and finally the Civil war helped to put a blight upon the community which had long been one of the strongholds of the Lees of Virginia.

But even in this twentieth century neglected Alexandria gets "on the map" at least one day each year—namely, on the 22d of February, when with each recurring anniversary of Washington's birthday there is a big celebration in the little city that is filled with landmarks and objects identified with the private life and public career of the leader of the Revolution. Often the president of the United States goes to Alexandria by boat or trolley to participate in the exercises, and the governors of Virginia and Maryland are invariably invited. On such occasions the town which is located in closer proximity to historic Mount Vernon than is any other community, appears almost too small to accommodate the crowds that invade her public places. For, be it known, for all that there are handsome well-paved business streets that afford a route of parade for the procession that is an invariable feature of this holiday, there are other highways and by ways in the staid, dignified, conservative old town that readily convince the visitor that they have undergone little if any alteration since the days of George Washington.

Old Alexandria is "going on" three hundred years of age, for it was founded as long ago as 1730, although, as previously explained, it was known for some score of years by another name. In 1748 the general assembly of the colony of Virginia formally designated it as Alexandria. The town retains to this day the names of its streets, chosen in the days of long ago from the titles of royalty and nobility. Thus we find as the most conspicuous thoroughfares King, Prince, Duke and Royal streets.

Alexandria was the starting place of General Braddock's famous expedition against the French and Indians which, ill-fated though it was, served to bring George Washington, for the first time, conspicuously before his countrymen. Here, in the old Carlisle house, [illegible] George Washington and other leading men of the colony had a lengthy conference with the British commander [illegible] the expedition set out upon the campaign which was destined to go down in history as "Braddock's defeat."

The old Carlisle house, which is assuredly one of the most interesting structures in the United States, fell sadly into decay some years ago, although a move looking to its complete restoration has latterly been made by a patriotic society. George Washington was a frequent guest at Carlisle house—the mansion of Major Carlisle, and when, after a social function in Alexandria he returned to Mount Vernon by boat it was almost invariably from the Carlisle house that he set out, the terraced grounds of the mansion sloping down to the river, rendering it convenient for General Washington and his house guests to step into the barge to be rowed to his manor house farther down on the Virginia shore of the Potomac. It was also General Washington's custom to sup at Carlisle house each 22d of February when he came to Alexandria to attend the "Birth Night Balls," which were instituted in his honor in Alexandria after he rose to fame as the hero of the War for Independence. These balls were held at Claggett's tavern and constituted the supreme height of Alexandria's social glory.

General Washington was most intimately identified with the history of Alexandria from the year 1763, when he purchased considerable property in the town. He showed himself a good citizen by becoming a member of the Friendship Fire Engine company. This was a volunteer organization for any such thing as a fire-fighting department [illegible] employes was [illegible] known in those days. Tradition [illegible] that not only was the Father of Its Country a [illegible] of this old-time fire fighting [illegible], but that on the occasion of more than one fire he "ran with the machine" [illegible] the old-fashioned [illegible] organization which [illegible] fire company [illegible] the Masonic lodge [illegible] of which Washington was a member, and the lodge rooms [illegible] at Alexandria [illegible] Washington relics of [illegible].

Among the buildings in Alexandria which attract much attention from visitors is the old colonial mansion at the corner of Duke and St. Asaph streets, where Lafayette and his suite were quartered when the distinguished Frenchman visited this country and where a great ball was given in his honor. Not far distant is the building occupied as the first free school in Alexandria, which was established through the bounty of George Washington. On Fairfax street, near Duke, is the First Presbyterian church, built in [illegible] the home of Lord Thomas Fairfax, a splendid example of the architecture of the Georgian period and yet in a perfect state of preservation. Persons who essay to "tour Alexandria" by motor car are destined to many a bump and jolt, for whereas the principal [illegible] are paved with asphalt most of the residential streets have the great cobblestones that have withstood the [illegible]. However, it is interesting to note that even this primitive paving has its historic significance, for these self-same cobblestones were laid under General Washington's direction by the Hessian prisoners, captured [illegible]

NAMING THE BOY.

Old Jum, gardener and general factotum, was accompanied one day by a bright-looking lad eight or ten years old.

"Is this your boy?" I asked.

"Yessuh, he mine he las' one I got, suh—Junior, you wuffles nigger, mek your manners ter de white folks!"

"Junior," I commented. "So he is named after you."

"Nawsuh," the old man replied rather indignantly: "he ain't named fur me! My name Jumbo, what my mammy git outn de Bible. Dis hyer chile name Junior caz he wuz bawn in June."—Lippincott's.

WHAT WAS "ETC."?

Writing about a recent "function," the society editor of the Ellis, Kan., Review-Headlight says:

"Light refreshments were served, consisting of popcorn, cider, etc., served in courses."

Mount Vernon Token Returned

When Mount Vernon, the home of Washington, was restored some 30 years ago the various states were asked to send some token to be placed in the rooms. The women of Kansas sent a solid walnut, hand carved seal of Kansas to represent this state. For 30 years the beautiful seal has been standing in the former home of the Father of His Country and it has just been returned to the Kansas Historical society to be placed in the exhibit of Kansas curios.

The piece is carved from one solid piece of native Kansas walnut, one of the few perfect pieces of walnut wood found in the state. A search of several months was required to find a tree suitable for the work. One was found in Coffey county and was cut down expressly for this carving. It is four feet long and two feet high and is intended to go over the door of some hall.

The seal was carved by the late Henry Worrall of Topeka, the first artist in Kansas. He worked all one summer on it. In the center is the great seal of the state, painted in colors in oil by Professor Worrall. Around the seal are the words "Great Seal of the State of Kansas, January 29, 1861," carved by hand, each letter in relief. Around the seal are grouped the products of Kansas.

When the servant quarters were restored at Mount Vernon, Kansas school children raised the money to pay for the restoration. It was then decided that Kansas had sufficient representation among the relics in the home and the great seal was returned to the Historical society.

WISDOM FROM THE WED.

Singleton—It's wonderful what love will enable a fellow to see in a girl that he never saw before.

Wedmore—Yes and it's equally wonderful what love won't let him see that he'll see later on.—Boston Evening Transcript.

A MAN'S WAY.

"I hear the bride and groom are having trouble already."

"Married only a month already, and quarreling?"

"So they say."

"What is the trouble?"

"Seems her husband wants to quit going to afternoon receptions and get back to business."

The Fool Who Drops the Match

We know, and everybody knows, that thousands of people every day are throwing lighted cigarettes and cigars and matches "on the stone floor," or in some other place which they regard as equally safe; and everybody who has given any attention to the subject knows that a considerable proportion of the fearful loss of lives and property caused by fires in this country is due to this pernicious practice. Nobody but a fool will point an "unloaded" gun at a human being, because everybody has come to look upon it as an act of inexcusable recklessness; but the amount of harm done by that foolishness is as nothing in comparison with what is being caused, year after year, by the habit of throwing down lighted cigar ends and cigarettes and matches in "safe" places. The great Baltimore fire was, in all probability, caused by a cigar or cigarette thrown on a stone sidewalk and blown into a cellar through an uncovered bull's-eye hole. The act ought to be made a misdemeanor, whoever commits it.—New York Evening Post.

Church Property in New York.

In New York Episcopal places of worship are worth $25,820,000; Presbyterian, $10,400,000; Methodist, $10,500,000; Baptist, $9,400,000; Reformed, $7,900,000; Lutheran, $6,300,000, and Congregational, $4,250,000. The value of church property in New York is $163,953,740, exclusive of parsonages, hospitals and asylums. The debts in New York are $19,062,419, or about 12.3 per cent. Boston has invested in churches $27,000,000, with debts of 7 per cent of their value. Chicago has the same sum invested, with 15½ per cent debts; Baltimore, $14,000,000, with debts of 10½ per cent; Philadelphia, $45,000,000, with 9 per cent debts, and Washington, $15,000,000, with 10½ per cent debts.—Christian Herald.

FIREBUG FOLLOWS ROSCOE TEACHER

POSTOFFICE ALSO REDUCED TO ASHES BY SUPPOSED INCENDIARY.

SHERIFF FERRETING THE TOWN

Fires Follow Return of Teacher to Village Where Bitter School Fight Is Still in Progress.

Roscoe.—The bitter fight with fire for free schools without tuition pupils in Roscoe has been renewed with the result that the postoffice, LeRetilley's grocery and another store building are charred ruins with a loss of $15,000.

[illegible] Miss Florence Osborn, the girl teacher from Columbus, who was brought here last fall to teach the high school tuition pupils and was driven out in January by a series of flames and threatening letters, returned here and resumed teaching.

She went to board with Mrs. Thomas LeRetilley, a partner in the LeRetilley grocery, which is managed by Jay LeRetilley. The school board had invited her to return and her father accompanied her here, not leaving until after he had satisfied himself that she was in no personal peril.

Every man, woman and child in this village of 600 is facing an examination by Sheriff A. C. McDonald in a house-to-house canvass in an effort to find the firebug who has been carrying the torch through the village.

TESTS RECOMMENDED.

Dr. Clippinger Would Have the Teachers Examined.

Columbus.—At the concluding session of the Ohio Association of School Boards, Dr. J. A. Pence of Lima was chosen president. Dr. Edward Herbst of this city was made chairman of the executive committee.

Dr. W. G. Clippinger, president of Otterbein university, spoke on "Efficiency of Tests." He recommended that tests be given teachers as well as pupils and that a test to pupils really revealed nothing unless the teacher had been tested previously.

Judge Roland W. Baggott of Dayton discussed the relation of the juvenile courts to the public school system.

SYNDICATE GETS BIG PAPER

Garry Herrmann Heads Corporation That Takes Over Commercial Tribune.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 7.—A deal has been practically closed whereby the Commercial Tribune will pass, under [illegible] the hands of a company composed of Garry Herrmann and a syndicate of wealthy politicians.

Scott Small, former newspaper man and until recently director of public safety of Cincinnati, will become manager. E. O. Eshelby, who has been president of the Commercial Tribune for a number of years, will retire from active newspaper work.

So far as known, no changes will be made in the policy of the paper, which always has been Republican.

MAY CALL OHIO TROOPS.

War Department Serves Notice on Adjutant General That O. N. G. May Be Called for Service.

Columbus.—In a private communication the war department at Washington notified Adjutant General Weybrecht that in the event of real hostilities along the Mexican border, the Ohio militia might be called upon for service.

The communication, however, did not instruct the adjutant general to have the militia in readiness to move.

At the department it was explained that it simply was a warning issued as a precautionary measure.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

Judge Donnelly Trial Gets a Quick Start.

Toledo.—The second trial of Judge Michael Donnelly of Napoleon bids fair to consume only a short time, judging from the start made after the selection of a jury. Daniel D. Donovan, assignee of the defunct Citizens' State bank of Napoleon was called as the first witness and identified 14 exhibits. In all 124 exhibits are to be introduced as evidence.

TIFFIN TO HAVE NEW SCHOOL.

Tiffin.—The electors of Tiffin authorized a bond issue of $40,000 for a new school building. The vote was 718 to 258.

TROOPERS IN COMPETITION.

Columbus.—Crack teams of the National Guard troopers from Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo will meet in the Queen City May 28th to participate in a series of competitive drills and exercises to be held under the supervision of Lieutenant Disque of the United States cavalry. The affair will be in the nature of an encampment although its social features will make the tournament unique in the annals of Ohio military affairs.

Barnesville.—The Gem laundry was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of about $4,000, fully covered by insurance. The fire is believed to have originated from an overheated pipe in the boiler room, and was well under way before it was discovered.

Columbus.—H. G. DeWese, state inspector of building and loan associations, tendered his resignation to State Insurance Commissioner E. H. Moore.

JEALOUS PIG EATS MONK.

Mrs. Lincom Prostrated With Grief Over Death of Jocko—Orders Porker's Execution.

Marysville.—Mrs. Gregory Lincom is prostrated with grief as the result of a pig devouring her inseparable companion, Jocko, a 15-year-old monkey. Physicians say that Mrs. Lincom may recover, but will never be the same woman as a result of the shock.

Mrs. Lincom declares that her "dear pet Jocko" met his tragic death as the result of jealousy on the part of Pigawig, a fourteen-pound porker; that Pigawig always was jealous of Jocko and always was waiting for a chance to eat him up.

The chance came last evening, she says, when Pigawig deliberately concealed himself under her bed, and, as she fell into a doze, stealthily crept up on the bed where she lay, with Jocko in her arms, and ate up Jocko in two gulps, and then, jumping to the floor, wormed and squirmed and snorted over his victory. Mrs. Lincom awoke just in time to hear a faint squeal from Jocko as he was disappearing down his pigship's esophagus.

Jocko, according to Mrs. Lincom, was a real aristocrat, who had as much sense as "you or I," she says.

Mrs. Lincom has ordered that Pigawig immediately die for the "diabolical deed."

FEBRUARY 14 AND JUNE 18.

City's Celebration of One Hundredth Anniversary Will Be a Double-Jointed Affair.

Columbus.—The Columbus birthday celebration is to be a double-jointed affair and this accounts largely for the fact that the exercises in commemoration of Feb. 14 are to be held in the representative chamber of the statehouse, the seating capacity of which is limited.

The second joint of the celebration is to be June 18, which marks the day when the physical work of building Columbus began 100 years ago. It is felt by the centennial commission that the weather at that time is much more suited for demonstration purposes.

The program for the June date has not been touched upon as yet, but it was on that day that the statehouse reservation was surveyed and staked off. On the same day the first public sale of lots took place. The lot now partly occupied by the Huntington bank was the first one sold.

ATHENS HAS BIG BLAZE.

Three Story Building Ruined and Losses Aggregate $50,000.

Athens.—Fire completely gutted the three-story brick building owned by J. H. Cline opposite the court house. The building was occupied by Cline's pharmacy and Haughn's poolroom on the first floor, the Athenian clubroom on the third floor and several offices on the second floor. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated at $50,000, partly covered by insurance.

FAIR TO LAST ONE WEEK.

Columbus.—The plan of holding the state fair this year for two weeks, beginning Aug. 27, in conjunction with the celebration of the Columbus centennial, has been abandoned because the national fair board has given the second week to Indianapolis for the fair there. However, the centennial celebration will be held for two weeks, beginning with Aug. 27, when the one week of the state fair will start.

Agricultural day of the celebration, which was set for Thursday of the second week, will be changed to Friday of the first week, and the opening day, Aug. 27, will be designated as "Columbus day."

CENTENARIAN AT INSTITUTE.

Kent.—George W. Austin, 103 last October, attended all sessions of the farmers' institute. The speakers, M. I. Trexler, John Begg and F. N. Fagan, complimented him for the interest he manifested and he was much featured in the addresses. Mr. Austin was the guest of Rev. Lotta D. Crossley at the church dinner. Rev. Mrs. Crossley, whose home is in Kent, is Universalist pastor at Marion.

BOY KILLED BY A CAR.

Martin's Ferry.—When attempting to jump a wagon Geo., Jr., 8, son of Geo. Baxter of Aetnaville, was run down by a Wheeling traction car and sustained injuries which resulted in his death.

FOUR COASTERS INJURED.

Zanesville.—Four young persons were injured, two of them fatally, when a bobsled on which they were riding crashed into a street car on a steep grade.

Columbus.—The C. & G. Cooper Co. of Mt. Vernon, builders and erectors of engines, and employing 500 men, is the first firm to elect to come under the provisions of the workmen's compensation act. The board has sent out 13,000 application blanks to employers of labor and it is expected that a majority of those who receive them will decide to qualify under the law.

Cannelville.—This village voted wet by 39 at a local law election.

Circleville.—The first annual banquet of the Pickaway County Ohio State University Alumni association was held. Among the guests were Dr. W. O. Thompson. Officials of the association are: President, Prof. D. B. Clark; secretary, Meeker Terwilliger.

Salineville.—Leward Bright has sued the Economy store here for 20 cents change he alleges he failed to secure when he made a five-cent purchase and gave a quarter in payment. The case is up for hearing and both sides have hired lawyers.

Dental Operation on Pony.

A remarkable operation has been performed by a Wanstead (Eng.) veterinary surgeon on a pony which had a fracture of the lower jaw. After injecting cocaine and wiring the teeth together, the surgeon drilled a hole through the jawbone, and the broken parts were then firmly drawn together by strong silver wire. The pony is expected to make a complete recovery.

A TROUBLE MAKER
Coffee Poison Breeds Variety of Ills.
A California woman who didn't know for twenty years what kept her ill, writes to tell how she won back her health by quitting coffee:
"I am 54 years old," she says, "have used coffee all my life, and for 20 years suffered from indigestion and insomnia. Life was a burden and a drag to me all the time, and about once a year my ailments got such hold upon me that I was regularly 'sick in bed' for several weeks each time.
"I was reluctant to conclude that coffee was the cause of my trouble, but I am thankful that I found out the truth.
"Then I determined to use Postum exclusively—for a week at first—for I doubted my ability to do without coffee for any length of time. I made the Postum carefully, as directed, and before the week expired had my reward in a perceptible increase in strength and spirits.
"Seeing the good that my short experiment had accomplished, I resolved to continue the use of Postum, cutting out the coffee entirely. This I did for nine months, finding, daily, increased cause for gratification at my steadily improving health. My indigestion gradually left me, my sleep returned, I gained 26 pounds in weight, my color changed from sallow to a fresh, rosy hue and life became a blessing.
"Then I thought I would try coffee again, and did so for a few weeks. The punishment for deserting my good friend, Postum, was a return of my old troubles.
"That taught me wisdom, and I am now and shall be all my life hereafter using Postum exclusively and enjoying the benefits it brings me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.
"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.
Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Gov. Harmon has knocked his presidential boom into "a cocked hat."

---

When you have money everybody shakes your hand. When you have none everybody shakes you.

---

Bryan or anybody Bryan wants convinces us of the uselessness of the Chicago Republican convention

---

If Gov. Harmon can convert democrats to follow him, the democratic and republican parties will be united But there is an IF in the above declaration.

---

If Gov. Harmon with his opposition to election of U. S. Senators by the people, and his opposition to a government of the people by direct vote, is a democrat, then democrats may as well abandon the organization and unite with republicans

---

Many people will conclude that Mr. Bryan was better acquainted with Governor Harmon than the people of Ohio thought he was It certainly was very nice of the Governor to come out in the open and establish beyond doubt the truthfulness of all Mr. Bryan has said

---

The Constitutional Convention should not only adopt the Initiative and Referendum, but add the Recall Then a governor of the state would not repudiate a party platform as Gov. Harmon has done, without subjecting himself to the Recall

The first utterance to the country made by President Roosevelt after the presidential election of 1904 was a declaration against a third term. He made the following explicit declaration: "On the fourth of March, next, I shall have served three and a half years and these three and a half years CONSTITUTE MY FIRST TERM. The wise custom which limits the president to TWO TERMS regards the SUBSTANCE and not the form and under NO CIRCUMSTANCES will I be a candidate for or ACCEPT any nomination," and again in December, 1907, he declared "I have not changed and shall not change that decision thus announced." What can be thought of a man who would stultify himself by accepting a nomination after making such a declaration?

THE LA FOLLETTE TRAGEDY.

Senator La Follette's breakdown seems to be much more serious than merely physical. Apparently his mental powers are also involved The frightful strain under which he has kept himself for the last dozen years or more has at last proved too much and the man who seemed superior to fatigue and above the ordinary limitations of the human flesh is found supine, his energies undermined, his mental grip broken, his fighting spirit gone

What Lemons Will Do.

Lemons are golden, says a prominent doctor, and if many people believed this there would be less employment for doctors in attending to small ailments A bilious headache will always be helped by taking lemons in hot water without sugar, and may often be cured if this is done in the morning, fasting, before breakfast. Lemon rind has cleansing properties, and suits most skins if a little rose water is added to it. Many women make a point of having a cut lemon on the washstand, and dipping it first in rose water, then rubbing it on the neck and face, rinsing afterwards in fresh water. If lemon irritates the skin a little powdered borax should be mixed with the juice

Spectacular Mourning Out of Date.

"Spectacular mourning is not so popular as it was some years ago," said the manager of a city department store in answer to an inquiry on that subject. "There is still a large business done in all kinds of mourning goods, but either the somber period has grown shorter or many bereaved persons prefer not to be conspicuous because of their sorrows, for the sale of mourning goods has fallen off. In the stationery department there seems to be no change—in fact, the demand for black bordered cards and writing paper has increased." To illustrate the quality of some "show mournings" he said: "At a stationery establishment a short time ago a woman in deepest black asked to see samples of dinner dance cards She selected one and ordered one hundred to be done on black bordered cards, compromising with her conscience by suggesting that the border be not too heavy"

TALE OF BURIED GOLD

BULLET MADE SOLDIER FORGET THE PLACE OF HIDING.

Memory Returned Before His Death, and Son Now Is Searching for Treasure Concealed Prior to the Civil War.

The story of a wound received in the Civil war which sealed the hiding place of a fortune for more than half a century and of a strange trick of fate which cleared the hider's memory in the evening of his life was brought to Los Angeles by the hider's son, J. K Anderson of New Orleans, who is at the Van Nuys en route to the old placer mining fields of California.

Anderson's father joined the gold rush and was one of the miners of the "'49" days He located a claim in Placer county near Auburn and Newcastle. Within a year he had snatched from the river bottoms a fortune Then the call of the south for volunteers reached him He buried the gold beneath the adobe blocks of a tavern in the vicinity of his claim, strapped all the precious substance he could carry about his body, and hurried to join the Confederate army.

Anderson says that his father was struck in an engagement with the Union troops by a bullet which tore open his scalp and robbed him of his memory for 60 years. During that time the son says the parent was like a child, with all knowledge of the hiding place of the gold gone. Before he died a year ago his memory of the gold rush returned to him and he was living again in the past that preceded his part in the conflict.

It was during these last moments that the old man told his son and the mother where he had buried what he claimed was a fortune The son is hurrying to unearth, if possible, the buried treasure. Anderson said

"My father said he buried the gold under a corner of an old adobe tavern patronized by the miners in the early days. This tavern was in Long Valley at a point half way, I have learned, between the present town of Newcastle and Auburn I have learned through correspondence that a family by the name of Scott occupies the tavern as a farmhouse and that the country around it is devoted to the raising of citrus fruits

"No one has disturbed the original lines of the building The adobe blocks are heavy I have obtained permission from the owners to prosecute my search and will give them a share of my findings Otherwise I would have to buy the property"

Anderson is a civil engineer He was engaged by the government for some time in work on the Panama canal but has left his employment to search for the treasure which he maintains his father has hidden in the old placer mining fields of California—Los Angeles Herald

Scientific Management.

One cold winter day some railroad officials, while making an inspection of a large yard, stepped for a moment inside a switchman's shanty to get warm Among them was a general superintendent who was known to have a mania for "scientific management," and the reduction of expenses. As they were leaving, the switchman asked the traveling yardmaster, whom he knew

"Now, can ye be tellin' me who that mon is?"

"That's the general superintendent," the yardmaster replied.

"What do you think o' that? He's a foine lookin' mon, and ye never would believe the tales ye are after hearin' about 'im."

"What have you heard about him, Mike?" was the curious question.

"Why, they do say that he was at the funeral of Mr. Mitchell's woife, and when the six pallbearers come out he raised his hand and said: 'Hold on a minute, boys, I think yez can get along without two of thim.'"—Everybody's Magazine

His Wife's Accomplishments.

"Naturally, I am glad that my wife is a good housekeeper, nevertheless the flaunting of her accomplishments becomes somewhat embarrassing at times," said the middle-aged globe trotter.

"Shortly before starting back to America we watched the changing of the royal guards one morning at Buckingham Palace It was an impressive ceremony Loyal Britons and sympathetic visitors alike stood interested and silent Presently the new ranks formed and the old guard preceded by the Coldstream band, marched away to the barracks Then my wife spoke

"'Well,' said she, 'I'm glad I came. If I hadn't seen it for myself I never would have believed that the queen has scrim sash curtains just like mine hanging at three of her front windows.'"

Carefully Selected.

"We have over 2,000 beautiful volumes in our library now," said Mrs. Lotte Munn

"Of course you cannot read all of them," replied Mrs Oldcastle

"Oh, no, but I expect to get through most of them some time I feel that I owe this to myself We have been very careful in making our selection Nearly all of them have gilt tops."

An Alley.

She—Did Maud marry Jack Richleigh out of pure love?

He—No, I fear it was very much adulterated with cupidity

Do you know that more real danger lurks in a common cold than in any other of the minor ailments? The safe way is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a thoroughly reliable preparation, and rid yourself of the cold as quickly as possible. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Poor Attendance.

It is seldom that a man who has nothing but himself to talk about succeeds in drawing a big audience.

The Reminder.

Frederick Townsend Martin, apropos of the extravagances of the idle rich, said at a dinner in New York:

"It is bad enough for the rich, who can afford it, to be extravagant, but what of the extravagance of the merely well to do, who can't?

"How many a poor, struggling broker or lawyer or promoter slaves himself into nervous prostration in order to gratify the extravagant tastes of his wife!

"I heard of a case in point yesterday. The wife of an overworked promoter said at breakfast:

"'Will you post this letter for me, dear? It's to the furrier countermanding my order for that $900 sable and ermine stole. You'll be sure to remember?'

"The tired eyes of the harassed, shabby promoter lit up with joy. He seized a skipping rope that lay with a heap of dolls and toys in a corner, and, going to his wife, he said:

"'Here, tie my right hand to my left foot so I won't forget.'"

---

More Likely.

"What's the excitement at that street crossing? Some automobile collision?"

"I think not; the crowd's too big for that. Some professional pugilist must have stepped into the saloon at that corner, and they're waiting for him to come out."

ORDINANCE NO. 862.

To provide for the issue of bonds of the City of Painesville in the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1500) to purchase certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Whereas the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, heretofore by proper legislation (Res No 200 passed Dec 26 1911) has provided for the purchase of certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Now, therefore, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF PAINESVILLE, STATE OF OHIO, two-thirds of the members elected thereto concurring

Section 1. That it is necessary to issue and to sell bonds of the City of Painesville in the amount of One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1500) as hereinafter set forth, to purchase certain real estate for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Sec 2. That under the authority of Section 3939 of the General Code of the State of Ohio authorizing the issue of bonds by Municipal corporations, bonds of the City of Painesville, Ohio, be issued in the amount of One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1500) to pay for certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery.

Sec 3. That said bonds shall be designated Evergreen Cemetery Bonds, shall be of the denomination of Five Hundred Dollars each, shall be numbered 586, 587, 588, shall be dated April 1, 1912, and shall mature as follows: No. 586 on April 1, 1916, No. 587 on April 1, 1917, No. 588 on April 1, 1918. Said bonds shall be payable at the City Treasurer's office in the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, and all bearing interest at the rate of four per cent per annum payable semi-annually at the same place.

Sec 4. That said bonds shall express upon their face the purpose for which they were issued and a citation of the law and ordinance by which they were authorized. They shall be prepared, issued and delivered under the direction of the Finance Committee of Council and the City Auditor. They shall be signed by the Mayor of said city and by the City Auditor and sealed with the corporate seal of said city. Said bonds shall be recorded in the office of the Trustees of the Sinking Fund and shall bear interest as aforesaid.

Sec 5. Said bonds shall be first offered at par and accrued interest to the Trustees of the Sinking Fund in their official capacity. If the Sinking Fund Trustees refuse to take any or all said bonds at par and interest then said bonds not so taken shall be offered at par, and accrued interest to the board of commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the city school district. If said board of commissioners also refuse to take any or all said bonds at par and interest, then such of said bonds as are not taken shall be advertised for public sale and sold in the manner provided by law, but not for less than their par value and accrued interest.

Sec. 6. That the proceeds from the sale of said bonds except the premiums and accrued interest thereon shall be placed in the City Treasury to the credit of the Cemetery Fund and shall be disbursed upon proper vouchers to pay for certain property for the purpose of enlarging Evergreen Cemetery and for no other purpose. The premiums and accrued interest received from such sale shall be transferred to the Trustees of the Sinking Fund to be applied by them in the manner provided by law.

Sec. 7. This resolution shall take effect and be in force from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

ELBERT F. BLAKELY,

Passed Feb. 5, 1912.
Attest, FRANK KELLY,
Clerk
Approved Feb. 5, 1912.
WYNNE S. SMITH,
Mayor.

Spare the Rod.

Parents take notice. The advocates of whipping as a means of discipline are accustomed to quote King Solomon as saying: "Spare the rod and spoil the child." What Solomon did say was: "He that spareth the rod hateth his son." But the word "rod" in that connection does not necessarily mean corporal punishment. It simply means parental authority and guidance. The same Hebrew word is used in Psalms, xxiii, where David says: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want; his rod and his staff they comfort me" The rod was the symbol of authority and power, not a rawhide, a ruler or a hickory stick.—Exchange.

MENTOR.

The weather is behaving very badly indeed, for the mercury went down to twenty-three below zero on Saturday morning, freezing everything before it. House plants were nipped, and water pipes that were not touched when the "other cold snap" occurred, all gave up the ghost this time, and there is hardly a house in the entire village but what is more or less affected. Our men are out at the barn, trying to thaw out frozen pipes, so as to water their thirsty stock, while our women are heating what little water there is in the house so as to thaw out the pump! Now is the time when Florida or any other old torrid place looks good at a distance! Some are even thinking of migrating to Africa—where one could sure get away from ice and snow.

The W. C. T. U. are to hold their meeting this week at the home of Mrs Henry Sandberg

Mrs Robert A. Parks of Cleveland has been a recent guest of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Lamb and family.

Miss Hazel Norton and Clyde Allen of Kirtland were married last Saturday evening in Painesville (the 3rd), and passed their honeymoon with friends in Akron We understand that Mr Allen has a position in Cleveland, being captain of one of the lake boats

Miss Augusta Merwin slipped and fell on the ice a few days ago, and was fortunate to get off with only a sprained wrist, and with no broken bones

The Missionary meeting that was invited to Painesville on Thursday to see and hear Mrs Chew, went, and enjoyed the little treat very much, there being only the regret expressed that sickness had kept at home some of the members who would have enjoyed the day most.

Mr Sidney Justus died very suddenly, almost without warning, at his home on Tuesday morning, of what is supposed to have been heart failure He retired at night, feeling unusually well, but called his nephew about midnight, complaining of being chilly Not getting relief at once his son was called who lives in the next house, but a few rods away, but before he could get there, his father had gone This is exactly as Mr Justus would have wished, could he have chosen the manner of his departure, for he had always a great horror of becoming dependent upon others, and so making trouble He was eighty-six years of age, a hale and hearty old gentleman, who had a host of friends and no enemies One of those genial, cheerful persons, always looking on the bright side, always ready to do a favor for any one, always having a pleasant word for those he met For many years he had lived in Mentor, and was a staunch member of the Disciple church Rev. Severs of Bornesville, who was pastor here for a long time, had charge of the services on Thursday afternoon at the family residence on Mentor Ave, burial being made in our Mentor cemetery.

Mr and Mrs. Lawrence Dickey and small son Warren, were guests at the Truleon home in Painesville over Sunday

Quite a number from here have been attending the Agricultural School at the County Seat, this past week, and have reported from time to time, their entire satisfaction with what they were getting, feeling them selves well paid for the time, expense, and self-denial necessary in order to be present at every session, and so not to miss anything.

The old school and other friends of Milan Moore, will be glad to hear of his good health, though he does not attend very strictly to business these cold days, for Farmer City, Ill., has weather very much like our own. Mr. Moore is in the jewelry and watch-repairing business of that place, having a fine store, which is in the care of his son Haswell C. Moore during any indisposition of the elder gentleman

The old friends of Mrs Eliza Clapp Glazier will be also pleased to hear that she has learned to write with her left hand, having badly broken the right wrist one day last spring, before the left one had fairly healed from a similar break. It is not often that one over seventy, has the courage to face a crippled right hand, and so set one's self to learn to use the other—as she has!

Miss Lucile Kerr is still in a very precarious condition, not being able to take much of any food, and her life is despaired of. Her aunt, Mrs Smith, has again returned to her Massillon home

The news that Mr and Mrs Woodgerd were about to move to Geneva, has been received with great regret by their many friends, all made since coming here a year or so ago Mr Woodgerd has been in charge of the Nickel Plate R. R. offices here and will have a similar position in Geneva, but who will be sent here, remains to be seen

Albert Hanson is at home from Boston for a week's conference, having been offered a very fine position way off up at Winnipeg, Canada, where the mercury really goes out of business, and refuses to speak at all for weeks at a time. (Yet, the air being dry, they claim the cold is not felt there as much as here! But no one here ever believes anything of the kind!)

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dutton of Concord were guests of Mrs. Emma Harris for a few days recently, Mrs. Dutton being a sister of Mrs. Harris, we understand.

Rev. Mr. Hall, assistant pastor of the Epworth Memorial church in Cleveland, preached here last Sunday, giving a most excellent sermon, and Rev. Boyer of Collinwood occupied the pulpit on yesterday morning. The Presiding Elder gives the good news that a young man (name not yet learned) who graduates from the Boston Theological School this spring will probably be sent here early in March, and if agreeable to the people, will be appointed to the Mentor charge. This gentleman is quite young, and unmarried, but comes greatly recommended.

Mrs. Bertha Ritter Parkhurst has just been enjoying a visit from her friend, Mrs. Lillian Blackmore of Painesville for a short time.

Hermon Mertindela of Avon, this state, was the recent guest of his sister, Mrs. Cassius Harris of the avenue, as was also Mr and Mrs Fred Harris of Cleveland.

Miss Evalyn Smith has been visiting friends down in Akron, recently.

Mrs B A Tait of Painesville has been spending the past week out here with Mrs. John Tyler at the Center

Terence O'Niel fell on the ice a day or so ago, and was so badly hurt as to make it necessary to call in a doctor.

Mrs Howard Ingersoll was a recent guest of her uncle, Mr. John Harrington of Glenville.

Skating is fine, so also is the sleighing, and there are a number of handsome new cutters seen on our streets, with equally fine horses and bells, bells everywhere, even on the horses drawing logs.

Miss Mary Andrews of Burton, is visiting her friend and former school mate, Mrs. Robert Case, for a few days.

Mrs. Ada Howard White, whose home is in Cleveland, is spending some time here with her parents, Mr and Mrs. Fred Howard, at present

Mrs. Sayard Allen has returned to her California home, having gone back much sooner than many of her friends expected, as the rumor had gone out that she was to remain all winter Mr. and Mrs. Allen will be in Los Angeles for the present, but we understand will return to some point farther north on the Pacific coast, before long.

In speaking of the few houses for sale in Mentor, we forgot last week to mention the property in West Mentor owned by Bert Harris of New York City, formerly the King place, called by them "Hedged In" the name having been given on account of the hedges that surrounded the premises on all sides But those, as well as most all of the other hedges in this township, have been pulled out on account of the San Jose scale, as they have proved to be great breeding places for that pest.

The boys' Glee Club of which John Gallagher is president, is doing good work, holding regular meetings, studying hard, learning new music all the time, and will some day take sober old Mentor by storm Their vocal teacher is Miss Eva Cadle

The Ladies Miscellany Club met with Miss Ida Merkle last Wednesday but the horrid cold weather prevented quite a number from going who had anticipated a pleasant afternoon in that hospitable and pleasant home Mrs. N. C. Frost, Mrs. Heath and Mrs George Hoose were all on the good program, but we have not heard anything in detail about the meeting.

Ben Franklin Started It.

It is strange how long it takes to get a good thing going. Old Ben Franklin, looking around the streets as he walked, was annoyed by the filth. Streets were never cleaned in those days. They were nothing but just out of doors and who cared how they looked! But Old Ben thought it over and finally found a man willing to sweep the pavement twice a week for a sixpence a month from each householder. He printed a circular about the scheme, sent a circular to each householder and then called in person to get the signatures. The signing was unanimous. The world had been running about a million years, but no one had ever cleaned the streets, at least on this continent, until Old Ben started all the fuss and the expense in which we are now involved.

Giving Ex-Convicts a Chance.

Members of the state board of pardons have been concerned for some time over the same problem that has bothered the prison association for convicts after they are released from the state penitentiary. Only a few days ago a young man who had made his "good time" and had obtained an extra commutation to his sentence by reason of good behavior and a desire to become a useful citizen and had settled down to an honest life with his mother in this city, was ordered to move just as soon as his landlord learned something about his history. He wasn't behind in his rent and ought to prove a good tenant, but the landlord wouldn't even consider giving him a fair chance.—Nebraska State Journal.

There is no better medicine made for colds than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acts on Nature's plan, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions, aids expectoration, and restores the system to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

"Bill" Fuller, Father-in-Law of the Author, Didn't Enjoy Meals at Arden.

"Bill" Fuller is a philosopher, which he needs to be, inasmuch as he is Upton Sinclair's father-in-law. He admires Sinclair, the Cincinnati Times-Star's New York correspondent writes, and has no criticism whatever to make on the differences which have developed between his daughter and the young writer. "They're both highbrows," says Fuller, "and Heaven knows that two highbrows can't get along. Why, even one highbrow can't get along."

But he doesn't approve of Sinclair's dietary ideas. "I never know," said he, "when I take a meal with Upple, whether he will declare that the only sane diet is to chew a prune 400 times and then rub the stone to the hair, or whether he will want forty pounds of raw meat and a couple of uncooked cabbages. He doesn't run true to form, one might say. He never has the same idea about food twice in succession. Once I visited him at Arden, where he had planned a sort of socialistic Garden of Eden. By and by I began to need my fodder.

"'When do we eat?' I asked Upple.

"'There,' said he, 'is a loaf of whole wheat bread, and the spring is only 200 yards away.' He began to tell me that this sort of cold poultice was all my stomach needed.

"'That may be all right for your stomach,' said I, 'but my stomach has been pampered. When does the next train leave?'

"'In which direction?' asked Upple.

"'Any direction,' said I.

"But before I left I did one good deed. I'd noticed a peaked kind of a pup leaning against the wall of Upple's shack. The colored maid said the dog was 'stubbohn.'

"'He jes' won't eat his tomattoes,' says this dinge. 'An' Mistah Sinclair says tomattoes is a pufect food for a dog.'

"'I guess that's right,' says I. 'That's all they're fit for. But before I go me and the dog are going to have a feast.'

"So I sent out and bought five pounds of steak, and I broiled it over an open fire and the dog and me eat the whole works. The fragrance of the broiling brought Upple out of his tent. He stood there looking at us, with tears in his eyes and water on his lips.

"'My goodness,' says Upple, 'I believe I'm getting hungry.'

"'Good,' says I. 'Have a tomato, Upple.'"

Busy Word.

There is no word, long or short, in the English language capable of performing so much labor in a clear, intelligible sense as the verb to get; and here is an old time specimen of its capabilities

"I got on horseback within ten minutes after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chaise for town; but I got wet through before I got to Canterbury and I have got such a cold as I shall not be able to get rid of in a hurry. I got to the treasury about noon, but first of all I got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the board, but I could not get an answer then; however, I got the intelligence from the messenger that I should most likely get one the next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn I got my supper. When I got up in the morning I got my breakfast and then got myself dressed that I might get out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it I got into the first chaise and got to Canterbury by three o'clock, and about tea time I got home."

The Patient Waiter.

Prof. W. Lawson Tell, apropos of the new serum cure for hay fever, said at a medical banquet in Denver:

"This cure is the result of patience, the result of much patient toil. Indeed, when I think of the patient waiting involved in the perfecting of this cure, I am reminded of Dr. Bob Sawyer's ante-room.

"Dr. Bob Sawyer stepped grandly into his ante-room one day. There were quite eight or nine persons there. And Dr. Bob, looking from one face to another with complacence, said:

"'Well, who comes first? Who's been waiting the longest?'

"'Here, doc—that's me,' said Snip the tailor, rising and flourishing his unpaid bill. 'I've been waiting over eighteen months!'"

WADDELL WAS PEER OF ALL SOUTHPAWS

Rube Waddell.

Conceding that all of these left-handers have merit, old-timers refuse to believe that any of them excel the celebrated Rube Waddell when the latter allowed himself to be led around by the nose by Connie Mack. For the Athletics Waddell pitched peerless baseball for several seasons. A disturber and a rule breaker under other managers, [illegible] as meek as a lamb under Mack, and without word of complaint he did an enormous amount of work. Though painfully eccentric Waddell showed headwork and skill. He held the league's strike-out record for a single season until it was topped by Walter Johnson of the Washingtons. His control was especially good and he had the number of practically every batsman who faced him.

Tom Ramsey, of the old Louisville club, was another left-handed world beater. For many years he was rated as the kingpin and his ability earned a big salary until he fell by the wayside because of his habits. Kilroy of the Baltimore American association team of more than 20 years ago was a wonder. The Bostons in the old days had a corker in Kid Madden. Then Pittsburg boasted of Ed Morris, and Detroit won a world's championship chiefly through the southpaw work of Lady Baldwin.

Probably the first really great left-hander in the National league was Charley Buffington, who helped Boston win a pennant in 1883. Buffington had a drop ball that baffled the heaviest sluggers. He used it incessantly together with curves that finally wore out his pitching arm. But as veterans remember him, he was one of the greatest pitchers that ever wore a toe plate. St. Louis, in Von der Ahe's reign, had a star in Theodore Breitenstein, a little sorrel-topped fellow who never knew when he had enough. With great speed and beautiful control Breitenstein did splendid work and finally Von der Ahe sold him to Cincinnati for $10,000. That was 20 years ago, yet Breit was playing ball last year in the Southern association.

FEW ABLE MANAGERS

Only Six Qualify as Being Successful Leaders.

So Much Depends on Financial End of Baseball Venture That Any Chieftain Keeping Team in Lead Is Valuable Asset.

What salary is a successful major league baseball manager worth? The question is a common one, and the answer most commonly given is: "All he can get." That is about as near as one can express it in figures.

So much of the financial success of a baseball venture depends upon the showing of the team, which is the concrete representative of the venture, that any manager who can keep a team in the race for the championship of his league is worth a great deal to the baseball promoter.

Hugh Jennings.

In these days even a tail-end team is not necessarily a financial loser. If it plays 77 games at home before crowds made small by lack of interest in its efforts, it must be remembered that the same tail-end team plays 77 games away from home each season and gets on the average a shade better than 40 per cent. of the receipts of the games.

But the big money in baseball is made by the "winners" — the champions and the near champions who are in the race all or most all of the season. Consequently every club owner wants a winner, some of them for sportsmanlike as well as financial reasons; others of them merely for the coin. To get a winning ball team a club owner must get a successful manager. There is no other way. A promoter can spend money with both hands seven days a week for seven years, buying and developing ball players, and never get his team out of eighth place at the end of the season. Unless the club owner has a manager possessed of the peculiar qualifications demanded by the club, he cannot expect a winning team.

If it were possible to corral 12 or 15 stars of the present day into one team handled by an inexperienced, incompetent manager, that aggregation of stars would stand small chance in a major league pennant race. A clever, brainy manager with a good team of average players is a better investment financially than a lot of managerless stars would be.

The supply of managers is so scarce that those who have made good beyond doubt can command almost any figure they ask for. The practice is becoming more and more common of cutting the manager in on the profits. This can be done either as a stockholder, as in the case of Frank Chance, of the Cubs, and Connie Mack, of the Athletics, or by making the manager's contract call for a certain percentage of the profits in addition to a stated salary, as in the case of Hugh Jennings, of the Detroit club.

Frank Chance.

Taking a glance at the managerial field as it stands today, there appears to be only five major league managers who can be included without qualification in the successful class. They are Frank Chance, Fred Clarke and John McGraw, in the National league, and Connie Mack and Hugh Jennings in the American league.

Gainer's Arm All Right Again.

Del Gainer, the first baseman of the Detroit Tigers, who had his arm broken by a pitched ball last season, paid a visit to Bonesetter Reese the other day, and the latter told Gainer that his arm was as strong as ever.

Connie Has the Right Idea.

Manager Connie Mack, of the Athletics, is not wasting his time picking the 20 greatest ball players; he just signs them and lets the other fellow name them after he has cornered the [illegible]

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church, and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

At the end of the tenor solo Princess Oltary runs into the pavilion and there changes her dress and reappears once more to dance before the rajah and to prove herself the dancer he has known and loved in a cafe in Paris. Letty Lane's dress in his dance was the classic ballet dancer's, white as the leaves of a lily. She seemed to swim and float, actually to be breathed and exhaled from out her film gown, and the only ray of color in her costume was her own golden hair, surmounted by a small coral-colored cap, embroidered in pearls. The actress bowed to the right and left, ran to the right, ran to left; glanced toward the Duchess of Breakwater's box; acknowledged the burst of applause; began to dance and finished her pas seul, and with folded hands sang her song. Her beautiful voice came out clear as crystal water from a crystal rock, and her words were cradled like doves, like boats on the boundless seas. . . .

"From India's coral strand. . . ."

But there was no hymn tune to this song of Letty Lane's in "Mandalay!" To the boy in the box, however, the words, the tune, the droning of the flies on the window pane, the strong odor of the hymn books and panama fans, came back, and the clear sunlight of Montana seemed to steal into the Gaiety as Letty Lane sang.

The Duchess of Breakwater clapped with frank enthusiasm, and said: "She is a perfect wonder, isn't she? Oh, she is too bewitching!"

And she turned for sympathy to her friend, who stood behind her, his face illumined. He was amazed, his blue eyes aglow, his head bent forward; he was staring, staring at the Gaiety curtain, gone down on the first act.

He laughed softly, and the duchess heard him say:

"Good! Well, I should say she was! She's a girl from our town!"

When the duchess tried to share her enthusiasm with Dan he had disappeared. He left the box and with no difficulty made his way as far as the first wing.

"Can you get me an entrance?" he asked a man he had met once at Osdone, and who was evidently an habitue.

"I darn say. Rippin' show, isn't it?"

Dan put his hands on ducal shoulders and followed the [illegible] through the labyrinth of flies.

"Which of 'em do you want to see, old man?"

Dan, without replying, went forward to a small cluster of lights in one of the wings. He went forward intuitively, and his companion caught his arm: "Oh, I say, for God's sake, don't go on like this!"

But without response Dan continued his direction. A call page stood before the door, and Dan, on a card over the entrance read "Miss Lane." The smell of calcium and paint and perfume and the auxiliary hung heavy on the air. The other man saw Dan knock, knock again and then go in.

Unannounced Dan Blair opened the door of the dressing room of the actress. Miss Lane's dressing-rooms were worth displaying to her intimate friends. They were done with great taste in coral tint. She might have been said to be in a coral cave under the sea as far as young Blair was concerned. As he came in he felt his ears deaden, and the smoke of cigarettes grow so thick that he looked as through a veil. The dancer was standing in the center of the room, one hand on her hip, and in the other hand a cigarette. Her short skirt stood out around her like a bell, and over the bell fell a rain of pinkish coral strands. She wore a thin slip from which her neck and arms came shining out, and her woman knelt at her feet strapping on a little coral shoe.

Dan Stood Motionless, His Eyes Fastened on Her.

Blair shut the door behind him, and began to realize how rude, how impertinent his entrance would be considered. But he came boldly forward and would have introduced himself as "Dan Blair from Blairtown," but Miss Lane, who stood at the entrance through the smoke, burst into a laugh so bright, so delightful, that he was carried high up on the coral strands to the very beach. She crossed her white arms over her breast and leaned forward as a saleswoman might lean forward over a counter, and with her beautifully trained voice, all sweetly she asked him:

"Hello, little boy, what will you take?"

Blair giggled, quick to catch her meaning, and answered: "Oh, chocolate, I guess!"

And Letty Lane laughed, put out her white hand the one without the cigarette, and said: "Haven't got that brand on board—so sorry! Will a cocktail do? All sorts in bottles. Higgins, fix Mr. Blair a Martini."

As the dresser rose from her stooping position, the rest of Letty Lane's dressing-room unfolded out of the mist and smoke. On a sofa covered with lace pillows Blair saw a man sitting, smoking as well. He was tall, and had a dark mustache. It was Prince Poniatowsky, whom Dan had already met at the Galorey shoot.

"She's a Girl From Our Town."

"Prince Poniatowsky," Miss Lane presented him, "Mr. Blair of Blairtown, Mont. Say, Frederick, give me my cap, will you? It is over by your side. I've got to hustle."

The man, without moving, picked up a small red cap with a single plume, from the sofa at his side. In another second Letty Lane had placed it on her head of yellow hair, real yellow hair and not a doubt of it, like sunshine—not the color one gets from inside bottles. Her arms, her hands flashed with rings, priceless flashes, and the little spears pricked Dan like sharp needles.

"It's the nicest ever!" she was saying. "How on earth did you get in here, though? Have you bought the Gaiety theater? I'm the most exclusive girl on the stage. Who let you in?"

Her accent was English, and even that put her from him. As he looked at her he couldn't understand how he had ever recognized her. If he had waited for another act he wouldn't have believed the likeness real. The girl he remembered had both softened and hardened; the rounded features were gone, but all the angles were gone as well. Her eyes were as gray as the seas; she was painted and her lids were darkened. Seen close she was not so divine as on the stage, but there was still a more thrilling charm about the fact that she was real.

"To think of any one from Montana being here tonight! Staying very long, Mr. Blair?" Between each sentence she directed Higgins, who was getting her into her bodice. "And how do you like "Mandalay?" Isn't it great?"

She addressed herself to Dan, but she smiled on both the men with extreme brilliance.

"You bet your life," he responded. "I should think it was great."

Poniatowsky rose indolently. He had not looked toward the newcomer, but had, on the other hand, followed every detail of Miss Lane's dressing.

"Better take your scarf, Letty. Hand it to Miss Lane," he directed Higgins. "It is so damned drafty in these beastly wings."

He drew his watch out, gathered up his long coat, flung it over his arm and picked up his opera hat which lay folded on Letty Lane's dressing table.

The call page for the third time [illegible] "Miss La—ne." Miss La—ne [illegible] took the scarf Higgins handed her, and ran it through her hands, still beaming on Dan.

"Come in to see me at the Savoy on any day at two-thirty except on matinee days."

"Put on your scarf." Poniatowsky, taking it from her hands, laid it across her white shoulders, and she passed out between the two men, light as a bird, smiling, nodding, followed by the prince and the boy from Montana. The crowds began to fill the lately empty wings—dancers, chorus girls, with their rustling gowns. Letty Lane said to Dan:

"Guess you'll like my solo in this act all right—it's the best thing in 'Mandalay.' Now go along, and clap me hard."

It gave him a new pleasure, for she had spoken to him in real American fashion with the swift mimicry that showed her talent. Dan went slowly back to his party. As he took his seat by the duchess she said to him:

"You went in to see Letty Lane. Do you know her?"

"Know her!" And as Dan answered, the sound of his own voice was queer to him, and his face flushed hotly. "Lord, yes. She used to be in the drug store in Blairtown. Sold soda-water to me when we were both kids. Whoever would have thought that she had that in her?" He nodded toward the stage, for Letty Lane had come on. "She sang in our church, too, but not for long."

"Who was with her in her dressing-room?" the duchess asked. Blair didn't answer. He was looking at Letty Lane. She had come to dance for the rajah, and in her arms she held four white doves; each dove had a coral thread around its throat. It was a number that made her famous, "The Dove Song." Set free, the birds flew about her, circling her blond head, surmounted by the small coral-colored cap. The doves settled on her shoulders, pecked at her lips.

"Was it Poniatowsky?" the duchess repeated.

And Dan told her a meaningless lie. "I didn't meet any one there." And with satisfaction the duchess said:

"Then she has thrown him over, too. He was the latest and the richest. She is horribly extravagant. No man is rich enough for her, they say. Poniatowsky isn't a gold mine."

The doves had flown away to the wings and been gathered up by the Indian servants. The actress on the stage began her Indian cradle song. She came, distinctly turning toward the box party. She had never sung like this in London before. There was a freshness in her voice, a quality in her gesture, a pathos and a sweetness that delighted her audience. They fairly clamored for her, waved and called and recalled. Dan stood motionless, his eyes fastened on her, his heart rocked by the song. He didn't want anyone to speak to him. He wished that none of them would breathe, and nearly as absorbed as was he, no one did speak.

ARIZONA IS HIS FAVORITE

In Forty-Seven Years George Carey of Columbia Did Not Leave the Territory.

Forty-seven years' continuous residence in Arizona, without once setting foot outside her borders, is believed to be the record. It was established by George Carey of Columbia, Yavapai county, who has just returned from a two months' trip to Los Angeles and other coast points after living in this territory since 1864.

When Carey first came to Arizona he was a freighter. From mining camp to mining camp he drifted, until the want of lucrative business forced him into mining. That was more than 25 years ago, but it was not until last spring that prosperity came. He received the first payment on some mining claims that he had developed with his own hands, and bought a round trip ticket to California. For two months this trail blazer gazed upon towering buildings and other modern wonders of which he had read, but which he had never seen. When he passed through Prescott on his way to Columbia he said that he had enjoyed every minute of it, but that he had stayed "just long enough."

PLAYERS SAVE THEIR MONEY

Diamond Artists of Present Keeping Their Money for Rainy Day—Clarke Has Quarter Million.

Statistics said to be reasonably accurate show that thirty-four old ball players died during 1911, and of this number only two left families in comfortable financial circumstances.

Another text, of course, for a sermon on the happy-go-lucky ways of the old-time players and the freedom with which they entertained their friends while they were in the height of their fame. No, not that. Some truth in that, too, but there is another side to this statement which is brightened by a silver lining and the full of hope for the present generation.

Fred Clarke.

Players have learned to save their money. They receive better salaries, too, than in the old days, and with strict training methods and in many instances good advice from club owners, the habit of saving has been instilled and the ball player can now retire with as much money as any salaried employe in the average business can save in a lifetime.

Fred Clarke is worth a quarter million and he is still playing. Frank Chance and dozens of other players can be named who have plenty of this world's goods, and safely invested, too. When the present generation of ball players passes on and thirty-four of them, perchance, die in one year, there will be a different story to tell about mouths of fatherless children unfed.

Antagonistic Sports.

Boxing, wrestling and other "antagonistic sports" were characterized by Charles E. Hammett, athletic director of Northwestern University, the other night as the hope of the nation.

In a speech before the Y. M. C. A. in Evanston Hammett declared that these sports, together with football, offered the best chances for development among the young men of the city.

Capron in Olympic.

Ralph Capron, speedy quarter back of the University of Minnesota's football team, will enter the Olympic trials which are to be held in Chicago next May.

Capron, who has made the 100-yard dash in 10 flat, will begin training with [illegible] weeks for the 100-meter dash, [illegible]

Woman Her Home, Her Interests.

Perplexing Question.

I am coming to you for advice, as you have helped so many. When a girl is out riding with a boy and on arriving home she does not ask him to call again, would you think he would take it as a turn-down? She does not wish him to consider it that way. If you think he did what should she do to make it up and what would be proper to say next time? When a girl and boy are at a party together whose place is it to mention going home? Do I write well?

"GREENY."

If the boy who took you driving does not come to see you within a reasonable time, when you see him you may ask why he has not come, and so fix up matters. It is the girl's place to suggest when it is time to go home, but a man may also suggest the hour for going with perfect propriety. You write fairly well, practice makes perfect, you know.

From "Miss Inquisitive."

I am eighteen years of age, and am going with a young man of nineteen. My parents do not object, he is of a good family and highly respected. Do you think I am too young to receive attention from this one young man? I attend theaters and dances with him. Is this right? How long should a boy stay when calling in the evening? Is half past ten too late? Hope I am not asking too much.

"MISS INQUISITIVE."

Half past ten is as late as anyone ought to stay when making an evening call, and ten is even better if both young people have early responsibilities the next day. You must decide the question for yourself, personally I think you are both too young to go steadily together or to be engaged. Be good friends, but both go with other persons and see how you feel at the end of a year.

Congratulations and Best Wishes.

Madame Merri: Does not society decree that when a man and girl are engaged that the man alone should be congratulated; it being considered that he is the one favored; but is it such an "awful breach" to congratulate the girl too, especially when all concerned are intimate? Since the action would stand the test of reason I should think it were all right. Let me know.

BACHELOR.

The really polite thing to do in the case is to congratulate the man and offer the young woman best wishes, but it is no breach of etiquette to congratulate them both, especially when well acquainted with both.

Questions From "Faithful Readers."

We are two young girls, our age fifteen. We wish to ask you a few questions in regard to ourselves. Is it proper for girls of our age to have boys escort them home from a picture show? Is it proper for girls to be taken, by boy friends, to picture shows?

FAITHFUL READERS.

I am always glad to answer questions from my girls, and I hope they will be able to get my ideas. It all depends upon the picture show; some are good and some should never see the light at all. So much depends upon the boys and more depends upon the girls. If father and mother do not object to either the shows or the boys I do not, but do not go too often and try to go in the daytime and not at night unless an older person goes as chaperon.

MADAME MERRI.

Smart Costumes

The costume on the left is in gray tweed. The skirt is quite plain with wide panel effect front and back.

The coat is semi-fitting, fastening invisibly by hooks and eyes quite up to the throat.

The deep collar and cuffs are faced with satin, with a border of striped black and white silk on the cross. Buttons and braid tabs form trimming.

Hat of clipped beaver with large bow at the side.

Materials required for costume: 5½ yards 48 inches wide, 5 yards lining satin for coat, 9 buttons, with tabs, ½ yard satin 22 inches wide, ⅜ yard silk 22 inches wide on the cross.

The other design shown is in navy blue serge. The skirt has a wide panel front extending at lower part, where it is trimmed with buttons; the wide sides meet in a seam up center back.

The same lines are carried out on the coat, in which the double-breasted front is fastened by two buttons. The revers should be faced with tan cloth, and the wide collar treated with black satin.

Hat of navy blue Tagal, trimmed with a large gray feather mount tipped with black.

Materials required: 5½ yards 48 inches wide, 4½ yards satin for lining coat, ¼ yard tan cloth, ½ yard black satin, 2 dozen small buttons, 2 larger size.

IN VOGUE

A new fad has arisen for boudoir caps made of silk instead of lace.

Tan, beaver, brown, gray and black are the favorite colors for gloves.

One of the newest fur hats is the revived tricorne, which now appears as the "Continental."

Young girls' dancing frocks show a mixture of small colored flowers in silk and chiffon and placed coquettishly on corsage or skirt.

The large collars with cuffs to match which are worn on coats or tailored dresses will be prominently featured in spring lines.

Though black and white retains its vogue, the astonishing feature of opera and other evening dress is color, gorgeously applied.

The smaller chou for the collar bow is sometimes centered with a silk [illegible] regular artificial flower stamens. This is one of the newest fancies.

Headdress of rhinestone bands, paradise plumes or bands of gold embroidery set with different colored stones are all very distinctive and effective.

Cloaks, scarfs and soles are made of supple and pliable plush; the gloss and texture of this new material in a dark brown shade gives the impression of seal.

While the long coat still predominates, manufacturers are showing a few novelty wraps in cutaway effect which reach slightly below the knee in front, but are longer in the back.

Jeweled hatpins are now seen which are much more rational in size than formerly. Some are of the double type—that is, there are two connected by a short jeweled chain, and they are both worn at one side of the hat.

One of the late and pretty fads is the small "bouquet" of artificial flowers to be worn on the street, nestling in the furs or pinned to the jacket. These little nosegays make no attempt to look "natural," and, indeed, the more artificial they are the better.

SAN JOSE SCALE CAUSE OF GREATEST INJURY TO FRUIT

Insect Is Said to Have Been Brought to America on Plants Imported From China—Every Purchaser of Trees Should Insist on Certificate of Inspection by Expert.

(By GLENN W. HERRICK, Missouri.)

Probably no single insect in the United States has been the subject of more discussion than the San Jose scale, and small wonder, for there is no insect that is capable of producing greater injury to the fruit interests of our country than this one. As near as can be determined, this insect was introduced into the grounds of Mr. James Lick of San Jose, Cal., in the early seventies. It soon spread to adjoining orchards where it was found and first described by Prof. J. H. Comstock in 1880, who quickly recognized its capabilities as an orchard pest, for he named it the pernicious scale. By '86 and '87 it had been imported on fruit trees into eastern nurseries, and from this began to spread over the east and south.

The San Jose scale is a very small insect often smaller than the head of an ordinary pin. The female, except for a few hours immediately after birth, lives beneath a hard, waxy scale and consequently is well protected.

The rate of increase is very great and from a single infestation thousands upon thousands of individuals may develop in a season and the tree may become literally covered from the trunk to the outermost branches in two or three years. The young scales are whitish in color, but later they turn dark and are hard to distinguish from the bark. It is difficult to find the scales on a tree at the beginning of an infestation, for they are, of course few in number and very small, but later, when the insect becomes abundant, the branches assume an ash-grey color and present a scurfy appearance.

A, scales on branch; f, female scale; m, male scale; y, young scales; e, young, unprotected scale insect; B, branch showing scales as they appear to the unaided eye.

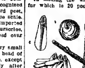
Every purchaser of fruit trees should demand that his trees be accompanied by a certificate of inspection from a competent entomologist to the effect that they are free from scale, and he should also demand a sworn statement that his trees have been fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas. The buyer should also examine the trees himself very carefully for the scale and destroy infested ones. If, after these precautions, the insect becomes present in the orchard, spray with the lime-salt-sulphur mixture.

In making the wash, the formula for which is 20 pounds quick lime,



The new peach scale. a, branch covered with male and female scales; b, female scale; c, male scale; d, group of male scales.

15 pounds sulphur, 10 pounds salt, 45 gallons of water, only the very best quality of quick lime should be used. Two iron kettles should be procured, each one holding at least 20 gallons, but the more they hold the better. The 20 pounds of lime should be slacked in three or four gallons of hot water in one of the kettles. When the lime is nearly slacked, but before it quits boiling, add the 15 pounds of sulphur and enough of hot water to make a thin paste of the lime and sulphur. Stir the whole vigorously until they are thoroughly mixed, then boil vigorously for 45 minutes.

After the lime and sulphur have actually boiled 45 minutes, add the ten pounds of salt, and boil vigorously 15 minutes more. It will become necessary during the boiling to add a little hot water now and then to keep the mixture thin. When through boiling add enough hot water to make 45 gallons, strain through a gunny sack, and apply hot.

There are two seasons of the year during which the San Jose scale may be fought, namely, winter and summer. The more effectual treatment may be given during the winter, but much good may be done by summer treatment, of which time the insect can certainly be greatly checked.

WINTER FEED FOR POULTRY

Purpose for Which Sprouted Oats are Fed Is Their Tonic and Stimulating Effects on Digestion.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)

There is a general unanimity of opinion among experienced poultrymen that poultry do best upon some form of green or succulent food during the winter months. The function of such succulent food is probably largely in the nature of a digestive stimulant, rather than as an addition to the actual food constituents of the ration.

A green winter feed that is greatly relished by fowls is sprouted oats. Experience has shown that in order to make a satisfactory green food, however, the oats must be grown very quickly. In order to get quick growth it is necessary to have three things: First, warmth; second, plenty of moisture; and, third, sunlight.

By sowing oats in shallow, flat boxes about two inches deep, and by sprinkling and keeping the box in a warm, sunny place, the oats will sprout very rapidly, making a growth of from 4 to 6 inches in a week or ten days.

The flats in which the oats are sprouted must be thoroughly scrubbed with hot water and hot lime every time before they are used, or the oats will mold in the sprouting.

The best way to sprout oats is to build a small closet into which the flats can be slipped on cleats and supply the closet either with a steam pipe or if that is not feasible a small stove, either for wood or kerosene, or sometimes a large kerosene lamp may be used to maintain heat.

Soak clean and sound oats overnight in a pail of water. Next morning fill the flats about two inches deep and put in the sprouting closet. Place the freshly filled flats near the top of the closets, so as to get the maximum amount of heat and in that way start the sprouts quickly.

Rake the sprouts thoroughly two or three times a day until they have become half to three-quarters of an inch long, then do not disturb them in any way. The oats should be kept quite wet. They must be sprinkled at least three times a day.

As the oats grow, the flats are moved to different positions in the closet. The taller the material gets the nearer the flats are moved to the floor, as they then need less heat.

Feed when the sprouts are from 4 to 6 inches in height, at the rate of a piece of the matted oats about 8 or 8 inches square for each 100 birds per day. Break up so that every bird in the pen may have some.

It should be clearly understood that the purpose for which green sprouted oats are fed is their tonic and stimulative influence on the digestive organs. They are not fed for the food value of the oats themselves. If one wishes merely to feed oats they can be most economically fed not sprouted. The point of sprouting is to furnish fresh, succulent, green food during the winter months.

Employ Married Men.

On a well-regulated dairy farm it is best to employ married men. Have snug, well-arranged cottages on the farm. Hire by the year and pay by the week. Treat your help kindly and you will get good service. Have the work well planned out. A farmer must be systematic and orderly. In short, he must think as well as work.

Cattle Industry Threatened.

The danger to the American cattle industry is shown in the last census of Argentine which places the number of cattle in that country at 28,000,000 head and sheep 67,000,000 head.

Australia Leads in Sheep.

Australia leads the world in sheep farming with 87,000,000 head. Argentina has [illegible],000,000, Russia, 68,500,000, United States, 54,700,000, United Kingdom, 30,100,000.

Official figures show that New Zealand has nearly 25,000,000 sheep.

HOW WIRE STRETCHER IS MADE

A handy wire stretcher is made of a piece of 2 by 4 for a lever, four short length of chain and a clamp made of two pieces of 1½ by 4. Shave one end of the lever down to a convenient size for handle, and bore three holes through it 4 inches apart. Run a clevis through each hole, putting two clevises on one side and one on the other, with each clevis fastened to a chain. The chain on one side is fastened to a post. The other two chains may be the stay chains from the wagon, with a hook in the end of each. The clamp is bolted to the wire with four ½-inch bolts 3½ inches long, with a large-linked chain fastened to it. As the lever is worked alternately from right to left and left to right the hooks are caught in the links of the clamp-chain, tightening the wire with each movement of the lever. In this way a 4-foot wire can be stretched to breaking.

HE WAS SOMEWHAT PEEVED

Attendant at Spiritualistic Seance Considered Himself Aggrieved and Said So.

Charles M. Cross of Indianapolis thinks [illegible] to life as he went to a spiritualistic service.

It was a lively affair with sepulchral voices sounding through trumpets, tambourines playing mysteriously in mid air, and cold, clammy hands of partially materialized men and women making free in the dusky room with those who were in the flesh. In the midst of it something dealt Mr. Cross a vicious whack on the nose and he called for lights in a tone not to be disobeyed. With the light the circle as disclosed was all natural and human again. The most human member of it was Mr. Cross, with a bloody nose, spoiling for a fight and all the "madder" because he did not know whom to fight.

"Who did that?" he demanded of the medium.

The medium said the gay spirit was that of St. Peter.

But even this explanation did not satisfy Mr. Cross.

"Well, I ask of St. Peter," he said, "is to materialize for just one minute and if I don't make a vacancy for a new gatekeeper I won't ask to get in."—Indianapolis News.

TO KEEP THE SKIN CLEAR

For more than a generation, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have done more for pimples, blackheads and other unsightly conditions of the complexion, red, rough, chapped hands, dandruff, itching, scaly scalps, and dry, thin and falling hair than any other method. They do even more for skin-tortured and disfigured infants and children. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page book on the care of the skin and hair will be sent post free, on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Early Riser.

Booth Tarkington, the American playwright and novelist, is a very early riser, and, when the English playwright and novelist, Arnold Bennett, visited him at his charming residence in Indianapolis Mr. Tarkington said, the first evening at dinner:

"I believe in the simple life. I get up with the sun. Will you take a ten mile walk with me at six o'clock tomorrow morning?"

"Thank you, Mr. Tarkington," the Englishman answered, "but I don't walk in my sleep."

Apropos of the marriage at Reigate of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Mrs. Emilie McKim, a New York man said on the Olympic: "I met Vanderbilt at the Metropole at Brighton a few days after the ceremony, and I said to him, by way of a joke:

"'Well, is the course of true love going to run smooth?'

"'Smooth and straight,' said he. 'There are banks on both sides, you know.'"

FARMERS' CANNING FACTORY.

Elmont, Mo., R. F. D. No. 1,
December 6, 1911.

Mr. Thos. M. Brown, Springfield, Mo.

Dear Sir:—I bought one of Thos. M. Brown's canning factories five years ago. It has made me more money than anything I ever tried. Anyone can make money on Brown's factory. The first year I canned, in 1907, I sold my tomatoes at railroad station for 90 cents per dozen; in 1908 for 85 cents per dozen; in 1909 for 75 cents per dozen; in 1910 for 85 cents per dozen; in 1911 for $1.05 per dozen. In 1911 we had no rain from early April until the 20th of August, nearly 5 months. I planted 3 acres of tomatoes and canned them. Those 3 acres cleared me $1,000.00, after paying all expenses for labor, cans, gasoline, cases, etc. That is a nice sum to make off of 3 acres of ground for a dry season—$333.33 per acre net. If anyone doubts the above statement, just write Peoples Bank of Sullivan, Mo.

Yours truly,
JOHN B. REBURA.

THERE ARE many farmers who do not clear as much net cash on a 25-acre corn crop as Mr. John B. Rebura cleared on one acre of tomatoes. He grows his regular farm crops in addition to his tomatoes. They are out of the way before canning season begins. If you want to buy a factory, I will send you my booklet telling you of what I have to offer with a great many testimonials from farmers, as strong as above. I make 15 sizes, from $85 to $850 for the Farmer, Neighborhood and large Community. Sell them on time payments, or 10 or 15 per cent. off pack, or for cash; any farmer can run factory successfully. Show this to your neighbors.

Yours truly,
THOS. M. BROWN,
Springfield, Mo.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

HOW TO INDUCE SLEEP

AVOID ALL OPIATES AND OTHER FORMS OF "DOPE."

Light Meal Followed by Moderate Exercise, Well Aired Room and Warm Feet Usually Will Bring Peaceful Slumber.

There are sound hygienic methods by which sleep may be induced. Incursions into the realms of patent medicines, opiates, and all sorts of slumber elixirs which are summed up as "dope," should be avoided. But the moral of this lesson has been pointed over and over, yet little has been said about natural methods of wooing sleep. Under this head does not come the various mental contrivances such as "counting sheep" or reciting the multiplication table.

Oxygen is as necessary to the body cells during the hours of sleep as at any other time. Perhaps in the case of children it is even more necessary. For them sleep means the time of anabolism, growth and repair. The old prejudice against open windows still exists, in spite of the campaigns of education in the newspapers and in the schools. Dust in the rooms, an imaginary draft, the fear of colds, and many other stupid reasons are advanced in excuse of this pernicious prejudice.

The organs of the body also should be considered, and no excessive work should be given the heart or digestive organs before retiring to rest. High pillows lead to an increase in the heart's force at a time when the heart should have the lightest work. Pillows that are too low may cause headaches, and even sleeplessness, through an excess of blood being in the brain. Heavy late suppers are unwise, but a light meal, followed by such moderate exercise as a short walk, is generally conducive to sound sleep. The light meal causes a withdrawal of blood from the head into the stomach area and the body generally. The body is therefore warmed, and this is important.

Cold extremities, particularly cold feet, cause sensory stimulations, which produce sleeplessness often for hours. People who suffer in this way should take means to keep their feet warm artificially by using sleeping socks, or slipper baths, or by the use of hot water bottles, and by sleeping between blankets.

It is, of course, fatal to sound sleep to go to bed "with anything on the mind." In these sensational and pleasure-loving days we often retire to rest after receiving a long series of vivid sensations which often account for hours of sleepless tossing. Sometimes this may be relieved by a gentle friction of the head with a medium hard brush.

We cannot hope to always drive away the disturbing sensory impulses, for, built as man is, joy, suffering, grief, responsibility and worry (last, but by no means least), must find their place in his life at some time or other. Life without these would be at best a mere existence, and so we must pay the bill at such times. And even then fatigue must cause sleep ere long.

It may be wise not to be too particular about noises when little children are asleep. At some future time they may be thankful for learning to sleep while a certain amount of noise is going on. For instance, there is no reason why they should not be accustomed to sleep while a piano is being played in another room in the house.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

OLD PURITAN BIBLE BOXES

Curious Carved Chests for the Safe Keeping of Copies of the Scriptures.

Almost invariably after some great wave of religious enthusiasm, we are confronted by strange fragments of salvage—relics of the emotional passion and religious ardor of a departed hour, says the Queen. Such were the devotional carvings of the middle ages—the triptyches, the private tabernacles, the beautiful little ivory madonnas.

Among such memorials are the vast old Puritan Bible boxes. Cumbrous, ancient arks, into which the revised version of James I. was once committed for safe ward and keeping. The sound oakboards with which they were made have resisted the tooth of time.

In the long journeys of the men of the Puritan period, when the scriptures were part of the daily accompaniment of life, the province of these old boxes may readily be seen. Within the home they were made to contain those ponderous family Bibles in which, especially during the commonwealth, the head of the house carefully inscribed the birth, death or marriage of his children with other memorabilia of family life. This circumstance in the absence of other authentic records, and the laxity of parish registers, has sometimes proved an invaluable aid. How little we could have spared, for instance, that volume in which Milton recorded the very hour and minute of his children's birth.

Ash wood was sometimes used in the manufacture of Bible boxes, but oak was the most popular from its superior powers of resistance, for we must remember they were at times in the possession of ecclesiastical stalwarts, the vigor of whose preaching was sometimes calculated by the amount of damage done to the pulpit furniture.

Throughout the commonwealth, and by the general convention of 1666, traveling ministers were gratuitously supplied with Bibles, a very expensive item; and in struggling pastorates the book, with its appropriate coffer, often formed the sole effects of a new conventicle. It is a curious fact that Bibles were sometimes subjected to raffling, even in those austere days. In 1675 one Dr. Wilde bequeathed $250 for the purpose of providing Bibles to be raffled among the poorer brethren.

Costly Picture in Lumber Room.

A picture estimated to be worth $35,000, which for so many years was hidden away in a lumber room at St. Mary's hall, Coventry, has just been restored and put in a place of honor in St Mary's hall.

Owing to damp and an accumulation of dust and dirt, the picture had become so defaced that the corporation of Coventry had decided to sell it if they could get $375 for it. But Messrs Izod & Co. a London firm of picture restorers were at work upon the pictures in St. Mary's hall, and one of their experts recognized it as a masterpiece.

It was found to be one of the finest examples extant of the work of Jacob Jordaens, a pupil and fellow worker of Rubens. Jordaens was born in Antwerp, and the picture was probably painted about 1640. It represents Bacchus springing from his car upon seeing Ariadne. The canvas is about thirty feet by ten feet high. Presented to Coventry by Edward Ellice, M. P., in 1855, little value was attached to it, and it was subsequently consigned to the lumber room.

A Most Generous Nature.

They had been married but a short time, and their happiness was idyllic. Her slightest wish was law; his merest whim was gratified.

And all this on $7.50 a week!

"Today," his wee wife murmured, as they sat together after their evening meal, "I saw the loveliest lace curtains." And she sighed. "But I knew you wished to economize, so I didn't get them."

And again she sighed.

"Dearest," he murmured fondly, "everything you want shall be yours! Anything which adds to your happiness, and brings gladness to your dear eyes; anything that lightens your domestic cares, my darling, and gilds the lowering clouds; anything which borders the thorny path of duty with sweet, fragrant flowers, and appeals to your noble, aesthetic nature, you shall have, my loved one; you must have it, if"—and his voice broke a little with the stress of emotion—"if it doesn't cost more than eighteen pence!"—London Tit-Bits.

Odd Ways of Catching Fish.

The Icelanders are said at one time to have taught bears to jump into the sea and catch seals. In China birds do equally well, for at a signal they dive into the lakes and bring up large fish grasped in their bills. In Greece the fishermen use branches of pine steeped in pitch and lighted; the inhabitants of Amorgos used cypress-leaved cedar, which served when lighted as a flambeau, and the Chinese fish in the night with white painted boards placed in a manner to reflect the rays of the moon doubly upon the water. These attract the fish to the boat when the men cast a large net and seldom fail to draw out considerable quantities. Anchovies are fished for in a similar manner.

Hopeful of Results.

"Your wife is taking a tremendous interest in abstruse economic questions."

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton; "and I'm glad of it. Maybe it will result in her conversation's putting me to sleep instead of keeping me awake."

A Makeshift.

The Israelites were gathering manna. "It will do well enough until we get where we can buy patent breakfast foods," they remarked.—Boston Transcript.

Guarded Against Dishonesty.

A DANGEROUS CARGO

SAILING SHIP LOADED WITH INDIAN WILD ANIMALS.

Sacred Monkey Lived in the Rigging—Fierce Hyena Broke Loose on Another Vessel and Could Not Be Found.

That wild animals shipped across the sea sometimes get loose on the voyage appears from the case of an English dealer who came over from India to England with ten thousand dollars' worth of animals aboard a sailing ship.

An Indian badger was loose for two weeks and a specimen of the sacred monkey of Northern India for nearly the whole voyage. Where the badger concealed itself during the day nobody knew, but the meat and boiled rice that were put out for it at night always disappeared before morning.

The monkey lived up in the rigging comfortably enough, notwithstanding five feet of chain hanging to its neck. Food was put out for it every night, and by day it satisfied its hunger by catching and eating the potatoes that the sailors amused themselves by throwing to it.

A more dangerous experience was one in which a hyena broke loose on board a ship going to London from the Persian Gulf. The captain ordered the shooting of the animal, but when it came to executing the order the hyena could not be found.

Naturally everybody on board was more or less nervous, especially at night. It was decided to keep the hyena well fed, and to this end food in plenty was left in dark corners of the vessel.

When the ship arrived to dock the stevedores, hearing that a wild animal was at large upon her, hesitated about beginning to unload. In this emergency a telegram was sent to another dealer in wild beasts, asking him to send additional men to capture the hyena. As fate would have it, this dealer was away, and the telegram lay unopened until the next day. In the meantime the stevedores summoned sufficient courage to begin work and soon found and captured the hyena.

It was in the hold and was in splendid condition. How it came into its hiding place could never be explained.

Another unexplained mystery was the loss of a python. The dealer had occasion to send nine pythons across the continent. They are usually sent by threes in a sack, the sacks being put in a large box and the lid nailed down. This time, however, they were sent loose in a box.

The dealer himself saw nine put in, but only eight were there at the end of the journey. The box was perfectly tight, and the python could not have got out. It was never known what happened, whether one swallowed another—and pythons are not known to do this—or whether the box had been tampered with. Anyhow, the snake was gone.

A Practical Woman.

She was a fair-haired lady, an actress by profession, and dainty withal. Her head was covered by a concoction in keeping with her general makeup.

Briefly the headgear consisted of a bowl-like foundation, from which protruded plumes mounted on slender wires.

She sauntered into a theater, armed with a free pass, and took her seat in the pit to witness the great piece, "Ashamed of Her Pomeranian; or, Expelled From the Baronial Hall."

As she viewed the stage she felt some one tugging at her hat. She turned loftily and haughtily.

"Does my hat annoy you?" she asked.

"Not at all," replied her neighbor in the back row.

The footlight favorite thought for a time. Then she feared she had been ungracious, and, like Dick Whittington, she turned again.

"Perhaps my plumes interfere with your view?" she suggested, more amiably.

"Oh, no, thank you," said the self-possessed young woman. "I've bent 'em back!"—London Answers.

Woman's "Serfdom."

A half-grown man is, of course, a tyrant. And so it has come about that the rule of man in the world has for many ages meant the serfdom of woman.—Edward Carpenter.

Veneered Furniture.

In these days of the veneered furniture, when the buyer chooses only that piece of quartered oak that shows the most flake in the cut, it is well to make it a point to never allow water or liquid long to remain on the surfaces, this especially of tables, for it is liable to reach the glue beneath this paper-like surface, and later when drying out make it lift and bulge to repair which only an expert is capable. Dampness can easily reach it almost unknowingly by placing on it a vase or jar which has in it some cool substance that might make moisture collect on the outer side and leak to the table top. This should be guarded against, as varnished surfaces become opaque and this more often than the veneer bulging which happening is verily a calamity.

Child of Genius.

An actor was talking at the Players' Club in New York about David Belasco's skill as a stage manager.

"Belasco," said the actor, "has a superhuman sense of the harmonies, the fitnesses of things. This enables him to carry out a stage scene to such small details as no man ever dreamed of before.

"Belasco even in his childhood, possessed this unique sense of harmony. An uncle once gave him a couple of chocolate cigars, then said to the little boy:

"'What are you going to do with them David?'

"'I'll go and eat them in the smoking room,' was the prompt reply."

Did Not Fill the Bill.

Old Lady—There is one thing I notice particularly about that young man who calls to see you. He seems to have no inborn, instinctive respect for women. He treats every woman as though she were a being from a higher sphere, to be approached only with the utmost delicacy and deference.

Granddaughter (sweet eighteen)—Yes, he's horridly bashful.—New York Weekly.

Gautier a Capricious Writer.

March 3, 1862. In the evening, after dinner, we made our way to Theophile Gautier, who was still dining, though it was 9 o'clock. . . . Gautier displayed the merriment of a child, one of the chief charms of true intellectual worth.

They rose from the table and we all passed into the drawing room, . . . whereupon there was a general request that Flaubert would dance the "step of the drawing room idiot." He borrowed a coat, turned up the collar, I cannot say what he did to his hair, his face, and indeed his whole appearance, but suddenly he seemed transformed into a formidable caricature of imbecility. Gautier, filled with a wild desire to follow suit, took off his coat, and with beads of perspiration standing on his forehead, began to tread with heavy steps the "measure of the creditor," and the evening was brought to a close with Bohemian songs and strange wild melodies.—Edmond and Jules De Goncourt. Letters and Journals.

The Wreck.

Boss—I hear a burglar got in your house while your wife was away.

Cory—Yes; I'm so glad. My wife won't know how much of the wreck is me and how much is him."—Harper's Bazar.

Her Topic.

Uncle Jack, who was visiting them for the Christmas holidays from the west, wished to talk to Elizabeth's father at his office. He could not find the telephone directory and this appealed to three-year-old Elizabeth for information regarding the 'phone number: "Elizabeth, what does mother ask for when she talks to daddy at his office?" he inquired. Elizabeth was wise for her days. "Money," she lisped.—Ladies Home Journal.

Necessary Change.

Rev. Mr. Hollars—"Mistah Johnsing, what foh you call dat son ob yoh's Izaak Walton, when he was baptised George Washington?" Mr. Johnson—"Because, sah, dat rascal's reputashun for veracity made dat change imperative."—Christian Register.

Then Mr. Knagg Felt Better.

Mrs. Knagg—Perhaps you recall, it was on a train we first met. Mr. Knagg—Yes, but it's too late now to sue the company for damages.

Nothing More Doing.

An Atchison girl began going with an Atchison man several years ago. He called about every evening in the week. Took her to the theater, moving picture shows and dances. They went buggy riding together and walking Sunday afternoons. About a year ago they were married. Since then theater going has stopped; a dance is unheard of and a moving picture show an event of the couple. Sunday afternoon walking has ended and buggy riding belongs to their dead past. Today the girl met one of her neighbors who evidently had not heard of her marriage. She said to the girl: "You have quit going with that fellow you went with so long, haven't you?"—Atchison Globe.

Old Superstitions.

Coral beads formerly were worn around the neck of children to prevent nosebleed. It was also believed that a piece of brown paper placed under the tongue of a child would stop epistaxis.

Generally.

You can generally find a crowd where anything foolish is being done.

Major Butt Gets Pig in Poke.

Like at least one other distinguished citizen, Maj. A. W. Butt, U. S. A., aid to the president, receives his official mail at the executive offices in Washington. One of his most recent letters when opened brought a refund order from an express company to which Major Butt had recently made consignment. "How much am I offered for this express money order?" asked Major Butt of a group in which were Secretary Hilles and a half dozen other White House officials. "I bid a dollar," said Secretary Hilles, who qualifies as a financier because of service as an assistant secretary in the treasury department. "It's yours," said Major Butt, quickly, and laid the order in Mr. Hilles' hand. It called for the payment of 12 cents.—Washington correspondence New York Herald.

Soul the Abode of Truth.

Truth! Where is truth but in the soul itself? Facts, objects are but phantoms; matter-woven ghosts of this earthly night, at which the soul sleeping here in the mire and clay of matter shudders and names its own vague tremors, sense and perception.—Charles Kingsley.

Living for Others.

There is light and sanity, safety and beauty in thinking, planning, working, living for others. It leads not to sin but away. It is a guide to peace, health and safety of the mind and the soul alike. But self-coddling, self-exaltation, self-interest run mad—that distortion of human nature is a potent lure to destruction. It is of the very essence of crime.—Exchange.

Then She Pondered.

"If you were fair," his wife said, "you would acknowledge that I have done much to make you what you are." "Oh, I acknowledge," he replied, "that you deserve nearly all the credit for making me what I am. By the way, do you happen to realize that what I am is head over heels in debt?"—Judge.

Retort Discourteous.

An Englishman and a Welshman disputing in whose country was the best living, the Welshman said: "There is such noble housekeeping in Wales that I have known above a dozen cooks employed at one wedding dinner." "Ay," answered the Englishman, "that was because every man toasted his own cheese."

O. C. BARBER

AN EXTRACT FROM LETTER OF PROMINENT SUMMIT COUNTY MAN.

Advocating Government Loaning Money Direct to Farmers at Low Rate of Interest to Discharge of Debt.

The Akron Times in its issue dated February 14, publishes a letter from the pen of O. C. Barber, who is known the country over as the "Match King." During the past few years Mr. Barber has given much time to farming and has written many interesting letters on the subject of agriculture. He has also expressed some "advanced" ideas upon political subjects in a general way, and upon questions of transportation his writing and speeches have been most radical.

Here is what Mr. Barber has to say on the subject of loaning money to farmers:

"There has been some little talk from the great alleged financiers of the country, about establishing a bank for the purpose of lending money to the farmers on long time to improve their farms and the grade of their stock. In the abstract the scheme is a proper one, but it should not be run for the selfish ends of a few, but by the government itself, the government lending to farmers under proper restrictions and regulation, a sufficient amount of money to put them in proper shape to increase the products of the soil, and the result of their labors in every respect—dairy, agricultural, horticultural farming, animal husbandry and everything connected with the farm. This, too, would change the face of nature in a short time and make living easier for the masses of people who do not know the pleasures of farm life, but live in the crowded cities, breathing bad air and nursing anarchy.

As an example of government aid New Zealand may be taken as an illustration. There the government lends money at four and one-half per cent. on farm lands, and at the end of a given period the land is turned over to the borrower without his paying back the principal, as the interest over and above that paid by the government will have paid the difference in about thirty-two years.

Our government can borrow money at two per cent. and lend it to the farmers at 4 per cent., and in less than thirty-two years the increased interest will have paid back the amount of the loan and the farms can be left clear and the claim of the government against it cancelled.

The same application might be made to the government owning the railroads, borrowing the money at two per cent to pay for them until such time as the rate at four per cent. will have paid the amount back or they might make it a perpetual loan.

This may look to some as the part of a paternal government. Be it so, is not the milk of human kindness in it?"

NURSERYMEN AND FRUIT GROWERS MUST OBEY THE LAW.

Failure to Spray Fruit Trees May Bring Fine Not Less Than $25.

Nurserymen in Lake county are very careful to obey the law of the state in regard to spraying fruit trees but the growers of fruit, especially those who may have small orchards, are not so careful. It is believed that if all fruit growers would comply with the exact terms of the law San Jose, oyster shell and scurvey scale would soon be a thing of the past.

Here is the law on the subject.

Section 1. One year from the passage of this act each owner or manager of an orchard consisting of ten or more fruit trees shall spray or cause to be sprayed said trees one or more times during the period from November first to April thirtieth with some suitable preparation for the destruction of the San Jose, oyster shell or scurvey scale.

Section 2. Whoever knowingly permits a violation of this act shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each year such spraying is not performed.

PASSED AWAY

Former Citizen of Painesville Dies in Cleveland.

D. H. Bonner, for many years a resident of this city and an employe of the Coe shop, passed away in Cleveland Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. B. H. Carter. The funeral services were held Sunday morning in Cleveland and the remains brought here on the Lake Shore at 12:12 p. m., and interment made in Evergreen cemetery. Two children besides Mrs. Carter survive, Mrs. Annie of Conneaut and Charles Gibbs of Madison.

Painesville and Lake County are famed for their large number of poultry fanciers and birds bred here are of almost every variety and are shown in all the big shows of the country and they are winners too. Among the favorite strains bred here and elsewhere in the county are the Rhode Island Reds, Black Minorcas, Buff and White Orpingtons, Blue Andalusions, Wyandottes, Leghorns and Barred and White Plymouth Rocks.

NEW MACHINERY

THE NICKEL PLATE MILLING CO HAVE THE LATEST

Fairbanks Latest Make Hopper Scales Are Also Installed.

The Nickel Plate Milling Company has installed two No. 1 "Special" Granulating Midlings Mills, a Midlings Finisher and a Bran Finisher. These four machines are comparatively new to the milling business and are the very latest patterns of this line of machinery. The machines were manufactured by the Thomas McFeeley Company of Philadelphia.

While these machines are now their use has passed the experimental stage, and are being put into up-to-date mills, replacing the so-called rolls and scroll machines. The claim is made that the machines pay for

Mrs Jack Hackett and son are visit

Another improvement at the Nickel Plate Milling Co. is a new Fairbanks hopper scales. These scales are fitted with draws which will permit of unloading grain directly from a railroad car or from the farmers sled or wagon, and the exact weight of grain can be determined in a very short time without the inconvenience of carrying or wheeling the grain.

FRANCHISE

To C. P. & E. Railroad For Twenty-five Years Near Passage.

Members of the city council at their meeting Monday evening were in favor of passing the ordinance granting the C. P. & E. railroad a franchise for twenty-five years inside the city limits, and permitting a charge of 20 cents for round trip on the proposed new road to the township park; however it was considered advisable to comply with the exact letter of the law in the matter. The railroad and franchise committee had reported favorably at the meeting of the council Monday evening and the ordinance had been read when it was discovered that a section of the statute evidently made it necessary to advertise or give notice publicly of the application for a franchise. If upon thorough investigation this proves to be the correct interpretation of the law the ordinance will be held up for at least ninety days.

ADVERTISING

IT PAY TO ADVERTISE.

Wm. F. Wallpert Has Built Up a Large Business and Success is Evident.

When Mr. Wallpert purchased the J. L. Farris store at Wickliffe a year or two ago, no one seemed to think that he had any thing very good as a business proposition, but it was not long before the people of Wickliffe and vicinity learned that the new proprietor was a live wire, there were changes, new goods, and a general cleaning up and re-arrangement that attracted attention.

Mr. Wallpert had a big stock of goods—dry goods, gents' furnishings, boots and shoes, and a location that to him seemed good, than he commenced to let the people know about it. He advertised with circulars, calendars, and newspaper advertisement. He made plain honest statements and fulfilled every proposition made. His trade commenced to grow and he has found it necessary to make more changes at his store which gives him advantages in the display of goods. Today Mr. Wallpert's store at Wickliffe is considered a good business proposition and people for miles around find that he has the goods and can make the prices as reasonable as any other merchant.

Mr. Wallpert's store would be a credit to any town in the county, and it is a great convenience to Wickliffe people to have a first class store of this kind right at hand. Then again, Wickliffe is growing and will continue to grow, that means something to a business man located there.

MANUFACTURING

IN LAKE COUNTY OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

Year by Year There Appears to be More Black Smoke From Busy Work Shops.

Starting at Wickliffe and following the Nickel Plate or the L. S. & M. S. railroads east to Unionville one can get a fairly good idea of the different branches of manufacturing that is carried on in the little county of Lake.

At Wickliffe there are the Cline Brick and Tile works and the Cleveland Crane and Engineering Co. Both of these concerns are in a prosperous condition.

At Willoughby there is the American Clay Machinery Co., one of the oldest and most substantial industries in the county. There are also a number of mills for the manufacturing of flour, feed, lumber, etc.

At Mentor is located the Mentor Knitting Mills one of the important industries of the state.

At Painesville there are The Coe Manufacturing Co., The Metallic Binding Co., the Ohio Manufacturing Co., The Wadsworth Cabinet Co., The Ohio Textile Co., S. I. Malin & Son, The Harrison Basket Co., The Nickel Plate Milling Co. and the Painesville Elevator Co. And at Fairport there is in operation the million dollar plant known as the Diamond Alkali Co.

At Madison is the well known Madison Wheel Co., the products of which are sent all over the country. Madison and Unionville have feed mills and in the township of Madison there are mills and shops where agricultural implements are made.

The stability of the above named manufacturing concerns and the chances of new enterprises locating here promises that Lake may soon be known as a manufacturing county.

MURPHY VS. HENRY

Safer Murphy Discharges a Local Policeman and the Policeman Remonstrates.

The Telegraph-Republican is giving wide-spread publicity to every little detail connected with affairs in the city administration, and together with some exaggeration, is evidently trying to make trouble between the heads of departments. But the officers of the present administration are too wise to be disturbed by the comments of the local newspaper unless the T-R can discover something more important to discuss than the insinuating attack it has been making upon Director of Safety, Mr. Murphy.

Shortly after assuming the duties of his office, Safer Murphy discovered a depleted treasury and in order to meet the appropriations fo his department in a business like manner he dismissed Special Policeman Henry at the Lake Shore depot. It happened that Policeman Henry had been a very strong favorite with the former administration and his dismissal was the cause of considerable publicity.

A few weeks later Chief of Police Appleton appointed Henry as a substitute policeman during the absence of one of the force, and Safer Murphy having in the meantime heard some reports of questionable conduct upon the part of Policeman Henry notified Chief Appleton that Henry would not hereafter be eligible as a member of the force and accordingly he sent Mr. Henry a notice of dismissal, stating the cause of action.

Special Policeman Henry was very wrathy and immediately rushed to his favorite newspaper office and demanded more publicity and notoriety. From the newspaper office he went to the Mayor, from the mayor to a lawyer, and from the lawyer to the city council, and at last account was still going on high gear.

Safer Murphy, in a talk to a Herald reporter says he is willing to appoint a policeman at the Lake Shore depot whenever the civil service commission will furnish him with a man bearing the proper credentials, but that an investigation of Mr. Henry's claims show that he is unfitted for this position and that furthermore he has not been a resident of this city until within a few months ago, and that there are a number of other applicants for this position all of whom have been life long residents of this city, men with families to support, and more deserving of an official position than a new comer.

PERRY

Miss Sadie Langshaw returned Thursday from her long visit in Indiana. And the happy part of these prolonged visits is the home coming, that is, unless the visit be prolonged like Rip Van Winkle's. Miss Sadie's home has become the center of attraction to her Perry friends.

Mrs. Archie Merriman has been confined to the house by illness.

Little Bernice Lockwood is suffering from pneumonia.

A "shower party" was held Saturday evening at the home of Miss Mabel Hoyt, in Miss Eva Sage's honor. A crowd of former classmates and friends were present and a most happy evening was spent. Miss Sage was showered with gifts, cushions, towels, silver, etc.

Miss Landgraff was unable to attend school Thursday and Friday on account of her mother's death. Therefore Miss Huntley taught in her place at [illegible] days.

Mrs. Joseph Wood and daughter, Esther, were in Painesville on business Saturday evening.

Friday evening was the "night off" for most everyone in Perry. It was Mr. Smith's last night here, therefore many attended the meeting. Then too some of the Painesville high school pupils in the play Esmeralda came from Perry, so the home town had a right to be interested and sent a large number to the high school. The fast melting snow called to the grammar room pupils that unless they hustled their much discussed sleigh ride must needs be held next winter, and they answered the call by going to Madison in bobs. Besides these amusements the Auf Wiedersehen Club of Painesville gave a dance in the K. of P. hall, which was largely attended by Perry people, and no small number went to the I. O. O. F. hall. In general Friday night was a night of revelry.

Thursday night a box social will be held at the M. E. Chapel. The bow of ribbon at the lady's throat is to match the one on her box, and so the suppermates will be awarded.

Rev. Schmidt will give a lecture on Temperance Sunday evening at the Christian church.

The W. C. T. U. meets Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Tenney. A Francis Willard Tea will be served.

WILLOUGHBY

The K. of P. gave a dance at their hall Monday evening.

GRANGE

"PAINESVILLE" IS NAME OF FARMERS ORGANIZATION

Starts Out With Thirty-five Members and Complete List of Officers.

Painesville Grange was organized February 10. There were names of thirty-five people on the list. C. J. Bogaske was elected master; Harry C. King secretary; and Mrs. C. Lucy Wagar, lecturer. The name adopted was "Painesville." Another meeting was appointed which is the last chance to join the list of charter members. There was a great deal of interest manifested and those that were there are working for more members. Remember the time, Saturday 1 p. m., February 24, in K. of P. hall. It is necessary to begin on time for there are a great many matters to attend to.

SNAIL WALKS ON A RAZOR

Travels Unharmed Along the Edge of the Blade and Over Rough Glass.

"When photographing the snail," writes Prof. Ward in the Strand, "I was surprised at the fact that even the rough cut edge of a sheet of glass presented no difficulties to its locomotion, its even pace was continuous in spite of the fact that the sharp corner appeared to be penetrating its body. There, too, we have exhibited the animal's delicate sense of touch and this led me to make further experiment.

"After I had placed the snail on the butt of a razor's blade it slowly moved along the back of the blade, and then climbed completely over the sharp edge, the razor being in excellent condition. As the successive waves brought the fore part of its foot near the edge of the blade its head was held low down and the lower and shorter pair of feelers nearly touched the blade, as if feeling the way.

"At the moment when the sharp edge was reached the small feelers were fully extended toward it, and just at the very instant when I expected to see them cut off they were both instantly retracted. They were little more than a hair breadth away, and though the lower feelers possess no eyes, yet by their sudden movement I was quite convinced that the snail at that instant recognized danger.

"Still the foot traveled on, and slowly the snail dragged its whole weight of exactly one and a half ounces over the edge, later moving toward the butt and remaining perfectly unharmed. The species experimented with was the Roman, or edible kind, which accounts for its comparatively large weight, it being the largest of British snails."

Rich "Catch" of Whales

An exciting whale hunt took place in the upper reaches of Loch Erisort, Lewis, Scotland the other week. A crew of fishermen sighted the school off the village of Habost, and after chasing them from side to side of the loch for a considerable time, they succeeded in driving them in as far as the rapids near the village of Balallan. Here the whole township turned out, the young men in boats armed with all kinds of weapons. The boats formed a bridge almost across the loch, and amid a scene of great excitement the whales were driven into the shallow waters at the head of the loch. The crews of the boats jumped into the water among the whales and in a short time the whole school of 54 was secured. On the following day the work of cutting up began, every family in the village getting an equal share. The melting of the blubber into oil, which is highly prized by the wool spinners in the district, has since actively proceeded.

Gay Deceiver Brought to Book.

Eleven sorely deceived women marched into the Vienna lower criminal court recently to give evidence against a man who had promised the entire batch marriage, and had borrowed money to the extent of about $6,000 from them. The prisoner, Karl Itruly, 42 years of age, belonging to an itinerant band of musicians, smilingly acknowledged that he had been solemnly betrothed—almost equal to marriage in that country—to all the women. The judge asked which one he had intended to marry. He said that he had not thought of marrying any of them, as he had already one wife at home in his native place. The judge sentenced him to three and one-half years' imprisonment.

Blue Law in Connecticut.

In Connecticut some of the old laws framed by Puritans have been enforced within recent years. Not long ago a prominent manufacturer was summoned for kissing his wife in a tramcar. The complainant was an elderly spinster who was traveling in the car at the time the offense was committed, and deposed that the affectionate husband not only kissed his wife, but kept his arms round her waist during the whole of the journey. She pleaded that as this conduct occurred on a Sunday it was punishable under a seventeenth century statute. The judge concurred and inflicted a fine of five dollars and costs.

It Wouldn't Work.

"I let my wife write out all the checks for our bills."

"I tried that once, but it wouldn't work."

"Why not?"

"My wife complained that after writing out the checks for one month's bills she didn't have the heart to run any more bills for the next month, so I had to take over the job again myself."

Travel by Mail.

"Going abroad again?"

"No," replied the indolent citizen. "What's the use of bothering with railroads and hotels when your friends will send you post card pictures that look better than the actual scenery?"

Took Precautions.

"Don't worry about that, sir. I left my best one at home in case of accidents."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Philosophical Method.

"Don't you find it harder and harder to live within your means?"

"Oh, I found several years ago that it was absolutely impossible. That's why I've bought an automobile and joined two more clubs. One has to manage somehow to keep from letting it get on one's nerves."

HIGHWAYMEN STUN JEWELER AND THEN ROB HIM.

Three Automobile Bandits Trail Diamond Dealer, Rip Wallet From His Pocket and Escape.

New York City.—The automobile bandits jumped from the Wall street district to hotel and shopping district of Fifth avenue and Broadway.

Three men in the taxicab type of car trailed George H. Horth, a diamond dealer, from Broadway and 34th street to Fifth avenue, through Fifth avenue to 35th street, and west on 35th street to a point 200 feet from Sixth avenue. There two of them jumped from the cab, stunned the jeweler with blows from a blackjack, ripped a wallet containing $10,000 worth of unset diamonds from his coat pocket and made their escape.

The robbery occurred shortly before 7 o'clock in the evening when the streets of the vicinity were thronged with pedestrians and vehicles and with a policeman standing only 200 feet away.

It is believed that the diamond merchant was trailed from his office down town until the bandits saw a favorable opportunity. There they carried out their plans as coolly and daringly as though they were robbing an unprotected traveler in a lonely mountain pass.

JUDGE LANNING PASSES AWAY

United States Jurist Who Was to Have Been in Steel Suit Succumbs to Heart Failure.

Trenton, N. J.—United States Circuit Judge William M. Lanning, aged [illegible], died at his home in this city from heart trouble. Judge Lanning was to have sat with Circuit Judges Gray and Buffington in the government suit against the United States Steel Corporation.

Judge Lanning had been a circuit judge since 1909. Prior to that he was a federal district judge. He served one term in congress, was prominent in the affairs of the Presbyterian church, a member of the board of trustees of the general assembly of that denomination, a director of Princeton Theological seminary and a trustee of the Lawrenceville school.

FIVE MURDERERS ARE HANGED

Four Executed While Counsel of Condemned Men Vainly Tried to Obtain Stay Order.

Chicago, Ill.—Five murderers were hanged in the county jail here, four of whom were executed while counsel were vainly trying to obtain a stay order on the ground that their clients were insane, and one after habeas corpus proceedings in the federal court had been denied.

The four were Frank Shiblawski, Ewald Shiblawski, his brother, Philip Sommerling and Thomas Schultz, slayers of Fred W. Guelzow, Jr., a truck farmer, who was robbed and murdered in the outskirts of the city last October. The fifth was Thomas Jennings, a negro, who was convicted on finger print evidence of the murder of Clarence Hiller, a railway official, whose home he attempted to rob.

No roll call was taken, but a previous vote sending the bill to committee which was lost by 116 to 182 is taken as the record vote.

Prefers West to New York.

New York City.—"If somebody offered me a million dollars to stay here instead of going back to Indianapolis I wouldn't take it," Mrs. Samuel L. Shank, wife of the mayor of Indianapolis, made the foregoing statement with an emphasis that forestalled any proffer of a million. "The noise and the hurry and the glitter and the expense here must be a continual strain."

New Use for Horse Flesh.

Paris, France.—The declaration by Paris physicians that horse flesh is a cure for consumption has resulted within the past few days of boosting prices in that brand of meat, and of raising the question with the government officials as to the advisability of importing large numbers of horses for slaughter in order to supply the demand. The French doctors hold that horse meat is more nourishing, easier to digest and of greater recuperative value for consumptives than beef, besides being much cheaper.

SUBMITS FINDINGS TO CONGRESSMEN

PRESIDENT TAFT TRANSMITS REPORT OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION COMMISSION.

URGES MEASURE BE DRAWN

Men Appointed to Investigate Injuries to Employes on Railroads Recommend Bill Be Framed to Aid Unfortunates.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft has submitted to congress the report of the employers' liability commission and the commission's proposed employers' liability and workmen's compensation bill, accompanied by a message urging the enactment of the measure.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have the honor to transmit herewith the report of the employers' liability and workmen's compensation commission, authorized by joint resolution No. 41, approved June 25, 1910, "to make a thorough investigation of the subject of employers' liability and workmen's compensation and to submit a report through the president to the congress of the United States."

The commission recommends a carefully drawn bill entitled "A bill to provide an exclusive remedy and compensation for accidental injuries resulting in disability or death to employes of common carriers by railroads engaged in interstate or foreign commerce or in the District of Columbia and for other purposes." This bill [illegible] the act [illegible].

Details Worked Out.

[illegible] The amount of recovery is graded in proportion to the wages received and the more or less serious character of the injury where death does not ensue, specific provision being made for particular injuries insofar as they can be specified. The compensation is to be paid in the form of annual payments for a number of years or for life. The fees to be paid to attorneys are specifically limited by the act. The remedies offered are exclusive of any other remedies. The statistical investigation seems to show that under the act the cost to the railroads would be perhaps 25 per cent more than the total cost which they now incur.

The report of the commission has been very able and satisfactory, the investigations have been most thorough and the discussion of the constitutional questions which have arisen in respect to the validity of the bill is of the highest merit.

Three objections to the validity of the bill of course occur.

In the first place the question arises whether under the provisions of the commerce clause the bill could be considered to be regulation of interstate and foreign commerce.

That seems to be already settled by the decision of the supreme court in the employers liability case.

Property Rights.

The second question is whether the making of those remedies exclusive and the compelling of the railroad companies to meet obligations arising from injuries for which the railroad would not be liable under the common law is a denial of the due process of law which is enjoined upon congress by the Fifth amendment to the constitution in dealing with the property rights. This question the report takes up and in an exhaustive review of the authorities makes clear as it seems to me the validity of the act. This is the question which in the court of appeals of the state of New York was decided adversely to the validity of the compensation act adopted by the legislature of that state. How far that act and the one here proposed differ it is unnecessary to state. It is sufficient to say that the argument of the commission is most convincing to show that the police power of government exercised in the regulation of interstate commerce is quite sufficient to justify the imposition upon the interstate railroad companies of the liability [illegible].

The third objection is that the right of trial by jury guaranteed by the Seventh amendment is denied. As a matter of fact the right is preserved in this act by permitting a jury to pass on the issue when duly demanded in accordance with the limitation of the act. I sincerely hope that this act will pass. I deem it one of the great steps of progress toward a satisfactory solution of an important phase of the relations between employer and employe that has been presented within the last twenty-five years [illegible] under the common law were adapted to a different age and condition and were evidently drawn by men imbued with the importance of preserving the employers from burdensome or unjust liability. It was treated as a personal matter of each employe and the employer and the employe were put on a level of dealing, which, however it may have been in the past, certainly creates injustice to the employe under the present conditions.

Old Common Law.

One of the great objections to the old common law method of settling questions of this character was the lack of uniformity in the recoveries made by injured employes and by the representatives of those who suffered death. Frequently, meritorious cases that appealed strongly to every sense of human justice were shut out by arbitrary rules limiting the liability of the employe. On the other hand, often by perjured evidence and the undue emotional generosity of the jury recoveries were given far in excess of the real injury and sometimes on facts that hardly justified recovery at all. Now, under this system, the tendency will be to create as nearly a uniform system as can be devised. There will be recoveries in every case and they will be limited by the terms of the law so as to be reasonable.

The great injustice of the present system by which recoveries of verdicts of any size do not result in actual benefit to the injured person because of the heavy expense of the litigation and the fees charged by the counsel for the plaintiff will disappear under this new law, by which the fees of the counsel are limited to a very reasonable amount. The cases will be disposed of most expeditiously under this system and the money will be distributed for the support of the injured person over a number of years, so as to make its benefit greater and more secure.

Of course, the great object of this act is to secure justice to the weaker party under existing modern conditions, but a result hardly less important will follow from this act that I cannot fail to mention.

The administration of justice today is clogged in every court by the great number of suits for damages for personal injuries. The settlement of such cases by this system will serve to relieve the burden [illegible] the cases [illegible] by this act [illegible] the business [illegible] will be disposed of with much greater dispatch [illegible] act demands your earnest consideration and I sincerely hope that it may be passed before the adjournment of this session of congress.

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

There accompanies the letter of transmittal of Senator Sutherland not only the report of the committee but also the hearings of the witnesses by the commission, all of which is herewith submitted.

HIGH COURT APPROVES I. AND R.

Supreme Tribunal Holds Oregon's Direct Legislation Is Not Contrary to the Constitution.

Washington, D. C.—The cause of direct legislation by the people won a decisive victory when the supreme court declared constitutional by implication the initiative and referendum amendment to the Oregon constitution. It refused to take jurisdiction of the test suits contesting validity of the legislation.

The opinion holds that any question involving the violation of the federal constitution should be left entirely to congress for solution. That is, if the states are found through any act under the initiative and referendum to be infringing on the rights of the congress, congress must by legislative enactment correct the wrong done.

The decision is in a test case against direct legislation brought by the Bell telephone interests.

For years the Bell corporation had escaped its just share of public burdens. It found the legislature amenable to its "arguments." By initiative in 1906 a law was passed imposing a license tax upon telephone companies. The people enacted it by a vote of 69,635 in favor and 6,441 against.

The company filed its action in resistance against the laws solely on the ground that the people cannot legislate directly, but that legislatures alone can pass laws and that the people are prevented by the federal constitution from amending their state constitutions so as to obtain power to legislate directly.

TAFT NAMES PITNEY FOR POST

Nominates New Jersey Man to Be an Associate Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft has sent to the senate the nomination of Chancellor Mahlon Pitney of New Jersey to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court.

Pitney is now 54, having been born in Morristown, N. J., February 5, 1858. His father was vice chancellor of the state. He was graduated from Princeton taking A. B., A. M. and LL. D. degrees. He served in congress from 1895 to 1899, resigning from the Fifty-fifth congress. He served in the New Jersey senate from 1899 to 1901, being president of the senate in 1901. From 1901 to 1908 he was associate justice of the New Jersey supreme court.

HIGHWAYMAN HOLDS UP TRAIN

Loots Pullman of About $1,000 and Lot of Jewelry Estimated at About Same Value.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Westbound limited New York and St. Louis express train No. 1 was robbed by a masked highwayman at 10 o'clock at night while climbing the eastern slope of the Allegheny Mountains on what is known as the 17-mile grade, 40 miles west of Cumberland, Md., and the occupants of a Pullman looted of about $1,000 and a lot of jewelry estimated at about the same value.

The robber climbed on the train while in motion and running at the rate of eight miles an hour, swinging on the rear Pullman. Entering the car, he placed a gun in the faces of the conductor and flagman and then, firing two shots to terrorize the passengers, calmly relieved the occupants of the car of their money and jewelry, went to the front end of the car and swung off near Alvermoot station, disappearing down the mountain side.

Two Childrne Are Cremated.

Sapula, Okla.—Flames that destroyed a farm house near here cremated two children and probably fatally burned three other persons. The fire broke out in the residence of Fred Clark, who, with his wife and eldest daughter, started for the room where his two young children slept. All three dashed for the door leading to the children's room. Fire buried them back. Their clothing aflame, the three hurried out of the house, each attempting to beat out the flames of the other's clothing.

Maid Finds She's an Heiress.

New York City.—Miss Mary Chase, a maid in the employ of Mrs. G. W. Allen of 109 East Fifty-sixth street, has just discovered she is an heiress. According to her own statement, she believes she has inherited something like $4,000,000. She is the heir of her uncle, Hiram Chase, a "forty niner," who died recently in the west. The money was left to the niece in order that she could take care of her father, George W. Chase, who is 80 years old. Mr. Chase is living in Buffalo.

DIEGEL LOSES APPEAL

MUST SERVE THREE YEARS IN THE PENITENTIARY.

Former Sergeant-at-Arms of Ohio Senate Turned Down by Decision of State Supreme Court.

Columbus, O.—Rodney J. Diegle, former sergeant-at-arms of the Ohio senate, must serve three years in the state penitentiary for complicity in legislative bribery. This decision was announced by the supreme court, which heard the last appeal of Diegle's attorneys for clemency something more than a month ago, and affirmed the judgment of the lower courts.

The sentence of three years' imprisonment was imposed upon Diegle by Common Pleas Judge Kinkead, who had formerly been Diegle's personal friend.

The decision establishes the competency of dictograph evidence. This lays down a principle of law never before passed upon.

Diegle was convicted of aiding and abetting Senator L. R. Andrews of Lawrence county in soliciting and accepting a bribe of $200 to influence his vote on senate bill No. 256, an insurance measure. He put up a strenuous fight to escape conviction. In this he had the support of the attorneys employed by the legislators indicted along with him in connection with bribery.

The decision of the court means that all the legislators who were indicted and who had hoped to escape going before the bar of justice through a reversal of the Diegle case by the highest court will now be tried.

These legislators are Senators L. R. Andrews, I. E. Huffman, Butler county, Edgar T. Crawford of Carroll, T. A. Dean, Sandusky, and Representatives George B. Nye of Pike and A. Clark Lowrey of Lawrence county. Attorney General Hogan and Prosecutor Turner of Franklin county announced that they would push these cases without delay.

The evidence in the Diegle case was secured by three Burns detectives.

FOUR TRAINMEN ARE KILLED

Freight and Passenger Collide in Hoosac Tunnel, Several Cars Being Demolished.

North Adams, Mass.—Four trainmen are dead and the Hoosac tunnel is so effectively blocked that it may be days before the tracks will be cleared, as the result of a rear end collision between a freight train and a Boston bound express on the Boston & Maine railroad.

The passenger train was not seriously damaged with the exception of the electric engine which was drawing it, but several cars of the freight were demolished and the wreckage took fire.

EIGHT DIE AS CYCLONE HITS

Seven Negroes and One White Baby Are Victims of Storm That Sweeps Louisiana City.

Shreveport, La.—With the city in festival attire and the streets thronged by merrymakers enjoying the last day of Mardi Gras, a cyclone swept over the western edge of the city, killing eight persons and injuring 40 or more. All of the dead are negroes except a baby of Albert Manheim.

Although there was considerable damage in the city, the greatest havoc wrought by the storm was among the negro cabins on the edge of the city. Many shacks were blown away.

'DEVIL DANCE' IS THE LATEST

Makes Its Appearance in the National Capital and Disturbs the 400 of Washington.

Washington, D. C.—Even more daring than the "turkey trot" or the "bunny hug," the "devil dance" is now disturbing the 400 in Washington. It made its appearance at a hop given by A. O. Horstmann, third secretary of the German embassy, on Sunday night.

In this amazing step the man places his foot between the feet of his partner at the turn of the waltz, their feet clinging together as they pivot rapidly round and round.

Mulatto Held as Blackmailer.

New York City.—Oessie Green, a mulatto, aged 23, was arrested here charged with attempting to blackmail Francis R. Arnold, father of Dorothy Arnold, who mysteriously disappeared from her home more than a year ago.

The police said that one of the letters received by Arnold contained a demand and that others stated that if the money was not paid in a reasonable time Mr. Arnold's other children would disappear as did Miss Dorothy.

Woman Arraigned as Slayer.

Canonsburg, Pa.—Mrs. Annula Taremo, alias Treeme, of Utica, O., was arraigned before Justice of the Peace R. M. Kelso here and held for the May term of court on a charge of murder.

She was committed to the Washington county jail without bail. The woman is charged with the death of Charles Atherton, who was shot on the afternoon of February 8 in a room here.

Mrs. Taremo was one of the coolest persons at the hearing.

Curses Increase Sentence.

Brookfield, Mo.—After Woolridge Golden was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary here for assault to kill, he cursed Judge Fred Lamb and other court officials, and his sentence was increased to five years.

Further incensed, Golden turned to the judge and said:

"I don't give a —— if you make it ten, judge."

"Mr. Clerk," said the court, turning to the circuit clerk, "I sentence the prisoner to ten years in the penitentiary."

OHIO STATE NEWS

Columbus Grove.—William W. Smith, editor and owner of the Leipsic Free Press for nearly half a century, is dead of heart disease. "Isn't your husband getting a fearfully bad disposition?" asked Mrs. Shortsoot.

"No," replied Mrs. Leedout. "He has read somewhere that brainy men are always cranks and he's trying to get a reputation."

The Man and the Place.

Andrew Carnegie was giving advice on a recent Sunday to one of the younger members of the Rockefeller Bible class.

"I am an advocate of early marriages," he said. "The right man in the right place, at the right time, is a very good saying, and, to my mind, the right man in the right place at the right time is unquestionably a husband reading to his wife on a winter's night beside the radiator."

Waste Paper in Paris.

Paris police give strict attention to the act against throwing waste papers and refuse upon the streets. An absent-minded old gentleman carelessly dropped a hundred-franc note from his waistcoat pocket, whereupon a sharp-eyed policeman requested the old gentleman to give him his name and address or submit to arrest. But when the offender reached into the gutter and picked up the wastepaper and opened it before the policeman's eyes he was let off with an apology and a profound bow.

Mean People.

Henry Russell, the head of the Boston opera, was describing his foreign tour in search of talent.

"They were mean people," he said of the singers of a certain city. "I could do no business with them. They thought only of money."

Mr. Russell smiled.

"They were as bad as the man who discovered the Blank theater fire.

"The first intimation the box office had of this fire came, at the end of the third act, from a fat man who bounded down the gallery stairs, stuck his face at the ticket window and shouted breathlessly:

"'Theater's afire! Gimme me money back!'"

THE DOCTOR HABIT

And How She Overcame It.

When well selected food has helped the honest physician place his patient in sturdy health and free from the "doctor habit," it is a source of satisfaction to all parties. A Chicago woman says:

"We have not had a doctor in the house during all the 5 years that we have been using Grape-Nuts food. Before we began, however, we had 'the doctor habit,' and scarcely a week went by without a call on our physician.

"When our youngest boy arrived, 5 years ago, I was very much run down and nervous, suffering from indigestion and almost continuous headaches. I was not able to attend to my ordinary domestic duties and was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself. Under advice I took to Grape-Nuts.

"I am now, and have been ever since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, able to do all my own work. The dyspepsia, headaches, nervousness and rheumatism which used to drive me fairly wild, have entirely disappeared.

"My husband finds that in the night work in which he is engaged, Grape-Nuts food supplies him the most wholesome, strengthening and satisfying lunch he ever took with him." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Resolvent, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time I began to notice improvement, and continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years. I have recommended Cuticura Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases." (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

PEOPLE SUPREME SAYS ROOSEVELT

EX-PRESIDENT DECLARES HUMAN RIGHTS SHOULD COME BEFORE ALL OTHERS.

MAKES SPEECH AT COLUMBUS

Addresses Members of Ohio Constitutional Convention—Favor Big Business Under Proper Control—Advocates Direct Nominations.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 21.—That human rights are supreme over all other rights and that wealth should be the servant, not the master of the people, was the keynote of an address delivered today by ex-President Roosevelt before the members of the Ohio constitutional convention in session in this city. He declared that unless government was truly representative it was not representative at all. Referring to trusts he said that big business corporations should not be discouraged but that laws should be enacted by the government for their strict supervision.

After acknowledging the honor accorded him in inviting him to address the delegates, Mr. Roosevelt said:

Country Belongs to People.

"I believe in pure democracy. With Lincoln, I hold that 'this country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it.' We progressives believe that the people have the right, the power and the duty to protect themselves and their own welfare; that human rights are supreme over all other rights; that wealth should be the servant, not the master of the people. We believe that unless representative government does absolutely represent the people it is not representative government at all. We test the worth of all men and all measures by asking how they contribute to the welfare of the men, women and children of whom this nation is composed. We are engaged in one of the great battles of the age-long contest waged against privilege on behalf of the common welfare. We hold it a prime duty of the people to free our government from the control of money in politics. For this purpose we advocate, not as ends in themselves, but as weapons in the hands of the people, all governmental devices which will make the representatives of the people more easily and certainly responsible to the people's will.

"I am emphatically a believer in constitutionalism, and because of this fact I no less emphatically protest against any theory that would make of the Constitution a means of thwarting instead of securing the absolute right of the people to rule themselves and to provide for their own social and industrial well being. All constitutions, those of the states no less than that of the nation, are designed, and must be interpreted and administered, so as to fit human rights.

Supreme Power in People.

"I hold it to be the duty of every public servant and of every man who in public or private life holds a position of leadership in thought or action, to endeavor honestly and fearlessly to guide his fellow countrymen to right decisions; but I emphatically dissent from the view that it is either wise or necessary to try to devise methods which under the Constitution will automatically prevent the people from deciding for themselves what governmental action they deem just and proper. . . . Constitution-makers should make it clear beyond shadow of doubt that the people in their legislative capacity have the power to enact into law any measure they deem necessary for the betterment of social and industrial conditions.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that in the past too much attention had been paid to the accumulation of prosperity but that the future more attention should be given to its proper distribution.

"The only prosperity worth having," he declared, "is that which affects the mass of the people. I hold it to be our duty to see that the wage worker, the small producer, the ordinary consumer, shall get their fair share of the benefit of business prosperity. But it either is or ought to be evident to every one that business has to prosper before anybody can get any benefit from it. Therefore I hold that he is the real progressive, that he is the genuine champion of the people who endeavors to shape the policy alike of the nation and of the several states so as to encourage legitimate and honest business at the same time that he wars against all crookedness and injustice and unfairness and tyranny in the business world.

While the anti-trust law was good as far as it went, Mr. Roosevelt declared that by itself it could accomplish but a trifling part of the government regulation that was necessary. In his opinion the nation and states must co-operate, and he referred to the leading part that Wisconsin, under the direction of Senator LaFollette, had taken. Continuing he said:

"All business into which the element of monopoly in any way or degree enters, and where it proves in practice impossible totally to eliminate this element of monopoly, should be carefully supervised, regulated and controlled by governmental authority; and such control should be exercised by administrative, rather than by judicial, officers. No effort should be made to destroy a big corporation merely because it is big, merely because it has shown itself a peculiarly efficient business instrument. But we should not fear, if necessary, to bring the regulation of big corporations to the point of controlling conditions so that the wage-worker shall have a wage more than sufficient to cover the bare cost of living, and hours of labor not so excessive as to wreck his strength by the strain of unending toil and leave him unfit to do his duty as a good citizen of the community.

Favors Direct Nominations.

Speaking of direct nominations and the initiative and referendum, he said:

"I believe in providing for direct nominations by the people, including therein direct preferential primaries for the election of delegates to the national nominating conventions.

"I believe in the election of United States senators by direct vote. Just as actual experience convinced our people that presidents should be elected (as they now are in practice, although not in theory) by direct vote of the people instead of by direct vote through an untrammeled electoral college, so actual experience has convinced us that senators should be elected by direct vote of the people instead of indirectly through the various legislatures.

"I believe in the initiative and the referendum, which should be used not to destroy representative government, but to correct it whenever it becomes misrepresentative. If in any state the people are themselves satisfied with their present representative system, then it is of course their right to keep that system unchanged, and it is nobody's business but theirs. But in actual practice it has been found in very many states that legislative bodies have not been responsive to the popular will. Therefore I believe that the state should provide for the possibility of direct popular action in order to make good such legislative failure."

Referring to the recall, the speaker said he did not believe that there was any great necessity for it as regards short-term elective officers, but believed it should be generally provided, but with such restrictions as would make it available only when there was a widespread and genuine public feeling among a majority of the voters.

One recall, however, Mr. Roosevelt declared himself heartily in favor of—the recall of decisions on constitutional questions which the people thought were wrong.

People Fit to Rule.

Mr. Roosevelt took issue with many eminent lawyers who do not believe in our American system of government, and in this connection said: "I take absolute issue with all those who hold such a position. I regard it as a complete negation of our whole system of government, and if it became the dominant position in this country, it would mean the absolute upsetting of both the rights and the rule of the people.

"I do not say that the people are infallible. But I do say that our whole history shows that the American people are more often sound in their decisions than is the case with any of the governmental bodies to whom, for their convenience, they have delegated portions of their power. If this is not so, then there is no justification for the existence of our government, and if it is so, then there is no justification for refusing to give the people the real, not merely the nominal, ultimate decision on questions of constitutional law."

In conclusion the speaker said: "Keep clearly in view what are the fundamental ends of government. I hope that not only you and I but all our people may ever remember that while good laws are necessary, while it is necessary to have the right kind of governmental machinery, yet that the all-important matter is to have the right kind of man behind the law. A good Constitution, and good laws under the Constitution, and fearless and upright officials to administer the laws—all these are necessary, but the prime requisite in our national life is, and must always be, the possession by the average citizen of the right kind of character. Our aim must be the moralization of the individual, of the government, of the people as a whole. We desire the moralization, not only of political conditions but of industrial conditions, so that every force in the community, individual and collective, may be directed toward securing for the average man, and average woman, a higher and better and fuller life, in the things of the body no less than those of the mind and the soul."

On Both Sides.

That fine artist, Legros, had always declined to learn English, but he took an inconsistent step, he had himself naturalized. The incident gave occasion to one of his best replies—and though an austere painter he was a jovial wit. "Well, Legros, how do you feel?" asked a friend on the morrow of the naturalization. "Why, particularly happy," Legros answered. "Yesterday I had lost the Battle of Waterloo and today I have won it."—London Chronicle.

Leap Year.

Leap year, it has been complained by some one, seems to have been named on the same principle as the "Meeting of the Waters" at Killarney, which is a place where two streams do not meet, but part. A leap year ought to be a year in which we jump over a day—a 364 day year. One explanation is that all the days after February 29 jump forward one day in the week more than usual. The Romans used to call it a "bissextile year," and the French still do so.

TO WORK FOR CIVIC GOOD

LEAGUE ORGANIZED TO PROMOTE THE WELFARE OF THE CAPITAL CITY.

ALL PARTIES REPRESENTED

George W. Rightmire is President and William Scarlett Vice President—Work is Outlined in Brief Address by H. E. Owen.

Columbus.—With permanent headquarters opened in room 503 in the chamber of commerce building, in charge of H. E. Owen, and a membership of 1,000 men with workers in every precinct in the city, the Civic Betterment league of Columbus has been rejuvenated and now ready for business.

"To agitate and mold public opinion in support of such men, measures and activities as will promote the best interest and welfare of the people of the city," is the purpose of the league. It will be a non-partisan political organization, confining its activities to municipal affairs and will take no part in the coming presidential, state or county campaign.

George W. Rightmire is president of the league, William Scarlett, Dr. Washington Gladden, vice presidents, H. E. Owen, secretary, and John P. Fergus, treasurer.

As evidence of the interest in the movement, more than 125 men, including Republicans, Democrats, Socialists and Prohibitionists, attended a luncheon at the new Rankin building, 22 West Gay street, Thursday evening, paid 50 cents a plate for their supper and subscribed in amounts varying from $1 to $25 for the support of the league.

Dr. Washington Gladden, one of the vice presidents of the league, delivered the address he recently made before the conference of Ohio municipalities in this city on "Government of Municipalities," and E. W. Doty, constitutional convention delegate from Cuyahoga county, discussed municipal government.

H. E. Owen outlined the plans for the league. Inasmuch as the city already has the initiative and referendum under the Crosser act and is promised a much larger degree of home rule by the constitutional convention, Mr. Owen said it was necessary to have some organization which could get an expression of the people on public questions, bond issues and tax proposals.

"We will have on file in the headquarters of the league the names of all the voters of the city and it will be possible to get an expression from them within 24 to 48 hours," said Mr. Owen.

"For instance," he said, "on such propositions as the extension of the municipal light plant, we will be able to get an expression of the people, or we may wage a campaign to help out the District Nursing association or the baby camp in the summer or carry on a campaign of any kind for the betterment of humanity."

NEWARK FIGHTS TYPHOID.

Newark.—Fifty cases were reported in the typhoid fever epidemic here in one day, and Dr. W. H. Knauss, city health officer, urged that all drinking water be boiled. It is not thought that the city water supply is contaminated, as, if this were the case, more sickness would have developed. The majority of the fever patients are in homes that depend upon wells for their drinking water.

FORTY PRISONERS ARE PAROLED

Columbus.—Among 40 paroled from the Ohio penitentiary by the board of administration are Harry E. Hayes, Cleveland broker, who was sentenced to serve five years on a charge of embezzlement, and John Mackie, of Columbus, formerly of the Columbus Sporting Goods company, sentenced to five years on a like sentence. The Hayes parole will go into effect July 1. Of those paroled, Fred Oechtel, of Lucas county, was sentenced for the longest term, 20 years. The application of Mark Slater, formerly state printer, was denied.

STATE PLUMBERS MEET.

Canton.—The twenty-first annual convention of the Master Plumbers' association of Ohio met here for a three-day session. President Sponseller delivered the address of welcome, followed by supplemental welcoming words from Mayor Turnbull, C. A. Dougherty, president of Canton Board of Trade and Attorney Thomas W. Turner. State President Harry Smith of Canton, Vice President John F. Dreiss of Cleveland and National President A. C. Eynon of Canton.

FOR GOOD ROADS BONDS.

Columbus.—The state good roads bond issue proposal received hearty indorsement at the hands of more than 75 township trustees, road superintendents and supervisors in session at the courthouse. The program as mapped out by the county commissioners also was approved. Nicholas Koehler of the state highway commissioner's office spoke to them on the subject of roads, as did Mr. Voschell, a member of the national highway department.

WINDER TO SHOOT FROM AIR.

Columbus.—Colonel C. B. Winder, inspector of rifle practice in the Ohio National Guard and crack marksman of the state, has gone to Lake Pontchartrain near New Orleans, where he is to make experiments in shooting from aeroplane and hydroplane. Winder has been very anxious ever since the use of the planes in war was proposed, to show what could be done in the way of sharpshooting while navigating the upper air with such machines.

COLUMBUS 100 YEARS OLD.

Columbus.—The one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Columbus was celebrated at a big mass meeting in the statehouse. In behalf of the city, Mayor Karb presided and made the address of welcome. He emphasized the fact that although Columbus is the seat of government, the other cities officially represented at the celebration—Marietta, Chillicothe and Zanesville—played important parts in the growth of the state.

"Columbus was born officially Feb. 14, 1812," said Mayor Karb, "and the actual site for the capitol building was laid out June 18 of that year. The first meeting of the general assembly in the new building was held Dec. 2, 1816."

Marietta, the oldest city in the state, was represented by D. J. Riley, constitutional convention delegate, who related historical facts and said that a partial survey of the state was made by George Washington. He expressed satisfaction over the selection of Columbus as the capital, saying that its geographical location was important.

"Columbus and Cincinnati are not lacking in the movement that will uplift humanity," said Stanley E. Bowdle, representing Cincinnati, the second seat of territorial government. "Ohio people are peculiarly constructed, but they win the confidence of all. It is because the constitution is a part of the permanent minds of the people. That is what makes us great," he said. Mr. Bowdle is a delegate to the constitutional convention.

According to an address prepared by Mayor James A. Cahill of Chillicothe, the first state capital, and read by H. H. Bennett, the majority of Chillicothe residents held offices when the capital was in that city. "Thousands of residents of Chillicothe are now willing to come to Columbus and hold offices, if the proper compensation is offered," he said.

D. A. Carr, vice mayor of Zanesville, the second capital of Ohio, said he could see no reason why the capital was removed from that city. "We are willing to do all we can, though," he added, "and are proud of the part we have had in the state's affairs."

The program was concluded by John A. Poland of Chillicothe, who urged greater enthusiasm in the centennial celebration next fall.

FIRE THREATENS NEWSPAPERS

Toledo.—The five-story structure of Lindow, Leibius & Gerchow, furniture dealers and manufacturers, located in the business district, has been destroyed by fire. The loss will probably reach $60,000, only half of which is covered by insurance.

When the fire broke out it spread rapidly and the entire block containing many business houses, the Toledo hotel, Toledo Blade and Toledo Times, was endangered. Smoke filled these establishments, but the flames finally were kept within the walls of the furniture plant.

The Maumee Rubber company, adjoining the factory of Lindow, Leibius & Gerchow, was flooded with water, and the loss from that source will be close to $20,000, according to one of the officials.

FINED FOR COCK FIGHTING.

Shawnee.—Eighty sport loving citizens, most of them business and professional men of southwestern Ohio, paid $8.50 each into the municipal treasury at New Straitsville for the gratification of their sporting proclivities.

They were among 311 of similar inclination who were enjoying a cock fight in the New Straitsville rink at night when the police and county deputies descended on them. There was a wild rush for doors, and when it was found they were all guarded there was an even wilder rush for windows, out of which the frightened men poured in cataracts.

The officers gathered in 80, but had to let the remainder get away, and these 80 contributed $680 toward keeping down the tax rate.

COLMBUS HAS $13,000 FIRE.

Columbus.—Fire in the plant of the Columbus Auto Brass company, 183 West Maple street, caused a loss of $3,000 on the building and $10,000 on the contents. The origin of the blaze is not known. Escaping gas added to the difficulty the firemen experienced in extinguishing the flames. Included in the stock which was destroyed and damaged were five automobiles.

The company manufactures equipment for automobile lamps and does repair work.

GAS KILLS TWO MEN.

St. Clairsville.—Earl Adkins and Ernest White of Bethesda, telegraph linemen, were asphyxiated by burnt gas in their hotel room at New Rochelle, N. Y., where they were working on construction gang. The bodies of both young men will be brought to their homes at Bethesda for burial.

AEROPLANE FLIGHTS PLANNED.

Dayton.—The master bakers of Ohio are arranging for aeroplane flights to be given at Simms Station this summer on the occasion of the annual meeting of the organization in this city May 21.

Toledo.—Charged with bigamy, John William Smythe, 50, of Toledo and until recently superintendent of Bruce Heating & Ventilating Co., was arrested at Chesterton, Ind.

J. W. [illegible] was elected president of the Central Ohio Farmers' institute at Westerville. Other officers are: Clinton H. Vance, vice president; A. E. I. Meacham, secretary; J. W. Everal, William [illegible] Beal, T. E. Barr, Joseph Edward, Mrs. Maud Frazier, Mrs. Frank P. Dill and Mrs. P. P. Ingall, board of directors.

Resolutions adopted oppose liquor license, favor the incorporation of the one per cent. tax limit in the constitution, and oppose any change in the law governing the manufacture of oleomargarine.

Raising Benevolent Funds

J. S. Kendall in the Religious Telescope

SOME things are fundamental in the organization of the local church, if they are to provide adequately for the missionary and other benevolent interests. Many churches are failing in this particular because they have no well-thought-out plans. They are not applying the same tact and business sense in this department that they use in their local church affairs.

It is not in the province of the stewardship commission to order the plan a church should use. Every church will pursue the plan which seems most desirable for its locality; but several years of experience and careful observation of churches of every kind leads us to believe that we can safely make some suggestions as to the requisites for success.

There must be organization first of all. This organization must have first a pastor with a vision. The relation of this servant of the church to the financial welfare of this department of the congregation's finance is unique and important. Especially is this true of the smaller churches.

Second, there must be a strong benevolent committee. This committee should be chosen wisely. It should have members who are interested in and are in touch with the various benevolent boards.

Third, there must be a co-operation of the various departments in the church. The Sunday school and Junior and Senior Christian Endeavorers should be enlisted.

"Benevolent Budget" Needed.

The plan is to provide a benevolent budget which will include all that the local church is to be called upon publicly for the regular benevolence of the congregation.

The benevolent committee is to direct an every member canvass of the entire church for an annual pledge on the weekly basis, to be paid weekly or monthly. Where practical this canvass should be separate from the canvass for the current expense budget. This committee should see that the pledged amount is fully adequate to meet the entire budget.

The offering is to be made in connection with the regular church offering, using for this purpose the duplex envelope, either the single or the double pocket, as the church may furnish. These envelopes should be numbered and dated and every member supplied with one for every Sunday of the year.

Every church should have a benevolent treasurer, who should be a member of the benevolent committee and in connection with the general steward should open all envelopes and make the proper entries in books provided for this purpose. He should make a remittance once a quarter to the parties designated to receive the benevolent funds. Quarterly statements should be furnished the benevolent committee for every member. This committee should distribute the same and look carefully after delinquents and collect unpaid pledges.

Preparation should precede the canvass to be made for benevolences. The church should give information as to the needs and work done by these various societies that are supported by this offering. The church should be called upon to give herself to prayer for these various interests.

Secure, if possible, some one who is thoroughly familiar with the plan to present it. He should show how it works elsewhere when worked. The church should provide those who are to do the work with the needed helps.

Have those who are to take the pledges thoroughly familiar with the system, so that they can give the needed information when desired.

In the financial awakening of a church, in the majority of cases, it is wise to have two distinct campaigns of agitation, one for church support, the other for church benevolences. The pledge getting may be worked in one canvass, using cards especially prepared for the double budget, having both subscription blanks on the same card. Experience is proving that separate canvasses are resulting in the greatest success. Where this is done, the people should be given a little time to breathe between the canvasses.

The Heavenward Side.

A little cloud in the sky makes a dark shadow on the fields and forests and the mountain sides. The observer at a distance beholds both the light and beauty of the cloud and the somberness of its shadow. If we could only get a distant viewpoint of our troubles we would often be greatly comforted. We would see that the clouds which cast their shadows on our lives are bright with mercy. "All things work together for good to them that love God." When mystery clouds our darkened path let us remember the heavenward side of our troubles. Real happiness is spiritual. It is the harmony of the soul with the will of God. This inward peace is largely the result of the shadows that try and discipline our faith.

All Need God.

Few men realize how much they need God. They feel their need of worldly good, and feel a need which worldly good cannot supply, but they are slow to turn to the right source for satisfaction. Thus saith the Lord: "Acquaint now thyself with him and be at peace, and thereby good shall come unto thee." "The young lions do lack and suffer hunger, but they that fear the Lord shall not want any good thing." "The Lord God is a sun and shield; the Lord will give grace and glory; and no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."—Christian Advocate.

The trouble with some preaching is that it is not expected to hit anything this side of the moon—and it don't.

A MIS-INFORMED EDUCATOR.

A public educator should first take the trouble to learn about a matter concerning which he expresses an opinion. This little formality appears to have been neglected by Dr. Felix Adler of the New York Ethical Culture Society. In an address delivered at Cincinnati he was reported by the Times-Star to have made the following remark:

"We can not govern by initiative and referendum entirely. We must retain the legislative authority."

Then further on in his address, he is reported to have said:

"If it is intended to substitute the initiative and referendum for the legislatures then the government will revert to the rule of the minority."

Does Dr. Adler know any place in the United States where advocates of the initiative and referendum want to abolish legislatures? It is needless to say that he does not. It is not proposed anywhere that all laws without exception shall be submitted to popular vote. Yet if Dr. Adler was correctly reported he must either be under the impression that that is what advocates of direct legislation propose, or he carelessly expressed himself in a manner that would give that impression to [illegible] persons listening to him.

If Dr. Adler does not know, he can learn on investigation that under the initiative and referendum [illegible] laws will be voted on by the people as a certain number of voters demand shall be so submitted. [illegible] will still do business subject only to the power of the people to veto any of their acts. If Dr. Adler has criticism to offer on this proposal he will be within his rights in offering, but he is not within them when he pulls apart a man of straw.

If he has been correctly reported then it would be ungracious to doubt that he will admit his error as openly [illegible] in a manner as he proclaimed it. [illegible] think otherwise would be to doubt his fidelity to the ethical principles he has so long been teaching. If he has not been correctly reported his devotion to ethical principles will lead him to disavow the statements attributed to him, lest an act of omission on his part be the means of leading astray voters who have confidence in his judgment.

The initiative and referendum is an issue in Ohio. The Constitutional Convention now in session will surely submit the question to the voters. No fair-minded man wants any of the voters to be influenced by arguments based on misconceptions of the question before the house or by misquotations attributed to one presumed to have influence.

MAKING DEMAGOGUES

Yes, the law now [illegible] in favor of the rich.

A few weeks ago Morse was pardoned [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] ing. Morse was [illegible]

[illegible] Friday [illegible] [illegible] year [illegible] The [illegible] was refused [illegible] board. For his part [illegible] had been a [illegible] penitentiary instead [illegible] We are not saying that [illegible] was not right [illegible] both [illegible] We have not the facts to enable [illegible] to say so.

What we are saying is that both these subjects of executive clemency are rich men, and that if they had not been no such clemency would have been extended to them in our opinion,—the list of lawyers who represented them shows that, Mark Slator is nothing but a poor ordinary grafter.

We are saying, further, that the people see these things and will draw conclusions from them.

And we are saying, still further, that because of them the Socialist vote in the country will be augmented by hundreds of thousands.

With a Republican President turning "malefactors of great wealth" loose for further depredations, and at the same time saying the people don't know enough to govern themselves, and a Democratic administration in Ohio inaugurating a like jail-delivery, after the head of it has gone to the constitutional convention and said the same thing in substance that the President said, and had lectured it on its duty to defy the people, Socialism is about the only road on which the man who thinks otherwise is permitted to travel.

And yet Mr. Taft talks about setting the masses against the classes. He is doing the setting. He is making opportunity for the demagogue.—Akron Times-Democrat.

This is the season of the year when mothers feel very much concerned over the frequent colds contracted by their children, and have abundant reason for it as every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, and paves the way for the more serious diseases that so often follow. ### Paper Plates for Animal Pets.

Using paper plates for animal pets will be found to be a good plan. Some people do not like the care to wash plates kept for dogs and cats, although they should be kept scrupulously clean and be used for no other purpose. Paper plates, which may be bought by the hundred for but little money, may be burned after they have been used. It is also a good idea to have a piece of zinc put on the back porch where the pets are likely to be fed and place the dishes on this for them. The zinc is easily cleaned.

Her Natural Occupation

Now and then the childish comment goes right to the heart of a difficult problem or situation. A little boy who longed to stand on the seat of a car and look out of the window was sternly reproved by his mother. "What a [illegible] mamma!" exclaimed [illegible] seated near. "Yes, I suppose she is nervous," was the [illegible] reply, "but then you see, she has to take care of her little boy and it keeps her busy." "Well, isn't that what she's for?" was the innocent [illegible] question.

Furniture Polish.

Many people do not know that lemon oil is the basis of all fine furniture polishes. A small bottle of polish usually costs 25 cents. You can buy a quart of crude lemon oil in bulk at a paint shop for 15 cents. For use on furniture proper dilute with one third turpentine, apply with a soft rag and you will have the finest polish you could buy. It is fine to use on hard wood, stained or painted floors. A quart of oil will last nearly two months.

Love Souls.

Deep hearts, sage minds, take life as God has made it. It is a long trial, an incomprehensible preparation for an unknown destiny. This destiny, the true one, begins for man with the first step inside the tomb. In the meanwhile love and suffer, hope and contemplate. Woe alas! to him who shall have loved only bodies, form, appearances! Death will deprive him of all. Try to love souls, you will find them again.—Victor Hugo.

Colds.

Numbers of people are suffering just now from irritating colds in the head. A very simple home remedy which brings almost instant relief is to pour half a pint of boiling water on to a dram of pulverized camphor, and to inhale the vapor for about ten to fifteen minutes. The annoying fits of sneezing, running eyes and heavy feeling in the head will quickly yield to this remedy.

Girls of Other Days.

TO EXPLORE THE DEAD SEA

German Expedition Has Started to Investigate Mysteries of That Body of Water.

Isn't it a remarkable fact that so little is known about the Dead sea—supposed scene of one of the greatest tragedies in all history? A German expedition is on its way thither, equipped with a large motor boat and modern sounding apparatus. Only two expeditions have preceded this one. The first was fitted out by an American, Lieutenant Lynch, in 1848, and was rather more thorough in its work than would have been expected before the days of motor craft and deep sounding apparatus. The second exploration was made in 1864 by the duke de Luynes, but did not compare in efficiency with the Lynch investigations.

To anybody who has seen the Dead sea at close quarters the [illegible] thing is that it does not contain any animal life. The Sea of Tiberias is prolific in fish, and the Jordan must carry large quantities of them into the Dead sea. What becomes of them? Is there an outlet? If so, where does it empty? Like the Caspian, it is lower than the Mediterranean.

Seen from the Mount of Olives on a clear day, due east, the Dead sea looks like a magnificent [illegible] water—very green under the [illegible], but near at hand one has the impression that he is gazing upon [illegible] filthy pool. Not only is the water saturated with salt and many other mineral substances, but a coating of bituminous, gluelike scum [illegible] the shore unless a strong wind has driven it into the lake. The [illegible] of the body, after leaving the water, is highly disagreeable.

Some people with sensitive skin suffer from a rash like the [illegible] of nettles, after taking a dip in the pond. Whence comes [illegible] scum? Likely as not there is a deposit of bitumen somewhere in the region, similar to that great [illegible] mystery on earth, the Trinidad lake of pitch. Or there may be [illegible] among these [illegible] on the western [illegible] sea, are the greatest [illegible] on earth.—Brooklyn Eagle.

One day, in the course of [illegible] I found myself in Mrs. [illegible] presence. That she was [illegible] keenly needed no telling. She had been reading some of the news [illegible] and as I approached she raised her eyes and exclaimed:

"Oh, Colonel Crook, what have we done?"

Shocked at her appearance I said: "I do not understand, madam. What do you mean?"

"What have we ever done," she exclaimed, "that we should be held up to ridicule by newspapers, and that the president be so cruelly attacked and even his little, helpless grandchildren be made fun of, for the country to laugh at?"

For a moment I did not know what to reply, and she continued:

"If this is the penalty for being president of the United States I hope the good Lord will deliver my husband from any further experience."—W. H. Crook in Memories of the White House.

Far-Sighted Editor

The [illegible] warmed up and the enterprising [illegible] paper man was hard [illegible] to accommodate the scores of [illegible] who flooded the printing office. His competitor, meeting him on the street, attempted to kid the [illegible] on his "commission market."

"You don't expect to increase your circulation this way?" sneered the rival.

"Here's the proposition," answered the editor. "I'm not [illegible] subscription. But [illegible] potatoes spuds at [illegible] cents [illegible] in exactly seven dollars [illegible] try rutabagas next."—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

NOT TIME FOR VISITS

ELSIE WOULDN'T HAVE CALLS IN BUSINESS HOURS.

Young Woman's Determination to Give Her Employer a Square Deal Might Estrange Friends But Assured Her Future.

Chudleigh was a small place, and therefore it was natural for everybody to talk about everybody else's business. So when Mr. Lambert failed, and then died of overwork and anxiety and a broken heart, and his eldest daughter, Elsie, was obliged to become the wage earner for the family, all Chudleigh sympathized and conjectured and compared notes. As for Mildred Rand, who was one of Elsie's most intimate friends, she made the case particularly her own.

"It's a shame that Elsie had to take a position as private secretary, especially to Mr. Larkin. Nobody's called on Mrs. Larkin, and as for him, well, 'ordinary' doesn't express his 'ordinariness.' She ought to have done better."

In vain Elsie tried to persuade her how lucky she really was with so little experience to have stepped into usefulness that was paid for liberally, and to have found an employer more than usually considerate. Mildred still regarded it as a misfortune.

"Elsie's miserable!" she declared, and as time hung heavy on her hands she proceeded to lighten her friend's slavery by frequent telephone calls, special delivery letters and long visits during office hours. At last the climax came when the telephone had rung for Elsie the third time in one morning. Mr. Larkin turned with a frown to his secretary, but seeing how his own annoyance had reflected on her face, and seeing, too, how tired and white he was, he said nothing, but in [illegible] turned and went out.

A little later Mildred fluttered into the office.

"Mildred," she said, "you are ruining my chances here. What opinion do you suppose Mr. Larkin will have of me, but not of my work if I allow myself to be interrupted this way?"

"But I don't understand," replied Mildred. "[illegible] Sure, [illegible] your value in the opinion of a man like Mr. Larkin to have your old friends treat you as if [illegible] Everybody [illegible] would give her ears to be [illegible] Mr. Larkin [illegible] saw him [illegible] the cotillion."

[illegible] he said [illegible] to hear [illegible] you see? [illegible] Mr. Lar[illegible] and [illegible] Don't [illegible] my work [illegible] to her paper [illegible]

[illegible] to take it that [illegible] and Mildred [illegible] off indignant.

As the door closed the keys of Elsie's typewriter began again to click busily. She did not know that Mr. Larkin, who had returned to his inner office through the private entrance, had overheard the close of the conversation. If she had known it she would have been glad to see the way in which he nodded and said to himself, "She'll do! She'll do!"—Youth's Companion.

"Granulate" Wouldn't Do.

Proud father of a 4-year-old daughter told us with such obvious hopes of seeing it in print, we can't bear to shatter his dreams.

The daughter is a precocious mite, and he likes to make mistakes in grammar and pronunciation sometimes, just to give her an opportunity to correct him. The other day he said in her hearing: "Yes, I granulated from the U. of M. in 1898."

"What's that?" asked Miss Daughter, pricking up her ears.

"I granulated," responded daddy.

"Why, no, you didn't, you graduated," persisted small daughter.

"No, sir, not I," reiterated the dad; "other people may have graduated but I granulated."

Daughter looked her scorn. "Well, if that's what you did," she flashed, "you'd better go back and learn some more. Then you'll graduate."

One of the funniest sad things we know is to hear a man much the worse for liquor telling his friends how good he is to his wife.—Detroit Free Press.

NICKNAMES ON THE RECORDS

They Appear Frequently in Legal Documents of the Early Days in New York.

Nicknames are not likely to go out of fashion so long as human nature remains what it is. Schoolboys will nickname each other, collegians will nickname their professors and soldiers will speak of their commanders as "Hell-Fire Bill," "Fighting Joe" or what not. In these days, however, it is not customary to spread such titles upon official records as was formerly the habit, according to the archives of several of our states.

In the Dutch records, in 1644, we have John Pietersen, alias "Friend John." In the Newtown purchase from the Indians, dated in 1656, one of the boundaries is "by a Dutchman's land called the Hans the Boore," and in the Bushwick patent, dated October 12, 1667, one of the boundaries is "John the Swede's meadow." In 1696, in the Kings county records, a man is named living at Gowanus as "Tunis the Fisher."

The common council of New York, in 1691, ordered fish to be brought into the dock "over against the city hall, or the house that Long Mary formerly lived in," and in the same year an order was passed "that Top-Knot Betty and her children be provided for as objects of charity."

The explanation of this custom, in many cases, was that the persons in question either had no family names or had forgotten them, so that the use of their generally accepted nicknames became a necessity. So numerous were the Smiths living upon Long Island that it was thought necessary to distinguish the various original families by some peculiar name. Thus we have the Rock Smiths, the Blue Smiths, the Bull Smiths and the Weight Smiths.—Harper's Weekly.

When Butt Lost a Shoe.

This is the sad narrative of how Archibald Willingham Butt, a major in the United States army, and military aide to the president, cast a shoe. The thing was done before the admiring gaze of a crowd, in a brilliantly lighted theater, without the aid of wires, and in perfect form. The president was to occupy a mezzanine box and Butt stood at the bend of the stairs leading to Mr. Taft's place. The electric light shone warmly on the red carpeted steps and toward that particular locality were turned the eyes of everybody in the house.

When the president entered the theater, Major Butt, in gold braid and with clanking sword, started a dash down the stairway. As he did so, the patent leather low-cut shoe that he wore on his left foot flew into the air like a boomerang, wavered, glided downward, and struck the steps, down which it rolled to the floor.

There stood the president. There stood Butt with one shoe off and one shoe on. Then the president laughed. So did the whole house—that is, everybody except Butt. He merely served as the butt of the—But why pursue it?—The Sunday Magazine.

Stole Easter Letters.

At last it has been discovered why so many letters from America to Austria-Hungary have gone astray in the last twelve months. The culprit is Heinrich Muller, a sorter at the Southern Railroad Station postoffice in Vienna, who was observed the other day to put an American letter into his breast pocket.

Muller was questioned, and driven into a corner he soon owned up. He first produced thirty-one American letters from various pockets, and a further search resulted in finding seventy-four more letters hidden under his shirt. He then confessed that he had been systematically robbing the mails since September last year and had opened four thousand letters from America, the majority of which inclosed dollar notes sent home by Austrians and Hungarians in America.

His greatest haul he made about Easter time, when people in America were sending presents to the old folks at home. They were chiefly sent to Hungary, Galicia and the southern provinces of the monarchy.

Fatal Street Music.

In casting up the score against street musicians it must never be forgotten that to them was due the untimely death of one of England's foremost humorists—John Leech. The strain of ceaseless application to his work rendered Leech abnormally sensitive to street noises of all descriptions, and street music in particular drove him frantic. The organ grinders, it is said, knew of his enmity toward them, and played within earshot of his studio simply to plague him. In a letter to Mr. Bass, M. P., who was framing a bill for the suppression of street noises, Mark Lemon, the editor of Punch, declared that beyond a doubt Leech's ultimately fatal malady, angina pectoris or breast pang, was due to the disturbance of his nervous system caused by the continual visits of street bands and organ grinders.—London Chronicle.

Of Course.

"I don't like these big affairs. Can't see any fun in inviting everybody to your party."

"Most assuredly not. Half the pleasure in giving a party consists in leaving somebody out."

Rara Avis.

"Have you ever written a book?"

"No."

"By George! That's glorious! We want you to join our club. There are only a few of us left."—Puck.

Flat Chest.

The occupation of a bookkeeper tends to bring the head and shoulders forward and cramp the chest. Try to sit more erect and learn to stand tall, and stretch the body to its full height. Many defects of the figure are due to bad postures, but by exercise many defects can be corrected.

All Painesville Coughing

Death from a gun-shot wound less to be feared than Death from pneumonia.

A great number of our city's men, women and children have colds and coughs today. The air seems to be fairly laden with these throat and lung troubles. There is great danger of contracting pneumonia or consumption from them. Nearly every case has its beginning in a cold or cough, and many people die as a result. Beware!

A sudden chill, stupefying fever, sore throat, hoarseness, running nose, racking cough, rattling and wheezing in chest, painful breathing, signify that your cold borders on pneumonia.

There are many remedies offered for colds, but there is one certain, reliable article that we know of—Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It is best for soothing and subduing the inflamed, sore, bronchial tubes and lungs. It wards off pneumonia. It checks cough at once. Cuts a cold short. Don't wait to see if your cold or cough wears away of itself, as pneumonia may come over night.

Test it first by sending a postal for a free sample. Address A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md. But, to have no delay, get a regular bottle of the remedy: price 25 cents, from your druggist today. This is the best advice we can give to avoid pneumonia. (ADV.)

MENTOR

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Smith have just been enjoying a visit from their niece, Miss Lottie Smith of Willoughby.

Rev. Mr. Hall of Cleveland again spoke at the Methodist church on Sunday, both morning and evening. Only one more Sunday remains before the new minister is expected from Boston. Doubtless he will come on trial, but if at all satisfactory the presiding Elder will appoint him to this charge for the remaining months of the year.

The Ten Cent Tea given by the Mentor W. C. T. U. last week and held at the home of Mrs. Henry Sandberg, was largely attended and a paper on Frances Willard which was read by Mrs. Grover of Willoughby, was enjoyed by all present.

Rev. Mr. Dye and Mrs. Dye had a short visit from their daughter, Mrs. Moffat of Cleveland last week. Mr. Dye seems to be slowly recovering his speech, but it will be a year or more before he is able to take charge of any church, if he ever is.

Some of the Florida friends write that it is too cold to go fishing down there, and so they sit 'round the fire and enjoy themselves best they can (same as folks do up here).

Mr. Charles Justus of Stockton, Ill., has been the guest of his cousin Mr. and Mrs. Charles Justus this past week, having been called here by the death of Mr. Sidney Justus, which occurred a short time ago.

The Miscellany Club meeting which was held with Miss Merkle, was one of the best of the year in spite of miserable weather. The papers read by Mrs. Frost, Mrs. Heath and Mrs. George Hoose were all excellent and the roll call showed very plainly that "Geography" ought to be studied next year, as no one present was "up" on all the capitals of all the states. Those members who learned them years ago by the concert method came out with flying colors.

Mr. and Mrs. Orlis Loomis who moved here from Burton last fall and have been occupying part of Miss Ellen Corning's house at the Center have decided to give up the grocery business and will move to Lime onto a farm in the spring. W. I. Swain is to take the delivery wagon of the Robert Case store and will take the place of Mr. Loomis in calling for orders, we understand, while Miss Edith Woodruff will still be to main stay there.

Mrs. Harlow Hulle of Painesville came out a few days ago to visit her mother, Mrs. Jackson, and sister Miss Hazel Sperri, but was taken sick with tonsilitis, and detained here for number of days in consequence.

Many of our people are ill with "grippy" colds among them are Mrs. Ben Warren, Mrs. Samuel Lytle, C. W. Sandberg, John Warren and several others.

Quite a number of the Mentor folk went to Painesville on Friday evening to attend the play given in the High School auditorium by the high school freshmen, and decided there was considerable talent among them.

John Tyler went to Cleveland yesterday, where he will be a patient at St. Vincent's hospital for what is hoped by friends will be only a short time. He was accompanied by his wife.

Ware Parmelee was in Painesville over Sunday with some friends of his enjoying the sights of the county seat.

Mrs. Clark Bradway spent a portion of last week in Girard, Pa., with her mother and sister, whose home is there.

Mr. Ed Baker returned home from the city one day last week, having been in a hospital there for a time and has come back very much improved in health, and much encouraged.

Mrs. Henry Merkle of Cleveland, together with her small son, has been staying some days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hart Mynderse where she too has been enjoying one of the fashionable colds.

The new mayor of the village has appointed Jack Northcult as road-supervisor, and surely if all his appointments are as good and as acceptable to the tax-payers, Mr. Thos. Cadle will make the best mayor ever in office here. Mr. Northcut has gotten right after the snow-drifts and has not seemed to think that the only thing in life was to hurry through the job so as to get home again by the fire.

Mrs. John Newell stopped off here a short time one day last week on her way back from New York City to Chicago where the Newells are spending the winter, and mentioned anticipating a trip out to California this spring before returning to their house here for the summer.

The next Miscellany Club being a Social affair, has taken on the form of a "luncheon" at the pleasant home of Mrs. A. H. Carleton on Wednesday of this week, and all the members are quite excited over the event.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Bauer are wintering in Cleveland with their daughter, Mrs. Louisa Bauer Yost and as Mr. Bauer has resigned his position here with the Lake Shore R. R., it is thought that probably they will hereafter make their home in the city.

We have just heard that a license has been granted to Charles Ritchardson of Willoughby to marry our Marion Galloway. Now we don't know 'bout this! So many of our nice Mentor girls are committing matrimony this winter, there won't be anybody left! Really, there has seemed to be a perfect epidemic of getting married and children that ought to have been in school for some years yet, have taken upon themselves such responsibilities that in some cases may mean divorce in the future; and a few of the old-fashioned folks here, don't believe in divorces one bit! In fact they think they are real wicked!

Some of our Mentor Knights of Pythias went to Painesville on Monday evening, to be the guests of their brother "Knights" of that place.

Mrs. Jack Northcut is visiting her sister, Mrs. Hill, in Bellevue, Ohio for a short time at present.

We understand that the Henry C. King place in West Mentor, now for a number of years owned by Bert Harris of New York, has just been sold to a Mr. Lowe of Cleveland, who purposes making a summer home here. This used to be called the "show" place in Mentor, and visitors from distance often mistook it for the home of Gen. Garfield, called upon the inmates thereof with great dignity, and in some instances could hardly be persuaded that they must journey down the street a little farther in order to find the Garfields. This place has ten acres in grove, vineyard and lawn, and a hundred or so would put it in good order.

Miss Jennie Yeomans has been spending a few days in Painesville as the guest of her friend Mrs. F. W. Collins.

The empty barber shop at the Center has again a person who can shave. Mr. Shafer of Cleveland has taken up the business, comes well recommended, and will attend promptly to all customers.

Mr. and Mrs. Welcome Hard[illegible] of Cleveland have been staying down here for a few days with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Bradway at the Center.

Mr. Arleigh Grace of Waite Hill was the guest of Mr. Henry Tyler a part of last week.

Mr. Fisher at the Center has been quite sick, we understand. The Clark Parker home has been occupied for some months by Mrs. Fisher and her family, as she was a sister of Mr. Parker, but we are informed that the place is to be sold this spring. There are said to be some thirteen acres, the buildings are all fine, there is a good gas well and all is in excellent condition as Mr. Parker had spared no expense to make of it a beautiful home.

Any person putting in electric [illegible] should be sure to use up every bit of the dollar's worth of allowance per month as he will be apt to be charged just the same whether he has used it all or not. But [illegible] more than [illegible] will be charged [illegible] for every [illegible] and every fraction of [illegible] on the [illegible]

The weather [illegible] stunt today [illegible] [illegible] walking [illegible] holding on by their elbows [illegible] trying to balance [illegible] on the street or [illegible] The [illegible] of maple sugar [illegible] getting out buckets and things, but there seems to be large doubt of frost being out enough to pay to do anything at present.

Claim the Oldest Language.

It is asserted by the Basques that their language, which bears a strong resemblance to certain North American dialects, is the oldest one in the world, and was spoken by Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden. They also boast that it is the most difficult of all languages to learn. According to a native legend, the devil lived among the Basques for seven years, and during that time learned only two words of their tongue, "bai" and "ez," "yes" and "no," and these two words he forgot within an hour of leaving the country.

Quinine in the Good Old Days

There is a whole lot of difference in the price of quinine now and 50 years ago. Then it sold for $5 and sometimes more an ounce. Now it can be bought for one-tenth of that amount. The $5 quinine was taken in syrup, baked apples, slippery elm or anything that would cover up the stuff and partly disguise the taste.—Madisonville Hustler.

Crowded Manhattan

In one small portion of Manhattan, N. Y., is a population greater than that of Arizona, or of Delaware, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont or Wyoming.

New Excuse for Husbands.

Husbands who spend their evenings hitting the high spots, encounter difficulties in finding the domestic keyhole and hang their boots on the gas fixtures may now explain that they have been afflicted with etheral asphyxia.—New York Tribune.

Reflection on Cholly

Cholly (handling his friend's revolver gingerly)—"I suppose now if this should go off while I'm holding it like this it would blow my brains out?" His Friend—"No, it wouldn't do that, but it would bore a hole clean through your head."

There is no better medicine made for colds than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acts on Nature's plan, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions, aids expectoration, and restores the system to a healthy condition. For sale by all dealers.

Bostonian Learns Something.

The folly of interfering with a newsboy was illustrated on Hanover street. A well-dressed man took to task a newsboy who was crying a fake extra and read the riot act to him in fine style. The boy said nothing, but when the man started to run for a North Station car he raised the cry of "Stop thief!" which was at once taken up by several of his companions, and in a moment an angry crowd was at the heels of the luckless one, who was forced to take a trip to the station house before the matter was cleared up.—Boston Journal.

Economics.

It has been found that the things that expand on solidifying, as water, freeze at a lower temperature when the pressure is increased, while the others freeze at a higher. When a substance that expands freezes under higher pressure than usual it has to exert more force to shove the pressure away, and consequently has to use up more of its heat energy, thus losing more heat and consequently becoming colder.

Feminine Curiosity.

Little Eleanor's pretty cousin wore a new engagement ring and the budding woman regarded the ring and the giver alike with reverent eyes. One night when the happy man has been invited to Eleanor's home for dinner, Eleanor, unconsciously gushing, burst forth with: "Oh, Mr. Blank, do please tell me. In all the love stories I've read the men propose so sudden. When it's coming on, does it—does it feel anything like a sneeze?"

That Shining Nose.

At the opera the young man who paid for the seats was engaged for a few tense moments in a study of a stunning woman of middle age who sat in the row in front. Then he turned to the girl at his right, and whispered: "Look at the lady in lavender, what is the matter with her nose?" The girl gave one glance of the shining "neb," then turned to her escort and whispered: "Enameled."

No Previous Employment

"You say, 'Rastus, that you want work for your wife," said Gunbusta, eyeing the husky darky before him from head to foot. "Was she ever employed before?" "No sir," replied the negro, nonchalantly, "dis am her first marriage."

Here is a message of hope and good cheer from Mrs. C. J. Martin, Boone Mill, Va., who is the mother of eighteen children. Mrs. Martin was cured of stomach trouble and constipation by Chamberlain's Tablets after five years of suffering, and now recommends these tablets to the public. Sold by all dealers.

The GIRL from His Town

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the [illegible] young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church, and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him.

CHAPTER V.

At the Carlton.

There are certain natures to whom each appearance of evil, each form of delinquency is a fresh surprise. They are born simple, in the sweet sense of the word, and they go down to old age never of the world, although in a sense worldly. If Dan Blair's eyes were somewhat opened at twenty-two, he had yet the bloom on his soul. He was no fool, but his ideals stood up each on its pedestal and ready to appear one by one to him as the scenes of his life shifted and the different curtains rose. He had been trained in finance from his boyhood and he was a born financier. Money was his natural element; he could go far in it. But woman! He was one of those manly creatures—a knight—to whom each woman is a sacred thing, a dove, a crystal-clear soul made to cherish and to protect, made to be spoiled. And in Dan were all the qualities that go to make up the unselfish, tender, foolish and often unhappy American husband. These were some of the other things he had inherited from his father. Blair, senior, had married his first love, and whereas his boy had been trained to know money and its value, how to keep it and spend it, to save it and to make it, he had been taught nothing at all about woman. He had never been taught to distrust women, never been warned against them; he had been taught nothing but his father's memory of his mother, and the result was that he worshiped the sex and wondered at the mystery.

With Gordon Galorey and the others he had ridden, shot better than they, and had played; but with Lady Galorey and the Duchess of Breakwater he was nothing but a child. As far as his hostess was concerned, on several occasions she had put to him certain states of affairs, well, touchingly. Dan had been moved by the stories of sore need among the tenants, had been impressed by the necessity of reforms and rebuildings, and on each occasion had given his hostess a check. She had asked him to say nothing about it to Gordon, and he had kept his silence. Dan liked Lady Galorey extremely; she was jolly, witty and friendly. She treated him as a member of the family and made no demands on him, save the ones mentioned.

In the time that he had come to know the Duchess of Breakwater she, on her part, had filled him full of other confidences. Into his young ears she poured the story of her disappointment, her disjointed life, from her worldly girlhood to her disillusion in marriage. She was beautiful when she talked and more lovely when she wept. Dan thought himself in love with the Duchess of Breakwater. His conversations with her had brought him to this conclusion. They had motored from Osdene Park together, and he had been extremely taken with the pleasure of it, and with the fact of their real companionship. Two or three times the words had been on his lips, which were fated not to be spoken then, however, and Dan reached the Gaiety still unfettered, his duchess by his side. And then the orchestra had begun to play "Mandalay," the curtain had gone up and Letty Lane had come out on the boards. But her apparition did not strike off his chains immediately, nor did he renounce his plan to tell the duchess the very next day that he loved her.

When with sparkling eyes Lady Galorey raved about "Mandalay," Dan listened with eagerness. Everybody seemed to know all about Letty Lane but he alone knew from what town she had come!

They went for supper at the Carlton after the theater.

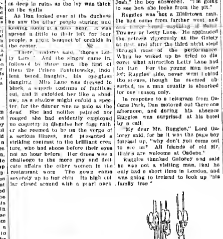
"Letty," Lady Galorey said, "tells it herself how the impresario heard her sing in some country church—picked her up then and there and brought her over here, and they say she married him."

Dan Blair could have told them how she had sung in that little church that day. Dan was eating his caviare sandwich. "Her name then was Sally Towney," he murmured. How little he had guessed that she was singing herself right out of that church and into the London Gaiety Theater! Anyway, she had made him 'sit up'!" It was a far cry from Montana to the London Gaiety. And so she married the greasy Jew who had discovered her!

Dan glanced over at the Duchess of Breakwater. She was looking well, exquisitely high bred, and she impressed him. She leaned slightly over to him, laughing. He had hardly dared to meet her eyes that day, fearing that she might read his secret. She had told him that in her own right she was a countess—the Countess of Stainer. Titles didn't cut any ice with him. At any rate, she would be able to "buy back the old farm"—that is the way Dan put it. She had told him of the beautiful old Stainer Court mortgaged and hung up with debts, as deep in ruins as the ivy was thick on the walls.

As Dan looked over at the duchess he saw the other people staring and looking about at a table near. It was spread a little to their left for four people, a great bouquet of orchids in the center.

"There," Galorey said, "there's Letty Lane." And the singer came in, followed by three men, the first of them the Prince Poniatowsky, indolent, bored, haughty, his eye-glass dangling. Miss Lane was dressed in black, a superb costume of faultless cut, and it enfolded her like a shadow, as a shadow might enfold a specter, for the dancer was as pale as the dead. She had neither painted nor rouged; she had evidently employed no coquetry to disguise her face, rather she seemed to be on the verge of a serious illness, and presented a striking contrast to the brilliant creature who had shone before their eyes not an hour before. Her dress was a challenge to the more gay and delicate affairs the other women in the restaurant wore. The gown came severely up to her chin. Its high collar closed around with a pearl necklace, from her ears fell pearls, long, creamy and priceless. She wore a great feathered hat, which, drooping, almost hid her small, pale face and her golden hair. She drew off her gloves as she came in and her white, jeweled hands flashed. She looked infinitely tired and extremely bored. As soon as she took her seat at the table intended for her party Poniatowsky poured her out a glass of champagne, which she drank off as though it were water.



"She Knows How to Make Herself Conspicuous," Said the Duchess.

"Gad," Lord Galorey said, "she is a stunner! What a figure and what a head, and what daring to dress like that!"

"She knows how to make herself conspicuous," said the Duchess of Breakwater.

"She looks extremely ill," said Lady Galorey. "The pace she goes will do her up in a year or two."

Dan Blair had his back to her, and when they rose to leave he was the last to pass out. Letty Lane saw him and a light broke over her pallid face. She nodded and smiled and shook her hand in a pretty little salute. If her face was pale her lips were red, and her smile was like sunlight, and at her recognition a wave of friendly fellowship swept over the young man, a sort of loyal kinship to her which he hadn't felt for any other women there and which he could not have explained. In warm approval of the actress' distinction, he said softly to himself: "That's all right; she makes the rest of them look like thirty cents."

CHAPTER VI.

Galorey Seeks Advice.

Blair did not go back at once to Osdene Park. He stopped over in London for a few days to see Joshua Ruggles, and so remarked for the first time the difference between the speech of the old and the new world. Mr. Ruggles spoke broadly, with complete disregard of the frills and adornments of the King's English. He spoke United States of the pure, broad, western brand, and it rang out, it vibrated and swelled and rolled, and as Ruggles didn't care who heard him, nothing of what he had to say was lost.

Old Mr. Blair had left behind him a comrade, and as far as advice could go the old man knew that his Dan would not be bankrupt.

"Advice," Dan Blair, senior, once said to his boy, "is the kind of thing we want some fellow to give us when we ain't going to do the thing we ought to do, or are a little ashamed of something we have done. It's an awful good way to get cured of asking advice just to do what the fellow tells you to at once."

During Ruggles' stay in London the young fellow looked to it that Ruggles saw the sights, and the two did the principal features of the big town, to the rich enjoyment of the Westerner. Dan took his friend every night to the play, and on the fourth evening Ruggles said: "Let's go to the circus or a vaudeville, Dan. I have learned this show by heart!" They had been every night to see "Mandalay."

"Oh, you go on where you like, Josh," the boy answered. "I'm going to see how she looks from the pit."

Ruggles was not a Blairtown man. He had come from farther west and [illegible] Towney or Letty Lane. He applauded the actress vigorously at the Gaiety at first, and after the third night slept through most of the performance. When he waked up he tried to discover what attraction Letty Lane had for Dan. For the young man never left Ruggles' side, never went behind the scenes, though he seemed absorbed, as a man usually is absorbed for one reason only.

In response to a telegram from Osdene Park, Dan motored out there one afternoon, and during his absence Ruggles was surprised at his hotel by a call.

"My dear Mr. Ruggles," Lord Galorey said, for he it was the page boy fetched up, "why don't you come out to see us? All friends of old Mr. Blair's are welcome at Osdene."

Ruggles thanked Galorey and said he was not a visiting man, that he only had a short time in London and was going to Ireland to look up "his family tree."

"There are nae hundred acres of trees in Osdene," laughed Galorey; "you can climb them all." And Ruggles replied:

"I guess I wouldn't find any O'Shaughnessy Ruggles at the top of any of 'em, my lord. The boy has gone out to see you all today."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

SO THEN HE TOOK ANOTHER

How the Pretty Girl Kept Her Word When Threatened With a Kiss.

With impudent daring the dashing young man, having carried on a merry conversation until the timid creature had not noticed how far they were straying from the house, turned to her and said:

"I believe I will kiss you."

"Sir!" she exclaimed haughtily, drawing herself up with an air of regal disdain. "How dare you?"

"It isn't a question of courage, it's a question of taste," he smiled nonchalantly.

"I positively forbid you to do such a thing!" she declared.

"And what good does your forbidding do?" he argued. "We are fully a mile from any one. We are away out here in the meadows. Listen to the joyous trilling of yonder birds that are billing and cooing. All nature suggests love-making, and—"

"Sir, you are positively rude!" she interrupted, stamping her little foot.

"I should be rude, indeed, not to wish to kiss so pretty a girl in such lovely surroundings," he said, placing his arm firmly about her slender waist.

"I will not let you kiss me!" she asserted.

"You will not?" he laughed easily. "How will you prevent me? I am stronger than you; you cannot get away from me."

"I can still scream, thank heaven!" she answered determinedly.

With no further argument he placed his iron hand under her dimpled chin, elevated it to the proper angle and kissed her.

True to her word, she exclaimed, "Thank heaven!"—Judge.

Some Useful Hints for the Girl Who Sews

Girls who have been taking domestic science courses at fashionable boarding schools declare that to get along without a variety of dainty aprons is an impossibility, especially if the embryo housekeeper wishes to preserve the fronts of her frocks from spots.

One girl who sews almost as well as she cooks is making several aprons of plain lawn cut into half ovals, scalloped all round with a color and embroidered with washable floss in outline or shadow stitch. By this means she expects to have luncheon pinafores to accord with every house frock—white embroidered with pale blue, pink, mauve or yellow and dark blue; green and brown relieved with white.

Charming little aprons of half oval, half round, diamond or oblong shape are to be made of finest nainsook, scalloped all round and hand embroidered with white in imitation of the work done in the Madeira islands.

All of the ruffle bordered aprons are fascinating, particularly the round ones which have bowknot and leaf designs embroidered on the lower curve and girdle belts which fit firmly, have embroidered fronts and tie in a little bowknot at the back. The same model is pretty when the hand embroidery and ruffle are omitted and the hemstitched edge is finished with an inch wide frill of Valenciennes or Cluny lace.

Bretelle aprons are always coquettish and nearly always become a slender, girlish figure, but they are more difficult to make than pinafores, because the center panel with its square little bib should be carefully curved to fit into the figure at the waist line and on to it should be attached the narrower side panels, which are shaped above the waist into straps crossing the shoulders and then across the top of the back, where they are joined, so that the apron may be adjusted by drawing the bretelle portion over the head and then securing it about the waist with pink, blue or white satin ribbon sashes.

Nearly all of the bretelle aprons have cunning little hip pockets headed with fine muslin embroidery or lace edging to match the bordering of the pinafore bib and shoulders, and if a girl wishes to make this sort of luncheon apron exceptionally elaborate she may have the bretelles entirely of all over lace and let them run into narrow panels from the waist to the lower edge.

Practical aprons, meaning the sort which are to be put on over the frock when preparing salad dressing and really mussy concoctions, are made of striped galatea, percale, gingham or madras, and are put on as easily as is an ulster, for they fasten with flat buttons down the left front from shoulder to hem, have big sewed in sleeves with band cuffs and a deep patch pocket on each hip. To make one take as a model any narrow skirted one piece house frock which closes in front, allowing, however, for slightly wider seams and wider shoulders, so that the garment will go over even a velvet frock if desired.

It has been wisely said that whoever has once mastered the art of the simpler forms of Irish crochet work has at command an endless variety of ways in which to utilize the product of the tiny steel hook. Above all, the roses of fine imported Irish lace thread can be applied in so many dainty and original ways that the girl of wisdom finds them an invaluable resource when designing for herself those small accessories which give the keynote of a costume.

For articles of fine linen or of any wash material the roses of the Irish thread are, naturally, the sort to use. But on silk or cloth those crocheted from a twisted silk made charming and unique variants from passementerie. A girl who loves to experiment with such useful arts has just finished for herself a little girdle which is the admiration of all who see it. The foundation at the back is a shaped piece of crinoline or some such stiffened lining about eight inches wide. This is covered with the white crepe de chine of which the girdle is made and trimmed with "up and down" rows of white silk roses. To each end of the shaped back section the soft front pieces of the girdle are shirred, and these are long enough to join in a graceful knot in front and to fall sashlike almost to the edge of the dress skirt, where they are finished with a triplet of silken crocheted blossoms apiece, from the center of each of which hangs a tassel of the same white silk.

This same girl has crocheted more elaborate motifs of pale rose silk for her sister's pet dancing frock of the same shade and a set of handsome black silk—unlike anything to be found in the shops—for a well beloved aunt, whose dinner gown they will shortly adorn most attractively.

Gloves Are Larger.

Golf, tennis and other athletic exercises have caused the hands of girls and women to grow larger than formerly. Despite that fact they still wear the same size gloves. The reason was explained the other day by a dealer in women's gloves. He said that gloves were made to deceive not so much the wearer as the persons who looked at them. The gloves are made in so-called "full sizes," and when a woman asks for a 5¼ glove, knowing that her hand is too large to get in it, the saleswoman invariably hands her out a 5½ glove, and it always fits. The extra sizes have been made to please the women and perhaps to get their trade. Though young girls who play golf, and who have rather large hands, gloat in the fact that they wear a No. 7 glove, they usually long for smaller sized gloves when they get older, and when they inquire for them in the glove shop they invariably get them.

Odd Taste.

Mother (to inquisitive child)—"Stand aside. Don't you see the gentleman wants to take the lady's picture?" "Why does he want to?"—Life.

For Baby's Pillow

This pretty word embroidered on a sheer linen cover will make a dainty pillow for the baby. The flowers should be worked solid and the stems in the over and over stitch, very closely and evenly done. Mercerized cotton No. 30 will be suitable.

IN VOGUE

Plain, flat revers will be a predominating feature in spring suits.

Taffetas will be used a great deal in millinery during the coming season.

Draped toques of satin and changeable taffeta are extremely fashionable.

The liking for glowing red tones is evidenced in the newest gowns from Paris.

Pearl decorations have a wonderful popularity; they "belong" everywhere.

First hats for spring are either small and close or large and high trimmed.

There is a new cutaway coat, 35 inches long, single breasted, perfectly plain sleeves and very snug in fit.

There is a new sleeveless coat with a cape back crossing to front like a fichu. Puffings and ruchings of taffeta are used on frocks or serge.

Fichus continue to be fashionable. Tulle, either plain or fringed, is the favorite material for making these pretty, cloud-like trimmings. They are used frequently to trim negligees of crepe de chine or soft satin.

Evening Wraps.

While evening wraps are handsome in every way, their very grandeur makes them difficult to wear. To carry off the garment well, therefore, one must be very tall or at least erect in bearing, majestic without stiffness. So it is the woman who sets off the garment and shows its good points, and I may say its cost since the materials employed naturally make the price high. But high price does not seem to make things prohibitive this winter, for never were women better dressed and never did raiment in every department cost so dear. It is so with everything, hats, plumes, silks, linings, furs, handwork and embroidery of every kind.

The opium traffic from India into China is to be decreased gradually until 1917, when it will cease entirely.

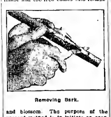
BRINGING TREES AND SHRUBS INTO FLOWER DURING WINTER

Purpose of Method Is to Imitate Natural Process in Midwinter at Which Time Fresh Growth Will Have Special Value—Secure Boughs During Very Severe Weather.

Showing Buds Developed.

To the gardener, the cold months of the year must always mean a cessation in the active work of plant culture. Any scheme which will enable the enthusiast to pursue his pastime during the winter is sure of a welcome. The new method of bringing the branches of trees and of shrubs into flower at this time is one which promises to make a valuable addition to the resources of the indoor gardener. Its very simplicity must appeal to everyone, while the decorative possibilities of the system cannot fail to attract all flower admirers.

In order to understand the purpose of the treatment the consideration of a few natural science points may not be out of place. It is well known to botanists that all deciduous trees and shrubs bring their next season's growth to a very advanced stage during the fall. Indeed, all leaves and flowers are quite ready for the spring folded up on a very small scale beneath the protecting bud cases. Now the resumption of growth when it does take place, is largely due to the fact that the plant starts to draw water from the soil and the fluid rising to the buds swell out the undeveloped tissue and the tree comes into foliage and blossom. The purpose of the present method is to imitate as nearly as possible this natural process in midwinter at which time the fresh growth will have a special value.



Removing Bark.

Nowadays when flowering trees and shrubs are so common in our gardens there will be no difficulty in finding subjects for treatment. All the ornamental plums, apples, cherries and currants, to mention only four kinds, are perfectly adapted, whilst the wild species of these fruits which are to be found in the hedge-rows may be made equally useful. Bright green foliage is always very acceptable and branches of trees with large buds, such as chestnuts and sycamores, may be included in the collection.

The season of the year when the system may be most successfully practiced is during the months of January and February. Strange as it may seem, the buds always expand more readily if they have been subjected to a week or two of frost, so during a spell of severe weather is a good time to secure the boughs. It is, of course, a matter of importance to be able to select the boughs of the trees which are well budded for blossom. Mostly the flower buds will be fatter than those producing only foliage.

In cutting the branches from the trees it is a matter of some importance to make a clean severance, seeing that torn or ragged fractures prevent a free development on the part of the twigs. The most shapely branches should be selected and all along it should be borne in mind that the sprays are to be used in vases for decorative purposes. In order to enable the boughs to absorb water as freely as possible it is a good plan to remove some of the bark on the lower portion of the stem. This is best cut away with a sharp knife in alternate slices, as is shown in the illustration. Now secure a number of large bowls into which some hot—not scalding—water has been poured. Tie all the branches to be treated into bundles and place the ends of the boughs in the water, at once removing the whole thing to a dark cupboard.

This emersion in hot water seems to have the curious tonic effect of stirring the sleeping buds so that when brought out into the light they will be able to commence active growth. Of course the method is one often followed by florists when they wish to revive drooping flowers.

It is just as well to leave the branches in the dark cupboard for twenty-four hours, although naturally the water will have become cold long before this interval has elapsed, but this does not matter. It is a question for the individual to decide whether the boughs shall be grown to perfection in the vases or whether they shall only be placed in the ornamental receptacles after they have fully developed. Some people do not find the leafless branches inartistic and these are, of course, soon adorned with expanding buds which give a delightful "spring" feeling to the apartment.

Whichever course is adopted the boughs should be placed at once in pure water which it is necessary should be kept in a fresh condition. To this end it is not a bad plan to place a lump of charcoal in each vase or bowl or change the water every day. It is now desirable that the branches should be placed in a fully light position, if possible in front of a window where they will get all the sunshine.

The speed of growth will be entirely dependent upon the warmth of the room. If the temperature is high the buds will commence to swell very rapidly. Soon the expanding flowers and leaves will be plainly visible and at this stage dust is harmful to the young growth.

If possible, the boughs should be protected when any sweeping is going on in the apartment, and in any case the shoots will be benefited if they are sprinkled occasionally with tepid warm water. It should be pointed out in conclusion, however, that the directions emphasized in the foregoing lines should be followed if the best results are desired.

Fanning Mill for Seed.

You should never fail to use a good fanning mill, selecting only the heaviest and plumpest kernels of good body for sowing, and avoid planting shriveled and warped kernels.

Wheat, oats, barley and rye seed may be best prepared by fanning mills, which separate by size and by weight by means of screens and wind blast. A good fanning mill properly used, will more than pay for itself in a single season.

Japs Learn Sheep Industry.

During the past two or three years Japan has sent some of its expert stock growers to America to learn how to raise sheep and it is understood that sheep raising will be extensively engaged in over there.

Water for the Cows.

If the cows are to get their water from a tank outside the barn, the tank heater should be in active operation all the time.

Apples From Nova Scotia.

Nova Scotia sends away over 1,000,000 barrels of apples during the season.

WOODEN SHOE FOR THE PLOW

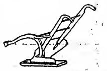
Piece of Board 30 Inches Long and 12 Inches Wide Protects Sharp Edge From Stones.

When farmers start to plow in the spring or fall it is usually the custom to load the plow or plows into the wagon or on to a stone boat in order to take them to the field.

Many people hitch their teams to the plow and drag them, writes J. G. Beattie in the Wisconsin Agriculturist. This, however, is a bad mistake, because the plow edge is not only spoiled by scratching the occasional stones that lay along the road, but the whole plow is jarred as it swings from one side to the other.

To save the time of bothering with a stoneboat, or the exertion of lifting the plow on to a wagon each time it has to be moved, we take a board 30 inches long and 12 inches wide. This board is beveled out to the center so that when the plow rests upon the board lengthwise and is pulled forward, the plowlay grips the board and holds it there in place. The under side of the front edge should be rounded off with a draw shave.



A Shoe for the Plow.

Dollar Is Not Everything.

Every business farmer has to look out for the dollars. They come handy at certain times. But in looking at the business side, don't forget to see the beauty of a fine pasture or a well turned animal. There is lots of pleasure in handling good crops or good stock.

THE LOGGERS AT WORK

WITH the lumber jacks in many sections of the United States the winter is the busy season of the year, the harvest time, as it were, and they work almost as energetically to "get out" the requisite number of logs during the interim of snow and ice as does the farmer to get in his grain ere the autumn rains set in. Only, to be sure, the lumbermen are not menaced by quite the same uncertainty as to weather conditions as is the farmer in autumn, for in many of the northern lumber camps it is almost unheard of for a season to embody less than five months of sledding, that is, five months of continuous snow and ice.

In the logging regions of the Pacific Northwest, of course, where may be found perhaps the greatest of nature's lumber storehouses, the winter does not make the marked difference in conditions that it does in the forests of some other sections of the country. In western Oregon and Washington there is so little snow, and that of such a transient character, that the lumbermen cannot depend upon it as they do elsewhere to help them with their work. But, on the other hand, the Puget Sound and Columbia River country is free from that severe weather which renders it imperative for lumber jacks elsewhere to constantly have a care lest they suffer from frostbitten hands and feet. Similarly in the south, where cypress is king and where much of the logging is done in swamps, the winter prescribes no change of method or equipment for the twentieth century logging crews. In what we might term the traditional seats of the lumber industry, however, winter puts a very different face on the whole matter of getting out the logs and transporting them to the sawmills that transform them into the marketable form known to the average consumer. In Maine, in northern New York and Canada, in Michigan, in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas the summer is in one sense a vacation season for the lumber jacks. At least it is an interlude of restricted activity and the lumbermen, unlike some other members of the community, welcome the passing of the long, bright days and the advent of the Ice King. The explanation of this state of affairs is found, of course, in the fact that snow and ice afford the material for the ideal arteries of communication in the lumber regions. The felled trees may be conveyed to market more quickly and more economically over snow roads and ice trails than by any other method known to the industry. Indeed, there are lumber regions where without these factors—and their sequel, the "big thaw" in the spring—it would be virtually impracticable to get the timber to market at an expense that would justify operations.

The snow and ice, important as is their aid, are not the only influences that are now tending to make the lumbermen concentrate their activities in the fall and winter. Of late years a constantly increasing number of our lumbermen have been brought to see the wisdom of adopting what is known as conservative lumbering—that is, lumbering which treats a forest as a working capital whose purpose is to produce successive crops and which calls for work in the woods that will leave the standing trees and young growth as nearly unharmed as possible. Well, the minute a man becomes a convert to conservative lumbering he is certain to become an advocate of the cold season as the proper time for carrying on all the operations of lumbering.

To make this point clear it may be pointed out that the difference between practical work under ordinary methods of lumbering and under conservative lumbering is principally in the selection of the trees to cut, in the felling of these trees and in the first part of their journey from the stump to the mill. It is an established fact that the amount of harm done to a forest by the cutting depends considerably upon the season of the year when the work in the woods is carried on. Much less damage will result to the young growth and to the trees left standing if the lumbering is done after the growing season is over instead of being allowed to go on in the spring and summer while the bark is loose and the leaves and twigs are tender. Moreover, if there be a heavy blanket of snow on the ground, a tree, after it has been felled with ax or saw, stands a chance of crashing to earth with less damage than it would sustain at another season of the year. The tree trunk that falls on a bed of snow is not likely to split or to break as would otherwise be the case when the forest monarch comes down on rocky, uneven ground.

After all, however, it is in the various stages of the transportation of the logs that the snow and ice yield the greatest aid. First of all it simplifies the operation of skidding or dragging the log lengths from the depths of the forest. This work was formerly done by horses, mules or oxen, and is yet to some extent, but for the most part the modern donkey engine has supplanted all other forms of energy for skidding. Supposedly the skidding operation is designed only to get the logs out of the forest depths where no log-carrying vehicle could be operated without infinite trouble and damage to the standing timber. However when the Snow King is in command it sometimes happens that a similar method may be employed for moving the logs to the rollway or storage yard, perhaps a mile or two distant, where the logs are held to await the spring freshets or are loaded aboard railroad cars that convey them to the mills. For this long-distance log trailing there is employed a more powerful type of engine than the donkey above referred to and a stronger wire cable is supplied. The pathway for the logs is an icy boulevard—kept in condition by "flooding" as circumstances require—and this becomes so smooth from the polishing process afforded by the passage of the logs that it is practicable to transport at each operation not merely a single log but whole "strings" of logs attached end to end by means of stout chains.

At some lumber camps it is the practice to employ giant sleds to carry the logs on the first stage of their journey from the forest to the sawmill. Of course snow is requisite to the satisfactory operation of these sleds, but when a "path" has been worn for the sled runners along the icy roads the vehicles traverse the line thus furrowed with a facility suggestive of that with which a locomotive glides along the steel rails. There is, of course, a minimum of resistance to the progress of a sled along such a glazed surface and in many instances log loads of almost incredible weight are thus transported over the glistening surface. A "new wrinkle" that characterizes winter practice in some of the up-to-date logging districts consists of what might be denominated an ice automobile for log carrying. Powerful traction engines have been used for some time past on the Pacific Coast to draw trains of log-laden trucks out of the forest, but this new form of commercial motor vehicle goes even these marvels one better. In principle, the ice automobile is not very different from the ordinary commercial motors which are now employed for delivery work in every city. However, the self-propelled adjunct of winter logging is provided with sharp teeth which it sinks into the snow or ice as it progresses, thus insuring steady progress with no slipping or sliding on the smooth surfaces.

But because the winter finds the lumber jacks very busy in a temperature that ranges as low as 20 to 40 degrees below zero it must not be supposed that they do not find time and opportunity for plenty of fun in the isolated camps where they spend the season. A logging camp may be anywhere from five to twenty-five miles from the nearest store and postoffice, but the "jacks" are kept liberally supplied with fresh butter, fresh meat, smoking and chewing tobacco, etc. A graphophone or phonograph is an almost inevitable adjunct of the isolated logging camp and the lumbermen manage in one way and another to get records of the latest song "hits" from time to time.

The average logging camp has two main structures—the bunk house where the loggers sleep in bunks arranged in tiers, and the cook shanty where the food is cooked and served. To call this eating hall a shanty is, however, something of a misnomer, since the word is likely to suggest a modest hut, whereas the cook shanty of an up-to-date logging camp must be large enough to accommodate a crude dining table perhaps 40 feet in length. The cooking in a logging camp is usually done by a man and wife (almost invariably German), who hire out as professional cooks and who have the help of two masculine assistants. They work over a range that is 10 feet long and on top of which stands a coffee urn that holds as much as a barrel, a meat boiler that holds 100 pounds of pork or beef, and a can in which there can be boiled at one time more than a bushel of potatoes. Below are the ovens where are baked some 10 to 15 square feet of biscuits every day. In some camps heavy stoneware is provided for use on the table, but at a majority of logging establishments each of the 50 to 150 men is simply allowed a spoon, plate and cup of tin and a knife and fork of steel.

Ingenious Idea of Chinese

Shuangh chi'h-er, although the name may sound like a disease, is not a form of writer's cramp. On the contrary, "their" purpose is to prevent it. The words Chi'u-er are two iron balls, an inch or so in diameter, which settle in the right hand of every Chinese man of letters for hours each day, one being revolved about the other until they are worn bright. They are just large enough to make a handful, and the action of shifting one about the other brings the fingers into play and lends them that suppleness and digital dexterity which is necessary to the manipulation of the Chinese lettering-pen or fine-pointed brush. Oh what a simplicity!—September Atlantic.

Could Not Sleep in Quiet.

A landscape architect was showing a photograph of an elevated structure in Itemborg. "Mothers put their babies to sleep under this," he explained. "The roadbed is ballasted so that the trains make no noise." We can beat that in the South End. Babies brought to the day nursery could not sleep in quiet rooms. So they were laid away in cots next to the game rooms, and in the general racket they slumbered the sleep of the innocent. The secret was that they had been born in houses neighboring the elevated railway. These are the short and simple annals of the poor.—Boston Transcript.

FLAX GROWING IS PROFITABLE

WESTERN CANADA FARMERS BECOMING RICH IN ITS PRODUCTION.

So much has been written regarding the great amount of money made out of growing wheat in the prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Western Canada, that many other products of the farms are overlooked. These provinces will always grow large areas of wheat—both spring and winter—and the yields will continue to be large, and the general average greater than in any other portion of the continent. Twenty, thirty, forty, and as high as fifty bushels per acre of wheat to the acre—yields unusual in other parts of the wheat growing portions of the continent—have attracted world-wide attention, but what of oats, which yield forty, fifty and as high as one hundred and ten bushels per acre and carry off the world's prize, which, by the way, was also done by wheat raised in Saskatchewan during last November at the New York Land Show. And then, there is the barley, with its big yields, and its excellent samples. Another money-maker, and a big one is flax. The growing of flax is extensively carried on in Western Canada. The writer has before him a circular issued by a prominent farmer at Saskatoon. The circular deals with the treatment of seed flax, the seeding and harvesting, and attributes yields of less than 20 bushels per acre to later seeding, imperfect and illy-prepared seed. He sowed twenty-five pounds of seed per acre and had a yield of twenty-nine bushels per acre. This will probably dispose of at $2.50 per acre. Speaking of proper preparation of seed and cultivation of soil and opportune sowing, in the circular spoken of there is cited the case of a Mr. White, living fourteen miles south of Rosetown, "who had fifteen acres of summer fallow a year ago last summer, upon which he produced thirty-three bushels to the acre, when many in the district harvested for want of crop. Now, there can be no proper reason advanced why such a crop should not have been produced on all the lands of the same quality in the adjacent district, provided they had been worked and cared for in the same manner. This year (1911) the same man had one hundred acres of summer fallow, had something over 3,800 bushels of wheat. He also had 1,800 bushels of oats and 300 bushels of flax."

There are the cattle, the horses, the roots and the vegetable products of Western Canada farms, all of which individually and collectively deserve special mention, and they are treated of in the literature sent out on application by the Government agents.

Appleton, Wis.—"I take pleasure in writing you an account of my sickness. I told a friend of mine how I felt and she said I had female trouble and advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she had taken it herself for the same trouble with wonderful results. I had been sickly for two years and overworked myself, and had such bad feelings every month that I could hardly walk for pain. I was very nervous and easily tired out and could not sleep nights. I had dizzy spells, and pimples came on my face. But I have taken your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored my health. I think it is the best medicine in existence."—Miss CECILIA M. BAUER, 1101 Lawrence St., Appleton, Wis.

A SCHOOL TEACHER'S GRATITUDE:

Geneva, Iowa.—"I have been teaching school for some years and I have neglected my health because I was too busy with my work to attend to myself properly. I suffered greatly every month and was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

"I wrote to you about my condition and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Blood Purifier as you recommended. These remedies have done wonders for me and I can highly and widely recommend them to every suffering woman."—Miss MINNIE SHAVER, R. F. D. No. 1, Geneva, Iowa, c/o Sam Erickson.

A COLORADO GIRL'S CASE:

Montrose, Col.—"I was troubled very much with irregular periods. Sometimes two months would elapse. I suffered severe headache, was weak and nervous, could eat scarcely anything.

"I took both Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and the result was wonderful. I feel like another person.

"I think your remedies are the best on earth and cannot express my thankfulness to you for what they have done to me. I help my neighbors when they are sick, and I shall always recommend your medicines."—Miss ELLA McCANDLESS, Montrose, Col.

Is it not reasonable to suppose that a medicine that did so much for these girls will benefit any other girl who is suffering with the same troubles?

Does it not seem the only sensible thing to give such a medicine at least a trial? You may be sure that it can do you no harm, and there are lots of proof that it will do you much good.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

IS BEST MOOSE SHOT

PENOBSCOT INDIAN OF MAINE SURPASSES WHITE MAN.

Fleet-Footed Woodsman Follows the Animal for Days Across the Country Until He Tires and Kills It.

While the Penobscot or Tarratine Indian is not considered the equal of the expert white man as a rifle shot, he is the best moose shot in the woods. This sinewy, fleetfooted woodsman is fond of picking up a moose trail just after a light snow has fallen. Then, in light marching order, he will follow the animal across the country until he tires him out or kills him. The process frequently takes from three to four days, and it is possible only to the hardiest of pursuers.

When first started a moose will make off through the woods with the speed of an express train. If it is early in the season and there has been but a light fall of snow the traveling is good and it is a simple matter to follow the trail. At length the animal, confident of having thrown off his pursuers, will gradually slacken its pace and stop. But it is off again immediately upon hearing the first sound or upon the presence of those who are following.

It is a fact that a vigorous man can tire out a moose in the long run, and the Indian will at length approach near enough to get a shot. He can burden himself with but little in the way of camp equipage, however, and then a scanty supply of food and a blanket is all that he carries besides his rifle.

This method of killing moose is regarded by many as being far the most sportsmanlike. Surely it requires endurance and determination as well as woodcraft, and the man who has procured a head in this fashion has done something which would be impossible for the average sportsman.

No white man, no matter how expert, can ever quite equal an Indian in following a trail or in a canoe. The Indians seem to possess an aptitude in the handling of these trail craft which has come down to them through a long line of forebears.

However, few birch canoes are made nowadays. Tough winter bark is used in their construction, and with the encroachments of civilization it is becoming more and more expensive each year to get it. A high grade birch canoe will outclass three which are covered with canvas, and a few are still built to order every year on Indian Island, Me. They are much heavier than the canvas canoes, however, and for long trips, where there are frequent carries, most people prefer the canvas covered craft.

The Touch of Nature

He was what a little boy we once knew used to call a "growly man." He didn't look as if he could love a wife or a baby or a dog or a cat or even himself very much. We saw him coming and we began to feel ruffled and ugly and cross. "That's the sort of man," soliloquized we, "who ought to have a brick thrown at him a couple of times a week."

It was a busy part of town, near the city hall, but in the street, complacently threading their way through the traffic, and on the sidewalk, in danger of being downtrodden by the clumsy feet of the growly man, minced and strutted and coquetted a flock of jewel-hued pigeons.

"Better look out, squabs," we thought. "He looks as though he'd rather enjoy stepping on you."

And then the growly man reached into his pocket, brought out a handful of something that looked like stale bread, crumbled it a bit, tossed it to the birds, and passed on.

Then we made up our mind that growly is as growly does, and next time we won't judge so quickly.

Stereoscope Coming Back.

The old-time stereoscope, the friend of our childhood days, is promised a return to popularity in a somewhat new guise. The old-time device has been hitched to the latest phase of the photographic art and it may be but a short time before the modernized stereoscope will be seen in the parlors and sitting rooms of every home as they were once before. The moving picture machine has been made available for domestic purposes. It is no longer limited to the auditorium and the hall, but a new camera, small, compact and easily operated and not expensive places the facility for making these pictures within the reach of the amateur. With the knowledge acquired with a little practice one may make pictures which will catch the merry twinkle of the eye, the fleeting light of baby's dimple and the little individualities which are lost in the fussiness of the studio pose.

Air Supply Turned Off.

One Saturday, when professional aviators were giving a series of flights on the Speedway, he got this question over the wire, "Will you tell me, are there any air flights today?"

"None today," answered Mann. "The house adjourned yesterday to meet next Monday."—The Sunday Magazine.

CRIMINAL TRIALS IN ITALY

System There, Though Simple, Differs Radically From That in This Country.

The reports in American papers of the trial of the Camorrists at Viterbo have made many people wonder if there is any system at all about criminal trials, and if there is, what the system is like. There is a system, and a very simple one it is, though utterly different from that which governs procedure in American or English courts, says an exchange.

The trial takes place before three judges and a jury, to which are added a certain number of extra jurors who are sworn and are present in court to hear the testimony, and are held ready to take the place in the jury box of any juror who may in the course of the trial be incapacitated from further service. The depositions of all the witnesses have been taken in writing and signed before the trial begins. Each of the judges has a copy of these before him. The prosecutor and the counsel for the accused furnish to the court a list of the witnesses they desire called, and these are summoned all by the court, which has power to punish nonattendance.

The first thing that happens when the trial begins is the questioning of the accused by the presiding justice. In Italy, as in most of continental Europe, a man accused of a crime is considered by the law to be the very best witness to his own guilt or innocence. In England and America the accused need not testify unless he choose. In Italy he is the first and most important witness.

The accused is allowed the widest scope in defending himself. He has a right to tell his own story in his own way, to offer anything he can in the way of justification or palliation; even hearsay evidence is admissible. The judge has absolute discretion as to what testimony may be received and what excluded, and any judge who exercised this discretion unfairly would be an object of execration. Bias on the part of one judge is possible, but there are always the other two judges on the bench with him, and they are a perfect check against unfairness.

When the accused has given his testimony he is confronted personally with his accuser. The accuser is necessarily the principal witness against him. Strictly speaking, the prisoner has no right to interrupt his accuser, while the latter is telling his story, but in practice the judges permit it, and the confrontation sometimes becomes a three-cornered debate between accuser, accused and judge, the latter giving the accused the widest leeway to demonstrate his innocence.—Case and Comment.

Price of Damnation.

Judge Hiram P. Flack of West Liberty said the other day, speaking of the notorious disfranchised vote sellers of his native Ohio:

"Some of these men, I understand, even claimed they did not know it was wrong to sell one's vote. They were worse than the voters of Cashel.

"All the voters of Cashel used to sell their votes and a reform candidate once got ten preachers of the town to preach against the sin of such scandalous conduct.

"The day after the sermons the reform candidate said to a party leader:

"'Well, how will the election go?'

"'It will be close and difficult and expensive, sir,' was the reply.

"'What do you mean?' said the candidate.

"'Well,' said the party leader, 'the boys didn't understand that vote selling was a sin before and they always let their votes go at two dollars apiece; but now they know eternal perdition is awaiting them I understand that every man jack of them has put up his price to four dollars.'"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

The Cholera Suspect.

We are taking precautions against cholera. At Montpelier recently it was thought there was a well-defined case of Asiatic cholera. The mayor at once took all precautions authorized by law. Two days later a man was brought to the hospital as a suspect. The hospital interne, as he came near to the patient, quickly drew back, saying, "How you smell of rum!"

The answer came with a drunken grin. "Certainly, I have drunk a good deal of rum. It's excellent against the cholera."

The interne allowed him to remain during the night. In the morning the drunkard left entirely cured. An hour later he returned. "You'll have to take care of me here. My house has been closed and is guarded by four gendarmes for seven days, allowing no one to go in or come out. If you don't take me in as a patient I shall be arrested for vagabondage."—From Le Cri de Paris.

His Reward.

"It's an unsatisfactory, disappointing kind of world," said the old soldier. "I fought four years for the Union. I was in sixteen battles, including Antietam, Gettysburg, Fredericksburg and the Wilderness. I was wounded twice and spent four months in Andersonville. I tramped hundreds of miles in the dust and the mud and the snow. I got rheumatism from sleeping in the wet and I almost died with typhoid. I lived two days on three pieces of hardtack and ate salt pork that wasn't fit for a dog.

"I enlisted as a corporal and came out of the war a private, and then they spelled my name wrong on my discharge papers."—Puck.

A Good Cause.

True Ovation.

"Do you love me, darling?" she asked. "Sweetheart, I love every hair on your bureau!" he fervently answered.—Michigan Gargoyle.

RATTLER CAVE IN MONTANA

People of Neighborhood Kill 290 Snakes in Their Efforts at Extermination.

A posse of extermination was organized and at least 290 rattlesnakes of all sizes were killed in Rattlesnake Gulch, near Three Forks, yesterday.

The source of the hundreds of the reptiles, from which the gulch takes its name, was found in the shape of a small cave, discovered by accident by Amos Smith. Mr. Smith notified his friends in Three Forks and nearly a hundred men and boys proceeded to the scene, armed with all variety of weapons.

For three hours the battle raged and at its close 290 rattlers were counted strewn on the ground, and not a man had been bitten. The reptiles were slightly dormant, owing to the coolness, but when aroused would sally forth from the cave. Clubs, shotguns and rifles were used in the slaughter. When no more snakes emerged from the cave a repeating shotgun was discharged into it and about fifty more were dragged forth.

Some of the specimens killed measured more than three feet long, while others were only a few inches in length. Some of the larger ones will be stuffed and placed on exhibition. For years the farmers in the neighborhood have been bothered by the great number of rattlesnakes. The gulch of that name was literally alive with them. The den discovered by Mr. Smith is on the People's ranch. After cleaning out this den it was decided to continue the crusade and there are a number of men and boys scouring the community for more snakes.—Bozeman correspondence Anaconda Standard.

LIGHTS UP DARK PLACES

New Illuminating Pistol Has Advantages Over Searchlight for Night Attacks.

During the recent extended maneuvers of the German army there were many night attacks in which use was made of the newly introduced illuminating pistols.

According to the new regulations, these are to be employed wherever the configuration of the land makes their use preferable to that of the ordinary searchlight. The machinery necessary for the use of the latter device is very inconvenient, and especially in rolling and otherwise difficult country where the main maneuvers take place, it cannot be used to advantage. The illuminating pistols have not this disadvantage, as they are easily transported.

Further, the searchlight is useless in valleys and deep-lying places, as their rays shoot over these and leave them apparently in still deeper shadow. For this reason such valleys serve as excellent covers at night against the searchlights. The illuminating pistols have done away with this advantage of shelter, as the cartridges which they throw light up the deepest and darkest gullies.

There are two different sorts of cartridges, producing respectively white and red light. The white ones serve for signaling purposes between widely separated commands or divisions, even where the distance between them is several kilometers. The illuminating cartridges develop a light that makes everything within 200 meters (650 feet) visible and lasts eight to ten seconds.—Scientific American.

Substitute for the Potato.

The scarcity of the Irish potato in the United States calls attention to its Asiatic substitute, the dasheen. For all practical purposes, the dasheen, which is seldom larger than a hen's egg, though more prolific than the potato, may be regarded as a species of Irish potato. For ages this tuber in various forms has been cultivated in Japan and China. Planted in the spring, it is gathered six months later and flourishes best in lands like those of our southern states upon the gulf. The United States government has been conducting experiments in South Carolina, with the new tuber, and our agents report that it yields from twelve to fifteen tons to the acre, while its edible protein averages 86 per cent. of the whole root, as against the 80 per cent. of the potato. It is not improbable that the next few years will see the cultivation of the new tuber in this country to a large extent, especially throughout the south.

Prevent Flirting.

Dr. Robert C. Fall, an oculist, has another new explanation for the popularity of the large library spectacles now worn by a great many men.

"Primarily they appeal to men because of the comfort and the real rest they give the eyes," said Dr. Fall, but it remained for a young married woman to give another reason.

"I'm glad John wears those big glasses," she said to a friend, "even though they look ugly as sin. Don't you know, there isn't a woman in the world who would flirt with a man wearing them?"

Sure Thing.

Sparkle—Your sister is wearing one of Miss Pinkie's rings. I wish you'd get it for me. I want to take the measure. Going to buy an engagement ring, you know.

Barkle—Eh? Has Miss Pinkie accepted you?

Sparkle—She will, when I propose. Last night she asked me how I liked her mother?—New York Weekly.

Work of Real Forester.

The modern forester undertakes to make orchards profitable. There are orchardists, to be sure, who know very well how to care for their trees and who do care for them; but there are also orchards that are neglected or handled unskillfully. The forester will take a run-down orchard and by intelligent, scientific treatment of the trees, with systematic care, make it produce big and handsome apples in abundance.

"Preserving" the Baby.

Young James had seen some fish pickled, and was at once impressed and puzzled by the explanation, elicited by a long and steady fire of questions, that the salting process was to make the fish "keep." A little later he attended the baptism of an infant friend and was still puzzled. But at last a light broke in upon him, and in a shrill tone that could be heard all over the sacred edifice he exclaimed: "Oh, now I know all about it, mother. The water is to make the baby keep!"

Same Fence.

A New York banker who feels that the privacy of his town residence has been invaded by the construction of apartment houses on adjacent property has filed pleas with the building department of that city for a fence 150 feet high. A nine-story apartment building is to be built on the lot west of the home of this banker, who is J. M. Francolini, and he figures that a fence 150 feet high will be required to keep its future occupants from looking down upon him.—Popular Mechanics.

Sounds Made by Fish.

The skate, when caught, grunts, groans and gasps pretty much after the manner of a human being in distress. Carp and gold fish frequently utter curious sounds, but hardly sounds in the meaning of the term here used, inasmuch as their sounds are produced by approaching the surface of the water and blowing out air in bubbles until a rippling noise is heard.

Squab and Quail.

Many prefer squab to quail because the meat is not so dry, and is always sure to be tender. The chief advantage, however, is in the fact that when you eat squab it isn't necessary to pause several times while picking out a bunch of bird shot from your sore teeth.—Wellington (Kan.) News.

One Instance in His Mind.

She—And you say that you have always avoided blaming me. I'd like to have you mention one instance.

He—With pleasure. Remember, right after we were married I ate a pie you baked, and when the doctor came I told him it was clams.

Fish Has Vocal Organs.

Perhaps the most conspicuous example of the fishes that are capable of utterance is the drum fish, so called by reason of the deep, booming noise it produces at will. It is found along the Atlantic coast, from Massachusetts to Florida.

Brazilians Eager for News.

Travelers in Brazil remark that not only in Rio de Janeiro but in the larger cities throughout the republic, the public awaits the daily news budget with an eagerness no less pronounced than is the case in the United States and on the continent of Europe.

Game Easy to Play.

I know of no easier or more delightful occupation than that of managing other people's business at long distance and without responsibility for the result.—Exchange.

Morality and Business.

If morality in business leads to bankruptcy, it ceases to be morality.

TWENTY-FIVE-YEAR FRANCHISE GRAB!

RAILROADED THROUGH THE CITY COUNCIL MONDAY NIGHT ---ALL TEETH IN FORMER ORDINANCE PULLED

C., P. & E. R'y Co. Holds the Club Over the People---Unprecedented Advice Given by the City Solicitor---All Members of the Council, Except One, "Asleep at the Switch."

At a meeting of the city council last Monday night the Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company was granted a renewal (?) of its franchise for twenty-five years from this date.

The ordinance was railroaded through without proper consideration, without careful examination, and almost without a discussion of its merits or demerits.

The meeting of the council and city solicitor was more like a meeting of the directors of the C. P. & E. Ry. Co. and its attorneys than of men elected to represent and safeguard the rights of the people of Painesville.

In fact THE PROCEDURE IN THE PASSAGE OF THE ORDINANCE WAS BASED UPON THE ADVICE AND OPINIONS OF A FIRM OF CLEVELAND ATTORNEYS, REPRESENTING THE C. P. & E. CO., rather than upon the precedent of all former legislation in this city and the advice of former city solicitors and assistant attorneys.

While ordinances of a trivial nature, as are intended to regulate minor matters in this city, are carefully read and voted upon in three different and separate readings, this franchise ordinance, the most important legislation during the last ten years in the history of the city WAS RAILROADED THROUGH AFTER ONE READING AND WITHIN AN HOUR AFTER THE MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL HAD BEEN PROVIDED WITH A COPY OF THE ORDINANCE, and even before some of the members had an opportunity to read it entirely through.

The franchise ordinance passed at the meeting Monday night is called a "renewal" ordinance, but is a renewal ordinance in name only.

It confers upon the C. P. & E. Ry. Co. rights, privileges, and franchise grants in this city that that company has never owned or claimed to own before.

It abridges and repeals rules, regulations and restrictions provided for the people in former ordinances passed by former city administrations.

In addition to giving the Company ADDITIONAL and better rights in the streets of this city it extends for 25 years from this date a franchise that under the old ordinance would have expired in fourteen years. The ordinance provides that, instead of a five cent fare from a point in Painesville to Heisley on the west, that the five cent limit shall be Stop 73 or four stops this side of the present limit; and on the east the 5 cent limit is reduced one stop from Stop 5 to Stop 4.

Under former franchise grants the city retained its right to regulate the service; under the new ordinance the Railway Company may use its reasonable judgment in handling traffic, and especially is this true of the St. Clair street line.

While considering former franchise grants such as were given in 1891, 1892 and 1901 the city solicitor was assisted by other legal talent employed by the city, in order to safeguard the people's rights; the ordinances were never jammed through on an hour's notice, but given three separate readings in a deliberate and careful manner at three different meetings of the city council and ordered published to insure their publicity and legality.

The ordinance passed Monday night was under the sole legal supervision of a young man just recently admitted to the practice of law, inexperienced in the legal verbiage and technicalities of an important franchise grant, depending almost wholly for procedure upon the opinion of Cline, Tolles & Morley, a corporation firm of Cleveland representing the interests of the Street Railroad Company. Such a farcical performance, such an utter neglect of the proper representation of the peoples right in the drafting of this important franchise, binding the city for everything, and the company for almost nothing, for twenty-five years is so astonishing that it is almost impossible to find words of criticism to express the utter wickedness of the grab that the C. P. & E. Company have pulled off in this city.

And for what was all this done? What consideration does the Railroad company bind itself for in return for a grant that is worth thousands of dollars to the Company?

It agrees to extend its Fairport line about two and one-half miles to an indefinite point near the Township Park. It agrees to operate a passenger traffic over this extension of the Fairport line for six months during the year and cars will be furnished, "Commensurate with the requirements of the public" viz: as the Company itself may determine.

But in addition to the grant of 25 years in Painesville every person must pay a 10 cent fare each way for a period of 25 years, to ride from Painesville to the terminus of this extension.

No matter if the boundaries of the city are enlarged, no matter how much the population is increased and traffic enlarged during the next twenty-five years, the Company is given the right to tax every Painesville passenger ten cents each way on a trip to and from the park.

If you are the head of a family of five in Painesville and wish to enjoy a day at the Township Park with your family, your fare for each round trip is $1.00. If you live in Painesville township beyond the city limits add 10 cents more for each member of your family party. If you live in Painesville township beyond Stop 4 on the east or Stop 73 on the west, the rate of fare will be 40 cents for the round trip for each member of your family. This is the concession,—the liberal proposition—that the C. P. & E. offers in return for the grant of a twenty-five year unrestricted franchise in Painesville; taking away almost all rights we now have to regulate the company, and allowing in return the company to regulate itself and its service to the people.

This ordinance is not yet a law, true, the Company has put one over on the people of Painesville, and has won the first fall, but there is one man whose approval or disapproval will save much to the people.

That man is Mayor Wynne S. Smith. THE ORDINANCE IS UP TO HIM and he has the right to withhold his signature and veto this corrupt grant.

Mr. Voter it is up to you to see the Mayor and register your protest. A veto by the Mayor and two votes on the Council will recall this hasty and unparalleled legislation by a city council that was "asleep at the switch."

Failing in this, the people have little left to do but take their medicine, for the present city solicitor, the boy lawyer, who has already declared that one reading is sufficient and legal for the passage of an ordinance and who also takes his opinions from the attorneys on the other side of the case, has already declared that it is extremely doubtful if the referendum can be called into action on a "RENEWAL" ordinance.

SEE THE MUTILATION

Best Parts of the Old Franchise Are Omitted from the Franchise Grab Ordinance.

Read Section 18 of the new franchise ordinance, published elsewhere in this issue, which corresponds to Section 13 and 14 of the old ordinance. We challenge the reader to find a single clause of the words in capital letters in the "Renewal" ordinance. Just think of renewing the old franchise grant by cutting out the safe guards and all of the rights of the people in such a contract. These omissions are not oversights. They are only too plainly INTENTIONAL on the part of the author of this ordinance. The city council has been deceived and imposed upon in a wicked and corrupt manner when the new ordinance is handed to them and labeled as a "renewal of street railroad grants." Under the old ordinance some rights were retained by the people, under the new ordinance these rights are taken away. Read Section 18 of the new ordinance and see how the old ordinance has been mutilated and the omissions that have been made.

13th.—The rights hereby granted ARE SUBJECT, IN ALL RESPECTS, TO THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF SAID ORDINANCES HEREINBEFORE REFERRED TO, GRANTING RIGHTS TO THE PAINESVILLE, FAIRPORT & RICHMOND STREET RAILWAY COMPANY OF WHICH THE CLEVELAND, PAINESVILLE & EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY IS THE ASSIGNEE, AND SAID TERMS AND CONDITIONS ARE MADE A PART HEREOF AND SHALL APPLY TO AND BECOME A PART OF THE CONTRACT BETWEEN THE VILLAGE AND GRANTEE IN THE CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE OF SAID ROAD OVER ANY AND EVERY PART OF THE ROUTE HEREIN GRANTED, BUT THE RIGHTS HEREIN AND THEREIN GRANTED shall continue during a period of twenty-five (25) years from and after the date of the passage of this ordinance and its acceptance, in writing, filed with the Clerk of the Village of Painesville, by the Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company; AND SAID COMPANY SHALL ALSO PAY THE EXPENSES OF THE PUBLICATION OF THIS ORDINANCE.

14th—UPON THE FAILURE OR NEGLECT OF SAID GRANTEE, ITS SUCCESSORS OR ASSIGNS TO COMPLY WITH EACH AND ALL OF THE PROVISIONS OF THIS GRANT ALL THE RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES GRANTED HEREBY SHALL BE FORFEITED AND BECOME NULL AND VOID AT THE OPTION OF THE COUNCIL OF SAID VILLAGE OF PAINESVILLE; IT BEING EXPRESSLY UNDERSTOOD THAT THE CONDITIONS OF TIME, THE LIMITATIONS HEREIN CONTAINED ARE OF THE ESSENCE OF THIS GRANT, AND SUCH FORFEITURE SHALL BE DEEMED COMPLETE UPON THE ADOPTION OF AN ORDINANCE OF THE VILLAGE COUNCIL SO DECLARING THE SAME AND FROM THAT DATE ALL THE RIGHTS PRIVILEGES AND FRANCHISES HEREIN GRANTED SHALL CEASE AND DETERMINE TO SAID GRANTEE, ITS SUCCESSORS AND ASSIGNS.

Why were all the words printed above in capital letters, parts of the old ordinance, omitted from the renewal (?) ordinance. Ask your city solicitor! Ask your councilman!

LOOK HERE

Read Section 17 of the new franchise grab ordinance passed Monday night. Below is the section of the OLD ordinance supposed to be "renewed." The city solicitor dropped all those words printed in capital letters from the "renewal" ordinance. Why did he do it?

All work done under this franchise in the construction, operation and maintaining of the said railroad shall be done at the expense of said grantee, its successors and assigns and under the direction, and approval and satisfaction of the Council of said Village of Painesville, throughout the term of this grant. PROVIDED THAT THE COUNCIL OF SAID VILLAGE RESERVES THE RIGHT AT ANY TIME IT SHALL BE DEEMED EXPEDIENT TO PERMIT ANY OTHER STREET RAILWAY OR STREET RAILWAYS TO RUN ITS OR THEIR CARS UPON OR ACROSS ANY OR EVERY PORTION OF THE TRACKS LAID UNDER THIS ORDINANCE UPON ST. CLAIR OR ERIE STREET.

Why were all the words printed above in capital letters, parts of the old ordinance, omitted from the renewal (?) ordinance. Ask your city solicitor! Ask your councilman!

LOOK AGAIN

Below is a section of the old franchise ordinance. Compare it with Section 15 of the new franchise grab ordinance, and you will discover that all the words printed below in capital letters are omitted by the City Solicitor. Why did he do it?

Section 15. "Said grantee shall run and operate cars on the route between Main street and the right of way of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company at all reasonable hours and upon such a schedule of time as the traffic and business shall demand, AND AS OFTEN AS ONCE EVERY THIRTY MINUTES UNLESS RELEASED FROM SO DOING BY RESOLUTION OF THE COUNCIL."

Why were all the words printed above in capital letters, parts of the old ordinance, omitted from the renewal (?) ordinance. Ask your city solicitor! Ask your councilman!

HERE IS THE AUTHORITY

Letter of the C. P. & E. Attorneys, Which Guided the City Solicitor in Rushing Through the Franchise Grab.

City Solicitor von Beseler is showing the following letter as his authority for the advice given to the city council. It is written and signed by the C. P. & E. Attorneys, and is the authority for the unprecedented procedure in the passage of the franchise grab, Monday night. What do you think of a city attorney who allows the attorneys on the opposite side of the franchise grant to recommend the law best suited to the occasion. Probably the firm of Cline, Tolles & Morley also wrote the new ordinance, for certainly von Beseler did not know its contents, or else he wickedly deceived the city council with his advice.

Feb. 27, 1912.

Mr. Jorden,
Vice Pres. and Gen. Mgr., C. P. & E. R. R. Co., Willoughby, O.

Dear Sir:—Replying to your inquiry as to the necessity of the publication of any notice of your company's application for a renewal of its franchise, beg to advise that courts have held that no such publication is necessary.

Section 3758 of the General Code authorizes municipalities to grant franchises for the construction of a street railroad, and to renew any such grant upon its expiration, upon such conditions as may be considered conducive to the public interest.

Section 3769 of the Code states:

"Nothing mentioned in the next preceeding section shall be done, etc., and no ordinances for the purposes specified in the next preceeding section shall be passed, until public notice of the application therefor has been given by the city clerk, and until consents of property owners have been obtained and competitive bids have been received."

The language of this section is misleading regarding your application for a renewal of your franchise. The Supreme Court, in affirming without report the case of State, ex rel. v. East Cleveland Railway Co., 6 Ohio Cir. Ct. Rep. 321 (27 W. L. B.), has held that the formal requirements of above section 3789 do not apply to the renewals of franchises. The section of the statute which the Supreme Court construed in that case was old section 2502 of the Revised Statutes, subsequently amended to its present form as contained in section 3789 of the Code. The amendments to this section, however, are immaterial to the question here presented, merely of public works. Aside from this recommendation, old section 2502 contained precisely the same language as the present section 3789 of the Code. The above holding of the Supreme Court is still in full force and effect. It was so held in the case of the City of Lima v. Cramer, found in 5 N. P. Rep. (N. S.) 113.

It has even been held that a renewal ordinance is not of a general nature, and need not be read at three separate readings. State v. Railway Co., 12 Cir. Ct. Rep. (N. S.) 282, affirmed without report in 81 O. S. 502.

From the foregoing decisions, you will readily see that publication of notice of the pendency of your application for a renewal grant is unnecessary.

Yours truly,
Cline, Tolles & Morley.

Painesville merchants want a low rate of fare from Perry and Mentor to Painesville, they have asked for a shelter house or rest room on the park, and all these concessions and more might have been obtained from the C. P. & E. if the Council had tried to drive a good bargain. But the city council gives away not only this best opportunity of its administration, but also gives away many of the rights held formerly under an old ordinance. The people are getting a "gold brick."

EXTRA COPIES!

The Herald has printed extra copies of this issue for FREE DISTRIBUTION. Come and get a copy for your neighbor. This fight against the franchise grab is YOUR FIGHT and a few men and one weekly newspaper can do little alone. Put on your fighting clothes and let us tell the C. P. & E. Company that Lake county has already done enough for that company and that we object to giving away all our rights. Will you help us?

Following is the "Renewal" Ordinance That Does Not Only "Renew," but also Extends and Enlarges the Rights of the C., P. & E. and also Omits the Vital Points of the Old Ordinance Which Safe Guarded Many of the People's Rights.

AN ORDINANCE

Granting a Renewal of the Street Railway Grants of the Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company, Fixing the Terms and Conditions of Such Renewal Grants and Terminating Existing Grants.

Whereas, The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company is the owner of and is operating an electric railroad within the City of Painesville, Ohio, under existing grants therefor, and

Whereas, it is the desire of said City and said Railroad Company to have such grants renewed and the outstanding grants surrendered;

Be it ordained by the council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio:

Section 1. The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company, its successors and assigns is hereby granted, upon the terms and conditions herein provided, a renewal for the period of twenty-five (25) years from the date of the passage of this ordinance, of its right to maintain and operate, as the same now exists in the City of Painesville, its single track electric railroad with all curves, switches, side-tracks, turn-outs, cross-overs, poles, wires, cables and other appliances necessary for the operation of said railroad along and upon the following streets to-wit:

Beginning at the westerly line of the City of Painesville and running thence easterly upon and over Mentor avenue; on the north and south sides of the public park; on Main street easterly to the intersection of State street; on State street north from the intersection of Main street to Sanford street; on Sanford street west to the intersection of St. Clair street; on St. Clair street north to the corporation line; on Railroad street from the intersection of State street, easterly, to Elm street; on Erie street from the intersection of State street, north-easterly, to the intersection of Elm street; on Erie street from the intersection of Elm street, east, to the corporation line; on South St. Clair street from the intersection of Main street, southerly, to Walnut avenue; on Walnut avenue, easterly, to State street; on State street from the intersection of Walnut avenue, southerly, to the right of way of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company, a spur track leading from its main track on Railroad street, westerly and southerly, to the car barns maintained by it on Railroad street; a spur track leading northerly on Erie street from its main track across its property to the switch now owned and maintained by it on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company's line of railroad, a spur track leading from its main track on South State street, easterly, on the property owned by it opposite The New York, Chicago and St. Louis Company's depot grounds.

The rights hereby granted are subject to the following conditions, to-wit:—

Section 2. The right herein granted shall include the right to transport by electricity or motive power other than animal or steam, passengers, packages, express matter, United States mail, baggage and light freight, also all kinds of freight intended for the exclusive use of said Company, providing that nothing shall be carried by said road, which is obnoxious or has offensive odors.

Section 3. The motive power by which said railroad shall be operated shall be electricity and the system shall be the most modern and improved known to electric science, and shall be provided and kept provided with a sufficient number of motor cars of the most improved pattern and style to accommodate its patrons and to comply with the conditions contained in this ordinance. Said cars shall be good in every respect and while in use shall be kept clean and in the best order; shall be provided with the latest and best devices for heating and lighting same; shall be kept warm at all times when necessary for the comfort of its passengers; that cars while in use shall be lighted and kept lighted after sunset; there shall be provided and maintained and used upon said cars the usual and proper signals and alarms to give warning of their approach; suitable guards and fenders shall be placed and maintained on the front of each car to protect the public from injury or damage.

Section 4. The gauge of the track shall be four feet, eight and one-half inches (4 ft. 8½ in.), and the rail shall be girder or high T rails, and the weight thereof shall not be less

WHERE THE DIFFERENCE WAS ### Little Old Lady Had Not Understood, but, After All, Matter Was Quite Simple.

A little old lady came into the station at Ames and asked for a ticket to Greensburg. "Thirty-nine cents," said the agent, as he got the ticket.

"Thirty-nine!" exclaimed the woman. "Why, I thought it was 40!"

"No," said the man, as he gave her the change, "it is just 39."

The woman took the change and the ticket and sat down, but she did not put either change or ticket into her purse. She held them in her hand, and looked quite troubled. Finally she went to the agent again.

"I am sure there is some mistake," she said. "I came from Greensburg yesterday and I paid 40 cents."

"Our regular rate to Greensburg is 39 cents," said the agent. "It's all right, madam," he added, in a reassuring way.

Again she took her seat, but not for long. Again she came to the window and spoke to the agent:

"Will you please explain to me why the rate from here to Greensburg is only 39 cents when the rate from Greensburg here is 40?"

This was a question that the agent really could not answer, but the woman looked so distressed over the unexpected cent received in change that he felt sorry for her.

"Oh, it's down grade going that way, you know," he explained, in a businesslike way.

"So it is!" she said, in a tone of enlightenment. Her face cleared at once. She put the change into her purse and in great content sat down to wait for her train.—Youth's Companion.

One-Seventh of World Goes to Mecca.

The city of Mecca is the oldest place of resort in existence, yet of all the millions who have visited it not a score of Christians are known to have come out alive. No flag of citizenship would save a man's life were he known to be a Christian within the sacred precincts of the city, where the prophet himself decreed that no unbeliever should set foot.

Of the 220,000,000 Moslems in the world only 15,500,000 live under the Turkish flag, yet most of them acknowledge the sultan of Turkey as their caliph, the successor of the Prophet. As Mohammed shrewdly foresaw, the Mecca pilgrimage binds together disciples into a unity which could be effected in no other way. "Mecca," says Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer of Arabia, "has become the religious capital and the center of universal pilgrimage of one-seventh of the human race."

Apostle of Peace

That incessant joker, M. Tristan Bernard, was chatting about the peace movement with some friends the other evening, and somebody remarked to him that peace at any price was quite an impossibility.

"For instance," he said, "if an 'apache' cornered you in the street one dark night, hurt you, and took your watch and chain away?"

"I don't think I would ever talk to him again," said Tristan Bernard quietly.

And a day or two back, as we were driving up the Champs Elysees together in an open, horse-drawn cab, a taxicab bumped into us from behind. Tristan turned slowly around.

"My friend," he said to the chauffeur, "if you want to get in and drive with us, get in by all means, but I warn you beforehand that we haven't got room for your car."—Paris Correspondence London Express.

Strange Methods of Smoking.

Strange are the variations of the strange habit that has become world wide in the last 400 years. The Negritos of the Philippines are cigar smokers and they are said to hold a cigar with the lighted end in their mouths. A nice cool smoke is not what they want. The Hottentot of Africa will sacrifice as much as any man for his smoke. He will sell his wife for tobacco. The Patagonian of the Straits of Magellan has a system of smoke swallowing by which he throws himself down on his stomach and secures a few moments of drugged ecstasy.

Success Assured.

"I can't see why I should attempt to produce your play," said the manager. "There seems to be nothing in it."

"The mayor of this town has promised me that he will threaten to stop it if you put it on," the eager young dramatist replied.

"Hurrah! We'll put it in rehearsal at once, and in addition to being the author, I want you to be the press agent."

Bismarck's Hair on Sale.

Quite an outburst of indignation has arisen in Berlin over the action of a well-known coiffeur named Hoehrig, who is advertising the hair of Bismarck for sale. In the last eight years of the famous statesman's life Hoehrig, with the assistance of a valet, collected all the stray hairs of his illustrious patron. These he had made into curls, more than a hundred in number, each of which, before being placed on the market, has been affixed to a bronze bust representing the German chancellor.

Distribution of Effort.

"I put a lot of work on that speech of mine," said the new member of Congress.

"Of course you did," replied the veteran; "after you have been here awhile you'll learn to put less work on your original speech and save yourself for the explanations."

ROOSEVELT REPLIES TO EIGHT GOVERNORS

SAYS HE WILL ACCEPT NOMINATION FOR PRESIDENT IF IT IS TENDERED TO HIM.

COLONEL MAKES STATEMENT

Declares One of the Chief Principles for Which He Has Always Endeavored to Stand Is Genuine Rule of People.

New York City.—"I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me, and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference."

Theodore Roosevelt in these words broke his silence for months.

The colonel's statement was issued from the Outlook offices in the form of a reply to a petition from eight western governors, dated February 10, in which they implored him to express his willingness to accept the nomination. Following is his reply:

Roosevelt's Reply.

"New York, Feb. 24, 1912.

"Gentlemen: I deeply appreciate your letter and I realize to the full the heavy responsibility it puts upon me, expressing as it does the carefully considered convictions of the men elected by popular vote to stand as the heads of government in their several states.

"I absolutely agree with you that this matter is not one to be decided with any reference to the personal preferences or interests of any man, but purely from the standpoint of the interests of the people as a whole. I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me, and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference. One of the chief principles for which I have stood and for which I now stand, and which I have always endeavored and always shall endeavor to reduce to action, is the genuine rule of the people, and therefore I hope so far as possible the people may be given the chance through direct primaries to express their preference as to who shall be the nominee of the Republican presidential convention. Very truly yours,

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The letter is addressed to Governor William E. Glasscock of West Virginia, Governor Chester H. Aldrich of Nebraska, Governor Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire, Governor Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming, Governor Chase S. Osborn of Michigan, Governor W. R. Stubbs of Kansas and Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri.

Letter From Governors.

The letter from the governors to the colonel was as follows:

"Chicago, Feb. 10, 1912.

"We, the undersigned, Republican governors, assembled for the purpose of considering what will best insure the continuation of the Republican party as a useful agency of good government, declare it our belief, after a careful investigation of the facts, that a large majority of the Republican voters of the country favor your nomination, and a large majority of the people favor your election, as the next president of the United States.

"We believe that your candidacy will insure success in the next campaign. We believe that you represent, as no other man represents, those principles and policies upon which we must appeal for a majority of the votes of the American people and which in our opinion are necessary for the happiness and prosperity of our country.

"We believe that in view of this public demand you should soon declare whether, if the nomination for the presidency comes to you unsolicited and unsought, you will accept it.

"In submitting this request we are not considering your personal interests. We do not regard it as proper to consider either the interests or the preference of any man as regards the nomination for the presidency. We are expressing our sincere belief and best judgment as to what is demanded of you in the interests of the people as a whole. And we feel that you would be unresponsive to a plain public duty if you should decline to accept the nomination, coming as the voluntary expression of the wishes of a majority of the Republican voters of the United States through the action of their delegates in the next national convention.

"Yours truly,

"WILLIAM E. GLASSCOCK.
"CHESTER H. ALDRICH.
"ROBERT P. BASS.
"JOSEPH M. CAREY.
"CHASE S. OSBORN.
"W. R. STUBBS.
"HERBERT S. HADLEY.

"The Hon. Theodore Roosevelt,
New York City."

Triplets Are 70 Years Old.

Chester, Pa.—The seventieth anniversary of three prominent members of the Society of Friends, two sisters and a brother, who were born triplets February 21, 1842, has just been celebrated here. The sisters are Mrs. Rachel P. West Leys and Miss Kate D. West of this city. The brother is Titus H. West of Upland. The anniversary was observed with a private dinner party at the home of a relative, Mrs. Lillian H. Maris. Mr. West and his sisters are descendants of old families.

Russia Plays Waiting Game.

St. Petersburg.—That the Russian foreign office has received a note from Washington intimating that the United States is anxious to open negotiations for the formation of a treaty to take the place of the Russo-American treaty of 1832, which will expire January 1, 1913, is reported in official circles. It is safe to say, however, that Russia has resolved upon a policy of procrastination so that the first of next year will find no commercial instrument existing between the two powers.

TELLS TALE OF MASSACRE

EDITOR SAYS COSSACKS HAVE KILLED 3,000 IN PERSIA.

Declares Poverty Forces Many Fathers and Mothers to Devour Bodies of Their Dead Babes.

Washington, D. C.—More tragic than Kishenev, more pitiless than the reconcentrado camps of Cuba, more oppressive than the Roman yoke is the trail of Russia through Persia, according to a letter received in this city from Tabriz. In this letter, written to narrate the events that have transpired since W. Morgan Shuster was driven from the country he tried so heroically to save, the editor of a Democratic newspaper whose property has been seized and who is threatened with exile, pleads that merciful America come to its aid lest the whole land perish beneath the Cossack torch and saber. A portion of the letter is presented here:

"As to Persia since Mr. Shuster has left—the news of this unfortunate country is such that it is beyond my power to describe. The conditions are so sad that they even melt the heart of a rock. Russian troops have entered all the northern cities and practically control and rule them.

"In Tabriz the Russians hanged and strangled 45 of the clergy and grandees. They also massacred over 3,000 inhabitants including innocent women and children. They hold the northern cities, ostensibly until the Persia government should be able to send governors and soldiers to restore order. The government has no money to send troops and governors to the north. The officials are stupified. The foreign intriguers are undermining the peace of the country and manufacture disorder in various parts. The post is delayed on the roads and travels ten days to cover the usual two days' ride.

"Brigondage is increasing, poverty and want spreading everywhere. Worse than all, famine is devastating the land and worked such havoc in the city of Varonjer that many of its victims have been driven to unspeakable frenzy and starvation.

"In many instances fathers and mothers have been found devouring the corpses of their dead babies."

SAVES COINS SEVENTY YEARS

Man Makes a Collection of Nearly $1,800 in Currency Which Sister Deposits in Bank After Death.

Monticello, N. Y.—Nearly $1,800 in old coins was deposited in the Monticello Union bank by Miss Cynthia Pintler. This represents the savings for more than 70 years.

Early in life Pintler formed the habit of throwing all his small change in a tin box. He was never forced to draw from them, and when he died a few months ago his relatives found the box filled. In the collection are many coins of ancient dates, among which were large, old copper pennies, 2 cent pieces, 3 cent pieces, old nickels, dimes and eagle pennies. Some of these coins have an added value because of their age.

PLAYS PIANO OVER 30 HOURS

Professor Waterbury, After Breaking His Previous Record, Falls Exhausted From Stool.

Mount Vernon, N. Y.—Professor Charles Waterbury of Yonkers, world's champion long endurance pianist, has just succeeded in beating his own record of 29 hours and 30 minutes continuous playing, by 49 minutes and 5 seconds. During the entire exhibition Waterbury was given food and nourishment by attendants. He had no sleep, was not permitted to leave the stool. At the expiration of 30 hours, 18 minutes and 5 seconds, he fell from his stool from exhaustion.

GIVES LIFE FOR CHILDREN

Woman Is Burned to Death in Heroic Attempt to Rescue Progeny From Flames.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—A woman named Mezn who had made a heroic effort to save her six children, was burned to death along with two of her little ones in Luzerne borough early in the morning when their home was destroyed.

Three times Mrs. Mezn rushed into the burning house, rescuing four of her children.

The fourth time the floor gave way and the woman and two children were carried down in the debris.

Fight Duel on Street.

Nicholasville, Ky.—In a pistol duel on a street here Perry Hughes, a prominent business man of this city, shot and killed Bud Sherrow after having been wounded by a bullet from Sherrow's gun.

Kills Wife With Club.

Tacoma, Wash.—Willis Brown, 41 years old, confessed that he killed his young wife and John Alden, a young man with whom she went to a theater. Brown beat them to death with a club.

The husband was allowed to plead guilty of murder in the second degree because the state could produce no witnesses to the crime. The bodies of Mrs. Brown and Alden were found on a county highway near East Larchmont. Brown said that he had known for a year of the infimacy.

Accidentally Kills Brother.

Columbus, O.—In the presence of his smaller brother and sister, Elmer Schneider, aged eight, oldest of the four children of George Schneider, accidentally shot and killed his brother, Lester, three, with his father's shotgun.

The accident occurred while the four children were alone.

Elmer picked up the gun, which he was barely able to handle, and while the other children looked on, pointed the barrel at his baby brother and pulled the trigger.

BIG TAXI ROBBERY MYSTERY SOLVED

INSIDE PLOTTING AND EXECUTION OF $25,000 THEFT IS LEARNED BY POLICE.

FIVE MEN UNDER ARREST

Germ of Hold-Up Plan Was Conceived by Supposedly Trustworthy Chauffeur Who Was Driving Bank Messengers.

New York City.—Eddie Kinsman "came through," and so the $25,000 taxicab robbery mystery was all cleared up. Two more men prisoners were taken—one, a "stall" in this city; the other, one of the active participants, in Memphis, Tenn. Two thousand dollars more of the loot was recovered, making $2,750 in all. A "line" was got on an additional of it ($10,000, it is said) which will soon be found. The whole inside of the plotting and execution of the daylight robbery of February 15 was learned, and the capture of the rest of the bandits is only a matter of time.

Briefly the story is this: There were ten men in on the hold-up, as accessories and active workers. Five of these are under arrest and the others are known and are being traced. Seven of them got $3,000 apiece. The eighth got $2,750. The ninth got $250. The tenth, who played a trifling part, was "bilked" and got nothing. The germ of the hold-up plan—if not the whole daring business—was conceived by Geno Montani, the supposedly trustworthy chauffeur who was driving the East River bank passengers along Trinity place from the Produce Exchange National bank where they had got the money.

The four local prisoners are held $15,000 apiece for a hearing Thursday. Joseph Lamb, alias "Scotty," a dishwasher in the Hotel Judson, was the "stall" whose part of the hold-up was merely to step in front of Montani's taxi and give the driver an excuse for slowing up. "Scotty" is the one who got nothing, although he was promised $25.

Kinsman told the detectives that he met the woman "Swede Annie" while working as a waiter in a cafe and went to live with her. In the same cafe he met Jesse Albruzzo who introduced him to Splaine, "Scotty," "Dutch" and a boy who acted as messenger or go-between for members of the gang. Albruzzo proposed and planned the robbery with the assistance of Marilot, the chauffeur. The plan was carefully gone over and rehearsed in Central Park. At the last moment three more Italians, not yet located, were introduced. The robbery was carried out according to schedule. The party then adjourned to a saloon to divide the booty. Just as the money was being counted out the three Italians, two of whom Kinsman knew as Matty and Paul, appeared on the scene with a demand for $10,000 which was turned over to them by Albruzzo. The remainder was divided between Albruzzo, Montani, Splaine, Kinsman, "Dutch" and the boy.

ICE MOVES, HOUSES TOPPLE

Immense Floes Render Hundreds of Families Homeless and Causes Damage to Property.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Hundreds of families were made homeless and great damage was done to property by monstrous ice floes which descended from the tributaries of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers and swept through Pittsburgh to the Ohio river.

The ice spread over the lowlands and destroyed scores of houses. The inhabitants were warned of its coming and all were able to reach safety with most of their possessions. All the bridges were badly shaken by the huge onrushing cakes and the sides of several river packets standing at their piers were battered in. Another gorge broke at Greenock.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS FALL OFF

Deaths in Three Months of 1911 Are Fewer Than for the Same Quarter in 1910.

Washington, D. C.—Two hundred and one persons were killed and 4,283 injured in train accidents during the months of July, August, September, 1911, according to accident bulletin 41 issued by the interstate commission. This was a decrease of 120 killed and an increase of 391 injured as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1910.

Accidents of other kinds on railroads at grade crossings, tracks and bridges bring the total number of casualties up to 2,758 killed and 19,107 injured for the quarter.

Arrested for "Stealing" Bath.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Chief of Police Renfro and three policemen were called to a barbershop to arrest burglars. With drawn revolvers they opened the door of a bathroom where the "burglars" were hiding and were amazed to find two young women, entirely nude, bathing in the tub.

The two girls threw water into the chief's face who beat a retreat. Later he arrested them for stealing a bath. They were fined $10, but the chief remitted the fines.

Pierce Beats Rockefeller.

St. Louis, Mo.—Henry Clay Pierce was victorious over John D. Rockefeller and the Standard Oil Co. in the circuit court when Judge Kinsey ruled the Rockefeller clique cannot control the Waters-Pierce Oil Co. if, by doing so, they would be acting in defiance of the laws of Missouri and the United States supreme court. The Standard Oil Co. has applied for a writ of mandamus compelling the Waters-Pierce Co. to name as directors three of its men. Judge Kinsey upheld the Pierce contention.

THUGS KILL A WOMAN

MRS. HELENA MADGE, AN AGED SHOPKEEPER, MURDERED.

Toledo Outlaws Strap Old Woman's Body to Chair and Ransack Her House.

Toledo, Feb. 24.—Mrs. Helena Madge, an aged shopkeeper, was killed here last night when robbers entered her shop, tore a money belt from her body, bound her to a chair and ransacked the little shop for the fortune the woman was popularly supposed to keep hidden in the place.

The coroner says the woman was smothered when bandits covered her mouth to prevent any outcry.

"Mother" Madge, as she was known, had been robbed often enough to accept such events without excitement. The woman has previously been looted of sums ranging from $5 to several thousands. Police have begged her to retire and live with friends or relatives and to put her money in the bank. She insisted on tending shop and hiding her money around the place. How much she lost this time is uncertain. Police are working on the theory that intimates of the old woman planned the crime.

Wets Win in Sandusky.

Fremont.—Sandusky County, which three years ago went dry and voted out the saloons by a majority of 516, has voted back the saloons by a majority exceeding 1,000. Subject to possible correction, the figure stands at 1,004. The city of Fremont alone gave the wets 1,100 majority, as against a wet majority of 246 three years ago, indicating that the people of this city favor the open saloon.

The wets made remarkable gains, there being only three precincts in which the drys gained. Clyde, second largest municipality in the county, gave the drys 77 majority and three years ago gave them 240. Like gains were made in other precincts.

Up to date 25 counties have voted upon the local option proposition, with the result that 17 counties have declared wet and eight dry, as follows:

The Wet—Scioto, Lawrence, Athens, Wyandot, Marion, Pickaway, Columbiana, Perry, Coshocton, Darke, Muskingum, Hocking, Tuscarawas, Jefferson, Licking, Washington, Sandusky.

The Dry—Meigs, Ashtabula, Warren, Belmont, Wayne, Pike, Brown, Dallia.

Farmers Favor I. and R.

Findlay.—The recall by a percentage of not less than 50 or 60, the initiative and referendum and state help for the improvement of public highways were favored by the farmers' institute, which closed its session at Arlington last evening. Andrew P. Seyer, constitutional delegate from this county to the constitutional convention at Columbus was present and addressed the meeting. He strongly urged that these institutes indorse the proposal.

Wilson Kicks on Test.

Sandusky, O.—Declaring that he does not care for any advertising that could come from a moving picture theater popularity contest, Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, in a letter received by William Higgins, manager of the Royal theater, refused to send him a picture as requested. Mr. Higgins contemplates running a contest calculated to determine the standing of those who are interested in the presidential contest before the people of Sandusky.

Kenyon to Give Athletic Meet.

Gambier.—Kenyon will hold an interscholastic track meet this spring, providing nothing unforeseen arises, for the assembly has voted to proceed with all arrangements and prepare as large a meet as the size of the college will permit. A special effort is to be made to secure representative squads from the high schools of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo and Dayton, but all schools in Ohio will be invited to send delegations.

Safe Explodes in Parsonage.

Hamilton.—An unusual explosion occurred in the parsonage of Rev. J. H. Holthaus, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church. A gas jet in the safe sprung a leak and when the safe was opened there was an explosion which set fire to and destroyed many valuable records. Mary Henneke, the housekeeper, was seriously burned.

Gov. Vessey Visits Youngstown.

Youngstown.—Gov. R. S. Vessey of South Dakota recently visited this place. The governor declared his visit was purely a business call, and that politics had nothing to do with it. It was reported the progressives were back of the move to bring the western executive here, but he emphatically denied this. He announced he would be here several days.

Gas Kills Two Men.

St. Clairsville.—Carl Adkins and Ernest White of Bethesda, telegraph linemen, were asphyxiated by burning gas in their hotel room at New Rochelle, N. Y., where they were working on construction gang. The bodies of both young men will be brought to Bethesda for burial.

Silver Takes Man's Life.

Akron, O.—Henry Hertsch, 61 years, for 30 years with the Burkhardt Brewing company, died from blood poisoning.

Youngstown Merchant Dies.

Youngstown.—Louis E. Geuss, for seven years a member of the board of education and a merchant here, died of paralysis. He was born in Warren, O., and had been a resident of Youngstown 27 years.

Fatally Burned in Wreck.

Steubenville.—Frank Beatty, 23, a Panhandle railroad freight conductor, was fatally burned in the wreckage of a caboose in a rear-end wreck east of here and died the same night. He lived in Colliers, W. Va.

BAD CONDITIONS IN COTTON FACTORIES

CHILDREN MADE TO WORK IN SOUTHERN LOOMS WHEN FAMILIES MIRE IN DEBT.

GOVERNMENT INVESTIGATES

National Probers Unfold Shocking Statistics of Disease and Death Decimating the Stunted and Weakened Population.

Washington, D. C.—As sordid and tragic a tale of the poverty of labor as was ever told in a government publication was unfolded in the report on the standard of living among southern cotton mill workers made public by the bureau of labor.

Government investigators selected 21 typical southern cotton mill families, and studied their income and expenditures in detail for the year 1908. In almost every case these conditions were found:

"The father and two or three of the older children at work in the mill, yet the total annual income of the family breadwinners often less than $1,000 a year.

"The account at the company store running steadily above the family income.

"At the end of the year a debt, which is met by an appeal to the loan shark."

"Over 91 per cent of all operatives live in company-owned houses. It is a common occurrence to find the mother and small children, evidently insufficiently warmed, huddled about a small fire in one of the rooms.

"Measles, malarial fever, typhoid, pneumonia, skin diseases and tuberculosis are prevalent. That the people are not healthy is shown by the fact that every family studied was obliged either to employ a doctor or buy medicines. The people prescribe for their own ills and are burdened with patent medicines and cure-alls."

"From their incomes the mill workers pay surprisingly large sums to burial associations.

The report shows that the prisoners in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta are better fed than the majority of cotton mill families.

"To meet the added demand of interest and principal for the debt another child is sent to work, and so on until the trapped family has sent all its children into the maw of the mill."

Then the report records shocking statistics of disease and death decimating the stunted population.

"In other industries," says the report, "the father may feel that he can never hope for anything more for himself, but he can at least plan and struggle for a better life for his children. Here the mill demands the children as well as the fathers."

FRENCH DANCER CAUSES STIR

Performs at Function in Ballroom of the Litauer Residence in the National Capital.

Washington, D. C.—The appearance of a French dancer clad chiefly in a flaming red garter at a Sunday cafe Chantant, given by Mr. and Mrs. William Litauer of New York, is interesting Washington society just now.

The beautiful ballroom of the Litauer residence, which was formerly occupied by the Bellamy Storers' and is filled with priceless art treasures and curios, was transformed for the occasion into a typical French cafe scene. The guests, men and women, including many of the most prominent members of Washington society, were seated about small tables when the petite dancer flashed through the company. She kissed her dainty hands to the distinguished audience and began a step that put the devil dance, the turkey trot and the bunny hug to blush.

GIRL WEDS MOTHER'S SUITOR

Romance Is Mixed With Ingratitude of Daughter to Her Maternal Parent.

Hartford, Conn.—Romance mixed with the ingratitude of a daughter to her mother was revealed when the police ambulance called at the home of Mrs. Lila Morris, a widow, to take her to the Hartford hospital. She had fallen in a nervous collapse on returning from a three-day visit to a son in New Jersey to find her daughter had been married during her absence to Joseph Tremonte, who was looked upon as a suitor for the mother.

Tremonte is a retired saloonkeeper who several months ago went to board with Mrs. Morris. Tremonte was attentive to Mrs. Morris, and she was unsuspicious of there being any attachment between her daughter Olive, 22, and Tremonte when she bade them good bye recently.

Wilson and Clark Split Even.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—In accordance with the provisions of a resolution adopted early in the day, the Democratic state convention adjourned after having named a list of delegates evenly divided between the Clark and Wilson factions. Robert Galbreath was named national committeeman by unanimous vote. The Clark forces named seven delegates at large to cast five votes, the Wilson faction ten delegates at large to cast five votes, and each named ten delegates for five congressional districts.

Blast Scatters Body of Girl.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—While the body of Minnie Mosale, a young woman, who died February 3 from the effects of a stab wound, was being cremated at the morgue the crematory exploded. Deputy Coroner Black was hurled against a wall and seriously burned. Coroner Jamison and a number of hotel proprietors, who saw the beginning of the cremation, had barely left the room when the explosion occurred. The partly incinerated body was scattered, and the bottom of the crematory was blown away.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

DELEHANTY TO RETIRE

Veteran Baseball Player Wants to Be Policeman.

Story Circulates in Cleveland That Second Baseman of Detroit Tigers Took Examination for Job on Police Force.

Jim Delehanty, veteran baseball player and second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, may quit the game after more than a decade of strenuous work on the diamond with various teams to become a policeman at Cleveland, says a special dispatch to the Chicago News. It was announced that Delehanty had taken the examination and had won sixth place on the eligibility list. There are 100 men on the eligible list.

Delehanty walked off with great honors in the physical examination at the Orange avenue bath house and in the mental examination his showing was also far above the average.

Delehanty lives at 11908 Superior avenue, Cleveland, and is a member of the Detroit baseball team. He has been a member of that team for three years and prior to that time he was a Washington player.

The intimation that Delehanty is "all in" recalls the record he made in a game with the Philadelphia Athletics last fall when his terrific batting was the feature. It is as follows:

His first time up saw Del hit the ball at a mile-a-minute gait to left field. In the fourth inning he hit a terrific grass cutter to Baker. The latter just barely fielded the ball and when he made a belated throw to first Del scrambled to second. In the fifth inning Del poked a clean hit to center field.

It was in the seventh inning when Delehanty pulled off his greatest hit. This was a line drive to deep right, and although Murphy fielded the ball in a hurry, the pill was hit so hard that Jim Delehanty.

Delehanty had little trouble making the circuit of the bases. Del had contributed his share all eight, but he insisted on "butting in" on the fracas in the glorious eighth. In this inning he took a healthy swing on one of Plank's curves and this time tripled to right field. If Del had hurried on this clout the chances are that he would have stretched it into a home run.

U. S. Athletes to Travel in State.

Negotiations are now in progress to charter a steamship to take the American amateur athletes to Stockholm, Sweden, next July, the vessel to anchor in the harbor and to be used as a hotel during the progress of the sports and then land the passengers at Cherbourg or Liverpool. Many of the officials will take their families and there is a possibility of a very large party enjoying this excursion.

Many Pacers Have Reached 2:10.

The number of pacers who have covered a mile in 2:10 is 1,224. A total of 89 were added to the list last year, the largest that ever gained the honor in a single season.

Dates for the English Henley.

The royal Henley regatta, which annually attracts the best oarsmen of Europe, will be rowed on the Thames this year on July 3, 4, 5 and 6.

Boxing Rooms in New York.

There are now 48 boxing clubs doing business in New York state under the Frawley law.

CLEVELAND'S FAMOUS SECOND BASEMAN

Napoleon Lajoie as Pictured by Cesare

By HOMER CROY.

Whatever Rhode Island is or hopes to be she owes to Senator Aldrich and Napoleon Lajoie. She wouldn't be on the map today, but would be found with a star in a footnote at the bottom of the page if it were not for Napoleon Lajoie, assisted by Mr. Aldrich. If Napoleon Lajoie had not hustled onto the scene in September, 1875, Nelson A. would have had too much on his hands and she would have slipped off into the Atlantic ocean of obscurity. With discriminating eye Napoleon selected Woonsocket, where his father had brought the name down from French Canada, for a birthplace.

Lajoie is pronounced in more different ways than any other name in the majors. In talking about the Clevelands the fans usually start in with Laj—and then suddenly have their attention attracted by a double and continue after it's all over with "lie and our Napoleon—." In the west it is pronounced Laz—and finished by coughing and kicking a hole in the ground, while in the spectacled east it is put over with a concentric twist of the lips and with an underhand fadeaway of the tongue. According to Napoleon it can be done by running the scales a few times and with some finger practice by going at it thus—Lazh-u-way.

In early life Napoleon's dreams were of being a cabby and wearing a real top hat and brass buttons with scroll work on them; he cared not for the busy marts of men or for being the tiger tamer in the gilded cage, but onward, upward did he struggle and strive, climbing for the heights while his careless and uncaring companions slept, until one fair day his dreams were realized, and his castles had in the steel structural work—and he was a sure enough cabby with the scroll work and a top hat that the rain couldn't affect—any more. Other boys who had grown up with him in Woonsocket could hardly believe that fame had snatched him from their midst and placed on his brow its jeweled diadem—the top hat.

Although now of another world Napoleon condescended to come back to their locals now and then for a game of ball, while Dobbin munched his oats under the grandstand, until the Fall River club of the New England league persuaded him to ride on its second sack. From there the Nifty Nap drove on to the Phillies, thence on to his present address.

He spends his winters on his farm ten miles north of Cleveland where his hobby is raising dogs. He has so many dogs that he cuts their meat by footpower, and when the moon is full farmers in the next county have to sleep with their windows down.

Napoleon is the most graceful man in any park in the United States. He has a mimeographed letter he sends back in answer to notes from sighing girls. Although tall and heavily built each motion is so polished that you can almost hear him sketching in charcoal and pronouncing vase—vawa.

Every time the Apollo of the porks raises his hand it's a picture, every time he clouts a single the soft purr of girls' lead pencils can be heard all over the bleachers, and every time he stumbles and skids on his ear he does it so gracefully that the ladies in the grandstands bruise their gloves.

Four Players Cost $50,000.

Four baseball players who cost $50,000 will be watched with interest this year and may or may not prove a good investment. They include Marty O'Toole, the Pittsburgh pitcher, who cost $22,500; Bill Kelly, his battery mate, who brought $6,500; "Lefty" Russell, purchased by Connie Mack for $11,000 two years ago, and Russel Blackburne, who put a dent of $10,000 in Comiskey's bank roll.

O'Day Is Certainly in Bad.

Now they say that in case Hank O'Day fails to make good as manager of the Cincinnati Reds he can fall back on his ability as an umpire. There must be a whole lot of consolation in that for Hank. One job is just about as bad as the other.

Jack Curley, manager for Jim Flynn, states that Tommy Ryan has signed an agreement to train Flynn for three months prior to the match with Johnson.

GOSSIP AMONG SPORTS

John M. Ward favors shorter spikes. So does Frank Baker.

Minneapolis will give Pitcher Leo Sage another trial this year.

Cecil Bankhead will for the third season manage the Junction City, Kan., team.

Hackenschmidt has discovered a good alibi for his defeat by Gotch that may boost him to another match.

Manager George Reed of Great Falls has signed as a first base candidate H. H. Heater, who hails from Fayetteville, Ark.

Jimmy Mullen has asked Toronto for an unconditional release, claiming that his ankle is such he cannot play ball again.

Every new league has lended outside men in organized baseball, says Tim Murnane. It will be interesting to see whether any precedents are to be broken.

Johnny Kling of the Boston Braves is one manager besides Connie Mack who is not worrying over his club making a poorer showing than last season.

Ty Cobb has told the great secret of his prowess at last. Good habits are essential in baseball, he asserts. It is now up to all youngsters to try Cobb's prescription.

Jerry Eddinger, last year an umpire in the American association where he had a troubled career, has been signed by President Tearney of the I I I league for this season.

Otto Jordan, now with Atlanta, says he was the first man to use the delayed steal and that he pulled it off in 1903 against the Chicago Cubs, while he was playing with Brooklyn.

The Swedish authorities are resorting to sharp tactics in the Olympian games, complains an eastern critic. Just so they don't carry their impertinence to the field and cop all the prizes.

Manager John Kling talks of transforming Harry Cowdy into a catcher.

TINKER PRAISES ED WALSH

Shortstop Says of All Pitchers He Has Tried to Hit White Sox Spit Ball Artist Is Hardest.

Since Joe Tinker has been out to San Francisco this winter he seems to have had almost as much fun talking baseball with the fans in California as he has playing for fans in the east during the summer.

The other afternoon one of the San Francisco critics got Joe to talk about the pitchers whom he had faced since he has been a ball player. He paid Mathewson a great compliment and also heaped tributes all over the name of Ed Walsh. Part of his conversation runs as follows:

"Of all the baseball pitchers I ever faced the hardest to hit is Ed Walsh. At least, he is the hardest for me to hit.

"I don't say he is the greatest pitcher in the world. I think Christy Mathewson is the greatest.

"Do you get that I say he is the greatest, not was the greatest.

"Some people try to tell you that Christy is a dead one. There is no question but that he has slowed up, but I maintain that he is the greatest pitcher in the world.

"He and Walsh are hard to hit for exactly opposite reasons.

"Walsh has you out before you try to bat. To tell you the truth, he overawes the batter. He is big and strong and his terrific speed and a wonderful break. Walsh is a spitball artist pure and simple. You know exactly what he's going to throw and what to be prepared for, but you can't hit the ball. He gets your goat.

"Mathewson is exactly opposite in method. Christy tenderly leads you astray, so to speak. You are always sure you can hit him—but you can't. No other pitcher in the world has so many resources."

Yale's Magnificent Baseball Cage.

Yale university's new $20,000 baseball cage will be 140x110 feet and besides the baseball candidates it is to accommodate the track, tennis and winter football squads. It will have a dirt floor, plenty of light and will be built of steel and brick. It will be located on the lot in the rear of the swimming pool and will bring the gymnasium, pool and cage for other sports all together.

Yale Men Like to Box.

Yale University's boxing classes are growing bigger each year. Between 150 and 200 students will be enrolled after the Christmas holidays. At the present time there are more students taking up the manly art of self-defense at the New Haven college than at the corresponding time for many years. In the past various members of the faculty have also been members of the boxing class at Yale and several of them it is expected will join again this term. Instructor Mose King says Tom Shevlin, Ted Jones, Dutch Goebel, Ham Andrus, as well as Hobbs and a few of the other stars who made football history at Yale owe much of their success to boxing. King says it is beneficial to every muscle that a football player brings into use on the gridiron.

The Scottish professional golf championship for 1912 will take place on the course of the Dunbar club, Thursday and Friday, June 13 and 14. This is in the week previous to the dates fixed for the qualifying rounds in connection with the open Scottish championship at Moirfield.

SYNOPSIS.

Dan Blair, the 22-year-old son of the fifty-million-dollar copper king of Blairtown, Mont., is a guest at the English home of Lady Galorey. Dan's father had been courteous to Lord Galorey during his visit to the United States and the courtesy is now being returned to the young man. The youth has an ideal girl in his mind. He meets Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, a beautiful widow, who is attracted by his immense fortune and takes a liking to her. When Dan was a boy, a girl sang a solo at a church and he had never forgotten her. The Galoreys, Lily and Dan attend a London theater where one Letty Lane is the star. Dan recognizes her as the girl from his town, and going behind the scenes introduces himself and she remembers him. He learns that Prince Poniatowsky is suitor and escort to Letty.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

Galorey nodded. "That is just why I toddled in to see you!"

Ruggles' caller had been shown to the sitting room, where he and Dan hobnobbed and smoked during the Westerner's visit. There was a pile of papers on the table, in one corner a typewriter covered by a black cloth. Galorey took a chair and, refusing a cigarette, lit his pipe.

"I didn't have the pleasure of meeting you in the West when I was out there with Blair. I knew Dan's father rather well."

Ruggles responded: "I knew him rather well, too, for thirty years. If," he went on, "Blair hadn't known you pretty well he wouldn't have sent the boy out to you as he has done. He was keen on every trail. I might say that he had been over every one of 'em like a hound before he set the boy loose."

Galorey answered, "Quite so," gravely. "I know it. I knew it when Dan turned up at Osdene." Holding his pipe bowl in the palm of his slender hand, he smoked reflectively. He hadn't thought of such things as he had been doing, for many years. His sense of humor was the strongest thing in London Galorey. It's only thing in him perhaps that had been left unsmirched by the touch of the world. He was unquestionably a gentleman.

"Blair, however," he said, "wasn't as keen on this scent as you'd expect. His intuition was wrong."

Ruggles raised his eyebrows slightly.

"I mean to say," Lord Galorey went on, "that he knew me in the West when I had cut loose for a few blessed months from just these things into which he has sent his boy from what, if I had a son, God knows I'd throw him as far as I could."

"Blair wanted Dan to see the world."

"Of course, that is right enough. We all have to see it, I fancy, but this boy isn't ready to look at it."

"He is twenty-two," Ruggles returned. "When I was his age I was supporting four people."

Galorey went on: "Osdene Park at present isn't the window for Blair's boy to see life through, and that is what I have come up to London to talk to you about, Mr. Ruggles. I should like to have you take him away."

"What's Dan been up to down there?"

"Nothing as yet, but he is in the pocket of a woman—he is in a nest of women."

Ruggles' broad face had not altered its expression of quiet expectation.

"There's a lot of 'em down there?" he asked.

"There are two," Galorey said briefly, "and one of them is my wife."

Ruggles turned his cigarette between his great fingers. He was a slow thinker. He had none of old Blair's keenness, but he had other qualities. Galorey saw that he had not been quite understood, and he waited and then said:

"Lady Galorey is like the rest of modern wives, and I am like a lot of modern husbands. We each go our own way. My way is a worthless one. God knows I don't stand up for it, but it is not my wife's way in any sense of the word."

"She Is Aiming at Ten Million Pounds."

"Does she want Dan to go along on her road?" Ruggles asked. "And how far?"

"We are financially strapped just now," said Galorey calmly, "and she has got money from the boy." He didn't remove his pipe from his mouth; still holding it between his teeth he put his hand in his pocket, took out his wallet, drew forth four checks and laid them down before Ruggles. "It is quite a sum," Galorey noted, "sufficient to do a lot to Osdene Park in the way of needed repairs." Ruggles had never seen a smile such as curved his companion's lips. "But Osdene Park will have to be repaired by money from some other source."

Ruggles wondered how the husband had got hold of the checks, but he didn't ask and he did not look at the papers.

"When Dan came to the Park," said Galorey, "I stopped bridge playing, but this more than takes its place!"

Ruggles' big hand went slowly toward the checks, he touched them with his fingers and said: "Is Dan in love with your wife?"

And Lord Galorey laughed and said: "Lord no, my dear man, not even that! It is pure good nature on his part—mere prodigality. Edith appealed to him, that's all."

Relief crossed Ruggles' face. He understood in a flash the worldly

"That Is Just Why I Toddled In to See You."

appeal to the rich young man and believed the story the husband told him.

"Have you spoken to the boy?"

"My dear chap, I have spoken to him about nothing. I preferred to come to you."

"You said," Ruggles continued, "there were two ladies down to your place."

Galorey had refilled his pipe and held it as before in the palm of his hand.

"I can look after the affairs of my wife, and this shan't happen again, I promise you—not at Osdene, but I'm afraid I can not do much in the other case. The Duchess of Breakwater has been at Osdene for nearly three weeks, and Dan is in love with her."

Ruggles put the four checks one on top of the other.

"Is the lady a widow?"

"Unfortunately yes."

"So that's the nest Dan has got into at Osdene," the Westerner said. And Galorey answered: "That is the nest."

"And he has gone out there today—got a wire this morning."

"The duchess has been in an awful funk," said Galorey, "because Dan's been stopping in London so long. She sent him a message and as soon as Dan wired back that he was coming to the Park I decided to come here and see you."

Ruggles ruminated. "Has the duchess complications financially?"

"Rather!" the other answered.

And Ruggles turned his broad honest face full on Galorey. "Do you think she could be bought off?"

Galorey took his pipe out of his mouth.

"It depends on how far Dan has gone on with her. To be frank with you, Mr. Ruggles, it is a case of emotion on the part of the woman. She is really in love with Dan. Gad," exclaimed the nobleman, "I have been on the point of turning the whole brood out of doors these last days. It was like imprisoning a mountain breeze in a charnel house, a woman with her scars and her experience and that boy. I don't know where you've kept him or how you kept him as he is, but he is as clear as water. I have talked to him and I know."

Nothing in Ruggles' expression had changed until now. His eyes glowed.

"Dan's all right," he said softly. "Don't you worry. He's all right. I guess his father knew what he was doing, and I'll bet the whole thing was just what he sent him over here for. Old Dan Blair wasn't worth a copper when the boy was born, and yet he had ideas about everything and he seemed to know more in that old gray head of his than a whole library of books. Dan's all right."

"My dear man," said the nobleman, "that is just where you Americans are wrong. You comfort yourself with your eternal 'Dan's all right,' and you won't see the truth. You won't breathe the word scandal, and yet you are thick enough in them, God knows. You won't admit them, but they are there. Now be honest and look at the truth, will you? You are a man of common sense. Dan Blair is not all right. He is in an infernally dangerous position. The Duchess of Breakwater will marry him. It is what she has wanted to do for years, but she has not found a man rich enough, and she will marry this boy offhand."

"Well," said the Westerner slowly, "if he loves her and if he marries her—"

"Marries her!" exclaimed the nobleman. "There you are again! Do you think marriage makes it any better? Why, if she went off to the Continent with him for six weeks and then set him free, that would be preferable to marrying her. My dear man," he said, leaning over the table where Ruggles sat, "if I had a boy I would rather have him marry Letty Lane of the Gaiety. Now you know what I mean."

Ruggles' face, which had hardened, relaxed.

"I have seen that lady," he exclaimed with satisfaction; "I have seen her several times."

Galorey sank back into his chair and neither man spoke for a few seconds. Turning it all over in his slow mind, Ruggles remembered Dan's absorption in the last few days. "So there are three women in the nest," he concluded thoughtfully, and Gordon Galorey repeated:

"No, not three. What do you mean?"

"Your wife"—Ruggles held up one finger and Galorey interrupted him to murmur:

"I'll take care of Edith."

"The Duchess of Breakwater you think won't talk of money?"

"No, don't count on it. She is aiming at ten million pounds."

Ruggles was holding up his second finger.

"Well, I guess Dan has gone out to take care of her today."

Dan and Ruggles had seen "Mandalay" from a box from the pit and from the stalls. On the table lay a book of the opera. While talking with Galorey, Ruggles had unconsciously arranged the checks on top of the libretto of "Mandalay."

"I'll take care of Miss Lane," Ruggles said at length.

His lordship echoed, "Miss Lane?" and looked up in surprise. "What Miss Lane, for God's sake?"

"Miss Letty Lane at the Gaiety," Ruggles answered.

"Why, she isn't in the question, my dear man."

"You put her there just now yourself."

"Bosh!" Galorey exclaimed impatiently. "I spoke of her as being the limit, the last thing on the line."

"No," corrected the other, "you put the Duchess of Breakwater as the limit."

Galorey smiled frankly. "You are right, my dear chap," he accepted, "and I stand by it."

Gangrene and Oxygen.

A remarkable instance of the advantage which medical men may derive from chemistry has been published in the reports of the Hospital Hotel Dieu at Paris. A young student wrote a thesis in which he showed that gangrene and deficiency of oxygen were to be regarded as cause and effect. Dr. Laugier, surgeon in chief of the hospital having a case of spontaneous gangrene under his care, proceeded to test the theory. The patient, a man seventy-five years of age, had the disease in one foot—one toe was mortified, and the whole member was in danger. The diseased part was enclosed in an apparatus contrived to disengage oxygen continuously, and in a short time the gangrene was arrested and the foot recovered its healthy condition. A singular experiment tried upon another patient, equally aged, and equally successful, from which the inference follows that treatment with oxygen is an effectual remedy for a disease which too often infests hospitals.

It Needed a Diagram.

Dealer—Yes, quite good, only I can't quite see what it's all about.

Artist—Why, it's clear as mud! The farmyard at sunrise.

Dealer—Of course, of course. But, say, would you have any objection to making an affidavit to that effect?

Bryan says he likes Woodrow Wilson for the malignant enemies he has made. A man who doesn't make enemies never did attract much attention.

And when the excellent Mr Bryan was advocating substantially the same things, the reactionary Mr Roosevelt was in for having him lined up against a wall and shot. (See Wool Exchange Speech, in the Campaign of 1896)

There is something awry in Gov Harmon's view of the initiative and referendum. According to reports of his opposition to those measures, he is convinced that the people are not yet capable of determining what is best for them, yet Gov. Harmon believes they are capable of wisely determining who should be president. In other words, according to his view, they can pick out a good president, but are not fit to judge what is good or bad legislation. This is a sad state of mind to be in.

The birthday anniversary of Abraham Lincoln witnessed a strange spectacle in these United States. On that day, the anniversary of the birth of the American president who, more than any before or after him, expressed a constant and undying faith in the ability of the American people to rule themselves, the president, in a public speech, made the astounding statement that "there are those who do not believe the people are fitted for popular government, the fact is, we know they are not."

PROTECTION VS. TARIFF FOR REVENUE.

Workmen in Germany are "protected" by a tariff wall approximately as high as the Payne-Aldrich tariff wall. In England the workers are not so "protected."

Result: Bricklayers in free-trade England receive $9.72 per week of 52½ hours, while the protected bricklayers of high-protection Germany receive $7.50 per week of 59 hours.

Here are a few more comparisons which tell their own story:

| | Eng. | Ger. |
|---|---|---|
| Carpenters per week | $8.44 | $7.50 |
| Fitters, per week | 8.64 | 7.68 |
| Compositors, per week | 7.92 | 6.00 |
| Plumbers, per week | 9.54 | 6.88 |

And the cost of living is much higher in Germany than in England.

AHEAD OF US

Rural Mails and Postal Devices in New Zealand Are All Right.

New Zealand enjoys considerable distinction on account of innovations and improvements in postal service. The Dominion has a system of universal penny postage (2 cents for a letter of 4 ounces to any part of New Zealand, and to other countries, including the United States, 2 cents per ounce), which has caused an enormous growth of mail business.

There is also in vogue here an interesting system of stamping letters by machines which register the amount of the postage, without adhesive stamps being used at all, the Government periodically collecting the amount of the postage from the firms using these machines. About 100 of these machines are in use in each of the four leading towns in New Zealand, so that it is quite common here to receive letters without adhesive stamps on them. This system saves the leading business firms which use it the trouble of having to stick stamps on envelopes, and also losses arising from petty pilfering of stamps by employees.

A good parcel-post system is in vogue here, and most parcels are now dispatched through the post office.

Physicians Raise Prices

The Geauga county physicians have organized and sent out the following announcement:

Owing to a special advance in physicians supplies and drugs, the physicians of Chardon have found it necessary to make a slight increase in fees beginning Feb. 20, 1912. F. S. Pomeroy, R. C. Pease, W. E. Allyn, Swan & Hertzog, Lida Moree, J. R. Cevis.

RANDOM THOUGHTS
By Local Critics.

There is no butter trust, but when the cheese makers throughout the country began to make butter the Elgin Board immediately began to reduce the price of that article five cents a pound at a clip.

The other day a prisoner in the Ohio penitentiary died from tuberculosis. In a few hours more, if he had lived, his sentence would have expired and he would have been a free man. He had been sentenced for a comparatively trivial offense—say stealing from his rich neighbor. He could not have been pardoned as was Banker Morse, who robbed the widow and the orphan, although a trip to Europe would doubtless have been good for him.

A Good Word for Local Coal Dealer.

Speaking about the coal men and his practices. The other day I got a statement of an account which has been running since last December. Nothing strange about that, you say? Well, but wait! Every time coal was wanted the order was for two tons if soft coal, and for one ton, if hard. What caused me to faint (almost) was the fact that not a single item called for an even ton. The charges ran like this: Dec. 1, to 1950 lbs. coal; Jan. 1, to 3760 lbs coal, etc., and this was the first time in an experience of almost 20 years of coal buying that any such statement was presented. Always before the bills called for even tons or a little more. I do not believe the other dealers were more accurate in their weighing—they simply called 1950 lbs more or less, a ton, and billed it accordingly.

Two "sayings of great men" have recently been given to the world. The first and most startling or amazing, or shocking, or amusing—just as it strikes you—was when Talkative Teddy called the representatives of the press into his Oyster Bay home and modestly drew the "deadly parallel" between his own opinions and those of Lincoln. The Colonel did not say which was the greater man but the inference was obvious. Among other things, he said that he was a "progressive" with the bridle on." At that time this remark was not so strange, but when he came to Ohio on Wednesday of last week he took off not only the bridle but the breeching also. Now he cannot be guided by the Steel Trust nor backed up by the administration. The other and less unexpected utterance was Governor Harmon's defy to the progressives in his own party. The latter was frank, at any rate. Seems to me that the signs of the times now spell Bryan, since there would be no use in supporting Teddy, as he is not nearly so well grounded in the doctrine of progress as Bryan, and Harmon and Taft are professed reactionaries. This leaves only Bryan and Wilson to lead those citizens who believe the government belongs to the people.

The Pikers

The milder weather of the past few weeks has been noticeable in the increased Saturday evening, downtown, crowd. Particularly noticeable in the crowd of "pikers" that stand around on the street and pass remarks on the passers-by,—young girls being their specialty. There is always a row of these "spinsters" extending from the corner of St. Clair and Main, to beyond the "picture shows." It ought to be labeled "Piker Row."

It's a thing to be proud of—(nix) It's a distinguishing feature of a country town,—an advertisement of the number and quality of brainless young men the town supports. Young fellows between their first and tenth shave or regular old social vultures, whose level and standard of amusement is exactly the same size as their brains. They think it's great sport to "bait" girls. They haven't manhood enough to look a decent girl in the face—and only get "nerve" enough to talk to any kind after dark.

In preference to this type of young fellows give us the kind with at least brains enough to enjoy a quiet Saturday evening poker game—or the physical courage enough to amuse themselves by fighting—fellows with red blood. A "piker" hasn't red blood. It's the color of a burned cigarette.

Can't help thinking about those Columbus Society women who appeared before the franchise committee of the Constitutional Convention a couple of weeks ago with the avowed purpose of knocking the woman suffrage movement into a cocked hat. They represented some of the best families in the Capital, and doubtless thought that it would only be necessary for them to tell the committee their views in order to have the whole movement stopped. They came, they talked—and shades of dead issues note the result! Before these "high class" ladies talked some of the committee were undecided on the question, but when they heard what the "real quality" of the state thought about it they voted 16 to 1 in favor of submitting the woman suffrage amendment. Then, too, these ladies wanted the foreign-born man denied the franchise, and ALSO the poor man—the men of no property and little education. If they had had their way half the men in the state would have been denied suffrage. Seems as though these ladies had better continue to give pink teas and pet poodle dogs—something they understand.

TWENTY-FIVE YEAR FRANCHISE GRAB

than seventy (70) pounds to the yard.

Section 5. Said Company shall maintain said railroad to conform to the grades now existing in said streets so that the top of the rail shall be on a level with said grades. In the event of any change or changes in the grade of said streets, said Company shall change the grade of its railroad at its own expense, to correspond to the grade of said streets as established by the changes so made by said City; and said Company shall neither claim nor have the right to any damages by reason of such changes.

Section 6. The Company agrees to reconstruct its track in Erie street with high T rails where girder rails are now in use, and relay same with crushed stone or slag ballast, and concrete foundation for brick pavement. Work on this street to be completed not later than November 1st, 1913.

Section 7. Said Railroad Company shall keep the space occupied by its tie beds and between the rails of its track and between the main track and side tracks or tracks which is not paved, filled with gravel or cinders at the option of the Council of said City, and shall keep same in good repair.

Section 8. Whenever the Council shall deem it necessary to pave any of said streets or any part thereof along said route of said railroad, said grantee or its assigns shall at the same time and with the same material, pave said railroad between the rails and for one (1) foot outside of each rail, including all turn-outs, and devil strips, and shall maintain said paving in good repair and to the satisfaction of the Council.

Section 9. Said grantee or its assigns shall in removing snow or ice from its tracks or road-bed so dispose of same as not to obstruct the remainder of the street and the same must be so evenly distributed thereon as not to impair the usefulness of, or impede travel on said street or on any part thereof.

Section 10. The main tracks of said railroad over the routes herein granted shall be maintained as now laid in the center of said street, except on Erie street from Fobes street easterly to the corporation line.

Section 11. No turn-out side-track or other ground structure except a single track and necessary equipment shall be laid on that portion of the route herein granted lying and being between the point of intersection of State and Erie streets and the point of intersection of South St. Clair and Washington streets.

And no turnout, side-track, switch or other ground structure except a single track and necessary operating appliances, shall be constructed by said grantee at any point on said route without first having the location thereof agreed upon with or designated in writing by the Council. Said City expressly retains the right to designate and direct where and in what manner all turn-outs, switches and side-tracks shall be constructed.

Section 12. The poles to be erected by said grantee for the support of electric or other wires shall be of iron inside the fire limits in said City and of cedar at other places, and shall be straight, shaved or polished smooth and kept painted, and shall be placed at such points in the street as said Council shall approve, but in no event nearer than seventy-five feet apart. At such places along the route herein granted as existing telegraph and telephone companies have selected and are maintaining a line of poles with wires thereon, said grantee shall so erect its poles and attach thereto its span wires as that the same shall be located entirely above or entirely below, and at all points clear of, the line of wires now strung and maintained by such companies. Not less than ten days before the repairing or reconstructing of said road the grantee herein shall notify in writing any company or companies now maintaining a line of poles and wires along any part of the route herein granted, of the date it proposes to begin the work of repairing or reconstruction. Said telegraph or telephone company shall have at its option the right to require the grantee, and it shall be obligatory upon the grantee, to erect upon one side of such street poles not less than forty feet in length for the joint use of said grantee and such telegraph or telephone company shall pay of one-third of the cost of construction and maintenance thereof.

The City of Painesville shall have the right at all times and at such points and places as it may desire, to use the poles of said grantee for the purpose of stringing and maintaining its electric light wires thereon, and supporting thereon its lamps and other lighting equipment without charge, provided that said wires and lamps shall be so placed as to not interfere with the proper use of said poles by the grantee, and provided that said Railroad Company shall not be liable to persons or property injured or damaged by reason of such use of its poles by said City, and said City expressly contracts to save and indemnify the grantee from any damage which may result by reason of such use by it of grantee's poles. On Erie Street the feed wires of said grantee's road shall be erected and maintained on the north side of the street. On St Clair and State streets upon the east side of the street.

Section 13. Cars, except special and limited, running over said routes shall stop for passengers at all street intersections and in addition have and maintain regular stops for that purpose at all times, three on Erie street equally distant apart between Fobes and Elm streets, and two on Erie street equally distant between Elm and State streets, and one on South St. Clair street opposite the St. Clair street school building.

Section 14. The rate of fare for the transportation of passengers shall not exceed five (5) cents from any point in the City, as the same now exists, or may hereafter exist, to any other point therein over the line of railroad owned or controlled by grantee or over the lines of any other person or company with whom they have an exchange transfer agreement. The rate of fare from any point in the corporation, as the same now exists, or may hereafter exist, east to ...pany and to the car stop maintained by said railroad, which shall be next nearest to main offices of said Nursery Company shall be not to exceed five (5) cents. The rate of fare from any point in the corporation, as the same now exists, or may hereafter exist, west to Stop 72 at the cross road known as Lover's Lane shall be not to exceed five (5) cents. The rate of fare from any point in the corporation, as the same now exists, or may hereafter exist, to the Painesville Township Park shall be ten (10) cents.

Section 15. Said grantee, its successors and assigns, shall run cars over said railroad, and the entire routes herein granted on such schedule of time as shall be satisfactory to the City and each and every car run by said grantee from the east corporation line of the City of Painesville to the eastward over its line of road shall be run over the entire route upon Erie street herein granted within the City; provided they shall not be required except as hereinafter provided, to run such cars thereover oftener than the same are run through eastward over the route extending to the east line of the County of Lake.

Said grantee shall run and operate cars over the route between Main street and the right of way of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company at all reasonable hours and upon such a schedule of time as the traffic and business shall demand.

Section 16. Said grantee shall save and hold harmless the City of Painesville against any and all suits for injunction, and for claims for damages of every kind and description, growing out of, or arising because of the acts of said grantee, its agents, servants and employees in reconstructing, repairing, operating and maintaining said railroad, and shall indemnify said City against any liability resulting from the construction and operation of the same.

Section 17. All work done under this franchise in the construction, reconstruction, repair, operation and maintaining of said railroad shall be done at the expense of said grantee, its successors and assigns, and under the direction and to the approval and satisfaction of the Council of said City of Painesville throughout the term of this grant.

Section 18. The rights hereby granted to The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company to repair, re-construct, and maintain its lines of street railroad within the City and operate its cars thereover shall continue during the period of twenty-five (25) years from and after the date of the passage of this ordinance and its acceptance in writing filed with the Clerk of the City of Painesville, by The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company, it being intended hereby to grant to said The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company the right to maintain its lines of street railroad within the City of Painesville and to operate its cars thereover along the same routes, in the same places and upon the same terms and conditions as formerly applied to it under a previous ordinance, except as herein expressly modified, for the full period of twenty-five (25) years from the date of the legal passage and going into effect of this ordinance.

Section 19. This grant is made and all rights hereunder given are given upon the express contract and agreement of The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company that upon its acceptance of the grant as herein provided for it will proceed as soon as the right to do so can be procured from the proper lawful authorities to occupy the public grounds and from private owners the right to cross private properties, to construct, maintain and operate thereover a line of its railroad from a point on its present line of railroad running between the City of Painesville and the Village of Fairport, easterly, to the present Painesville Township Park location on Lake Erie immediately to the west of what is known as the Hardy Road, that the work of constructing said railroad will be begun forthwith upon obtaining the right so to do from the public authorities and private owners as herein stated, and not later than July 1st, 1912, and said work will be prosecuted diligently and faithfully to a completion not later than May 1st, 1913, that thereafter it will operate a passenger traffic over said railroad commensurate with the requirements of the public in the use of the same, between the first days of May and November of each year, and at and for no other period or portion of any year, that the said line of railroad will be built by it under such terms, conditions and in accordance with the requirements imposed by the public authorities having charge of the route over which the same runs.

Upon the failure or neglect of said grantee, its successors or assigns, to perform and comply with each and all of the provisions of this grant, and to construct and operate its said line of railroad from a point on its present line of railroad running between the City of Painesville and the Village of Fairport to said Township Park and to furnish transportation for the public along the lines of its road herein granted and over said line of railroad to be constructed by it to the Township Park as aforesaid, all the rights and privileges granted hereby shall be forfeited and become null and void at the option of the Council of said City of Painesville, and such forfeiture shall be deemed complete upon the adoption of an ordinance of the City Council so declaring the same and from that date all the rights, privileges and franchises herein granted shall cease and determine to said grantee, its successors and assigns, provided that in the event the grantee hereunder shall not obtain the right from the proper public authorities and private owners to complete said line of railroad to the Township Park as herein provided for and this ordinance shall become in-operative and void for that reason, then the existing grants of said The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company as given it by ordinance passed on May 5th, 1901, shall remain and continue in force and this ordinance shall not operate to repeal said existing ordinances and grants or affect the rights of the respective parties thereto and thereunder.

Section 20. Said grantee shall file its acceptance of the franchise herein provided for within thirty days from the passage of this ordinance, on penalty of forfeiture, if said acceptance is not so filed, and if the same is filed said franchise and the acceptance thereof shall constitute a contract between the City of Painesville and said grantee, its successors and assigns, subject only to the right of the City to make all such reasonable regulations not inconsistent with the provisions hereof as public rights, safety and convenience may require.

Section 21. All ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed and this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its legal publication and acceptance by the grantee as herein provided for.

WICKLIFFE

Mrs. John Culp and baby, Lawrence, of Kirtland, visited at the Morris home in Wickliffe Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

The second and third grades of the grammar school gave a George Washington entertainment Tuesday afternoon, which was attended by the pupils, parents and friends. The children were highly complimented and they will give this same entertainment at the Willoughby school in the near future.

The revival services of the Presbyterian church, lead by the Evangelist Wilson of Findlay, Ohio, was a great success. The church choir and the choir master furnished the music and the meetings were well attended.

A large barn owned by the millionaire Burke of this town was struck by lightning on the 20th of February and burned to the ground. Everything was saved with the exception of three stubborn mules, which returned to the firey furnace after being led out.

Miss Anna Bones was on the sick list a few days of last week.

Miss Caroline Morris attended a masquerade given by the Dew Drop Club of Kirtland, at Kirtland Town Hall, Friday.

Miss Alice Rudd of Wickliffe spent all day Thursday with the Morris family.

The two little children of Mrs. Wm Sloat have been ill with bronchitis.

A hard time dance will be given by Alfred Harding at the Town Hall Friday evening of this week.

Mrs. Horatius Graves has been on the sick list.

Mr and Mrs Horace Greenaway and two children of Cleveland spent Saturday and Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr and Mrs. John Humph.

Mrs. Lulah Wittle of Cleveland spent Tuesday evening with her parents, Mr and Mrs Warren Vial.

Mrs. Dr Stork and daughter went shopping Saturday.

Mrs. Jennie Bowman sang a solo at the revival last Thursday evening.

Mr Perl Harris, barber of Wickliffe, has moved from the building owned by Frank Hardaker into one owned by Walter Bates.

PERRY

A number of Perry residents attended the auto show in Cleveland Tuesday. A few of them were: G. H. Snikeld, W. G. Feith, D. B. Shearer and Dr. Black.

The night before Ash Wednesday, or the first day of Lent, is known among the English as Pan Cake Tuesday, and was celebrated as such by many families in Perry. R. S. West and family spent the evening at the home of Rev. Wright in Geneva.

Thursday evening was the time appointed for the M. E. box social, but because of the storm it was postponed until Friday evening.

Miss Claribel Season spent Sunday at her home in Hudson.

Miss Esther Wood spent Sunday and Monday as the guest of the Misses Schoels of Toledo. Mr. Frank Browe and Mr. Ralph Shepard were guests at the Scheel's home at the same time.

Mrs. Ellen Mitchell was shopping in Cleveland Saturday.

The County W. C. T. U. was invited to attend a special service at the Crowder Mission in Painesville Tuesday.

Mrs. Wm. Lapham is very seriously ill.

Mr. C. G. Keener has purchased Max Craine's home, Mr. Craine having purchased the Woodworth farm on the South Ridge and intending to make the change early in March.

Mr and Mrs Fred Bickle were the guests of relatives here Sunday.

Several men from Perry will attend the hardware convention in Cleveland this week. Mr Dreutt and Mr Langshaw will attend.

Miss Helen Kilcawley found it impossible to be at school Friday, because of the funeral of her cousin.

Mr Hugh Buckles was at home nearly all of last week.

Mr Harry Belknap was at home on Sunday.

Mr and Mrs Paul Darrell of Unionville spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs Sallithorpe.

MENTOR

The weather of the last week has been the most peculiar ever. Just as maple sugar folks were about to go at "tapping" there came such a blizzard as has not been known in this county for many years, and but very few persons ventured onto the streets all day Thursday for the blinding snow, high wind and slippery walking made it quite an intelligent excuse for staying right in doors by the fire. The snow came down in great wet flakes that stuck to window panes almost shutting out what light there was—and the wind was something terrible! It has been estimated that the speed of the wind was near if not quite seventy miles an hour! The houses were rocked in a most frightful manner, and three separate and distinct thunder claps were heard, together with some lightning—presaging colder weather. Today (Monday) the rain of last night has carried off some of the snow, so that no more sleighs are seen on the streets, which are again rivers of dark unhappy water, and few people are seen walking for pleasure.

The marriage of Miss Mary Galloway, daughter of David and Addie Ryder Galloway, whose home is on Maple street, was celebrated at the home of the parents of the bride on Friday evening, Feb. 14th. Mr. Geo Richardson, the groom, is an inspector for the Western Union Telegraph Co. we understand, and the young people will remain here in the village for the present, at least.

Albert Henson has decided to accept the position offered up at Winnipeg, Canada, and will proceed there early this spring accompanied by his wife and little daughter.

The automobile fever still continues in Mentor, though it is quite gratifying to notice the many fine sleighs and equally handsome horses are seen on our streets during winter time, showing that the old horse has not been relegated to the "bone yard" just yet! Mr. Maurice Rosenthall is the latest purchaser, having invested in a DeTamble machine one day last week, we hear. That spring will bring more buyers from our people, is a "sure thing."

Mr. William Eddy, who was taken to the Painesville hospital in Post's ambulance, some two or three weeks ago, having what was supposed to be a bad case of blood poisoning, is getting along well and looking forward to coming home sometime next month.

Mr. John Tyler, at the St. Vincent's hospital in the city, is also coming on finely, and hopes to be at home again before very long.

The talk on "India" given by Mr. Ryall to the Mentor branch of the Y. M. C. A. a few evenings ago, was very much enjoyed by all present and was illustrated by lantern slides. A county conference is to be held here on Saturday afternoon and evening, at which more than a hundred boys are expected to be present, and to whom supper is to be served by the Mentor ladies.

Mr. George Hoose visited his brother, Mr. Warren Hoose of Waite Hill, one day last week.

Two of our Mentor gentlemen, interested in the growing Y. M. C. A. work in our village, namely Messrs. N. C. Frost and T. D. Morley, attended the "Rural Life Conference" held in Madison last week, Mr. Morley remaining for the evening session, as he is president of the schools at Mentor Center, and wished to hear the address of Prof. Harbourt of Andover on "The Needs of the Rural Schools."

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Sweet, former Mentor folks are expected soon to come up from Georgia, to visit relatives in this vicinity.

The Ladies' Aid society is announced to meet at the home of Mrs. Chas. Glenn this week.

Miss Mary Reaford is visiting her cousins, Mrs. John McKee and family, and other relatives in Cleveland for some days now.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lamb have moved out of the rooms they have been occupying over the brick store, and into the Absalom Case house on Maple street, now owned by T. G. Hart.

Mrs. R. W. Emerson of New Philadelphia, this state, has been a recent guest of Mrs. Dye at the Methodist parsonage.

Mrs. Taft of Painesville has been spending the past week out here as the guest of Mrs. John Tylor at the Center.

We understand that a new Ginseng Club was recently formed at the meeting at Wooster of Ohio Ginseng growers, and Mr. Glenn Boothe of South Mentor, one of the largest growers in the state, was chosen as one of the officers. The Ohio Experimental Station people are at work with private growers, trying to find something that will put an end to the ginseng pests, for like everything else, it too has its enemies. The next meeting of the new association is to be held in Mentor, some time in July.

Mrs. Stephen Remington has instituted suit against the Nickel Plate R. R. for the killing of her husband, last October, while he was crossing their tracks here, the plea being that the bell that ought to have been rung was out of order, so that no warning whatever was given. A claim of ten thousand dollars is the amount entered, and Mentor folks think that amount small enough, certainly, for such an accident which was inexcusable.

Mrs. N. C. Frost entertained at luncheon one day last week, Mrs. C. W. Sandberg, and Mrs. Henry Sandberg, together with her aunt, Mrs. Dille of Greeley, Colo.

The new Methodist preacher is expected next Sunday, and as he is a man who has had enough "faith" in his "calling" to preach the Gospel to lead him to give up a fine salaried position in order to obey the "call" it is thought by our people that he is surely the "genuine" thing, and he will find a welcome waiting him. The name of the young man is still a mystery.

Mrs. Eva Boyd Munson goes very soon to Detroit, to spend some time with her son and his wife, much to the regret of the hosts of friends she has here in Mentor.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Hart are expected to return home from California sometime early in April.

Rev. Harshman of Cleveland spoke in the M. E. church yesterday, while Rev. Winters of Kirtland was to speak in the evening. The last Sunday in the month is Temperance Sunday, and Mrs. Dilbort of Painesville was out and spoke to the children, telling them about that grand old man, Don Neal Dow, who when 84 years old, started to fight intemperance. The "Lincoln Legion of Honor" pledges have been circulated very freely, and almost everybody, old and young, have signed them.

Mr. Hicks, the St. Louis weather prophet, declares this will be a very late spring, with snow mixed along through March and April, even into May! It is our opinion that such evil prophets should be shut up.

The last Miscellany Club was with Mrs. A. D. Carlston, and was an "open" or "social" day. The weather was most unpleasant, but many members were hauled back and forth by the son of the hostess, on his bobsled, thereby getting their first ride of the season. Delicious refreshments were served, a number of the young ladies acting as waiters. Music was enjoyed very much, as it always is, when furnished by those we know and love. The following guests were present: Mrs. Clark Bradway, Mrs. Shattuck, Mrs. Frank Jenkins, Mrs. Dills, Mrs. Spindle, Miss Louisa Upham, Mrs. Anna Shumaker, Mrs. Dye, Miss Evelyn Smith, Mrs. Upham, and the Misses Marguerite Johnson, Hazel Hatt, Ruth Bradway, Betty Spindle, Josephine Johnson, and Miss Wasson of Willoughby. The next regular meeting of the Club is to be held with Mrs. Robert Case at the Center on the afternoon of March 6th.

News of Mr. Henry Moore, of Los Angeles, is very discouraging, and little if any hope is felt for his recovery.

The new Miscellany "program committee" has just been appointed by the president, Mrs. George Marsh, and is a good one. Mrs. Clara Gilbert is chairman, assisted by Mrs. R. M. Case and Miss Elsie Hayford. They are not expected to have their programs out before next summer.

The Lake county friends of Rev. C. D. Williams, now "Bishop of Michigan," will be pleased to hear him speak in no uncertain tones, in the following words addressed to the Henry George League of New York City. The subject was "The New Morality." "The so-called four hundred are as much parasites as are the very poor, their influence is not American, and their ideas are not in conformity with the spirit of this country. We all realize that justice and righteousness cannot prevail so long as we have such people enjoying wealth they do not earn, and toiling not. "Put them to work for the benefit of mankind."

One more boy in blue has passed onward,
The bugle called in the evening gray,
And wrapped in the flag he defended
His comrades laid him away.
One more boy in blue has passed onward,
They are passing on, one by one,
But our Nation shall never forget them,
Or the glorious deeds they have done.

SANTA FE The Oldest City in America

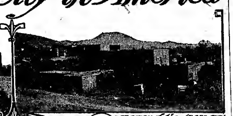
RUINS of the OLD MISSION



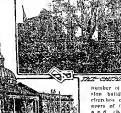
SECTION of the ADOBE CITY

WHILE many many Americans are, year after year, traveling over Europe gazing in wonderment at ruined churches of another age, at picturesque natural surroundings, and at natives in fantastic dress, they seem ignorant or oblivious of the fact that they might find similar attractions here in our own country if they would look for them and go a little out of the "beaten paths" to find them, as they do in the old world. Particularly rich in such elements of the unusual is our great southwest, the scene of the oldest civilization in the United States. It is a region that up to this time has not had the attention it deserves from either colonists or sightseers but the situation is likely to be changed now that the boon of statehood will give the people of the region a more direct participation in the affairs of the republic.

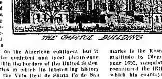
There are in the southwest more "show places" well worthy a visit than could be enumerated within the limits of any newspaper article but there is one that is perhaps unique in the extent to which it rivals anything abroad in the charm of its alien atmosphere and the unique characteristics of its architecture. This is Santa Fe, the ancient capital of New Mexico, and a community which, as the terminus of the famous "Santa Fe Trail" of other days, was well known in history and the annals of western conquest long before many a now prosperous city had emerged from the infant stage. Some of her other city rivals may have passed Santa Fe in the race for population and commercial standing, but none of them can vie with her in historical associations or cosmopolitan characteristics.

AN OLD INDIAN BEGGAR and HIS MOUNT

A WOOD PEDDLER and HIS STOCK IN TRADE



THE CATHEDRAL at SANTA FE



THE CAPITOL BUILDING

Indeed, the fascinating old city of Santa Fe not only enjoys the distinction of being the oldest town and the oldest capital on the American continent but it is probably the quaintest and most picturesque settlement within the borders of the United States. In the centuries in which its interesting history has extended the Villa Real de Santa Fe de San Francisco de Assisi—to give its full Spanish name—has been under three flags, each ruling power having left its impress without obliterating the influences of the others. In short, no other city of this hemisphere, not even St. Augustine or New Orleans, so links the past and the present, the old era and the new in American civilization.

To a certain extent Santa Fe may be said to be off the main beaten paths of transcontinental railway travel, being, in fact, the terminus of a branch railroad which forms an offshoot of some 18 miles from the through line to the Pacific coast. However, this circumstance has not prevented a commendable commercial development in the ancient city and in these days of automobiles and in the future of the aeroplane Santa Fe will be relieved of any sense of isolation. The ancient capital is situated in the middle of a high plain rimmed with mountain peaks, the altitude being more than 7,000 feet above the sea, and as the tourist climbs up on to what appears to be in very truth the roof of the world there lies spread out on either hand a panorama of far-reaching plains guarded by a close cordon of blue mountains that is simply inspiring in its sublime beauty.

The little city of Santa Fe has a wealth of "show places," any one of which might be expected to make the reputation of a much larger city as a tourist Mecca. One of the most interesting of these historical headliners is the famous Church of San Miguel, the "cradle of Christianity on the American continent." This time-honored place of worship was built in the year 1540, but was partially destroyed in the Indian revolution against the Spaniards in 1680. It was reoccupied by the conquerors in 1692 and was completely restored in 1710. The contents of the church as it stands today include an ancient copper bell in which the date 1350 is cast, and several valuable old religious paintings pierced with arrow holes, grim reminders of the days when the settlement was attacked by hostile Indians.

Almost in the shadow of the church stands an adobe structure which is claimed to be the "Oldest House in the United States." A considerable portion of this quaint dwelling remains as it has been for centuries, and there seems to be no reason to doubt the claim that it is the most ancient building continuously inhabited in this country. On the main road entering the city from the south stand the ruins of the old Spanish fortifications, and within a radius of a few miles are a number of old mission buildings — the churches of the pioneers of Christianity and civilization — which are older than the oldest of the similar ruins in California, and are in an infinitely better state of preservation. Among these old landmarks is the Rosario chapel, erected in pious gratitude by Diego de Vargas when he, in the year 1692, vanquished the rebellious Indians and recaptured the little city of the Holy Faith from which his countrymen had been excluded for a dozen years.

At the side of the plaza or central square of Santa Fe stands the palace. This is an adobe structure which was built in 1598, and, from a political-historical standpoint, is the most important building in the ancient city. For more than 300 years it served as the home and office of the Spanish, Mexican and American governors. Here, in the seventeenth century, the Holy Inquisition held its functions, and in this building, hundreds of years later, Gen. Lew Wallace, while serving as governor, wrote his novel, "Ben Hur." In the different eras the rulers who established the seat of authority in the old palace were designated respectively as viceroy, captain general, political chief, department commander and governor, while the territory over which they held sway was known successively as a kingdom, province, department and territory. Now it advances to the dignity of a sovereign state in the great American sisterhood.

The older portions of Santa Fe are typically Mexican, with squat little adobe houses strung irregularly along narrow, winding streets, and even in what is known as the "new town" on the other side of the little river, the baked mud structures of the same unconventional architectural lines are interspersed with the massive cathedral, modern business blocks and other creations of present-day American enterprise. More than half of the population of the city is Mexican, and many of the women of that race go about with their heads swathed in the invariable black fringed shawls. Frowsy burros laden along with packs of firewood or garden truck as large as themselves, and Indians from the neighboring pueblos offer the strange pottery of their own manufacture.

Santa Fe rejoices in a wonderful climate. As is to be expected in a locality that is nearer the heavens than the highest mountain peaks east of the Mississippi river there is a dry, bracing tonic air and the sun shines on at least 340 days out of the year. These climatic advantages, combined with the creature comforts brought by the invading Yankees have produced a combination that is attracting to Santa Fe and vicinity many invalids and persons in search of health to whom the dry atmosphere is a boon of priceless value. Some of these health seekers live in tents in the country or in the outskirts of the city, but the leisure folk who have been attracted to Santa Fe merely because of its ideal climate dwell in cozy cottages which are in striking contrast to the houses of adobe—the "forerunner of concrete."

Although the Mexicans of Santa Fe take life with the traditional ease of their race, it is possible for the American housewife in New Mexico to secure domestic help with perhaps somewhat less difficulty than is encountered by her sister in the average American city. A cook or general houseworker may be obtained at a wage of from $12 to $20 a month. However a family living in a cozy five or six room cottage seldom requires outside help, or at most, will find their needs in this direction amply served by a young Mexican girl who will act as nurse or household helper, and who can be secured for a wage of from $8 to $12 per month. American residents of Santa Fe who are proud of her progress point with pride to a number of twentieth century residences and business structures and incidentally, they direct attention to the handsome capitol building, erected as the territorial capitol of New Mexico, and which from every standpoint compares most favorably with many of the capitol buildings throughout the Union.

CHANGES IN CHINATOWN.

Residents of New York's Oriental Quarter Dress for Dinner.

One reliable source of big city wheezes seems to have dried up. The Chinks are no longer to be considered funny, the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star writes. Time was when hard working humorists could take a turn through Chinatown and come back with a screamingly funny story about flapping panties and streaming queues and pigeon English. Now the Chinese residents have taken on a different air. They act like regular people ever since their moldy old country got out of its grave clothes long enough to put up a fight for liberty. They talk straight to you, and their dialect isn't a bit funnier than is the brogue of the newly arrived Irishman or the broken English of the German immigrant or the lingo of the newcomer from Russia or the patois of the French Canadian. They look you right in the eye. They never did cringe any—memory fails to recall any John Chinaman who would rub his hands together to get trade—but they are independent and self respecting now. Maybe the facts are not related, but there has been little disorder in the Chinese quarter since that fever broke out in the Chinese body politic. It may be, of course, due to the fact that other people respect them nowadays. In the old days they broke into the news only as the objects at which was aimed, or as mysterious Orientals who liked the black smoke and sold chop suey. Nowadays they are figures in a movement of world importance, and they appreciate the fact. The other night a reporter went to Chinatown to see one of the prominent residents. The last time the reporter talked to him the Chinaman was garbed a la John Laundryman although his house was illuminated by gold embroidery. This time the reporter found him wearing a dinner jacket. Two or three guests were similarly attired. "Just a symbol of our new status," said the Chinaman, with a smile. He is a graduate of an American college by the way. "We are no longer to be considered barbarians."

QUEER FISH HOOKS.

To go back as far as the stone age we have only to turn to the inhabitants of Oceania, because these natives have never progressed any farther in the art of capturing fish than did their ancestors centuries ago. The Polynesian hooks are generally barbed and some curious specimens have been collected in New Zealand, says the Hawaiian Star. One of these is made from a section of a dog's jawbone, a single tooth, which has been filed to a sharp point, being left for the barb. In this same country a hook that has been pointed with human bone is regarded as possessing exceptionally fine qualities for attracting the fish.

The best workmanship is exhibited in the hooks which are used without bait and which correspond to our spoons. Pearl or other iridescent shell furnishes the part which attracts the fish, and frequently the shank consists of the ribbed part of a shell near the hinge of the valve, thereby giving the hook a spinning motion as it is drawn through the water. Many elaborate designs have a wooden shank, neatly carved and inlaid with a sliver of haliotis shell, while the barb is of sharpened bone. The extreme delicacy required in accurately piecing together one of these composite hooks may be imagined.

HER PRIVILEGE.

"Have you made a resolution to marry this year, colonel?" asked the determined young person archly.

"No," replied the colonel in his preoccupied manner; "have you?"

Widow Awarded Compensation

Judge Mulligan, at the Downham (county (Ireland)) court, has decided that a wasp sting can be regarded as an accident within the meaning of the workmen's compensation act.

A waiter named Potter was employed by a caterer for a wedding feast, which was held in a tent. The day after the wedding the tent was to be used for a dinner to the villagers. Potter, with some other men, was sent to get the tent ready.

"It was found that a great number of wasps had been attracted by the lees of the champagne left on the plates. One of the wasps stung Potter on the tip of his tongue, and he died an hour and a half later from heart failure, caused by the shock. The man was known to suffer from a weak heart. The judge held that the sting was an accident and that it arose in the course of Potter's employment. The widow was therefore entitled to compensation.

"Fat" Wedding Fee.

On a large farm in the middle west a group of jolly city people were having a house party. As part of the entertainment, they joined with enthusiasm in the plans of their hostess to give a pretty wedding to a favorite young girl who was to be married to a young farmer of the neighborhood. The most dapper and punctilious of the city youths volunteered to be "best man."
